CONSUMERS of RICHARDSON'S LINENS, and those desirous of obtaining the GENUINE GOODS, should see that the articles they purchase are sealed with the full name of the firm,
RICHARDSON, SONS & OWDEN,
as a guarantee of the soundness and durability of the Goods.

This caution is rendered essentially necessary as large quantities of inferior and defective Linens are prepared; season after season and sealed with the name of RICHARDSON by Irish Houses, who, regardless of the injury thus inflicted alike on the American consumer & the manufacturers of the genuine Goods, will not readily abandon a business so profitable, while purchasers can be imposed on with Goods of a worthless character.

A CARD
TO THE
Medical Profession.

Having had for my object the preparation of a remedy that would be beneficial in all cases where an external application is indicated, without being injurious in any, I have devoted a number of years to studying and experimenting. After making thousands of experiments and consulting the best authors and most scientific chemists and physicians of the day, I have at length succeeded in making a Medicine that will recommend itself to every one who studies its combination. Every intelligent Physician and Druggist will see at a glance, from the analysis given below, that it is composed of the very best remedies for external use in the Materia Medica.

THIS IS NOT A SECRET REMEDY:

Every person who can read may know its composition its effects are also well known. Over a hundred thousand Bottles made according to this prescription have been sold and used. The result in every case was always uniform and satisfactory. Read the analysis made by one of the most popular and scientific Chemists in the United States.

ANALYSIS
Porter's Oriental Life
LINIMENT,
MADE BY
C. W. WRIGHT, M. D.
Professor of Chemistry in the Kentucky School of Medicine, December, 1858.

To R. D. PORTER:

Sir—The ingredients which enter into composition of the Preparation known as "Porter's Oriental Life Liniment," which was left with me for qualitative chemical analysis, were found on examination to contain the following ingredients:

Euphione,	Cayennine,
Parelline,	Oil from Resin,
Pleamar,	Naptha,
Petical,	Carbonate of Potassa

All of the above ingredients with the exception of Carbonate of Potassa are emmenately antiseptic. As the composition of the above preparation is no longer a secret, I have no hesitancy in saying that it is a safe and efficacious external remedy for the disease upon which it is recommended.

Respectfully, C. W. WRIGHT.

Hundreds of physicians use and prescribe Porter's Oriental Life Liniment, believing it to be the best remedy for that class of diseases in which it is recommended. They know its composition and prescribe it with as much certainty, as to its effects, as they do any other remedy.

The following are a few of the many eminent and influential physicians who have written letters to the proprietor speaking in the highest terms of the medicinal properties of the Oriental Life Liniment:

Dr. W. D. Reid, of Jefferson county, Ky.
Dr. Moses Applegate, Crothersville, Ind.
Dr. Bayne, of Newcastle, Ky.
Dr. J. H. Jupin, of Morgenfield Ky.
Dr. J. L. McCorcil, Olean Valley, Tenn.
Dr. J. W. McDonald, Burlersville, Ind
Dr. R. B. Parker, Liberty, Ky.
Dr. R. H. Perryman, Easton, Ky.
Dr. D. Terrell, Felixville, Ky.
Dr. C. H. Harris, Charleston, Ky.
Dr. J. W. Hedges, Coleman Valley, Ky.
Dr. W. E. Olds, Angles, Ind.

The Oriental Life Liniment will be found of great benefit in Frostbites; Rheumatism, Cuts; Bruises, Sprains, &c. &c. Put up in 25c 50 cent, $1 Bottles, and sold by all Druggists and Country Merchants. Manufactured by

THE PRINTER.

AMONG the ranks of human kind,
Some go before, and some behind;
But mind them well, & you will find,
Not hindmost is the printer.

The lessons which you learned at school
That you might not grow up a fool,
Had all, in scientific rule,
Been published by the printer.

How do your Presidents and Kings
Govern so many things?
'Tis by the type, the Screws the springs
Belonging to the printer.

The farmer and mechanics, too,
Would some times scarce know what to do,
Could they not get a certain view
Of work done by the printer.

The doctor cannot meet the crooks
Of all the cases, till he looks
Upon the pages of the books
Supplied him by the printer.

The lawyer for a wit has passed,
But high as he his head may cast,
He would be but a dunce at last,
Were it not for the printer.

Who is it that so neatly tells
The various goods the merchants sells,
Inviting all the beaux and belles?
Who is it but the printer?

The classes of the human race,
Of different size, of different face,
Appear in this and every place,
How obvious to the printer.

One sings the bass, one sharps & flats,
Bedecked with pant aloons and hats,
And long tailed coats and smooth cravats,
Of this class is the printer.

The other sings the treble sweet,
Adorned with frock and bonnets neat,
And lo k! how beautious & complete,
And lovely to the printer.

'Tis Hymen's will, of course, you know,
These classes should in couples go,
And since the world will have it so,
"So be it," says the printer.

There's not a man below the skies
Who better understands to prize
The charms that grace a lady's eyes
Than does this very printer.

Young maidens, then, without debate,
'Tis hoped you'll cu'y estimate,
Before, in fact, it is too late,
The value of the printer.

From Ballou's Pictorial.

The Three Sisters of Marston Moor.

BY MRS. C. P. GERRY.

They stood beside the death-bed of their poor old mother—these strange women, known and scorned, and dreaded for miles around, as "the three sisters of Marston Moore." The great room in which they were gathered was sumptuous enough for a monarch's chamber, but it wore a most dreary, desolate aspect. There was no light save that which now and then leaped up from the embers on the wide marble hearth; and deep shadows brooded among the purple folds of the voluminous curtains, and roamed along the tapestried walls, and lurked about the softly cushioned chairs and bouages, but hung heaviest round the cot upon which lay the dying woman.

No kind neighbor had come in to cheer Maud Forrest's last hours: no clergyman was there to speak of heaven and pray for the peace of the departing soul. She had been a hard-hearted, grasping, defiant woman; had lived unloved and was dying unlamented.—It was a fitting time for one who had all her life been at warfare with the world, to lie down to her death-struggle. Black clouds tossed stormily over the old manse: ever and anon the far-off thunder muttered like the herald of a coming storm, and the wind roared amid the firs and yews and guarled the entrees, which in the brightest day of summer cast a perpetual twilight about the house, and swept, wailing, over the long, dark stretch of Marston Moor.

"What is it?" asked her eldest daughter, as the dying mother stirred uneasily. "Do you want the lamp lighted?"

"No, no," was the sharp answer; "I will die as I have lived—in darkness."

It was pitiful to see the pale face she lifted from the pillow as she spoke, every mad feature was so indelibly stamped with the passions which had made Maud Forrest's life a long conflict. For a long time after she gave this characteristic reply, a solemn hush pervaded the room, but at length it was broken by the entrance of a slight girl whose fair hair and blue eyes contrasted strikingly with the three brunette sisters.

"Ginevra!" called the dying woman, starting up; "why are you here? Did you think I should like to see you? I tell you I'd rather have a ghost rise by my bedside! Go back to your drudgery in the kitchen; I would fain forget you. Forget? O heavens, I wonder if there is oblivion in the grave? Go, go, I say, Ginevra! I can't look at your great searching eyes, your marble face, your thick, golden hair—they rouse memories that madden me! Girl, I always hated you; I shall hate you to the last; begone!"

Terrified at the speaker's words and manner, Ginevra shrank from her presence. The woman listened till the sounds of her retreating footsteps had died away, and then turning to her children, muttered:

"Ha, I suppose she came in to exult over me, to say, 'Old Maud Forrest, you are dying, and I am glad of it; you will kick and cuff & beat me no more!"

She paused, & taking a glass of wine from the stand near, drained it to the dregs.

"There, there," she continued, "I am stronger now. List, girls; I leave that Ginevra to you; it will be your own fault if you don't keep her the bond-slave I have made her. If she should ever know all, all you and I know; if she should rise, if she would put her foot on your necks—I—I believe I should come from the grave to upbraid you!" And through the film of death, those black eyes flashed fire.

"Don't fear," replied Irene Forrest, the second of the daughters; "hate is sometimes transmitted from parent to child; yours will yet burn in our blood. Ginevra Vane will have nothing to hope for from the tender mercies of 'the three sisters of Marston Moor!'"

"It is well," resumed the woman, a grim smile flickering over her features; "keep her with you, a kitchen drudge, till she is eighteen and then give her to Mark Gault. He wants to marry her, and he is her equal, I am sure. Teach her to feel this, or she may yet lift her bold eyes to him on whom you have set your heart, Irene."

The lady started and colored.

"Guy Montrose, the eldest of one of the proudest families in England, heir to his father's title and rent-roll!" she said, with a light laugh that sounded strangely in the chamber of death; "you must be wandering, mother, or you would not dream of such presumption. Besides, he is too completely in my toils to be won away."

"Don't be so confident of your power as to be careless," muttered Forrest, shaking her head. "Ginevra is matchlessly beau ti'd."

"And am I not a beauty also?" asked Irene, with a glance at the dusky mirror opposite, which dimly reflected her proud, dark face, her regal figure.

"Yes," said the mother, "but you are a woman of the world; she a simple confiding girl. I have seen the charm such natures have for men like him.—Look out; keep Ginevra in her place, or your game will be lost."

"I am not afraid," was the quick reply; "I have almost overcome Guy's prejudice to our family, and the rest of the conquest will be easy."

A pause followed this assertion; only the short, labored breathing of the dying woman, the measured pulsations of the great clock, below, and the moan of the wind outside, broke the dread silence. At length, however, a girlish shape stole up the oaken staircase leading from the kitchen, and Ginevra again crept into the room.

"Ma'am," she cried, flinging herself down by the bed side, "you have driven me from you once to-night, but I must brave your anger. One thing you have carefully kept from me—the knowledge of my birth. You are dying now—you will not refuse to tell me who my father and mother were?"

"Ginevra Vane," retorted the woman, fiercely, "I will never breath the secret—never! It is sufficient that you have been from your infancy a dependent on me, a poor despised drudge you will remain with my daughters, till Mark Gault carries you off to be his wife."

The young blood rushed over the girl's face in an instant; impetuous words rose to her lips, but she crushed them back.

"Madam," she said, solemnly, "it would not become me to quarrel with the dying, but I believe the God who declares 'that with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again,' will deliver me from such a fate."

"Silence, girl! What right have you to an opinion of your own? Begone! I cannot breathe the same air; it oppresses me!"

Ginevra turned from her with a low cry of anguish; a spasm of pain convulsed the woman's features, and her breath came in shorter gasps.

"I sha'n't live—till morning breaks," she faltered; "come thing more I have to ask. I have been despised & scorned in life; when I am dead, don't bury me in the churchyard with those who scorned me; bury me on the wild moor."

At this juncture a loud knock at the hall door rang through the lonely house. The next moment a rough-looking, tarlin an entre costume, crossed the threshold of the death-chamber.

"Mark Gault!" were the words that ran like wildfire from lip to lip as he strode in.

"Mark, what brings you here?" cried the dying woman, vehemently; "has anything gone wrong among you?" And every limb in her attenuated frame shook with agitation.

"No, O no."

"Thank God! It would be hard, if after evading discovery so many years, I should know now that they have found us out."

"I've come on business of my own, old woman," returned Gault. "You remember your promise that Ginnie should be my wife? You're going to die, I spose, and I want you to give me a writing to that effect."

"Well, well! my children will carry out my plans in every respect; what I have considered binding on me they will regard, too. Tell the rest so Gault, for they will never see me alive again. But I don't object to giving you the written bond. Irene, bring me a pen, ink and paper from the escritoire yonder."

The writing materials were brought, the dying woman bolstered up, & then with a half-palsied hand she wrote the desired promise.

"Now, girls, endorse it; it is best to have all fast," added Gault, roughly.

The three daughters then affixed their signatures. When they turned again to their mother, her features were rigid as marble, her dim eyes set—Old Maud Forrest was dead!

It was a dismal day, that which had been fixed for the burial of Dame Forrest. No storm raged as on the night when her restless spirit passed away from earth, but the sky wore a dull, leaden hue, and the wind wailed out a wild dirge as it swept over the lonesome moor, where, in accordance with her request, her grave had been made.—Dolefully the solemn death-knell came ringing up to the grand dining-room in Montrose Hall, where the young heir of the house was sitting at a quiet dinner with a single friend. As the "muffled monotone" of the bell struck on his ear, he pushed back his plate, and with a hasty, "excuse me," rose and hurried to the window.

"What's to pay now?" asked his guest.

"Don't you hear?—the bell is tolling."

"Ah, yes; what can it be for?"

"Mrs. Forrest's funeral," replied the young host, "and I am going."

"Where?" rejoined Beaufort, with a shrug of the shoulders; "you're stark mad, Guy. Old Maud Forrest has been the jest of the neighborhood; there's not a man, woman or child, who has lived within reach of her influence, that is not heartily glad she's dead. Nobody will go to the funeral except her family and some few of the village loungers."

"I know it," replied Montrose, with a rising color; "I know it, and this is why I am anxious to be present."

Baufort hesitated an instant, & then rejoined:

"To tell the truth, Guy, you have met her daughter, Irene, and in spite of your pride and your prejudice, been charmed into admiration of her beauty, her wit, her grace. You wish to let her know that you are not ashamed to acknowledge yourself friendly to the orphans. Is it not so?"

"Yes, yes," said Montrose, "that I am resolved to do."

"That if you are bent on going, I will bear you company," continued Beaufort, "though I shall do it under a strong protest."

Montrose smiled faintly, but there was a resolute expression on his lip, and his friend saw it would be useless to make any further effort to dissuade him from his purpose. The two young men had just stationed themselves at a little distance from the new-made grave, when the funeral procession came slowly towards them. The car in which the coffin was borne onward to its narrow home was drawn by two superb black horses, and rich in nodding plumes, but it was a meagre band that followed it. The three sisters of Marston Moor and the servants of the house-hold, only these made up the funeral procession.

"Dust to dust, ashes to ashes," read the rector, solemnly, as the corse was lowered into the ground.

The daughters of the dead pressed forward, and flinging back their long crape veils looked down at the coffin.—Thus the darkly beautiful face of Irene was fully revealed to Guy Montrose, & he whispered to Beaufort:

"Do you blame me now for admiring Irene Forrest?"

"Hush, hush!" replied his friend; "look again; the gravy lar had an addition since you turned towards me."

Montrose glanced in the direction indicated. There stood a girl, beautiful as the far-famed Peri of the East. She had pressed to the very brink of the grave, & was gazing into its cold depths with a wild, despairing expression on her pale and classic face. The large, soft, blue eyes were misty with tears; the half-parted, red lips quivered nervously; the fair brow was heavy with such a shadow as it is fearful to see the young and lovely wear. Her thick, golden hair blew in tangled masses from beneath her faded hood, and the cloak she had gathered around her could not conceal her clean, but threadbare dress.

"Is she not beautiful, the new comer?" asked Beaufort.

"Yes, the most beautiful creature I ever saw," replied Montrose, enthusiastically.

At this moment Irene glanced towards Montrose, and perceived that his gaze was riveted upon the girl, who had stolen to her side. She turned to the offender with a fierce look & some harsh word, which sent a hot glow to her cheek. The girl crept away, but not till Montrose had marked how repulsive Irene's face could become when she was angry. Soon afterwards the procession moved away from the spot, but the young men still lingered.

"Who was the girl that came forward and stood among the sisters?" asked Montrose, of the sexton.

"Why," he replied, pausing in his work and leaning over his spade; "it was Ginevra Vane, poor thing! She's lived with the woman who lies dead below, ever since she was a wee child, and no slave was ever treated worse than she's been; but they say she's borne it, hoping that the old lady would sometime betray the secret of her birth. The servants whisper it about that Ginevra went into her room when she was dying and begged her to tell what she has so longed to know but Maud Forrest wouldn't—God forgive her!"

"But the sisters, wouldn't they reveal the secret?" asked Montrose.

The sexton shook his head. "P'raps their mother carried the secret with her into the other world; but if they do know, Ginevra will be none the wiser for it; they are chips of the old block."

Guy Montrose made no more inquiries, but drew his friend away.

"All this may be but mere gossip," he said to Beaufort, and yet as he walked on, his secret thoughts dwelt not on Irene's stately beauty but upon the fair, golden-haired girl the sexton had called Ginevra.

That night, the first night that Maud Forrest lay cold and still in her lonely grave, the three sisters of Marston Moor gathered around the fireside of the imposing old house she had bequeathed to them. As I have said before, they were brunetts and women of stately presence, but Irene was the beauty of the three. As she stood now, leaning against the quaintly carved mantlepiece, her fine form in an attitude of graceful repose, her coal black hair wound in a massive coil around her head, and her proud face all aglow, Agnes and Julia watched her with admiring eyes.

"We are both quick-witted," said Agnes to her elder sister; "we can scheme for the aggrandizement of the three lone women of the moorland, but Irene, with her rare beauty, must carry out our plans. She must make an alliance that will reflect lustre on our name She is fit to be a countess, and I am sure Guy Montrose thinks so too."

A low laugh greeted this remark, and ere the merriment had subsided, Irene rang for a servant.

"Tell Genevra to bring in lights," she said to the man who answered her summons.

"Please, ma'am," replied John, "Ginevra aint in."

"And where is she?"

"I don't know, ma'am, she went out just after you gave her such a sound scolding for going to the funeral, and aint got back yet."

"Well, bring the lamps yourself, John; she'll come by-and-by."

With these words the lady sank into her seat, and sat for some time in silence. But though outwardly calm, there was a conflict within; she had expected Guy Montrose would call to offer some consolation in her bereavement, & was bitterly disappointed because he did not come. She was aroused from from an unpleasant reverie by hearing the clock strike nine.

"Why don't that girl come in?" asked Agnes.

"What girl?" asked Irene, sharply; "hasn't Ginevra returned yet?"

"No. Where can she be? She hasn't run away, has she?"

"I don't know; I'll go in search of her." And gathering a heavy shawl about her, Irene glided away.

A Sad Suicide.

The most extraordinary suicide we ever heard or read of took place in this city on Thursday night last. The dead body was found on Friday, and the Coroner's inquest held on Saturday. As it is a case unexampled in the history of suicide we will give the facts connected with it, as elicited before the Coroner, in their proper sequence. It illustrates the effect of succumbing too much to morbid grief, and becoming too familiar with death in its more repulsive aspects.

Sylvester Roper, 37 years of age, an Englishman by birth, and by trade a ship-carpenter, lived with his wife and two children in a house on Perdido stree', in October last the yellow fever, then prevailing, counted among its victims the youngest child of the Ruperts—their little girl Lizzie, about four years old, and the particular pet of the father. This was a blow from which the father never recovered. Not able to buy a tomb, he had the child buried in the ground in Greenwood Cemetery. The grief preyed heavily upon him. It was his only thought; and, being out of his regular employment, he found a sdjustment in his grief.

He bought a burial lot and some bricks and other material, and with his own hands and all alone in the cemetery built him a brick tomb a stylish one; so is its mouth or entrance he fitted a wooden frame and on this frame he fitted a piece of board and secured it with screws in its four corners. On this board with which he enclosed the vault, (in lieu of the usual brick and mortar or marble slab) he had carved nicely with his knife the burial inscription of his child. The tomb finished he disinterred the child's body and placed it there. He fastened the board with screws, in order that he might afterward have no trouble in gazing upon the decaying remains of his child.

This emplacement finished it was his habit to visit the cemetery upon the tomb and look at the corpse of his pet. He always carried a screw driver in his pocket with which to remove and replace the board, and also to remove and replace the lid of the coffin, neither the haggard aspect of the shrinking little corpse nor the foul odor of its decay, could repel him in his morbid grief. His visits were frequent; and sometimes his wife went with him. He frequently complained to her that he could not get work; and this inability doubtless fostered the despondency which was drawing him to death. He frequently spoke of having no faith in the future, and of death as a desirable thing.

On Wednesday, he went to the cemetery with two shrubs which he had purchased, and planted them in front of the tomb. On Thursday, when he left home, he told his wife that if he had no better luck in finding work, she would never see him again. He also said something about having a place in which to rest. That evening, or that night—for no one saw him in his ghoulish proceeding—he visited the cemetery, taking with his screw driver, an iron trunk handle a small pail of lime, a piece of white some new screws and a large vial of laudanum. Unscrewing the board of the tomb, he took away the screws and filled the screw-holes in the board with clay. With his new screws he then secured the trunk handle to the inside of the board. This work, of course had to be done outside the tomb pushing his child's coffin aside, he got in by its side, taking with him his poison and the other articles with which he had provided himself.—His hat he placed upon the coffin; his coat which he had taken off, he wrapped around a brick for a pillow. He shut himself in with the board, by means of the handle he had screwed to it; the fitting outside the wooden frame. The iron bar which was of the proper length he placed across the frame inside. The thickness of the frame would not allow the bar to pass through the trunk-handle on the inside of the board; so he secured the handle and the bar by means of his wire coiling it through the one & around the other. He did not succeed in fitting the board squarely upon the frame. One corner of it caught upon the brickwork outside the frame; this he did not discover, probably, owing to the darkness of the night; and but for this little circumstance his fate would probably have never been discovered or not at least for many years. Having thus his him self away, as he fancied, beyond mortal discovery, he drained off the contents of his laudanum bottle, composed himself on his back, placed the coat & brick beneath his head went to sleep and off into the unknown region of the suicides.

As he did not return home on Thursday night his wife feared the worst remembering well the tendency of his late conduct and the tenor of his parting words. On Friday morning she rose early, and went to the cemetery She looked all around, and failed to find her husband. She went and looked at their tomb and was about to leave, when she happened to notice that the board did not fit snugly into the frame as usual Looking closer she discovered the mud in the screw-holes; and putting her hand on the board found it was standing loosely. She pulled it a little, and the first thing she saw was the dead face of her husband. She fainted away, and laid on the grass she could not tell how long. She recovered her last got up went and informed the sexton Mr. Merritt, of her discovery. The latter went and looked at things, and sent word to the Coroner, and the inquest was held as we have stated on Saturday.

The coroner's verdict was in accordance with the facts so apparent—suicide by laudanum.—N. O. Pic.

A Noble Girl.

A traveller going east from Detroit relates the following pleasing incident:

On reaching the depot at Suspension Bridge, the conductor told a young man whose health was very feeble and who was on his way to Springfield, Mass., where he had friends—he must leave the cars, as he had no money with which to pay his fare. Notwithstanding the debilitated appearance of the young man, he was suffered to be led out of the car without any movement being made for his relief. As the young man was about stepping off the platform, a young lady rose in the cars and asked the conductor how much the young man's fare would be to Albany. He replied eight dollars. She immediately stepped to the door and told the invalid to return and resume his seat.—He did so, and then the male passengers began to exhibit a little charity, offering to pay a portion of the fare.—The young lady declined their proffered aid, saying she preferred paying the amount herself. She did so, and besides gave him a 'scrip' to keep him in Albany over Sunday, promising to see him forwarded to his friends on Monday.

That girl will make a good wife for some man.

"You surprise me; what, sir! did they go out?"

"No, sir."

"What then?"

"They burt shorter."

GROCERY TRADE.—The attention of our friends who purchase groceries in the direction of Chattanooga or Nashville, is invited to the advertisement of Mr. J. W. Hoyl, Grocer & Dealer in Produce

Mr. H. has an extensive capital employed in the business, & we see no reason why groceries may not be purchased on better terms from Chattanooga than Nashville. There is a greater amount of the cheapest transportation, which is by water; and groceries purchased there can be shipped to Rome, and then down the Coosa to Greensport, within 20 miles of this place.

We think that purchasers of groceries for this section will find it to their interest to give the Chattanooga market a trial; and hope they will do so whenever they go in that direction, and not forget the name of J. W. Hoyl, whom they will find a correct, energetic and accommodating business man.

Having been present on Tuesday night last, to witness the performances of the Bailey Troupe, I ask the privilege of adding my testimony to the numerous complimentary notices which have been given of this highly popular company.

They performed on that night the laughable burlesque comedy called "The Country Cousin," in which all the actors performed their parts admirably, and brought from the crowded audience rapturous rounds of applause. The performances were interspersed with Dissolving Views, Negro Melodies, Dancing, Music, &c.

I have seldom seen so large an audience more perfectly gratified and highly delighted. SPECTATOR.

Cotton Prospect for 1859.

In the annual article of Mercator, a correspondent of the Liverpool Times, says the Mobile Mercury, we find some very valuable statistics. The highest estimate of the American crop is taken as part of the data of his calculations. He states the American crop at 3,300,000 bales; the East India crop at 580,000; Brazil, Egyptian and West Indian at 240,000; making a total of 4,420,000 bales. Of this amount the United States will consume 700,000.—Exports from the United States to England will reach 1,900,000, of which 100,000 will be exported to the Continent and 20,000 probably be lost at sea, making the actual receipt for consumption from the United State. 1,780,000. The Continent will consume of our cotton 1,000,000 directly exported, and the 100,000 above named from England, making 1,100,000. Of the East India crop, it is estimated England will take 300,000, and the Continent 280,000. Of the Brazil, Egyptian and West India crop, England will take the whole 250,000 bales. The distribution will then be as follows: Great Britain from all sources, 2,540,000, minus 20,000 lost by casualties at sea; the Continent, 1,380,000; the United States. 700,000; total, 4,420,000. The writer concludes his letter with the following speculations about price, which we commend to our readers who are interested in the great staple:

We feel, however, that there is room for greater divergence from our views on the side of deficiency than abundance; for if the peace of Europe is preserved there is every reason to hope for a year of unexampled prosperity to to the manufacturing interest, and it would not surprise us if the consumption of the kingdom reached 45,000 bales per week. If concurrent with this, the American crop proved only 3½ millions, and our computed export to England was abridged 199,000 bales, it is obvious that the interests of Lancashire would again be jeopardised. It seems, therefore, to be clearly the wisest policy for manufacturers to encourage for another season at least a tolerably high scale of prices for the raw material; for it is in the last degree injurious to their interests that the stability of their trade should be liable to be disturbed by a trifling marginal deficiency in the annual supply. It does not appear, then, that much lower prices than the present are justified, viewing the question commercially; and, if trade is allowed to pursue that even tenor of its way, undisturbed by political commotions, it is not likely that prices will vary materially from their present level. At the same time, it is obvious that they are no longer so absolutely controlled by the element of supply as they have been for the last two years. There is now no immediate danger of a positive scarcity of cotton, and, therefore, prices are more liable to the action of secondary causes, and a feeling of distrust, such as might be occasioned by a European war, would have full scope for producing very serious results.

Liverpool, Jan. 14, 1859.

SUPPOSED MURDERER & BANK ROBBER CAUGHT.—The Nashville papers report the arrest, at Boiivar, of a young man suspected of being the person who recently robbed the Bank at Jackson, Tenn., and murdered George E. Miller the clerk, while in the act of filling out a check. It appears that a strange horse had been left at a livery stable in Jackson just previous to the robbery, and as no one called for him for serveral days afterwards, suspicion was excited: the horse was sent about for public inspection, until it was ascertained that a young man named Irwin, a son of a resident in Jackson, had often been seen riding him. This discovery was made in the adjoining county of Hardeman (whither the horse was sent for public scrutiny, & in which, it is presumable, young Irwin lived.)—The party in charge of the horse then returned to Jackson, and ascertained that Irwin was there at his father's house. They, however, delayed taking steps for his arrest until the next morning, when they ascertained that he had left during the night. Dispatches were sent to Bolivar, Hardeman county; and the sheriff there arrested him. He denied his name, but a large amount of money in gold and Union Bank notes was found on his person, and he was taken to Jackson, where an examination was about to be held.

CRIME AT THE NORTH.—Crime is fearfully on the increase at the North. In Massachusetts, particularly, crime has, during the past fourteen years, increased at a far greater ration than the population. There are now three times as many crimes committed as in 1844, although the population has only slightly increased.

A Sublime Peroration.

The closing passage of Prof Mitchell's lecture, at New York, on Tuesday evening, was delivered with thrilling effect. After speaking of the unfathomable distances which no telescope can penetrate, lying far beyond the system in which the earth revolves, and yet filled with independent system, of infinite numbers, he said:

Light traverses space at the rate of a million miles a minute yet the light from the nearest requires ten years to reach the earth and Herschel's telescope revealed stars two thousand three hundred times farther distant. The great telescope of Lord Ross pursued these creations of God still deeper into space, and having resolved the nebulæ of the Milky Way into stars, discovered other systems of stars—beautiful diamond points glittering through the black darkness beyond. When he beheld this amazing abyss—when he saw these systems scattered profusely throughout space—when he reflected upon their immense distance, their enormous magnitude, and the countless millions of worlds that belonged to them, it seemed to him as though the wild dream of the German poet was more than realized.

"God called man in dreams into the vestibule of heaven, saying, 'come up hither and I will show the glory of my house. And to his angels who stood about his throne he said, take him, strip him of his robes of flesh; cleanse his affections; put a new breath into his nostrils, but touch not his human heart—the heart that fears, hopes and trembles." A moment and it was done, and the man stood ready for his unknown voyage. Under the guidance of a mighty angel, with sounds of flying pinions, they sped away from the bats dements of heaven. Some time on the mighty angel's wings they fled through Saharas of darkness, wilderness of death. At length from a distance not counted save in the arithmetic of heaven, light beamed upon them—a sleepy flame as seen through a hazy cloud—They speed on in their terrible speed to meet the light; the light with lesser speed came to meet them. In a moment the blazing of suns around them—a moment the wheeling of planets; then came long eternities of twilight; then again on the right hand and the left appeared more constellations. At last the man sank down, crying, 'Angel, I can go no further, let me lie down in the grave, and hide myself from the infinitude of the universe, for end there is none.' 'End is there none? demanded the angel. And from the glittering stars that shone around there came a choral shout, 'End there is none?'—'End is there none?' demanded the angel again, 'and is it this that awes thy soul? I answer end there is none to the universe of God! Lo, also, there is no beginning?'

One of the most popular and successful lawyers at the New York Bar is about to give up a large and lucrative profession and enter the Ministry; and not only so, but he has chosen as the field of his labor, not some eligible field in or around New York, where his talents and local position would no doubt command a fine welcome spot of labor, but he has resolved to devote himself to the work of foreign missions. The new field of Japan has just been opened to the heralds of salvation, and this gentleman has concluded to enter that field. He is a member of one of the Dutch churches in New York, and that church has just resolved to appoint a mission in that newly-opened field.—But at no man's charge other than his own, will this gentleman go out. He will bear his own costs; and the gain he has accumulated in many years successful practice in New York, he will now devote to the noblest and the holiest of purposes.—Boston Journal.

POVERTY AND RICHES.—It is truly said that no man can tell whether he is rich or poor by turning to his ledger. It is the heart that makes a man rich. He is rich or poor, according to what he has. A man to-day, for instance, may have but ten, five, or two and a half dollars in his pocket; but to-morrow he may have fifty thousand dollars, or its half or quarter. How is this great change to be wrought? the reader may ask. Under ordinary circumstances, we would answer by demanding with the question a fee; but we will answer it without price on this occasion. Send ten, five, or two and a half dollars to Wood, Eddy & Co., Wilmington, Delaware, or Augusta, Ga., and you insure your chances of drawing the great prize, or its proportion. You cannot, indeed, to-day, tell whether you are rich or poor, by turning to your ledger, but by a fortunate turn in the wheel of fortune, under the management of Wood, Eddy & Co., you may turn up to-morrow a fifty thousand dollar prize.

THE DOOM OF THE WORLD.—The North British Review discoursing on the doom of the world, has the following remarks:

"What this change is to be, we dare not even conjecture, but we see in the heavens the motives some causes of destructive elements and some indications of their power, the fragments of broken planets—the descent of meteoric stones upon our globe—the whirling comets wielding their lurid material at the solar surface—the volcanic eruptions in our own satellite—the appearance of new stars and disappearance of others, are all foreshadows of that impending convulsion to which the system of the world is doomed. Thus placed on a planet which is to be burned up, and under heavens which are to pass away, thus residing, as it were, on the cemeteries, and dwelling upon the mausoleums of former worlds, let us learn the lesson of humility and wisdom, if we have not already been taught in the school of revelation."

CURIOUS COINCIDENCE, IF NOTHING MORE.—Among the providential escapes from the North Carolina, recently destroyed by fire, was that of Dr. McCabe, of Assention Church, Baltimor, who had made all his arrangements to return home in the illfated vessel, but by an incident only, took the Georgia:

"The reverend gentleman, on Saturday night, offered up in Church a prayer of thanksgiving for the escape, and told the congregation that while asleep in the saloon of the Georgia, he alarmed his fellow passengers by crying loudly in his sleep, "fire, fire, fire," which caused considerable excitement, for a while, but being nothing but a dream, the fears of the passengers were soon quieted.

Philip Barton Key, the United States Attorney for the District of Columbia, was shot and killed to day in the street nearly fronting the Executive Mansion, by Daniel Sickles a member of Congress from New York. The reported cause assigned for the perpetration of this murder, is criminality between Mr. Key and Mr. Sickle's wife.

This affair has created great excitement in leading circles in this city on account of the high social standing of the parties.

The New Book Store.

The new Book Store, on Whitehall St., of which Mr. William Kay is Agent, is thus referred to by the Cartersville Express:

"We called in, a few days ago while in Atlanta, and took a peep at Mr. Wm. Kay's new Book Store, and found a and we found a neat establishment, well supplied with the latest and best school books, literary, religious and miscellaneous works; also, a heavy stock of writing paper, ruled and marabled, blank books, and novels world world without end. In fact he has everything usually kept in a manile one book store.—Mr. Kay can beat the world buying and selling books. He knows what sort are adapted to the wants of the public, and he always has them on hand. We are almost persuaded that he was destined by nature for the business."

We not only endorse every word of the foregoing, but will add to it that for energy, perseverance, and accommodating manners, we do not know the equal of Mr. Kay, as a book seller, anywhere. His present stock is quite select, and all new.—Ath. Intelligencer.

THE BOWELS & THEIR FUNCTIONS.

As perfect health is the greatest blessing that we can enjoy, without which all other blessings are of little consequence, we deem it of great importance to point out the way for you to enjoy it. The bowels must be kept in a state by which they are enabled to carry off the useless matter; they are the main channel which nature has appointed to carry everything that is unnecessary.—And it is impossible to tell what a large amount of sickness has been caused by constipation, or costiveness; in other words, by not keeping the bowels regular; it is the main road to all diseases; it is the cause of unnatural irritation to the mucous, or lining membranes of the bowels. Having lost their natural strength, they cannot object to what is required of them. Hence, the blood become inflamed, and unless you find a speedy relief, a thousand other complaints are ever ready to drag you through a miserable and wretched life. Such medicines must be given as will cleanse the stomach and bowels, and restore their natural strength. To accomplish this there is no compound so valuable as these Pills; all other medicines sink to utter insignificance when compared to them; it seems as though the Author of Nature had designed them for this as well as other complaints. From two to five Pills a day will increase strength and appetite, & cleanse the stomach and intestines from whatever is injurious.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are sold by all dealers in Medicines.

A MAN MURDERS AND DISSECTS HIS WIFE, AND THEN HANGS HIMSELF.—Beaufort, Iowa, Feb. 8. A terrible tragedy is reported from Newton, Jasper county, in this State. A butcher named Harvey Copeland murdered his wife, cut her body into peices, and then hanged himself.—They had been living on bad terms for some time. It is supposed that he at first intended to dispose of the dead body, and destroy the evidences of his guilt, but finding it impossible, he put an end to his existence. Copeland and his wife came to Iowa from Henry county, Ind. He did the terrible work with an axe, cutting the head and limbs off, and then tried to dissect the rest of the body with a razor. Their little boy was asleep in the house at the time.

Our Darling in Heaven.

BY A PARENT.

On radiant wings of beauty spread,
She soars above you trackless blue;
For tho' our darling child is dead,
We know she is immortal too!

Now folded are her lifeless hands
Upon her little waxen breast;
While children come in rosy bands
To gaze upon her dreamless rest:—

They lift away the coffin led,
And parting back her golden hair,
Kiss the pale brow whence life has fled,
And kneel in tears at sich a prayer!

Long years have flown; I may not tell
The agony of that dread hour!—
I tell thee Death, thy frost hath fell—
O! never, on so sweet a flower!

Now, while I weep, a bird I see
Careering, in the far-off sky;
Its song is all unheard by me,
And yet I gaze with rapturous eye!

For thus, the cherub that has fled,
Is practising its bright new wings;
While I, by upward looks am led
To soar above all sordid things.

Oh, if there be, for earnest prayer,
A Telegraph to Heaven above,
I'll send a constant heart-pulse there,
And countless messages of love!

An Honest Confession.

The Pennsylvanian acknowledges that things are going on very bad in this country, and depicts the growing demoralization of the times, in the following language:

"Among the various causes of demoralization active in the United States, this fraudulent and delusive credit system occupies the most prominent position. There are evils developing themselves in this country of the most alarming character all directly traceable to it—evils and vices which have no parallel in modern history, but which are recorded among the causes of Rome's decline and fall. It has already become proverb with our people, that property is no longer to be acquired by honest toil while wealth is consdered here, more than anywhere else, the condition of respectability. It seems that we have obliterated titles and distinction of birth only to establish the coarsest of all distinctions, and that with all our boasted independence, we willingly bow in servile adulation before the money bag. The money bag takes precedence before talent, genius, probity. Honor is money, got no matter how. With money it is easy enough to defeat the law and aviod the jail.

A DITTY.

Now, good folks, listen to me,
And I will try and tell
About my little sewer
Who doeth all things well.
'Tis not a weary woman,
With dim and sunken eye,
Who does my daily rowing
With many a broken sigh.

No poor, despairing widow
Who labors for her bread,
Nor broken hearted mother
Whose hopes are with the dead;
But a cheerful little sewer
Who labors all day long,
With eye undimmed by sorrow
And a merry happy song.

It gathers, hastes or stitches
Whichever way you please,
Nineteen hundred in a minute
It can take with perfect ease.
Now do you wish one like it?
And would you know its maker?
It is the best one in market,
For 'tis made by GROVER & BAKER.

MODERN INVENTIONS.

We know of no invention of modern times that deserves or is destined to occupy a higher niche in the temple of fame than the discovery or invention of the Vegetable Epileptic Pills for curing Epilepsy, or Falling Fits, Spasms, Cramps and all the various modifications of Nervous Disease. Dr. Seth S. Hance, of 102 Baltimore street, Baltimore, Md., the inventor, is certainly entitled to the best wishes of all the benevolent portion of mankind who experience a pleasure by the alleviation of human suffering, when Dr Hance first prepared these Pills; he intended them solely for Fits, Cramps and Spasms but subsequent experience satisfactorily proved to him that in addition to their remarkable sanative properties in this class of diseases, they exerted a perfect control over the entire nervous system. He was then induced to try them in cases of Neuralgia, Tic Doloreux, Nervous Headache, Palpitation of the Heart, Incipient Paralysis, Hysteria, Muscular Debility and a host of minor diseases springing from a lack of nervous energy in all of which his anticipation were crowned with the most sanguine success. Persons at a distance, by writing and sending a remittance to Dr. Hance can have the medicine forwarded by mail to their post office address, he paying the postage.

The prices are for a single box $3, two boxes $5 or $24 per dozen. We have given his address above.

A GOOD CUSTOM.—It is becoming the custom in Burke, says the Waynesboro' News, for newly married people to send to new-paper publishers, along with their marriage notice, the amount of a year's subscription. This is a very sensible custom. Next to a good wife or husband, the greatest earthly blessing is a good newspaper.

MURDER IN JEFFERSON COUNTY.—A murder ally occurred says the last Central Alabamian, between Henry Wisenant, and John A. Jones, on last Tuesday morning, at the house of the former on Turkey Creek in Jefferson county, in which the latter was killed. We are not advised as to the cause of the difficulty. We understand Mr. Wisenant gave himself up to the officers and after an examination before a Magistrate, was committed to the county jail in default of bail, to await his trial.

"After trying several different good machines, I preferred yours, on account of its simplicity, and the perfect ease with which it is managed, as well as the strength and durability of the seam. After long experience, I feel competent to speak in this manner, and to confidently recommend it for every variety of family sewing."—Mrs. E. B. Spooner, wife of the Editor of Brooklyn Star.

Listen!!!

COLLECTIONS this season have not equalled my expectations. The crop of cotton was large, prices good, and funds comparatively, abundant. Consequently, I expected much. True, some have done well: others, nothing. To the latter I would suggest, "that now is the time." 'Tis much more easy to make payment now, than it was last season, or, than it may be next. Is it not wise then, to improve this "GOLDEN" opportunity, and while money is cheap, to extinguish old liabilities?

I am anxious to collect my old debts. From those who have done nothing, or but little yet, I shall expect liberal payments in March.

A Card from Dr. James M. THE LIVER

INVIGORATOR!

PREPARED BY DR. SANFORD.

COMPOUNDED entirely from GUMS.

IS ONE OF THE BEST PURGATIVE and Liver Medicines now before the public, that acts as a Cathartic. It is not only a Cathartic, but a Liver remedy, acting first on the Liver to eject its morbid matter, then on the stomach and bowels to carry off that matter, thus accomplishing two purposes effectually, without any of the painful feelings experienced in the operations of most Cathartics. It strengthens the system at the same time that it purges it; and when taken daily in moderate doses, will strengthen and build it up with unusual rapidity.

The Liver is one of the principal regulators of the human body; and when it performs its functions well, the powers of the system are generally developed. The stomach is almost entirely dependent on the Liver for the proper functions; when the stomach is at fault, and the bowels are in consequence of one or the other having ceased to do their duty, the whole system suffers in consequence of one of these organs being deranged. For the disease of this organ has made it his business and advantage of patients at reasonable rates, to make it a perfect system of Mental Independence, combined with the most successful and successful means of treatment for the positive and radical cure of all diseases of the Uterus, Ovaries, &c. For Females. By inhalation, the vapors and many other properties of medicines are readily addressed to the diseased organs and the internal world. DR MORSE'S.

INDIAN ROOT PILLS.

DR. MORSE, the inventor of Morse's Indian Root Pills, has spent the greater part of his life in travelling, having visited Europe, Asia, Africa as well as North America—has spent three years among the Indians of our Western country—it was in this way that the Indian Root Pills were first discovered. Dr. Morse was the first man to establish the fact that all diseases arise from IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD—that our strength, health and life depended upon this vital flood.

When the various passages become clogged and do not act in perfect harmony with the different functions of the body, the blood loses its action becomes thick, corrupted and diseased; thus causing all pains sickness and distress of every name; our strength is exhausted our health we are deprived of, and if nature is not assisted in throwing off the stagnant humors, the blood will become choked and cease to act, and thus our light of life will forcebly blow out. How important then that we should keep the various passages of the body free and open. And how pleasant to us that we have it in our power to put a medicine in your reach, namely, Morse's Indian Root Pills, manufactured from plants and roots which grow around the mountainous cliffs in Nature's garden, for the health and recovery of diseased man. One of the roots from which these Pills are made is a Sudorific, which opens the pores of the skin, and assists Nature in throwing out the finer passage parts of the corruption within. The second is a plant which is an Expectorant, that opens and unclog the passage to the lungs, and thus, in assorting manner performs its duty by throwing off phlegm, and other humors from the lungs by copious spitting. The third is a Diuretic which gives ease and double strength to the kidneys, thus encouraged, they draw large amounts of impurity from the blood, which is then thrown out bountifully by the urinary, or water passage, and which could not have been discharged in any other way. The fourth is a Cathartic, and accompanies the other properties of the Pills while engaged in purifying the blood, the coarser particles of impurity which cannot pass by the outlets are then taken up and conveyed off in great quantities by the bowels.

From the above, it is shown that Dr. Morses Indian Root Pills not only cure the stomach, become united with the blood, for they find way to every part, and completely root out and cleanse the system from all impurity and the life of the body, which is the blood becomes perfectly healthy, consequently all sickness and pain is driven from the system for they cannot remain when the body becomes so pure and clear.

The reason why people are so distressed when sick, and why so many die, is because they do not get a medicine which will pass to the afflicted parts, and which will open the natural passages for the disease to be cast out hence, a large quantity of food and other matter is lodged and the stomach and intestines are literally overflowing with the corrupted mass; thus undergoing disagreeable fermentation, constantly mixing with the blood, which throws the corrupted matter through every vein and artery, until life is taken from the body by disease. Dr. Morse's Pills have added to themselves victory, upon victory, by restoring millions of the sick to blooming health and happiness. Yes, thousands who have been racked or tormented with sickness pain and anguish, and whose feeble frames have been scorched by the burning elements of raging fever, and who have been brought as it were, within a silent step of the silent grave, now stand ready to testify that they would have been numbered with the dead, had it not been for this great and wonderful medicine, Morses Indian Root Pills. After one or two doses had been taken, they were astonished, and absolutely surprised, in witnessing their charming effects. Not only do they give immediate ease and strength, and take away all sickness, pain and anguish, but they at once go to work at the foundation of the disease, which is the blood. Therefore it will be shown, especially by those who use those Pills, that they will so cleanse and purify, that disease—that deadly enemy—will take its flight, and the flush of youth and beauty will again return, and the prospect of a long and happy life will cherish and brighten your days.

Cotton Cultivator.

LETTERS PATENT were granted to the undersigned, on the 6th day of July, 1858, for his improvement in Cotton Cultivators; to which he calls the attention of both Cotton and Corn Cultivators.

The plow will penetrate the ground to any required depth, and will pulverise and loosen the soil, and cut off all the weeds. It will mow close to the stalks of cotton or corn, and loosen the soil near the roots without injuring or destroying them. It does not make a furrow, or turn over the soil, but loosens it up and lets it fall back into its place again. It is peculiarly adapted to the cultivation of cotton; and one horse power is sufficient to propel it.

It is believed, as will be seen by the following certificate, that it will save 25 per cent. of labor over the best improvements, and at least 50 per cent. over the common plow.

He believes the cultivator entitled to all he claims for it, and in support of his belief, he calls the readers attention to the subjoined certificate of Messrs. Moragne and Hollingsworth, who are the only persons who have tried the Cultivator. As to its utility no more need be said—TRY IT—its BEST recommendation is ITS USE.

He offers for sale County or State rights at reasonable prices. Address,

ASBERRY SMITH,
Jan. 20, '59—6m. Jacksonville, Ala.

Gadsden, Ala., Jan. 15, 1859.

The undersigned have used the Cotton Cultivator of Asberry Smith, and we take pleasure in saying, that is a most excellent plow; superior to any we have ever used in the cultivation of cotton, & saves at least 25 per cent. in labor, over any plow we have ever tried, and from 30 to 50 per cent. over the common plow. In the cultivation of young corn it is superior to any we have tried. We take pleasure in recommending it to the public as worthy of patronage; as we believe from actual experiment, it comes fully up to all that is claimed for it.

ISAAC P. MORAGNE.
THOS. HOLLINGSWORTH.

I am personally acquainted with Isaac P. Moragne and Thos. Hollingsworth, and I have the utmost confidence in the above statement made by them.

RICHARDSON'S

CONSUMERS of RICHARDSON'S LINENS, and those desirous of obtaining the GENUINE GOODS, should see that the articles they purchase are sealed with the full name of the firm,
RICHARDSON, SONS & OWDEN,
as a guarantee of the soundness and durability of the Goods.

This caution is rendered essentially necessary as large quantities of inferior and defective Linens are prepared; season after season and sealed with the name of RICHARDSON by Irish Houses, who, regardless of the injury thus inflicted alike on the American consumer & the manufacturers of the genuine Goods, will not readily abandon a business so profitable, while purchasers can be imposed on with Goods of a worthless character.

A CARD
TO THE
Medical Profession.

Having had for my object the preparation of a remedy that would be beneficial in all cases where an external application is indicated, without being injurious in any, I have devoted a number of years to studying; and experimenting. After making thousands of experiments and consulting the best authors and most scientific chemists and physicians of the day, I have at length succeeded in making a Medicine that will recommend itself to every one who studies its combination. Every intelligent Physician and Druggist will see at a glance, from the analysis given below, that it is composed of the very best remedies for external use in the Materia Medica.

THIS IS NOT A SECRET REMEDY.

Every person who can read may know its composition: its effects are also well known. Over hundred thousand Bottles made according to this prescription have been sold and used. The result in every case was always uniform and satisfactory. Read the analysis made by one of the most popular and scientific Chemists in the United States.

Porter's Oriental Life
LINIMENT,
MADE BY
C. W. WRIGHT, M. D.
Professor of Chemistry in the Kentucky School of Medicine, Bowdoin, 1858.

To R. D. PORTER:

SIR—The ingredients which enter into composition of the Preparation known as "Porter's Oriental Life Liniment," which was left with me for qualitative & chemical analysis, were found on examination to contain the following ingredients:

Euphone,	Cajuputar,
Estadline,	Oil from Resin,
Piramar,	Naphia,
Petical,	Carbonate of Potass.

All of the above ingredients, with the exception of Carbonate of Potassa are eminently antiseptic. As the composition of the above preparation is no longer a secret, I have no hesitancy in stating that it is a safe and efficacious external remedy for the diseases in which it is recommended.

Respectfully, C. W. WRIGHT.

Hundreds of physicians use and prescribe Porter's Oriental Life Liniment, believing it to be the best remedy for that class of diseases in which it is recommended. They know its composition and prescribe it with as much certainty, as to its effects, as they do any other remedy.

The following are a few of the many eminent and influential physicians who have written letters to the proprietor speaking in the highest terms of the medicinal properties of the Oriental Life Liniment:

Dr. W. D. Reid, of Jefferson county, Ky.
Dr. Moses Applegate, Crothersville, Ind.
Dr. Breer, of Newcastle, Ky.
Dr. J. H. Jupin, of Morganfield Ky.
Dr. J. L. McConnel, Obian Valley, Tenn.
Dr. J. W. McDonald, Butlersville, Ind.
Dr. R. B. Parker, Liberty, Ky.
Dr. R. H. Perryman, Boston, Ky.
Dr. D. Terrell, Felixville, Ky.
Dr. C. H. Harris, Charleston, Ky.
Dr. J. W. Hedges, Colemansville, Ky.
Dr. W. E. Olds, Naples, Ind.

The Oriental Life Liniment will be found of great benefit in Frostbites, Rheumatism, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, &c. &c. Put up in 25, 50 and 81 Bottles, and sold by all Druggists and Country Merchants. Manufactured by
Dr. R. D. PORTER,

POETRY.

HAUNTED HOUSES.

BY HENRY W. LONGFELLOW.

"All houses wherein men have lived and died
Are haunted houses. Though the open doors
The harmless phantoms on their errands glide,
With feet that make no sound upon the floors.

"We meet them at the door-way, on the stair,
Along the pas-sages they come and go,
Impalpable impressions on the air,
A sense of something moving to & fro.

"There are more guests at table than the hosts
Invite the illuminated hall
Is thronged with quiet, inoffensive ghosts,
As silent as the pictures on the wall.

"The stranger at my fireside cannot see
The forms I see, nor hear the sounds I hear;
He but perceives what is; while unto me
All that has been is visible and clear.

"We have no titled-deeds to house or lands;
Owners and occupants of earlier dates
From graves forgotten stretch their dusty hands,
And hold in mortmain still their old estates.

"The spirit-world around this world of sense
Floats like an atmosphere, and everywhere
Wafts through these earthly mists and vapors dense
A vital breath of more etherial air.

"Our little lives are kept in equipoise
By opposite attractions and desires;
The struggle of the instinct that enjoys,
And the more noble instinct that aspires.

"These perturbations, this perpetual jar
Of earthly wants and aspirations high,
Come from the influence of an unseen star
An undiscovered planet in our sky.

"And as the moon from some dark gate of cloud
Throws o'er the sea a floating bridge of light,
Across whose trembling planks our fancies crowd
Into the realm of mystery and night—

"So from the world of spirits there descends
A bridge of light, connecting it with this,
O'er whose unsteady floor, that sways and bends,
Wander our thoughts above the dark abyss."

From the Constitutionalist.

The Past.

Why mourn the past? it cannot rise again
On life's eventful & tempestuous shore,
Where hope's frail castles all are reared in vain,
Where many a ruin tells what shadows we deplore.

What tho' the charm of life too soon is broke,
And all but mem'ry is forever gone:
What, tho' alas! we are too rudely woke
From the sweet dreams, we fondly would dream on.

What tho' the past, with its pale spectral band,
Is all that's left to haunt the heart's deep cell:
In the drear hours of cheerless solitude,
Sometimes that heart with pleasing sadness swells.

Pleasing, because we once had friends to love,
And friends who lov'd as fondly to the last,
And carried with them to the world above
The love that o'er our lives a sunshine cast.

For will not Heav'n to us again restore
Earth's purest joys that were so bright, so dear,
Where change, nor with'ring blight can never more
Come o'er them with its chilling frost to sear?

It must be for the best; do we not know
Almighty wisdom rules our fortunes here?
And all our conflicts on this stage of woe
Are but to wean us from a world too dear.

Miscellaneous.

From Ballou's Pictorial.

The Three Sisters of Marston Moor.

BY MRS. C. F. GERRY.

(CONCLUDED.)

The leaden clouds which had masked the sky all day had parted, and the moon was shining brightly. Irene Forrest had not gone far when she heard a wild cry, and then the harsh voice of Mark Gault. She drew back into the shadows, but peering through the branches of the holly shrubs which screened her crouching figure, she saw Gault standing side by side with Ginevra Vane. The girl's hat had fallen off, and the face thus exposed was frightfully pale, the large eyes had dilated with terror, there was a spasmodic motion in every feature.

"Come, come, lady-bird!" cried Gault, in a taunting tone; "walk home with me peaceably. You might as well begin, for before she died, old Maud made a solemn promise that you should be my wife. Come, I say; I want to have a little chat with you."

"Leave me!" gasped Ginevra; leave me; you have no claim upon me.—Dame Forrest no longer has the power to bind me body and soul. I will never be yours while I live, and so you may set your heart at rest."

"Ha, ha, ha!" laughed Mark Gault, "you've got some spirit, I declare!—But there's no use in showing fight.—Come along with me, without another word." And grasping her arm, he began to draw her forward.

"Villian, unhand that girl!" exclaimed a voice which rang out like a clarion on the cool, night air, and with one wild bound, Guy Montrose cleared the hedge that separated his grounds from the highway, and stood face to face with the ruffian; the next moment Gault lay senseless on the ground, and Ginevra was clining to her defender.

"How shall I thank you?" murmured Ginevra, brokenly.

"I ask no thanks," replied Montrose; "I need none but that glad, grateful look of yours. I saw you walking alone and kept my eye upon you, lest something might befall one so young, so fair, and apparently so unprotected. You belong to the household of the late Maud Forrest, I beleive? Shall I conduct you home?"

The listening Irene waited to hear no more. What could have been more inopportune than such a meeting between those she wished to keep apart? Her blood boiled with rage, as they walked away in the moonlight, Ginevra tenderly supported by the handsome patrician's arm, and his head bent so his eyes could read her young and beautiful face. Striking into the moor Irene took a circuitous route to the old mansion house, but as long as she was on her way Montrose had not reached the door with his fair charge, when she entered. She could not bear to meet the inquiries of her sisters, and so, leaving the front door ajar, she glided into the hall and concealed herself behind a grim statue. She had watched and listened half an hour perhaps, when she heard voices just outside, the deep, rich tones of Montrose blending with the soft accents of Ginevra Vane. In another instant they had paused on the door-stone.

"Here I must leave you," Irene heard the gentleman say; "but before I go, let me say a word or two more.—There is a forlorn, wishful look about your eyes, a drooping of the lids, a tremor round the mouth, which tells a sad story; the world confirms it; will you allow me to ask, after so breif an acquaintance, if you have been crushed down into the dust under the iron heel of a cruel mistress?"

"She's dead—don't speak of her!" gasped the girl, tears gushing into her eyes; "and now farewell, sir; you're far above me in station; I can never meet you again as a friend, and equal." And she turned to leave him.

"Stay!" interposed Montrose; "I shall not loose sight of you, unless you banish me from the neighborhood; good night." And the young heir bowed as profoundly as if Ginevra Vane had been a princess.

He glided on the door, and the girl came hurrying in, flushed and tremulous, and with a sweet smile playing over her face. What was her consternation when Irene Forrest rose before her!

"Soho, Ginevra!" she said, seizing her by the arm; "you have been playing the lady have you? A pretty pass things are coming to, when household drudges aspire to the notice of a future earl! Minion, you shall suffer for this!"

With eyes flashing fiercely, she drew the maiden along towards the kitchen, where old John the steward, sat dozing over his cane.

"John!" she cried, shaking him by the shoulder; "wake, wake, I say, and turn that good cane of yours to some account, Ginevra is getting above her station; I must see her soundly beaten before I sleep."

The man started and rubbed open his sleepy eyes, but made no movement to do her bidding.

"Will you obey me, John?" queried his mistress, angrily.

"No, ma'am I can't beat this child—no, no; she's saved my old bones many a hard pull, I beleive she's a wronged creetur.

"Then go; you are no longer a servant of mine." And opening the door, she pushed him out to seek another home wherever he could.

The next day it was rumored that Ginevra Vane, who had so long been a kitchen drudge with the Forrests, had disappeared, but whither she had gone was a profound mystery. Vigilant search was made for her by the neighbors, and foremost among those interested in her fate was Guy Montrose; every effort failed to elicit any information in regard to her, and people at length came to the conclusion that the dark secret was locked in the hearts of the three sisters of Marston Moor.

For a few weeks after Montrose had ascertained that Ginevra was missing, he continued to pay occasional visits to their home, but at length even these ceased, and they were left to live in lonely grandeur. Ere long it became a wonder to the young nobleman's life, that he had ever admired the dark and stately Irene Forrest, and the Fair Ginevra haunted his memory like a sad, half sweet dream.

A year had gone by since the events which have just been narrated. Deeper and deeper had grown the shadows which darkened the lot of the three lone women of the moor. Their natures had become darker and more vindictive; like their mother, they seemed at warfare with the world; they asked for no favors and gave none. There was something mysterious in their manner of life, and the superstitious said that old Maud's ghost was still regnant in her home, and was the chief mover of all the strange proceedings there. The burly form of Mark Gault was often seen beside their hearthstone; the shrill whistle peculiar to him, was a frequent sound about their grounds; his horses were stabled with those of the sisters; once or twice the great table in the banqueting-room had been set out with the family silver and the choicest viands, for the purpose of feasting him and a party of rude fellows like himself.

In the meantime Guy Montrose betook himself to a secluded place many miles from Marston Moor. As he was strolling along a lonely beach one evening, he saw a little shallop just ready to land. Its only occupants were an old man and a girl. The next moment a fair face turned towards him.

"Ginevra, the long-lost Ginevra!" he cried, and sprang to the water's edge.

"Guy Montrose!" exclaimed the maiden; "surely, Uncle John, we need not fear to trust him."

"No, no," rejoined the old man, and they both leaped on shore.

"I had despaired of finding you," said the young man; "after your mysterious disappearance, I sought most earnestly for you, but in vain. I even visited the Forrests awhile, with the hope of ascertaining some clue to your fate, but to no purpose. It is now the general belief in the neighborhood that the sisters of Marston Moor made way with you."

"No, O no," replied Ginevra: "after we had parted at the door, on the night when you rescued me from the advance of Mark Gault, Irene met me in a rage, dragged me along to the kitchen, and bade John, the old steward, beat me."

"Fiend!" muttered Montrose, between his teeth.

"Yes," interposed the gray-haired man, coming forward; "she did seem like a fiend; because I would not obey her she turned me away. Then she beat Ginevra unmercifully herself, and thrust her into the cellar. I was lurking about, for I had suddenly resolved to flee and take the child with me. At last, when the house was still, I went to the cellar-window and called softly, 'Ginevra, Ginevra!' She was lame from the blows she had received, but she managed to crawl towards me. I knew how to unfasten the secret springs of the window, and soon drew her out. Before the day broke we were far on our journey, for though I carried Ginevra in my arms, a strong resolution gave me the strength of a giant, and old as I was, I felt no weariness. We came here, where I have a brother living.—I have built a little hut of my own; Ginevra shares it and acts as my housekeeper, while I gain a livelihood by fishing."

"Thank God that it is well with you!" said Montrose, gazing with intense admiration at the beautiful Ginevra.

A twelvemonth of comparative repose had superbly ripened the young girl's loveliness; her eyes had lost their forlorn and weary look; the lips no longer had that uneasy tremor, which bespeaks a gnawing care; the pale cheek had taken a soft, peachblossom tinge, and the rippling gold of her hair a richer shade. At seventeen, Ginevra Vane was as fair a creature as ever trod the soil of old England.—Guy Montrose felt this; her face haunted him through the dreams of the night, and as day after day went on, he learned to think that her pure young heart would be as great a treasure as a man need to win. They rambled side by side over the rocks and sands of the shore; they sailed in John's fishing-boat on the blue sea; they sat together in the rude hut, while the sunshine stole in golden bars through the latticed and thus both learned that lesson which comes sooner or later to every soul. This knowledge gave Ginevra a wild thrill of pain.

"Why have I been so rash?" she said to herself; "oh! I not know that he can never mate with me who have been a mere drudge?" And she grew shy and distrustful.

Guy Montrose marked the change which had come over her; he saw that she no more bounded to meet him, nor grew radiant and joyous in his society. She seemed to keep a strict guard over word and look, and he resolved to know the reason.

"Ginevra," he murmured, as he stood beside her on the beach; "you do not appear the same person that you were a week ago. You are as distant and reserved as any woman in the world. I did not expect this of you."

The girl stooped to pick a beautiful shell from the sands, that she might hide her agitation, but she did not speak, and Montrose continued:

"I have been in society a great deal, Ginevra; I have met scores of fashionable ladies and grown tired of them.—Such an one can never be aught to me but the companion of an hour. When I first met you, I was charmed by your wondrous beauty, and your words aroused a compassionate interest in me. Since I have known you, I have found something so pure, so fresh in your nature, that my whole heart has gone out to you in a wild absorbing love. Ginevra, can you love me? will you be my wife?"

The maiden rose and looked searching into his face.

"You need to be called proud," she faltered; "you have wealth, station, everything I have not."

"That may be," resumed Montrose; "but now I wish to put these distinctions aside. If I stood here, a fisherman as humble as John, but yet as devoted to you as I am now, could you say, Guy Montrose, I love you?' Answer me truly, Ginevra."

"O yes; I have grown shy and reserved, because I dared not love you!"

"Then I am blessed indeed. I ask no higher earthly happiness than to have won you for my own!"

He drew her to him, he kissed the cheek that burned with joyous blushes, and murmured words which made her young heart beat as it never beat before. Montrose urged an immediate union, but Ginevra steadily refused, declaring that she would not be his wife till she had gained that knowledge and those accomplishments which would fit her to grace the circles in which he was wont to move.

A fortnight later Ginevra Vane was installed at a select school with the sister of her noble suitor. Another year went by, and few would have recognized in the brilliant and beautiful girl who was about to leave Madame Dautier's establishment, the poor creature who had once drudged in Maud Forrest's kitchen. Love had lent new keenness to her intellect, and even those high-born relatives who had sneered at Guy's choice, now acknowledged that he might be proud of his betrothed bride.

It was the evening previous to the day which had been appointed for the bridal of Guy Montrose and the fair Ginevra, and the young nobleman's affianced wife sat alone in a splendid apartment of his London residence. The marriage rites were to be solemnized at St. Paul's, with all the eclat befitting the rank and wealth of the house of Montrose, and Ginevra had just turned from an inspection of her costly wedding gear. In striking contrast to the splendor around her, had came up the memory of her desolate childhood.—Maud Forrest's low kitchen once more rose before her, and again she seemed to be a barefoot drudge, toiling like a galley slave. But what was that?—a mere phantom of a heated brain? No; there stood Irene Forrest, her coal-black hair streaming in dishevelled masses round her haggard face, and beside her the athletic form of Mark Gault, her quondam fiance!

"Gault," said Irene, in a hollow tone, fastening her burning eyes upon him, "I promised that I would find Ginevra for you if she was in the wide world, but—ha, ha!—I have only brought you here to London to deepen my revenge, to denounce you as a smuggler! There, there, I have done with you; I leave you to the law! I have been the means of fixing its grasp upon you!"

As she spoke, a band of officers poured in, and the bravado Gault was borne off to lodgings which he should have occupied long before.

"You look astonished, Ginevra," continued Irene, "and well you may. Once I would have torn my tongue out by the roots, ere I would have betrayed him! I have feared that man as I have never feared another; but of late he has grown so tyranical that I have determined to shake off his power.—Years ago he aided my mother in carrying out a wicked plan. What that plan was I will tell you. When my mother and yours were girls, they were rivals; Helen Berkely won the rich and fascinating nobleman Maud Hastings had resolved to win, and made mother her deadliest enemy. Still she was a secret foe; Lady Helen never suspected as such, and when she died, bequeathed her only child to her care, as her husband had been killed by an accident.—Then Maud Forrest's revenge began to work. She degraded you into a mere nothing, and appropriated your fortune to herself. Gault knew the secret of your birth, and to bride him to silence, she promise to give you to him as a wife, with a large marriage portion, and was finally persuaded to aid him in his smuggling, by secreting goods and the like. At her death she charged us to walk in her steps, and thus far we have; but there is an end to human endurance—my spirit has long chafed under the thraldom, and here I stand in open rebellion."

"I can never thank you enough for what you have revealed to me!" cried the girl; "let me call Guy, and he will thank you too."

"No; I loved him once; I am not strong enough to meet his thanks!—Good-night, Ginevra—a long good-night!"

"Good-night, Irene—God bless you!"

Thus they parted. The next day, Guy Montrose and Ginevra were married, but when they went down to their ancestral hall in the country, after a full restitution of their property had been made through a London attorney, they found the old home of the Forrests desolate, and afterwards, none knew where it fared and died "the three sisters of Marston Moor."

Daring Feat at Niagara.

A correspondent of the Chicago Press and Tribune gives the following particulars of the recent insane hazard at Niagara Falls, of Signor Gaspa Morelli alias Andrew Greenleaf, a dare devil Yankee boy, who for a wager of $1000, on Monday week, actually crossed Niagara river, walking upon stilts between Goat Island and the Falls. The writer says:

Punctually at seven o'clock, Morelli appeared, in fine spirits and condition. He had with him a pair of stilts about twelve feet long, made of wrought iron, flat sharp edged and pointed—shaped in fact, almost precisely like a double edged dagger. These were firmly lashed to his legs, & he walked towards the terrible river with a confident smile. The morning was clear and cold, but he was attired very lightly, in a dress not unlike that usually worn by professional gymnasts. At ten minutes past seven he stepped into the water, which in another moment was boiling, surging and rushing beneath his feet. The boldest of the lookers on held his breath in suspense, as the daring man receded from the shore. He alone seemed unmoved, and passed on, slowly and carefully avoiding the larger rocks which were made apparent by the eddying current. His steps at first were very short and carefully made but after wards became bolder and longer.

The Stilts, of course, were so placed that the current struk only against their sharp edges, and produced but little effect; but the danger from the sunken rocks, and the conviction that a single false step would send him to death, produced a feeling that was horribly painful. Once or twice he seemed to lose his balance, and a sickening shudder ran through each one of the beholders. Recovering himself he still kept on—still receded, until to our straining eyes he could scarcely be distinguished from the foaming waters. The middle of the river was attained at last; hours seem to have fled but it was barely seventeen minutes since he left the shore. As he approached the deepest and most dangerous part of his route, the suspense became more fearfully intense. No word was spoken, except that one man offered another, five dollars for a moment's use of his lorgnette, which offer passed unheeded. Just as Morelli reached the swiftest and deepest portion of the current, he seemed to totter—sink—he threw up his arms I closed my eyes. Opening them in a moment after I saw that he was still standing. A few moments more and he had reached the Canadian bank—& fell exhausted into the arms of two men who were waiting for him.

At this hour (3 p. m) he has nearly recovered, and though still in bed, receives the congratulations of dozens of visitors who come pouring in. He left the American shore 960 feet above the fall, and came out about 1060 feet above the Canadian. The money has already been handed over to him, and all will agree that it was fairly won.

DISTRESSING AFFAIR.—A Bride & others Fatally Burned.—The Louisville Courier has the following account of a distressing affair which occurred at Lebanon, Ky., on the 21st instant:

"Miss Susan Shuck, daughter of John Shuck, Esq., was to have been married to Mr. John Thomas at 12 o'clock.—But a few minutes prior to the time the ceremony was to be performed her dress accidentally caught fire, and the wedding dress, which was of thin material, was instantly in a blaze, and the young lady was fatally burned. Her sister, Mrs. Burr Harrison, in her efforts to save her, fired her own dress, and was perhaps more severely burned. There is but little hope of her recovery, it is feared. Mr. Shuck and other members of the family, who also tried to relieve the young lady from her perilous situation, were burned, but not seriously.—The scene was terrifying beyond the expression of language. The bride was badly burned from the waist up, and the hair burned from her head.—After her wounds were dressed, and while she lay upon her couch; suffering the intensest agony, the marriage ceremony was performed.

LIFE'S DARK SIDE.—It is certain that whatever sunbeams God has thrown across our path—and his mercy has made them both bright and numerous—there are also clouds to cast their shadows over every career, however prosperous. Few summer days pass without rain, and often their sultry heat brings death with it. So every successful life hath its disappointments, every happy one its sorrows; even every Christian one its crosses. Unavailing strivings against oppression—heartless resistings of a pinching poverty—the griping demands of an avaricious selfishness—the prevalence of wickedness and depravity—these are life's dark sides, that shall never be removed till sin is destroyed. Let this inseparable union ever be borne in mind. Sin rules with a high hand in that back street, or in yonder narrow lane, and by an unavoidable consequence, these are the abodes of deepest and darkest sorrow. Personal ungodliness ever entails the stings and vexations of an unconverted state.—Family irreligion is the sure precurser of intestine tumults and heart-breaking separations. Social depravity brings prisons, and work houses, and police establishments with it. Life's dark side is life's sinning side. Every time we lift the hand of rebellion against God, we throw its shadows of sorrows back on ourselves. Strive to make life holy, to crush sin in your heart and rebuke it abroad, guide your steps by the lamp of God's truth. You will thus brighten life, lessen its dark shades; while the reflection of your good works may throw a gleam of sunshine on the career of another, less hopeful or more sinful than your own.—Advocate and Journal.

The American flag with thirty three stars was thown to the breeze for the first time in the United States on yesterday form the top of the Senate Chamber. It had been prepared in anticipation Mr. C. S. Jones, Door-keeper of the Senate, and it was hoisted simultaneously with the announcement of the signing of the Oregon bill by the President.
Wash. Star, 15th.

The admission of Oregon as a State into the Union increases the number of stars in our national banner to thirty three. We have now two States upon the Pacific—two mighty pillars of the temple of the Union, towering staunch and majestic on the western verge of the continent.—Bright and expansive as were the visions of the Farthers of the Republic, this result is more than they dreamed. Gen. Jane, one of the Senators elect, says the population of Oregon will exceed ninety three thousand. Her admission into the Union was bitterly opposed by the Black Republicans and their Southern allies in Congress because it secures a Democratic Senate for four years more against all contigencies.

FIRE IN MEMPHIS.—Newspaper Offices Burnt.—A destructive fire occurred in Memphis on Wednesday night last. It was first discovered in the cellar of the Eagle and Enquirer office, from whence it rapidly communicated to the adjoining buildings, and destroyed nearly half a square in the centre of the city. The newspaper offices burnt out were, the Eagle and Enquirer, the Avalanche, the Ledger—all daily papers—the Christian Advocate, the Presbyterian, and the Sentinel. Besides these, the following buildings and tenements were destroyed by the fire: The printing house of Messrs. Hutton and Clark, stores of Gilkey & Warren, jewelers, Saffarrans & Stratten, stove-dealers, W. H. Hunt, crockery store, A. Stillman's millinery establishment, Henrich & Bro.'s confectionery store, Jos. Teufel's saloon, and several others. Loss estimated at $200,000. The fire is supposed to be the work of an incendiary.

A FABLE.—A young

Jacksonville Republican.

JACKSONVILLE, ALA.

March, 17, 1859.

☞Mr. F. H. GOODWIN, is our authorized Agent, to receive and receipt for subscriptions to the Republican, contract and receipt for advertising, &c.

Our friends and patrons will confer a favor upon us, which will be gratefully appreciated, by affording him every facility in their power, in the transaction of business.

Officer's Blanks.

We are now prepared to supply the newly elected Justices of the Peace and Constables, with the ,blanks they may need, such as—Warrants, Executions, Attachments, Garnishees, Stay Bonds, Appeal Bonds and Delivery Bonds, all neatly printed on good paper from correct forms from the Code.

Those who cannot apply in person can send their orders, and we will fill them, assorting the various kinds of Blanks in proper proportions.

Bartlett Owen, Esq. Tax Assessor of Calhoun County, will receive and trismit to us the names of persons who may wish to subscribe for this paper, at his various appointments for assessing or other places. He is also authorized to receipt for any subscription money which may be paid to him.

Below, we give an item of reliable information, in a few lines, which if remembered and acted upon by farmers and pork raisers, among our readers, will no doubt be worth to each of them, many times the price of a year's subscription to our paper.

Though we have heard many assertions on the subject of the comparative value of ground and unground, cooked and uncooked food for stock, this is the most definite statement we have seen; & this proves that one bushel of ground and cooked corn, is worth more than three of raw. A little industry and very small outlay, will enable any farmer to make the experiment for himself. For this region of country hurdles for this purpose as well as for making molasses from Chinese Sugar cane, can be very handily obtained from the iron works of Messrs. Goode & Morris, on Cane Creek.

Cooked Food for Swine.

Samuel H. Clay, of Kentucky, has been experimenting in feeding several lots of hogs, changing them from raw to cooked, and from ground to unground food, with the following results: One bushel of dry corn made five pounds and ten ounces of live pork, one bushel of boiled corn made fourteen pounds and seven ounces of pork; one bushel of ground corn, boiled, made, in one instance, sixteen pounds and seven ounces, and in another, nearly eighteen pounds of pork. Estimating corn at 90 cents a bushel, and pork at 8 cents a pound, we have, as the result of one bushel of dry corn, 45 cents worth of pork; of one bushel of boiled corn, 136 cents worth of pork; and of one bushel of ground corn, 156 cents worth of pork.

We have been requested to withdraw the name of JOHN W. JONES Esq. as a candidate for Tax Collector; and to state to his friends and fellow citizens, that he fears, even in case of his election, his health would not permit him to discharge the duties of the office, as those duties have to be performed chiefly in the winter season.

Death of the Post Master General.

The news of the death of Post Master General Brown, will be received throughout the length and breadth of the country with feelings of deep and sincere regret. Our country has been blessed with few if any more capable, faithful, industrious & honest cabinet officers, or who have had a stronger hold on the confidence and affections of the masses of the people.

We copy the following brief biographical sketch of his life from the Nashville Banner:

AARON V. BROWN was born on the 15th of August, 1795, in the county of Brunswick Virginia, and was in the 64th year of his age. He graduated at Chapel Hill in 1811, in a large class of which Senator Mangum and Ex Gov. Manley of North Carolina, were members. During his collegiate career his parents removed to Giles county in this state, whither he followed them at its expiration, and about 1815 commenced the study of the law in this city, at the office of the late Judge Trimble. Having obtained a license, he commenced the practice of his profession here, but subsequently removed to Giles county to close up the business of Judge A. M. Harris, who had accepted a position on the bench. Subsequently he formed a legal partnership with the late President Polk, which continued for several years, and until the latter commenced his Congressional career. He served in the Legislature from 1821 to 1827, inclusive, as a Senator from Giles and Lincoln, and was a representative from Giles in the session of 1831-2. In 1839 he was elected to Congress over Hon. E. J. Shields; in 1841 to the called session, without opposition and in 1843 over Ex Gov. N. S. Brown of this City, which terminated his Congressional career. He was subsequently twice the Democratic candidate for Governor, elected in 1845 over Col. E. H. Foster, and defeated in 1847 by Gov. Neill S. Brown. He has ever since occupied a prominent position as a politician, both in a State and National point of view, and was the author of the Baltimore Platform upon which Pierce ran, and the Tennessee Platform in the Southern Convention. He was opposed at one time to the Clay Compromise, measures, but subsequently "acquiesced." As a member of President Buchanan's Cabinet he has occupied a prominent position, both in a social and a political point of view, and he was very frequently spoken of in connection with the nomination of the Charleston Convention.

☞The impostor, who passed throgh our town some time since, calling his name J. B. Mitchell, and representing himself as a brother of John Mitchell, & Agent for the Southern Citizen, has been arrested in Savannah. He swindled the citizens of Tuscaloosa, Selma, Talladega, and other points, out of several hundred dollars before he reached here, and we suppose collected some thirty or forty dollars here. It is not stated whether he has been made to disgorge any of his ill-gotten gains.

☞The communication over the signature of "Poor Man" will be published in our next.

☞Worse Still.—We received a letter last week which was mailed for us in New York in September 1857, and it was a duplicate of one that had previously miscarried. Perhaps if it could speak, it could reveal some of the secrets of the dead-letter office, or give us some information of where the Comet has gone.

RAINS AND FRESHETS.—It appears from accounts in the papers, that they are having similar weather in the west and southwest to what we have experienced here. The Ohio river and many of its tributaries were overflown in the middle of February. The Cincinnatti Gazette of 21st Feb. says that the rise was within 2 feet 11 inches of that of 1853, but much more rapid—that the water was within 1 foot of the second floor of buildings below main street, with 15 inches of water in basement of the Spencer House. The Missouri river too is reported very high at St. Louis, and great damage was apprehended from overflows on the back part of the city of Memphis.

Selma and Talladega.

We learned from Mr. Terry of Talladega, on Monday last, that the entire amount necessary to purchase the iron and finish the Railroad to Talladega, had been made up, and that the work would now be pushed forward so as to insure its completion to that place in time for the next crop.

☞There were 7000 bales of cotton and 7000 bags of linseed, together with other valuables, consumed by fire in a warehouse in Boston on the 28th ult. Entire loss, $750,000.

SELMA.—The Sentinel says there have been 62 dwelling houses built in Selma since the 1st of October last; and that not one of these, nor indeed a single house in the city is now unoccupied. There are few cities in the Union, that present better opportunities for profitable investments of capital.

Cotton Cultivator.—Persons who wish to avail themselves of the advantages of this truly valuable invention, recently patented by Mr. Asberry Smith, are referred to the advertisement of that gentleman, headed "Cotton," in which they are informed who are the only persons authorized to dispose of them in the counties of Calhoun, Cherokee and St. Clair.

Cleveland & Chattanooga Rail Road.—The Gazette says that this important work approaches completion, and that it is confidently believed that the cars will be run through early in May.

☞Leach & Avery's Foundery at Tuscaloosa was destroyed by fire on Saturday week. There was no insurance.

The Town of Brownsville, Texas, was visited by a destructive fire on the 15th ult. by which 15 houses were destroyed, consisting of stores, law offices—loss estimated at $70,000.

☞The full swing is the cry of the Justices of the Peace and Constables, elected throughout this county, at the recent election.

For the Republican.

MR. EDITOR:—Our Town has been enlivened during the past week by a visit from the "Rocky Troupe." Through their stay, the play-having part of the community here receded in their element. Comedy, Farce, and ballet posturing confederate, was the order of the day. The Troupe, have undoubtedly their reputation for giving entertainments of the most unexceptionable character. Nothing that could offer the most fastidious can be observed in their performances. The Songs and Duets by Mrs. Bailey, and Miss Emilie, were well executed—and the ball dances by "Little Fannie," was exceptionally beyond description. "Master George," too was warmly applauded in his comic dances by the delighted audience.—"Sick of the Woods," was the play of the season. Mr. Smith, in the character of Jibbenamosay, did himself great honor; his delineations of that character, proves him to be an actor of no ordinary ability. We remember to have seen Mr. Smith, in his Palmiest days on the "Legitimate Boards,"—an honor to his profession. We must not forget to mention Miss Emilie, who with proper culture will make a good actress. Mrs. Bailey, jr., also, is quite a favorite with the play-goers. Her beautiful face and fine form show well on the stage.

They will visit our Town again on Wednesday and Thursday the 16th & 17th.

AMATEUR.

Mr. R. E. Neeld, ARTIST, has been in this place several days, and will remain for a short time. His Ambrotype Gallery is in the house recently occupied by Mr. Yoe. We saw yesterday some truly beautiful specimens of his art; and advise our friends to avail themselves of the opportunity to obtain beautiful and cheap pictures.

SCHOOL FOR THE DEAF & DUMB.

It will be remembered by the citizens of Calhoun County, that at the last session of our Legislature an act was passed re-establishing the school for the education of the deaf and dumb of this State. Which school is now located in the old Masonic institute in the Town of Talladega, which is a fine healthy situation and a good commodious building. If there are any of that unfortunate class in this county, who wish to receive the benefits of this institution, and who are not able to pay their board and tuition, (which amounts to $140 a year,) they can be admitted into the school and have their tuition & board paid by the State, by taking the following steps in the matter. The pupil wishing to enter the school free of charge (or some of his or her friends,) must make affidavit before a Justice of the Peace, that neither the pupil, nor friends, are able to pay the expences of their education. And get the certificate of the Probate Judge, and forward the same to the State Superintendent of Education, who will therefore issue orders to the teacher at Talladega to allow the pupil to enter the school as a beneficiary.

I hope that the people of this county will give some attention to this institution. It was established for a benevolent purpose, and I wish our County and more especially the unfortunate mutes of our County to share the benefits of the same. I understand that the school is now in a prosperous condition, under the care and management of Mr. Joseph Johnson, who was a teacher for a number of years in the deaf & dumb institution at Cave Springs in the State of Georgia. I am personally acquainted with Mr. Johnson, and know him to be a gentleman of high literary attainments, and calculated in every respect to fulfill the position he occupies with honor to himself and dignity to the cause in which he is engaged.

J. H. WRIGHT.

Plant Plenty of Corn.

There is every indication that breadstuffs will command high prices for a year to come. The great grain marts of Chicago and Buffalo have now unusually short and inadequate stocks on hand—so short that consumers in the latter city are sending orders to a distance for supplies. From the wheat-producing regions of the middle States complaints are already made of the unpromising and precarious state of the growing crops the winter has been too changeable for it, and should a severe cold snap occur in March, much of it will be caught in too forward a stage and further injured. In addition to these tangible reports of the shortness of the stock and prospects of the next crop, there are collateral influences that will probably considerably affect the market for grain of all kinds.

Undoubtedly a very heavy emigration will go forward early in the Spring to the gold regions of Kansas, Arizona and Sonora: it would probably be no exaggeration to estimate a total number of emigrants at one hundred thousand. To meet the wants of these, heavy supplies of grain must be sent forward immediately, the trade and reducing the supply in farmers' hands.

Extensive arrangements have already been made to send forward weekly supply trains from the Kansas and Missouri rivers, to carry on heavy stocks of provisions in advance of orders from the gold regions. So many laborers will go from the middle and Western States, that the grain crops of those regions must be cut short by it. Then we have here at home the activity and prosperity of the cotton interest to stimulate planters to raise as large a cotton crop as possible this year—many of them have been in a blind manner at very high prices, and will rely solely upon the cotton crop to help them to pay what is due and to meet their engagements.

As the above complete to a case as that heavy grain crops will be required; and as this is the time of the year when our Southern planters must determine and appertain their crops, we call their attention to the prospects before them. They can yet do much to influence the prices of grain of all kinds by planting plentifully corn. There will seem to be no danger whatever that they can lose by appropriating more ground to this crop and less to cotton, even if breadstuffs should be cheaper than present appearances indicate. Who has ever known corn to be a drug in the South for many years past? Last year's crop was an unusually heavy one, and yet corn now commands 60 to 70 cents per bushel in this market—a price more remunerative to the producer than 10 or 12 cents per pound for cotton.

Besides, our Southern planters cannot well afford to keep 5 cents per pound for pork, and 1 cent for bacon even out of the pockets of consumers, and at 20 to 25 cents per pound. The people in the cities they will have to pay these prices as long as they raise a little pork for themselves. If, therefore a superabundance of corn for ordinary plantation uses should not command a fair price in market, they can easily convert it into pork and fatten it on a very small drain upon their purses. They may boast of the power and dominion of "King Cotton," but his sceptre is over every year seriously curtailed and its income sadly drawn upon by two of the most stupid animals under the sun—mules and these animals support hogs, corn and bacon.

We are then confirmed that planters can make a handsome crop next year very remunerative and we invite their attention to the facts and deductions given above.

Columbus Enquirer.

Hope and Enterprise.—It is amusing in what unsubstantial materials the sanguine find grounds for hope. As the powers of the microscope convert the ground mould of some decaying object into verdant forests and bowers of lilies, the eye of youth discovers promise in the evening of a cloud, and its buoyant heart cancer for joy at the broken strain of distant and unattainable music. To such a degree of fallacious hope, however, is not that which is based upon some surer and firmer foundation. Such, for instance as investing the small sum of ten, five or two and a half dollars in WOOD, EDDY & Co., either at Augusta, Georgia, or Wilmington, Delaware, the wooer of dame fortune at the shrine of her favors will insure a chance of realising his hopes in a prize of fifty thousand dollars.

Life in Washington.

The Killing of Phillip Barton Key by Daniel E. Sickles—The Actors in the Tragedy.

The Washington Star, of Monday evening, furnishes the following particulars of the SICKLES and KEY case of homicide, in addition to the details of the killing itself, which have been given to our readers:

It is understood that Mr. Sickles has engaged as counsel, David Paul Brown: of Philadelphia. E. M. Stanton, of Pittsburg, Samuel Chilton and Daniel Ratcliffe, of Washington.

Announcement of the Death at the Circuit Court.—The Court opened this morning at 10 o'clock Their was a very full attendance of members of the bar and others.

Amid deep silence Mr. Carlisle addressed the Court in behalf of the bar, saying that he was called upon to discharge a painful duty, which was to announce to the Court the death of Phillip Barton Key, Esq., the United States Attorney for the District of Columbia.—In doing so, an that was good, all that was attractive in his character, came so forcibly before him, that he felt he could not do justice to the subject. To all who had ever been associated with the deceased his conduct had always been open, friendly and courteous. In that aspect all present desired to cherish his memory In order to give the members of the bar an opportunity to pay a last tribute of respect to his memory, the speaker asked the Court to adjourn until such time as the last rites to the deceased should be consummated.

Chief Justice Dunlop said: "We have received the intelligence of Mr. Key's death with deep grief. He had fine talents and many noble qualities, which endeared him to his friends. In all his official intercourse with this Court his gracious manner and professional ability won our affection and respect."

The Court was then adjourned until Thursday next.

The members of the Bar were then called together in consultation. Wm. Redkin, Esq. calling J. C. Mowbery to the Chair, and John A. Smith, Clerk of the Court, was made Secretary.

Joseph H. Bradley, Sr., Esq. offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the members of the Bar and the officers of the Court attend in a body the funeral of the late P. B. Key, who was endeared to and respected by us in life, and whose sudden death has filled our hearts with the deepest sorrow and regret; and that, in token of the respect of the members of this Bar and the officers of the Court to the memory of the deceased, they wear the usual badge of mourning on the left arm during the remainder of the present term of this Court.

It was further understood that the members of the Bar meet in the Court room one hour before the funeral, whenever it should be announced to take place, and proceed in a body to the funeral.

The meeting then adjourned.

The Provocative.—Mrs. Sickles is the daughter of an Italian music master in New York city, named Badjaoli. She was married when not more than sixteen, under circumstances which were subsequently commented upon invidiously by the press. In this city her career was that of an intensely fashionable sojourner. Mrs. Sickles, in appearance, resembles Piccolomini so closely as that one might easily mistake them for each other.

According to statements emanating from the friends of Mrs. Sickles, through the exertion of a party on whom he devolved the duty of watching, he learned that Mrs. Sickles was in the habit of meeting the deceased at a small two story frame house on Fifteenth-and-a-half street, between K and L, the property of a negro man named John Gray, of whom the deceased is alleged to have rented it, and where he kept a servant woman stationed to it; that on Thursday evening last, a woman dressed like Mrs. Sickles was seen by the watcher to go and remain in the house for one or two hours, and on leaving it to go to the residence of Mr. Sickles; and that Saturday morning, parties acting for Mr. Sickles, carried Mrs. Sickles' clothing to the neighborhood, where the articles were identified by Peaches living near, as having been worn by the woman who was in the habit of visiting that house.

According to the most reliable accounts we can obtain, a third party and friend was consulted by Sickles some days ago as to the course he had best pursue, who advised him to do nothing until obtaining positive proof of the criminal connection of Mrs. Sickles and the deceased; that on the night before last Mr. Sickles charged the woman with the criminality, with such specifications as caused her to faint. Yesterday she was induced to sign or write a paper purporting to be a full acknowledgment of her infidelity with the deceased. That in it she admitted that the deceased and herself had signals by which she could let him know whether she could meet him, and explained those signals. That shortly after she explained the signals the deceased came over from about the club house, where he had been using a lorgnette to see whether a signal was out, into Lafayette Square, and in sight of those in the house, he waved his handkerchief at the house that Mr. Butterworth left the house two or three minutes before Sickles, and went over to where according to his testimony, he (B.) was engaged in conversation with the deceased when Mr. Sickles came up from another direction and commenced firing at him—Butterworth, according to the testimony of one of the witnesses, standing leaning his arm against the fence of Mr. Maynard's yard, and not interfering to prevent the homicide.

It is certain that so public were the communications between the deceased (standing or sitting in Lafayette Square when the signal was out) and the woman from a window or the porch of her house, as that many persons much about and around the square had observed them for weeks, if not months.

Mrs. Sickles still remains at her house at the west end of Lafayette Square, and it is understood that her husband has telegraphed to New York city to her mother to come and take her home.

THE "DEAD HEADS" OF THE PRESS.—A few years since the great Mr. Moran was elected President of the New York and Erie Rail Road. Mr. Moran was paid the enormous salary of $25,000 per annum, and of course Mr. Moran felt bound to do great things for the road. His first step was to withhold free passes from all editors and reporters. Consequently editors and reporters have ceased to talk about the road, and the result is a falling off of the passengers receipt of the road a half a million of dollars a year since Mr. Moran inaugurated his policy.—The Railroad Journal of the 26th of January has a sensible article on the subject, in which it advises the President to issue complimentary tickets to the press.—Nashville Banner.

The sales of the week add up 36,500 bales, taken mostly for English & Eastern account, with some little for France.

Congressional.

WASHINGTON, March 4.

Congress, yesterday, passed an amendment raising postage to five cents and abolishing the franking privilege.

On Thursday, the Senate adopted an amendment authorizing the issue of Treasury notes amounting to twenty million dollars.

Fatal Affray in Hawesville Ky.

LOUISVILLE, March 3.

A number of lawyers had a bloody fight at Hawesville Court-house yesterday. Thomas S. Lowe interrupted and insulted Cicero Maxwell, the prosecuting Attorney, while he was addressing the court. This led to a general fight in which not only the principals but their friends took part. Maxwell first fired, then Lowe. These shots were followed by nearly a hundred others between the principals themselves & their friends. One of the shots, aimed at Lowe, missed him but killed Mr. John Aldridge and wounded Mr. John Miller. Others were wounded. Finally, order having been restored, Lowe was taken into custody and to jail. The excitement was very great.

The cause of the affray was an old political feud.

Later.

HAWESVILLE, Ky., March 4.

A mob broke the jail on Wednesday night and shot Thos. S. Lowe dead.

Cotton Ship on Fire.

NEW YORK, March 4.

The ship Vanguard for Constadt (a Russian sea port) loaded with cotton, is on fire between her decks. It is probable the vessel and cargo will prove almost a total loss.

Death of Third Assistant Postmaster General.

WASHINGTON, March 4.

Mr. John Marron, the 3d Assistant to the Postmaster General, died very suddenly this morning. Mr. M., has, for many years, conducted the finance business of the post-office department: and was regarded by previous, as well as by the present administration, as an able, worthy and reliable officer.

Congress Adjourned.

WASHINGTON, March 4.

Owing to some points of a punctilious nature, between the Senate and House of Representatives, in regard to the policy of rising revenue from an increase in the rates for postages, all the appropriations for the land and ocean mail service, for the coming year, have been defeated.

Every other appropriation bill was passed.

The Treasury note bill was passed.

The bills for the increase in the tariff, the abolition of the franking privilege, and the bill for increasing the rates for postages, were all defeated.

It is not probable that an extra session of Congress will be called.

Both branches adjourned at noon today.

WASHINGTON, March 4th, }
81 o'clock, P. M. }

Public opinion is divided as to the necessity of a call for an extra session of Congress.

All the appropriation bills have become laws, except the postage bill and post route bill. The failure of the latter to become a law, will cause no inconvenience to the public service.

The miscellaneous bill which was passed contains a section extending the Treasury note law for two years, and thereby enabling the Treasury Department to meet the notes now shortly falling due. The section abolishing the franking privilege, and increasing the rates of postage, was emphatically rejected.

In the House, among other appropriations made, was three hundred and forty thousand dollars for the existing mail contracts to California, via Panama and Tehuantepec, to end in September. Butterfield's steamer mail bill, for a route from Mobile and New Orleans to the Mexican Gulf ports, was passed by the Senate almost unanimously, but was stricken off, with many other appropriations in the House.

ONE DAY LATER FROM EUROPE.

EUROPA.

General News.

The steamship Etna arrived out on the 18th of February.

The latest continental news looks warlike.

It is reported that a camp of one hundred thousand men will be formed at Toulon, in France.

The English House of Commons have passed a resolution in favor of a loan of seven million pounds sterling.

The Paris Bourse closed steady, at 68 for the three-per cents.

Baring Brothers' London circular reports breadstuffs dull; tea very firm, and turpentine steady.

The opinion is strongly sustained that Louis Napoleon's intentions are certainly directed towards war.

Later from Mexico.

NEW ORLEANS, March 8—(via New York.)—By an arrival at this port yesterday, we have dates from Tampico to the 26th of February.

Juarez has taken the field, and is marching against Vera Cruz; but the city, having been placed in a state of defense, is fully prepared to resist any attack upon it.

The Liberals were carrying on the war spiritedly, and had captured Esparra at Aguas Calientes.

The Fire on the Vanguard.

NEW ORLEANS, March 7.—The fire on the ship Vanguard, at Algiers, opposite this city, has been suppressed.—Her decks were burnt through. Her cargo, consisting of four thousand bales of cotton, was badly damaged.

Minister to Mexico.

WASHINGTON, Masch 7.—Mr. Robert McLean, of Maryland, has been confirmed as Minister to Mexico. He leaves on Wednesday for Vera Cruz, and will recognise the Juarez government if he is able to sustain himself against the Church party.

CHARLESTON, March 8.—1 o'clock, P. M.—Sales this forenoon 1,000 bales, at about ⅛th cent advance since the Europa's news was received. Some holders are not offering their stocks.

Mobile Market.

MOBILE, March 11.

Sales yesterday nine thousand bales. Middling Orleans 11⅞@11¾.

Steamers news caused an advance.

New Orleans Market.

NEW ORLEANS, March 11.

Sales on yesterday, twenty-seven thousand bales.

Steamers news caused the market to be very firm.

New Postmaster General.

WASHINGTON, March 8.

J. Holt, Commissioner of Patents, has been confirmed as Postmaster General.

PHILADELPHIA, March 8.

A serious riot is now progressing at Elizabethport, New Jersey, between the strikers for higher wages and their successors at the coal docks belonging to the Delaware, Lackawana and Western railway. Firearms were freely used, and many persons wounded.

Later from Mexico.

NEW ORLEANS, March 9.—We have late news from Mexico, but it is unimportant.

Miramon was still preparing to attack Juarez, who will make a desperate resistance at Vera Cruz.

Steam Boat Explosion.

The following is the latest dispatch from the unfortunate Steamer Princess. We clip the dispatch from the mail.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 28.—The Steamboat Princess; from Vicksburg for New Orleans, exploded on Sunday morning near Baton Rouge. There were 400 persons on board, and 200 are either lost or missing. They were mostly inhabitants of Louisiana and Mississippi. A large number of ladies were killed.

The vessel was burnt to the water's edge.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb 28.—A boat has arrived from the wreck of the Princess, bringing a number of the wounded and dead. It was foggy at the time of the explosion. The Princess was behind time and had too much steam on. A Baton Rouge dispatch says the engineer is reported to have said that he would reach New Orleans by a certain time or blow up. The engineer was cut in two. About one hundred are wounded, and many dangerous and dying. It is impossible yet to ascertain the number lost. Several boats saved many. There is much excitement here and all along the river. Numerous unrecognized bodies are being found. No other Northern or Western names are reported.

Numbers of the Princess sufferers are dying from injuries. The forward part of the boat was blown to pieces. But few ladies were injured in the after part of the boat. The boat run ashore after the explosion.

MODERN INVENTIONS.

We know of no invention of modern times that deserves or is destined to occupy a higher niche in the temple of fame than the discovery or invention of the Vegetable Epileptic Pills for curing Epilepsy, or Falling Fits; Spasms, Cramps and all the various modifications of Nervous Disease. Dr. Seth S. Hance, of 108 Baltimore street, Baltimore, Md., the inventor, is certainly entitled to the best wishes of all the benevolent portion of mankind who experience a pleasure by the alleviation of human suffering, when Dr Hance first prepared these Pills: he he intended them solely for Fits, Cramps and Spasms but subsequent experience satisfactorily proved to him that in addition to their remarkable sanative properties in this class of diseases, they exerted a perfect control over the entire nervous system. He was then induced to try them in cases of Neuralgia, Tic Doloreux Nervous Headache, Palpitation of the Heart, Incipient Paralysis, Hysteria, Muscular Debility and a host of minor diseases springing from a lack of nervous energy all of which his anticipation were crowned with the most sanguine success. Persons at a distance, by writing and sending a remittance to Dr. Hance can have the medicine forwarded by mail to their post office address, he paying the postage.

The prices are for a single box $3, two boxes, $5 or $24 per dozen. We have given his address above.

I have used Davis' Pain Killer in my family for several years and take great pleasure in recommending it as a valuable medicine, that should be kept in every family. J. S. SWAN,
Pastor of the Huntington st. Baptist Church, New London.

MARRIED, on the 17th day of Feb'y 1859, by J. W. Whiteside, Esq. Wm. J. Napper to P. E. Talbert.

INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.

Messrs. Perry Davis & Son—Gents—I am at a loss to express with words the satisfaction it gives me to inform you of the benefit I have received from the use of your Pain Killer. About one year since I was attacked with the inflammatory rheumatism, being unable to walk for eight weeks; besides the confinement to the house, the pain I experienced no tongue can describe. But to return to the object of this letter. On the 27th of December last I had a more severe attack than before, I immediately commenced using the Pain Killer made by you, which to my surprise immediately relieve me of pain, and saved me the necessity of being confined to my bed for one day. It is now eleven days since the attack, and the inflammation has entirely subsided. My limbs, which were tremendously swollen, have assumed their natural shape. In short I am entirely well: and feel bound by the common sympathies of my nature for those who may be thus afflicted, to make the above statement, that all may resort to the Pain Killer, that time, expense and a world of suffering may be prevented.

Garments have been worn out without the giving way of a stitch. The Machine is easily kept in order, and easily used."—Mrs. A. B. Whipple, wife of Rev. Geo. Whipple, New York.

"Your Sewing Machine has been in use in my family the past two years, and the ladies request me to give you their testimonials to its perfect adaptedness, as well as labor-saving qualities in the performance of family and household sewing."—Robert Boorman, New York.

"For several months we have used Grover & Baker's Sewing Machine, and have come to the conclusion that every lady who desires her sewing beautifully and quickly done would be most fortunate in possessing one of these reliable and indefatigable 'iron needle-women,' whose combined qualities of beauty, strength, and simplicity, are invaluable."—I. W. Morris, daughter of Gen. Geo. P. Morris, Editor of the Home Journal.

Extract of a letter from Thos. R. LEAVITT, Esq., an American gentleman, now resident in Sydney, New South Wales, dated January 12, 1858:

"I had a tent made in Melbourne, in 1853, in which there were over three thousand yards of sewing done with one of Grover & Baker's Machines, and a single seam of that has outstood all the double seams sewed by sailors with a needle and twine.

"If Homer could be called up from his murky hades, he would sing the advent of Grover & Baker as a more benignant miracle of art than was ever Vulcan's smithy. He would denounce midnight shirt making as the direful spring of woes unnumbered. —Prof. North.

"I take pleasure in saying, that the Grover & Baker Sewing Machines have more than sustained my expectation. After trying and returning others, I have three of them in operation in my different places, and, after four years' trial, have no fault to find."—J H Hammond, Senator of South Carolina.

"My wife has had one of Grover & Baker's Family Sewing Machines for some time, and I am satisfied it is one of the best labor-saving machines that has been invented. I take much pleasure in recommending it to the public."—J G Harris, Governor of Tennessee.

"It is a beautiful thing, and puts every lover into an excitement of good humor.—Were I a Catholic, I should insist upon Saint Grover and Baker having an eternal holiday in commemoration of their good deeds for humanity."—Cassius M Clay.

"I think it by far the best patent in use. This Machine can be adapted from the fine-t cambric to the heaviest cassimere It sews stronger, faster, and more beautifully than one can imagine. If mine could not be replaced, no ney could not buy it." —Mrs. J G Brown, Nashville, Tenn.

"It is speedy, very neat, and durable in its work: is easily understood and kept in repair, I earnestly recommend this Machine to all my acquaintances and others." —Mrs. M A Forrest, Memphis Tenn.

"We find this Machine to work to our satisfaction, and with pleasure recommend it to the public, as we believe the Grover & Baker to be the best Sewing Machine in use."—Deary Brothers, Allisonia, Tenn.

"I used exclusively for family purposes with ordinary care, I will wager they will last one three score years and ten, and never get out of fix,"—John Erskine, Nashville, Tenn.

"I have had your Machine for several weeks, and am perfectly satisfied that the work it does is the best and most beautiful that ever was made."—Maggie Aimison, Nashville, Tenn.

"I use my Machine upon coats, dress-making, and fine linen stitching, and the work is admirable—far better than the best hand-sewing, or any other machine I have ever seen."—Lucy B Thompson Nashville, Tenn.

"I find the work the strongest and most beautiful I have ever seen, made either by hand or machine, and regard the Grover & Baker Machine as one of the greatest blessings to our sex."—Mrs. Taylor, Nashville, Tenn.

"I have one of Grover & Baker's Sewing Machines in use in my family, and find it invaluable. I can confidently recommend it to all persons in want of a Machine."—G P Thompson, Nashville, Tenn.

"I take pleasure in certifying to the utility of the Grover & Baker Sewing Machines. I have used one on almost every description of work for months, and find it much stronger and better in every respect than work done by hand."—Mrs. B W Wheeler, Nashville, Tenn.

"I would be unwilling to dispose of my Grover & Baker Machine for a large amount, could I not replace it again at pleasure."—Mrs. H C Sneed, Nashville, Tenn.

"Our two Machines, purchased from you, do the work of twenty young ladies, and with pleasure recommend the Grover & Baker Sewing Machine to be the best in use."—N Stellman & Co., Memphis Tenn.

"The Grover & Baker Sewing Machine works admirably. I think the stitch and work far superior to that of any Sewing Machine I ever saw On fine work I think the Machine would be hard to beat."—W Davis, Memphis, Tenn.

"I find the Machine easily managed, very durable, and take pleasure in recommending it to all who wish convenience, economy, and pleasure."—Mrs. F Titus, Memphis, Tenn.

Listen!!!

COLLECTIONS this season have not equalled my expectations. The crop of cotton was large, prices good, and funds comparatively, abundant. Consequently, I expected much. True, some have done well: others, nothing. To the latter I would suggest, "that now is the time." 'Tis much more easy to make payment now, than it was last season, or, than it may be next. Is it not wise then, to improve this "GOLDEN" opportunity, and while money is cheap, to extinguish old liabilities?

I am anxious to collect my old debts. From those who have done nothing, or but little yet, I shall expect liberal payments in March.

E. L. WOODWARD.

☞ A Card from Dr. James M. Jarrett, of the NEW YORK LUNG INFIRMARY.—My connection for the past eight years with the above Institution, as Chief Physician, and a twelve years course of study devoted to the cure of Pulmonary Consumption and a hundred diseases, together with my many opportunities and advantage of public journal intercourse—indeed not a little by a perfect success on Medical Islands enables me to assure the afflicted, abroad, and since, that my course of treatment for the positive and radical cure of all diseases of the Throat, Lungs, and Air Passages. By Inhalation, the vapor and curative properties of medicines are directly addressed to the diseased organs and the integument. I do not advise the use of Medical Inhalation of any kind, to the exclusion of general treatment, and although I consider it a useful adjuvant in the proper management of those hurried and often fatal diseases, yet I deem it very necessary that each patient should have the benefit of both general and local treatment in the above diseases, and the united counsel of the Institution over which I have so long had the honor to preside, are now well known to need any eulogy or comment now me. At the solicitation of many private and professional friends, though, whose patronage and the above charity has been long and liberally supported and after due consideration, I have concluded to make such arrangements as will bring the benefits of my experience and treatment within the reach of all, and not confine myself, as heretofore, to those only who entered the Infirmary, or who were able to visit me at my office. Hoping the request for the arrangement will give entire satisfaction, both to my patrons & brethren & the public I would respectfully announce in conclusion that I can now be consulted personally or by letter, on all diseases as above, and that the medicines, the same as used in the Institution, prepared to suit each individual case, Inhaling Vapors, Medical Inhalers, &c. &c., will be forwarded by express to any part of the United States or the Canadas.

TERMS.—My terms of treatment by letter are as follows, viz: $10 per month for each patient, which will include medicine sufficient for one month's use, also, Inhaling Vapor and an Inhaling Apparatus. Payments as follows: $5 to be paid to Express Agent on receipt of the box of Medicine, and the balance on the expiration of the month, if the patient be cured or is entirely satisfied with the treatment. Patients, by giving a full history of their case, and their symptoms in full can be treated as well by letter as by personal examination. Patients availing themselves of Dr. Jarrett's treatment may rely upon immediate and permanent relief, as he seldom has to treat a case over thirty days. Letters for advice promptly answered. For further particulars address

JAMES M. JARRETT, M. D.,
No. 840 Broadway, cor. TWENTIETH, N. Y.

P. S. Physicians and others visiting the city are respectfully invited to call at the Infirmary, where many interesting cases can be witnessed, and where our improved apparatus for the inhalation of medicated vapor can be seen and inspected.

THE LIVER
INVIGORATOR!

PREPARED BY DR. SANFORD.

COMPOUNDED entirely from GUMS,

IS ONE OF THE BEST PURGATIVE and Liver Medicines now before the public, that acts as a Cathartic. It is not only a Cathartic, but a Liver remedy, acting first on the Liver to eject its morbid matter, then on the stomach and bowels to carry off that matter, thus accomplishing two purposes effectually, without any of the painful feelings experienced in the operations of most Cathartics. It strengthens the system at the same time that it purges it; and when taken daily in moderate doses, will strengthen and build it up with unusual rapidity.

The Liver is one of the principal regulators of the human body; and when it performs its functions well, the powers of the system are fully developed. The stomach is almost entirely dependent on the healthy action of the Liver for the performance of its functions; when the stomach is at fault, the bowels are at fault, and the whole system suffers in consequence of one organ—the LIVER—having ceased to do its duty. For the disease of that organ the many years, to find some remedy which is liable. one of the proprietors has made it his study, in a practice of more than twenty to counteract the many derangements to remedy at last To prove that this is found, any person troubled with liver Complaint, in any of its forms, has but to try a bottle, and conviction is certain.

These Gums removed matter from the system, supplying in their place a healthy blow of bile, invigorating the stomach, causing food to digest well, purifying the blood, giving rose and health to the whole machine—removing the cause of the disease—effecting a radical cure.

Billious attacks are cured, and what is better, prevented by the occasional use of the LIVER INVIGORATOR.

One dose after eating is sufficient to relieve the stomach & prevent the food from rising & souring.

Only one dose taken before retiring, prevents Nightmare.

Only one dose taken at night, loosens the bowels gently, and cures Costiveness.

One dose taken after each meal will cure Dyspepsia.

☞ One dose of two teaspoonfuls will always relieve Sick Headache.

One bottle taken for female obstruction removes the cause of the disease, and makes a perfect cure.

Only one dose immediately relieves Cholic, while one dose often repeated is a sure cure for Cholera Morbus, and a preventive of Cholera

☞ Only one bottle is needed to throw out of the system the effects of medicine after a long sickness.

☞ One bottle taken for Jaundice removes all sallowness or unnatural color from the skin.

One dose taken a short time before eating gives vigor to the appetite, and makes food digest well.

One dose often repeated cures Chronic Diarrhœa in its worst forms, while Summer and Bowel complaints yield almost to the first dose.

One or two doses cures attacks caused by Worms in Children: there is no surer, safer, or speedier remedy in the world, as it never fails.

☞ A few bottles cures Dropsy, by exciting the absorbents.

We take pleasure in recommending this medicine as a preventive for Fever & Ague, Chill Fever, and all Fevers of a Bilious TYPE. It operates with certainty, & thousands are willing to testify to its wonderful virtues.

ALL WHO USE IT ARE GIVING THEIR UNANIMOUS TESTIMONY IN ITS FAVOR.

MIX WATER IN THE MOUTH WITH THE INVIGORATOR, AND SWALLOW BOTH TOGETHER.

The Liver Invigorator

IS A SCIENTIFIC MEDICAL DISCOVERY, and is daily working cures, almost too great to believe. It cures as if by magic, as it first does sitting bright, and seldom more than one bottle is required to cure any kind of Liver Complaint, from the worst Jaundice or Dyspepsia to a common Headache, all of which are the result of a Diseased Liver.

DR MORSE'S.

INDIAN ROOT PILLS.

DR. MORSE, the inventor of Morse's Indian Root Pills, has spent the greater part of his life in travelling, having visited Europe, Asia, Africa as well as North America—has spent three years among the Indians of our Western country—it was in this way that the Indian Root Pills were first discovered. Dr. Morse was the first man to establish the fact that all diseases arise from IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD—that our strength, health and life depended upon this vital flood.

When the various passages become clogged and do not act in perfect harmony with the different functions of the body, the blood loses its action becomes thick, corrupted and diseased; thus causing all pains sickness and distress of every name; our strength is exhausted our health we are deprived of, and if nature is not assisted in throwing off the stagnant humors, the blood will become choked and cease to act, and thus our light of life will forever be blown out. How important then that we should keep the various passages of the body free and open. And how pleasant to us that we have it in our power to put a medicine in your reach, namely, Morse's Indian Root Pills, manufactured from plants and roots which grow around the mountainous clifs in Nature's garden, for the health and recovery of diseased man. One of the roots from which these Pills are made is a Sudorific, which opens the pores of the skin, and assists Nature in throwing out the finer passage parts of the corruption within. The second is a plant which is an Expectorant, that opens and anelog the passage to the lungs, and thus, in soothing manner performs its duty by throwing off phlegm, and other humors from the lungs by copious spitting. The third is a Diuretic, which gives ease and double strength to the kidneys, thus encouraged, they draw large amounts of impurity from the blood, which is then thrown out bountifully by the urinary, or water passage, and which could not have been discharged in any other way. The fourth is a Cathartic, and accompanies the other properties of the Pills while engaged in purifying the blood, the coarser particles of impurity which cannot pass by the outlets are thus taken up and conveyed off in great quantities by the bowels.

From the above, it is shown that Dr. Morses Indian Root Pills not only cut at the stomach, become united with the blood, for they find way to every part, and completely root out and cleanse the system from all impurity and the life of the body, which is the blood becomes perfectly healthy, consequently all sickness and pain is driven from the system for they cannot remain when the body becomes so pure and clear.

The reason why people are so distressed when sick, and why so many die, is because they do not get a medicine which will pass to the afflicted parts, and which will open the natural passages for the disease to be cast out hence, a large quantity of food and other matter is lodged and the stomach and intestines are literally overflowing with the corrupted mass; thus undergoing disagreeable fermentation, constantly mixing with the blood, which throws the corrupted matter through every vein and artery, until life is taken from the body by disease, Dr. Morse's Pills have added to themselves victory, upon victory, by restoring millions of the sick to blooming health and happiness. Yes, thousands who have been racked or tormented with sickness pain and anguish, and whose feeble frames have been scorched by the burning elements of raging fever, and who have been brought as it were, within a silent step of the silent grave, now stand ready to testify that they would have been numbered with the dead, had it not been for this great and wonderful medicine. Morses Indian Root Pills. After one or two doses had been taken, they were astonished, and absolutely surprised, in witnessing their charming effects. Not only do they give immediate ease and strength, and take away all sickness, pain and anguish, but they at once go to work at the foundation of the disease, which is the blood. Therefore it will be shown, especially by those who use those Pills, that they will so cleanse and purify, that disease—that deadly enemy—will take its flight, and the flush of youth and beauty will again return, and the prospect of a long and happy life will cherish and brighten your days.

Cotton Cultivator.

LETTERS PATENT were granted to the undersigned, on the 6th day of July, 1858, for his improvement in Cotton Cultivators; to which he calls the attention of both Cotton and Corn Cultivators.

The plow will penetrate the ground to any required depth, and will pulverise and loosen the soil, and cut off all the weeds. It will mow close to the stalks of cotton or corn, and loosen the soil near the roots without injuring or destroying them. It does not make a furrow, or turn over the soil, but loosens it up and lets it fall back into its place again. It is peculiarly adapted to the cultivation of cotton; and one horse power is sufficient to propel it.

It is believed, as will be seen by the following certificate, that it will save 25 per cent. of labor over the best improvements, and at least 50 per cent. over the common plow.

He believes the cultivator entitled to all he claims for it, and in support of his belief, he calls the readers attention to the subjoined certificate of Messrs. Moragne and Hollingsworth, who are the only persons who have tried the Cultivator. As to its utility no more need be said—TRY IT—its BEST recommendation is ITS USE.

He offers for sale County or State rights at reasonable prices. Address,

ASBERRY SMITH,
Jan. 20, '59—6m. Jacksonville, Ala.

Gadsden, Ala., Jan. 15, 1859.

The undersigned have used the Cotton Cultivator of Asberry Smith, and we take pleasure in saying, that is a most excellent plow; superior to any we have ever used in the cultivation of cotton, & saves at least 25 per cent. in labor, over any plow we have ever tried, and from 50 to 50 per cent. over the common plow. In the cultivation of young corn it is superior to any we have tried. We take pleasure in recommending it to the public as worthy of patronage; as o believe from actual experiment, it comes fully up to all that is claimed for it.

ISAAC P. MORAGNE.
THOS. HOLLINGSWORTH.

I am personally acquainted with Isaac P. Moragne and Thos. Hollingsworth, and I have the utmost confidence in the above statement made by them.

A CARD
TO THE
Medical Profession.
Having had for my object the preparation of a remedy that would be beneficial in all cases where an external application is indicated, without being injurious in any. I have devoted a number of years to studying and experimenting. After meeting with much experiment and consulting the best authors and most scientific chemists and physicians of the day I have at length succeeded in making a Medicine that will accomplish all in every case where skill can combination. Every regular Physician and Druggist will see at a glance, from the analysis given below, that it is composed of the very best remedies for external use in the Materia Medica.
THIS IS NOT A SECRET REMEDY.
Every person who can read may know its composition; its effects are also well known. One hundred thousand Bottles made according to this prescription have been sold and used. The result in every case was always uniform and satisfactory. Read the analysis made by one of the most popular and scientific Chemists in the United States:

Porter's Oriental Life
LINIMENT,
Made by
C. W. WRIGHT, M. D.
Professor of Chemistry in the Kentucky School of Medicine, December, 1858.
To R. D. Porter:
Sir—The ingredients which enter into composition of the Preparation known as "Porter's Oriental Life Liniment," which was left with me for qualitative chemical analysis, were found on examination to contain the following ingredients:
Turpine, Camphor,
Paraffine, Oil from Resin,
Picamar, Kapila,
Pitch, Carbonate of Potassa.
All of the above ingredients with the exception of Carbonates of Potassa are eminently antiseptic. As the composition of the above preparation is no longer a secret, I have to testimony in stating that it is a safe and efficacious external remedy for the diseases which it is recommended.
Respectfully, C. W. WRIGHT.
Hundreds of physicians use and prescribe Porter's Oriental Life Liniment, believing it to be the best remedy for that class of cases in which it is recommended. Their know the composition and prescribe it with as much certainty, as to its effects, as they do any other remedy.
The following are a few of the many eminent and influential physicians who have written letters to the proprietor, speaking in the highest terms of the medicinal properties of the Oriental Life Liniment:
Dr. W. B. Reid, of Jefferson county, Ky.
Dr. Moses Applegate, Cincinnati, Ind.
Dr. Bruce, of New castle, Ky.
Dr. J. B. Jupin, of Shelbyville, Ky.
Dr. J. L. McConnel, Ohio Valley, Penn.
Dr. J. W. McDonald, Batesville, Ind.
Dr. R. B. Parker, Liberty, Ky.
Dr. R. H. Perryman, Boston, Ky.
Dr. D. Parrish, Fairview, Ky.
Dr. C. H. Harris, Gladston, Ky.
Dr. J. W. Hedges, Cooemaugville, Ky.
Dr. W. E. Otis, Naples, Ind.
The Oriental Life Liniment will be found of great benefit in Rheumatism, Rheumatism, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, &c. &c. Put Up in 50 c and $1 Bottles, and sold by all Druggists and Country Merchants. Manufactured by

POETRY.

When we were Boys Together.

Affectionately Inscribed to a friend of my Youth.

I'm dreaming of the years, Ned,
When we were boys together—
Those halcyon times of yore,
The sunny days of hope and joy
Which come, alas! no more.

Remind me of the old oaks, Ned,
In whose shade we used to play,
And the little village church
Where we used to kneel and pray;
And the clear and bubbling brook, Ned,
That foamed with feathery spray—
Its cooling tide we used to seek
From summer's noontide ray.

Remembrance haunts the school-house, Ned—
Whose walls no longer stand—
No longer echo mirth
Return the youthful band;
The rank and noisome weeds, Ned,
Lay ground-work o'er it,
And the little foe the paths that beat,
Shall beat the paths no more.

Ah! when I recall these scenes, Ned,
From childhood's buried years,
Unbidden start, from out the heart,
Some fond, regretful tears;
For though in later times, Ned,
We've tasted fiercer joys,
We've known no bliss so unalloyed
As when we both were boys.

Yet 'twere needless to repine, Ned,
That youthful days are o'er—
Hope whispers fair in manhood's ear
Of pleasures yet in store.
Ah! but somehow think me Ned,
Though with future's raptures blessed—
The fond heart still will half incline
To love our boyhood best. R. V. C.

Miscellaneous.

The Rag Merchant's Daughter.

The following gossiping story appears in the Paris correspondence of the Boston Advertiser:

In one of the narrowest and dirtiest streets in Paris, on the ground floor of a crumbling old house, is the Shop of Monsieur Thomas, the Rag Merchant, in the back part is a sort of a glass office, in which an exceedingly pretty girl not long since transacted the business of the establishment. This young girl was Mademoiselle Josie, old Monsieur Thomas's daughter.

Not a great while ago, an elegant looking young gentleman chanced to pass through the dirty street, and unconsciously stopped to admire her.—The next day he came again, but it was not chance that brought him there this time; for after passing on the street, as before, he entered the shop, under the pretence of asking the way, but in reality to approach nearer the object of his sudden admiration. A very few words sufficed to confirm and fasten that admiration, and he was soon on his way away in a very disconsolate frame of mind, when, in among the old junk which the shop contained, he observed a pile of old books. Seizing upon the excuse to prolong his stay, the young man turned over the tattered refuse, purchased several of the books, promising the fair saleswoman that he would occasionally replenish his library at her establishment. He must have been very studious that day, for early the next morning he returned and obtained another supply. So, too, the next, and the next, till no longer trembling himself about the old books, he made and passed much of his time in soft conversation at the window of the glass cage, and finally wound up by asking Mr. Thomas to give him his daughter in marriage. As the old fellow, with one being seen, had witnessed all that had transpired, and liked the youth's appearance, he at once granted his prayer, on the condition that the demand should be official, by the gallant's father, Here was the difficulty. The father of the lover, M. George, was a dry goods merchant, having a hand-some store in one of the most brilliant quarters of the city, and he looked for a son a little better for his son than a ragpicker's daughter. However, as there was nothing better for it, he broached the subject to his parents. At first, he was laughed at; but as he frequently returned to the charge, the father and mother, in the hope of diverting him by other means from this mad project, invited him to a family dinner, in order to talk over this matter. It was hoped that the ridiculous figure the old man and his daughter would cut, would disgust the latter so much that the marriage of a respectable merchant's portion, would put an end to the affair.

The invitation was accepted, and the parties came. At the dessert, the merchant endeavored to jest with old Thomas, and turn him into ridicule. This didn't seem to work particularly well, and nothing remained but to try the financial question. This was Madame George's part, and she commenced by asking what he intended to give his daughter on the day of her marriage.

"Oh! pray mother," cried young George, who saw the trap, "don't talk about that—another time—"

"Not at all, young man," interrupted Monsieur Thomas. "Let us talk of it at once as your mother wishes. A little money does a newly married couple no harm, certainly. If madame will say how much it is proper to give her son, I will try to furnish a similar sum."

"We intend," observed Madame George, with a superb air, "to give our son fifty thousand francs, sir."

"Well, well," said Tom with a shrug, "I must say I expected better than that for my little girl's husband; but, as the young people love each other, I will throw no objection in the way. Josie is my only child, and on the day of her marriage I shall give her four hundred thousand francs, money down."

It may be really imagined that the Georges "changed their tune" about this time. But now came another difficulty. Expecting to frighten old Thomas off, Madame George had rather stretched the truth in naming fifty thousand francs as her son's wedding present, and both she and her husband were now very anxious to see the son richly married. Sacrifices were made and loans negotiated, in order to gather up the sum mentioned.

Things went on for some time, and the day of ceremony had been several times postponed, when one morning, the merchant received a packet containing fifty bank notes for a thousand francs each, with these words:

"I see where the shoe pinches, and, for a trifle, I won't have things dragon any longer. I send you the needful.—Another time be more candid with your friend, and don't put on an more airs with poor people. On the fifteenth of next month is the wedding."

The Poison of the Cobra di Capello.

About four years ago I myself, in person had an awful fleet of snake's poison. I have received a dose of the cobra's poison into my system, luckily a minute dose or I should not have survived it. The accident happened in a very curious way. I was poisoned by the snake, but not bitten by him. I got the poison second-handed. Anxious to witness the effects of the poison of the cobra upon a rat, I took up a couple in a bag alive to a certain cobra. I took one rat out of the bag and put him into the cage with the snake. The cobra was coiled up among the stones in the centre of the cage apparently asleep.—When he heard the noise of the rat falling into the cage he just looked up and put out his tongue, hissing at the same time. The rat in a corner began washing himself, keeping one eye on the snake, whose appearance he did not evidently half like. Presently the rat traversed the snake's body, and in an instant the latter assumed his fighting attitude. As the rat passed the snake, he made a dart, but, missing his aim, hit his nose a pretty hard blow against the side of the cage. This accident seemed to anger him, for he spread out his crest and waved it to and fro in the beautiful manner peculiar to his kind. The rat became alarmed, & ran near him again. Again cobra made a dart, and hit him, but did not, I think, inject any poison into him, the ratcheting so very active, at least no symptoms of poison were shown. The bite nevertheless, aroused the ire of the rat & he gathered himself for a spring, and in an instant more he was on the back of the cobra, who was waving about in front of him. The plucky rat, determined to die hard, gave the cobra two or three bites in the neck; the snake's fangs sunk deep at this time, and endeavoring to turn his head round so as to bite the rat, who was clinging on like the old man in Sinbad the Sailor. Soon, however, cobra changed his tactics. Tired, possibly, with sustaining the weight of the rat, he lowered his head, and the rat finding himself so near the ground, tried to run away; not so, for the snake in a very few seconds, bringing his erect person down, making his body its weight in giving vigor to the blow, right on to the body of the rat. This poor beast now seemed to know that the fight was over, and that he was conquered. He retired to a corner of the cage, and began panting violently, endeavoring, at the same time, to apply his failing strength with his feet. His eyes were widely dilated, his mouth open in gasping for breath. The cobra sat erect over him, hissing and panting out his disgrace as if conscious of victory. In about three minutes the rat fell quietly on his side and expired: the cobra then moved and took no further notice of his defunct enemy. About ten minutes afterward the rat was hooked out of the cage for me to examine. No external wound could I see anywhere, so I took out my knife and began taking the skin off the rat. I soon discovered two very minute punctures, like small needle holes in the side of the rat, where the fangs of the snake had entered the cavity between the skin and the flesh, and the flesh itself appeared as though affected with mortification, even though the wound had not been inflicted above a quarter of an hour, if so much.

Anxious to see if the skin itself was affected, I scraped away the parts on it with my fingernail. Finding nothing but the punctures, I threw the rat away and put the knife and skin in my pocket, and started to go away. I had not walked a hundred yards before I felt of a sudden I felt just as if somebody had come behind me and struck me a severe blow on the head and shoulders at the same time. I experienced a most acute pain and sense of oppression at the chest, as though a hot iron had been run in and a hundred weight put on the top of it. I knew instantly, from what I had read, that I was poisoned. I said as much to my friend, a most intelligent gentleman, who happened to be with me, and told him it was of no use to give me brandy and eau de luce, words which he kept repeating in case he might forget them. At the same time I enjoined him to keep me going, and not on any account allow me to lie down. I then forgot everything for several minutes, and my friend told me I rolled about as if very faint and weak. He also informs me that the first thing I did was to fall against him, asking if I looked seedy. He most wisely answered, "no you look very well." I don't think he thought so for he says I was as white as [illegible] swallowed this much. He tells me my face was of a greenish yellow color. After walking or rather staggering along for some minutes I gradually recovered myself, and steered for the nearest chemist's shop. Rushing in I asked for eau de luce. Of course he had none, but my eye caught the words, "Spirit ammoniac, or hartshorn on a bottle. I reached it down myself, and pouring a large quantity into a tumbler with a little water, both of which articles I found on a soda-water stand in the shop, drank it off though it burnt my mouth and me very much. Instantly I felt relief from the pain at the chest and head. The chemist stood against, and on my telling him what was the matter, recommended a warm bath. If I had taken followed his advice these words would never have been placed on record.

After a second draught at the hartshorn bottle, I proceeded on my way, feeling very stupid and confused.

On arriving at my friend's residence close by, he kindly procured me a bottle of brandy, of which I drank four large wine-glasses one after the other, but did not feel the least tipsy after the operation. Feeling nearly well I started on my way home, and then, for the first time, perceived a most acute pain under the nail of the left thumb: this pain also ran up the arm. I set to work to search the wound, and then found out how the poison had got into the system. About an hour before I examined the dead rat I had been cleaning the nail with a penknife, and had slightly separated the nail from the skin beneath. Into this little cracle the poison had got when I was scraping the rat about to examine the wound. How virulent, therefore, must the poison of the cobra be! It already had been circulated in the body of the rat from which I had imbibed it second-handed.

Extract from a Speech delivered by John Randolph in 1824.

All policy is very suspicious. (says an eminent statesman) that sacrifices the interest of any part of community to the elevation of the whole; and those Governments only are tolerable, where, by the necessary construction of the political machine, the interests of all the parties are obliged to be protected by all. Here is a district of country extending from the Cumberland Mountains to the Mississippi, from the Alleghany to the Atlantic district, which, taking in all that part of Maryland lying south of the Patapsco and east of Elk river, raises five sixths of all the exports of this country, and more of home growth. I have in my hand the official statement which will prove it to you with which I will not weary the House by reading. In all this country! Yes, sir, and I bless God for it; for with all the fanatical and preposterous theories about the rights of man, (the theories, not the rights themselves, I speak of) there is nothing but power that can withstand power. I do God that in this ascribed, opposed, and outraged region we are, as to our commerce in regard to the navigation, as one man; that there exists on this subject but one feeling, and one interest. We are prostrate and put to the ban; and if we do not feel and nothing do not act, we are bastards, like subjects who achieved the revolution; shall we deserve to make bricks without straw.

There is one error on record, in which a proposition—that, taxes evidently changing the whole nature of a country's policy, taking assunder every ligature of the political system, perceived a most acute pain under the nail of the left thumb: this pain also ran up the arm. I set to work to search the wound, and then found out how the poison had got into the system. About an hour before I examined the dead rat I had been cleaning the nail with a penknife, and had slightly separated the nail from the skin beneath. Into this little cracle the poison had got when I was scraping the rat about to examine the wound. How virulent, therefore, must the poison of the cobra be! It already had been circulated in the body of the rat from which I had imbibed it second-handed.

Dalton & Jacksonville Railroad.

The prospects of the certain and speedy completion of this road have recently become brighter than ever heretofore. We learn that a union of the interests of Dalton and Rome has been effected, by which the road is to come by the latter place, which will not at farther, increase the length of the road more than one and a half miles.—We are truly glad of this, as this conflict of interest has heretofore been the chief hindering cause of the building of a road from either the one place or the other.

The Editor of the Montgomery Mail, who has recently spent some days in Dalton, speaks in the following confident and glowing terms of this road. "The distance is ascertained to be only 88 miles, and the link so constructed will defy the more western route even with water transportation from Selma. It will save immensely in distance and form an admirable line. That the road from Dalton to Jacksonville will be speedily built, there is no shadow of doubt. The President of the company, A. Fitzgerald, Esq. assured us that he would be able to procure sufficient subscriptions to grade the road, within ten days after starting out—and mark our words: he will build the road to Jacksonville, 88 miles, a little before the Selma corporation reach that Town with their line."

The Editor of the Mail then warmly advocates the immediate building of the Central road from Montgomery to an intersection with the Selma road 60 miles below Jacksonville, which will be somewhere about the Coose Bridge. This is all right and we wish it success; and hope we shall hear no more of opposition in the region of Montgomery, to the appropriation of the 2 and 3 per cent. fund to the Alabama and Tennessee R. R. Road.

THE MATHEMATICAL MONTHLY—Edited by J. D. Runkle, A., M., A. A. S., Cambridge Mass.

We are in receipt of the above neatly printed quarto pamphlet. It contains about 32 pages of valuable reading matter, entirely upon the subject of mathematics, in all its phases, from Arithmetic to Calculus. The professor and amiture of the useful science will find food for speculation and enquiry by looking over its pages. Diagrams representing formulas are laid down with geometrical accuracy, and we think that a careful examination of its contents will benefit the adept in the science.

We see in the list of contributors and well-wishers of the work, the names of Prof. Vaughan, of our State University, N. M. Crawford, of Mercer University, Ga., and many eminent and practical Mathematicians of other Colleges, whose pens will hereafter adorn the pages of the Mathematical Monthly.

The price of the work is three dollars per annum, five dollars for two copies. We can say in conclusion, Esto perpetua.

War in Europe.

The prospect of a general war in Europe, seems to have hung in an almost even balance for some time past; but the latest intelligence and expressed opinions of the best informed, favor the probabilities of that great catastrophe. The Emperor of France talks peace, but actively prepares for war; active preparations are also going on in most of the European States. This thorough state of preparation, the potent interests of commerce, and the destructive nature of modern inventions and implements of warfare, seem almost the only hinderances of an immediate outburst: but this state of suspense and uncertainty cannot much longer exist.

The Boston Statesman closes an article on the subject in the following words:

"Meanwhile the Emperor Napoleon continues to deal out smooth words of a peaceful aspect, but to work hard in preparing vast armaments; and that war barometer, the funds, indicates more & more decidedly an approach to hostilities. Austria must leave Italy either peaceably or forcibly."

Merchant Mills.

Mr. J. A. Aderholt, gives notice in this paper that his fine Mills, on Tallasschatchee, are now in excellent order, and that he is prepared to make the best quality of flour and largest amount to the bushel. Mr. A. is known to have long experience and thoroughly to understand his business, and has always given entire satisfaction to his customers.

Save Postage.—The postage bill, abolishing the franking privilege free postage of papers in the County where published, &c. having failed to pass the last Congress, and the old law remaining in force, we would remind our friends in this County of the advantage still afforded of obtaing their County paper free of postage. Send in your names then, and enjoy the advantages of free postage while you can, before postage on papers and letters is raised to nearly double—for there is little doubt this will be done at the next session of Congress.

But aside from the advantage above referred to, we verily believe that a home paper is worth four times as much to a man, politically and pecuniarily, as a foreign paper, and unless under very peculiar circumstances, in many instances, much more.

We understand that the report has gained currency that the Baptist Church in this place was rented to the Bailey Troupe, for their variety performances; and that letters of enquiry have been written to Rev. Mr. Vandevere, the Baptist Minister, on the subject. We presume this report originated from the fact, that they rented a house from an individual, which was formerly used as the Baptist Church, but sold by them some 15 months ago, and which had been used as a cabinet shop for months. The house was individual property, the Baptist Church had no control over it, and the individual who rented it not even a member of the Baptist Church.

POVERTY.

The notion that poverty is a barrier to future greatness is becoming too prevalent among the poor class of mankind. How often do we hear the following or similar expression by young men in limited circumstances. If I was just rich. If I could but have had the good fortune of being born of wealthy parents, I would then have some hope of wining for myself a name, and of leaving some evidence by which posterity might know that there once lived such an individual as myself. But what if you are poor. Is not the biography of mankind turning with unmistakable evidence that poverty is not an insurmountable barrier to future fame and greatness. Out of the many in the world that have made themselves great, there is more than a majority who sprung from comparative obscurity, or in other words, who were in indigent circumstances when they sat out on the journey of life. Among those of our own country who have immortalised themselves, there are at least two thirds of poor parentage. Hence we find that poverty so far from being an absolute barrier, is barely an impediment in the pathway to future greatness. It is altogether a mistaken idea, that wealth is indispensably requisite to fame, or that the world had as it is, prefers wealth to wisdom, or riches to knowledge. It matters not materially whether we are rich or poor, if nature has indued us with a reasonable or sufficient amount of brains, coupled with industrial and economical habits, to insure our success. Then let the poor young man take courage and go to work. He is sure to succeed.

Says the poet:

"The lives of great men all remand us,
We can make our lives sublime;
And departing leave behind us,
Footprints on the sands of time;
Let us then be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate,
Still achieving still pursuing
Learn to labor and to wait."

POOR MAN.

For the Republican.

What shall we do?

MR. EDITOR:—Seeing the people of God are few, and greatly divided on certain questions, it seems to call forth the above enquiry. It is supposed that some of the brethren would given dispassionate expression on the following subject:

There are amongst us in this section several distinctions of those who are known as Primitive Baptists, who differ on certain principles: namely, there are those that hold on to a Church resolution of nonfellowship with the Missionaries, and all the benevolent institutions of the day, falsely called—baptizing all that come to them from that quarter, if baptized by Missionary Ministers since the division of the denomination; and this they claim as being the standard of orthodoxy among Baptists, and reason thus: we, say they, are not only separated from all such as have gone into & advocate modern missions, according to the direction of the Holy Ghost by Paul, saying come out from among them, and be ye separate, but we also claim the resolution of non fellowship as an article of our faith, and all who do not we look upon as distinct bodies from us. As such we have no religious correspondence with them.—There are others, that claim that the churches have the right to rescind those resolutions, and some of them have so done, but still carry out original baptist principles, without regard to the various distinctions herein named; and this they claim as the standard of orthodoxy, and reason thus: say they, the resolution served for the time being as a test on the mission question, and enabled the Baptists to separate from them. This being done, they have no further use for them, and consider them as a church resolution only, and at the discretion of the churches may be rescinded or retained without infringing the rights of churches. There are others that have rescinded all resolutions of non fellowship, and also receive members which they believe to be sound from the missionaries, whether baptized before or since the first ion, without rebaptism; and this they claim to be the standard of orthodoxy, and reason thus: If we baptize those that come to us since the division of the Baptists, having been baptized by missionary ministers since the split, then by the same rule ought we not to baptize all those that remained with us at the time of the division, as well as those that have come to us since, having been baptized by the same ministers before the split; for if those men's work were legal before the division, is it not just as good since. What is it that makes our baptism valid? is it not because ministers have a divine right? certainly it is. Then is it because they are members of some one of those particular churches above named that gives them that divine right, if so, which of them all, for there are not only missionaries, but several other distinctions of Baptists, and we suppose the different distinctions that have recently taken place would all receive members from one another, provided those members would fall in with the same sentiment with themselves, without re-baptism; and it would seem according to this rule, they might receive members from the missionaries also, without re-baptism.—Objection—the missionary ministers while identified with us, their moral character being good, their religious acts are good also; but now they stand as excommunicated members, and consequently their acts are not valid. If we say we hold them as excommunicated members, when did we exercise such disciplin upon them, and if we have not exercised disciplin upon them, then the only difference we can see is, that we have declared non-fellowship with those ministers for doing that which we ourselves once allowed or suffered, but now believe to be wrong.—If they were to come to us now would we not receive them on confession of our faith, without re-baptism? we speak of those that stand originally with us, and would not their ordination also be good, and the next day their acts with us would be counted valid. Suppose such a minister to come to us now and remain with us some short time, and in that time should baptize members—then suppose he were to turn back to the missionaries, his work while he remained with us would be good according to the general rule set up among us. But the next person baptized by him would not be in good order, only because he was not identified with us. Is there any difference here in things but, in name only? and now what shall we do—either re-baptize all those members that come to us having been baptized before the split, and all those that come to us having been baptized since the split by missionary ministers, or else re-baptize none: for to be uniform in this matter, would be either to receive the sound member that come from them to us, without regard to whether they were baptized by missionaries or not, and to keep all the sound members we have, without regard to the same, or to reject all that come from them to us, and turn out all we have that were baptized by missionary ministers before the split.—Suppose a missionary minister should come to us, having been baptized and ordained by the hand of missionary ministers before the split; we would receive him on confession of our faith—then according to the general rule both his baptism and ordination would be counted valid: but suppose he was baptized by one of the same ministers before the split, and ordained under the same hand since the split, his baptism according to our rule is good, but his ordination is not, and the acceptance or non-acceptance depends not on whether he was a minister of God or not, that did this work, but whether the individual was identified with us at the time or not when the work was performed.—Let us go further—suppose a church or churches were constituted by missionary ministers (as there are many who stand on this footing) known to be such before the split, and those churches having gone with us at the time of the split: those we consider as in good order, and their constitution we count valid, without regard to the soundness of the presbytery (constituted them: that is to say, without regard to whether they possessed mission principles or not at the time; but if a church or churches were constituted by the same identical ministers since the split, and these ministers known to have been the same before the split as they are since, the constitution of said churches we do not recognise as orthodox. Now the question is, should the existence of one egregious error, while the faith and practice otherwise is maintained, prohibit a church or member from being orthodox? if so, many of them are already condemned, being more or less in error either in doctrine or practice; and to what extent they must go to constitute them apostate we will not at present decide; for assuredly, there were some among the Corinthians that believed not the resurrection of the body, but how long they were borne with by Paul, before they were accounted heretics, or whether at all or not, we know not, but we know they were admonished and expostulated with by him. The Galations were also in error, for they seemed to have fallen into the belief that justification was to be finalized by the deeds of the law, and Paul accordingly reproves and admonishes but no non-fellowship declared. We think we ought to exercise a spirit of great forbearance before we declare non-fellowship, lest we should rend the body of Christ. The Seven Churches of Asia were reprimanded and admonished and threatened by the great head of the church, but one only is entered of non-fellowship, and that for being lukewarm. Take care brethren that the same thing come not upon us. This subject is submitted to the consideration of wise brethren, by one that can do nothing against the truth, but for the truth.

AN O. S. B.

From the Advertiser & Gazette.

Letter from Washington.

WASHINGTON, March 10, 1859.

At the funeral of the Postmaster General, in the East room of the Capital, the sermon was delivered by the Rev Mr Granberry, of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. It is said that it was one of the plainest and most eloquent discourses ever listened to at the Federal capital. Although in the presence of the most distinguished men of the country, the President and his Cabinet, the Supreme Court, U. S. Senate, the Foreign Legations, and the numerous eminent strangers gathered there the preacher, a young man, took the occasion to shape his remarks most suited to the occasion and character of the audience. It had a telling effect upon the powers that be" and clearly indicated that the speaker had a true appreciation of his mission and duty as a faithful minister of God, and that as such an assembly did not often convene under like circumstances, he would take the most of the opportunity.

PICWIE.

FUNERAL OBSEQUIES OF THE POSTMASTER GENERAL.—FROM HIS HOME TO THE GRAVE.—The sun this morn arose o'er a scene of sorrow—a sorrow which has filled our hearts at the loss of one who, most justly, was ranked among the great and the good. From marble column and classic portico, and many a mansion, festoons of death's dark drapery flattered sadly in the breeze, & words, coming from many a mourning heart, told the sad tale that the setting of that sun would see the earth close over the mortal remains of him, who, but a few short weeks ago, moved among us, his path being cheered with the hope of a long, a useful, and a glorious career.

A little after nine this morning, the members of the Cabinet, headed by the venerable Secretary of State—a mourning group—proceeded to the late residence of the lamented deceased, to accompany them to the White House, where they were to be laid out in state.

It was a scene most solemn, and one suggestive of much sad reflection to see those venerable faces bending in grief over the features "pale in death" of him with whom they had borne the heavy duties of onerous office through many an anxious and many a weary day, and not all the philosophy which they could command, and "which shrouds the thinkings of the great as with a veil," not all the fortitude gathered during many a year in the manly conflict of mighty minds with the world's trials, could restrain the tear, "and friendship wept and human nature had its way."

The body having been borne to the White House in a plain hearse, the doors were closed, and the arrangements for laying out in State having been made in the east room in the presence of those who accompanied it there, the doors were thrown open a little after ten and the public were admitted.

Alas! what a change; this gorgeously-furnished room, in which the tones of sweet music and brilliant wit and sounds of joyous laughter have been so often, and lately, too, heard; in which the dazzling attire of beautiful women and the bright uniform of the army & the navy, and all the gay garniture with which fashion bedecks itself, have so often, and lately too, presented a sight so gladdening and delighting to the eye, was now filled with the silence of the tomb," and clothed in the appalling drapery of the angel of death.

Under the main chandelier, in the centre of the room, and with its head to the west, lay the coffin, resting on a platform about two feet high. It was covered with black cloth, richly laden with silver fringe, and over it were two palls, one of finest black velvet, the dark silk fringe of which rested on the floor; the other of black cloth, which hung down not quite so far as the velvet one, and was bound with a silver band about an inch wide, and had in the corners the American eagle in solid silver. On the coffin, close to the glass frame through which the features were visible, was a bouquet of white flowers, emblems of purity, and across the centre of the coffin was laid a long wreath of white roses and rarest flowers, with bows of white satin ribbon attached to either end, and on the coffin was a silver plate with the words:

AARON VAIL BROWN,
POSTMASTER GENERAL;
BORN AUGUST 15, 1795,
Died March 8, 1859.

At its foot, on the north side, a colored female servant, dressed in mourning, sat silent and still; and on the other or south side, was a small table with a bible on it, open at the page containing the 26th chapter of Psalms, and commencing with the solemn words, "Judge me, oh Lord."

The features of the departed had a calm and placid look; the lips were closely compressed, but the cheeks had that wasted look which ever characterize the fearful disease of which he died. Around those wasted cheeks were placed in alternate beautiful [illegible] plucked from the living stem as he had been plucked from life, and soon to fade into dust and ashes with him.

Around the bier were placed, in an oval form, three rows of plain chairs, the mirrors were covered with white muslin, the bright colors of the rich carpeting were hidden from view by a covering of white, the heavy curtains fell in darkening folds over the windows, and through a few panes in the centre window on the north side the sunlight entered, falling on the coffin, as if figurative of a bright immortality for him who lay in it. No change had been made in the furniture of the room, except what we have described above: the subdued light, the dark pall, the shades thrown over the mirrors, and the deep silence which reigned, gave the room the appearance of the interior of some grand mausoleum.

Silently, sadly and with noiseless tread, a long stream of mourners passed around the bier each taking one long, lingering look down its narrow confines at the features on which "Cold obstructions apathy now rests."

Yet—

"He lives in glory, and his speaking dust,
Has more of life than half its breathing mouths."

As the hour for the funeral services approached, large crowds came to witness them. Among them were many distinguished people, Senator, ex-Senators, and many dignataries of the bench and bar.—At half past eleven o'clock the clerks of the postoffice Department headed by First Assistant Postmaster General King; Second Assistant Dundas and Third Assistant Zevely, together with the Sixth Auditor and his clerks, marched in formal procession to the White House, and there passed around the remains of their departed chief. They were then arrayed on the east side of the room to the number of two hundred.

Officers of the army and navy of the United States and the diplomatic corps then entered, and were arranged on the north side of the East Rooms. On each side of them were heads of bureaus, and other government officials. The pressure became so great within and without at this point, that the doors were temporarily closed. At the south end of the East Room the clergy of this and adjoining cities were seated in semi circular rows of chairs, in the rear of the officiating clergymen.

On the east side of the room, ex-Senators and ex-members of Congress were seated; and on the south were seated the Judges of the Supreme Court, and United States Marshal Selden, who entered the room a few moments before 12 o'clock.

On the north side of the room the Mayor and the members of the City Council, with their Presidents were seated, and the Senate of the United States, accompanied by their President and Sergeant-at-Arms were seated on the left of the coffin.

At 12 o'clock the President of the United States, accompanied by Secretaries Cass, Floyd, Toucey, Cobb Black and the new Postmaster General, Holt, entered the room through the reception parlors, and took seats near the clergy. The Rev. Dr. Hall, of the G. street Episcopal Church, and Rev. J. C. Granberry, the officiating clergyman, then took their positions at a small table in front of the coffin. Quiet having been restored, the Rev. Dr. Hall read the solemn and impressive funeral service of the Episcopal Church.—In concluding, he introduced Rev. Mr. Granberry, who proceeded to make a few remarks.—Washington States.

Washington City News.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—The Senate will close the labors of its extra session to-morrow, the 10th inst.

J. Holt, Commissioner of Patents, was confirmed to-day as Postmaster General.

Bartholomew Fuller, of North Carolina, was confirmed as fifth Auditor.

John Pettit, of Indiana, was confirmed as Chief Justice of Kansas.

George W. Jones, of Iowa, was confirmed as Minister to Bogota.

The Executive Department, and the Supreme and local Courts, were closed, out of respect to the memory of the late Postmaster General, Hon. A. V. Brown. His funeral will take place to-morrow.

Additional by the Quaker City.

NEW ORLEANS, March 8—(via New York).—At Vera Cruz, on the 1st inst., it was reported that Gen. Marimon had sent a force to attack Jalapa, at which point he was defeated. Miramon then marched to Alvarada with three thousand men, intending to march to Vera Cruz via the sea coast. Vera Cruz was much excited, but its defenders were confident of success.

At Minatitlan, just as the Quaker City was leaving, it was announced that Miramon had arrived at Vera Cruz with five thousand men and thirty-nine heavy guns.

LATER FROM VERA CRUZ.

NEW ORLEANS, (via New York,) March 9.—An arrival from Vera Cruz announces that that city is in a state of seige. Gen. Miramon's army watchwords are "Liberals or Death."

An express from the capital of Mexico, intended to be sent forward by the steamship Tennessee, was detained by Gen. Miramon for the purpose of concealing his movements.

Extra Session of Congress.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—It is very probable, if the reports in circulation are to be credited, that the necessity for an extra session of Congress will be decided on to-morrow.

Additional by the Arabia.

HALIFAX, March 10.—The sales of cotton in Liverpool during the week reached 42,000 bales, of which speculators took 3,500 and exporters 6,000 bales. The steamer's news from the United States and the warlike rumors which prevailed caused a decline in all qualities of cotton.

General News.

Lord Crowley had gone on a special mission of conciliation to Vienna.

Ministers announced in the English Parliament on Friday, that there was reason to hope that Austrian and French troops would soon evacuate Rome.—These facts gave strong hopes of peace, notwithstanding the prevalence of war-like rumors.

The favorable reports of continued [illegible] three per cent. funds to advance 1 per cent., but the advance was subsequently lost.

The Atlantic Telegraph Company had held another general meeting, at which it was announced that the English government had offered a guarantee of eight per cent. on six hundred thousand pounds sterling per voyage for the Galway line.

Lord Lyons sailed for New York on the 22d of February.

Funeral of Postmaster General Brown.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The remains of the late Postmaster General, Hon. A. V. Brown, were deposited temporarily in the Congressional cemetery this afternoon. There was an immense crowd in the procession, and the booming of minute guns, the flags at half-mast, gave a solemn and imposing aspect to the scene.

Arrival of the North Briton.

PORTLAND, Me., March 11.—The steamship North Briton arrived to-day. She left Liverpool on the 23d of February, but her news has been anticipated by the Arabia, at Halifax.

Among the items of news, however, by this arrival, it is announced that the second division of troops have been ordered from Algiers to France. The France regiments are to be increased to fifteen hundred men each.

Prince Napoleon is reported to be instigating war.

The Sardinian Senate has resolved on authorising a loan of fifty millions of francs.

Austria was steadily increasing her Italian defences, was otherwise preparing for hostilities. Her important garrisons are to be strongly reinforced.

Spain is strengthening all her outposts.

Interesting from Mexico.

NEW ORLEANS, (via New York,) March 12.—The steamship Tennessee is below, with Vera Cruz dates to the 9th inst.

A severe battle had taken place near Cordova, in which the left wing of Miramons army was completely routed by the Liberals.

Gen. Miramon's army lost one hundred killed, three cannon, three hundred muskets, and a large quantity of military stores.

Gen. Degollado was preparing to march against the capital, with ten thousand men. The Liberals had captured Guanajuato and Aguas Calients.

Sentimental.

The editor of the Edgefield (S. C.) Advertiser thus grows sentimentally eloquent over the budding flowers of the spring:

A Camelia Japonica—There is a little braised and weather-beaten member of this renowned floral family, not a mile from the spot where we write, which has just succeeded in bearing three beautiful flowers in the open air. It seems to be of the kind known as "Lady Hume's Blush"—pure white at its first budding, and showing the gentlest possible suffusion of pink over its central folds as the bloom more fully unbosoms its beauties to the Day-god. The poor little bush had been out all winter, without protection, save that of the kindly mother earth.

And now that the spring is coming again, and all the flowers will soon be rejoicing together in their resurrection from the winter's long sleep, may not the brave little Camelia be fairly regarded by them all as a heroine worthy of their universal praise?

So does neglected innocence oft-times defy the winter of earthly adversity.—And so too, if faithful to the end, will it safely pass through the winter of death and begin an everlasting blooming in the spring of the Heavenly Resurrection!

LOVE'S CRISIS.

The parting came. It was the sun-set hour;
And as the gloom of night approach'd far
Darker shadow, fell upon the shrine of Ada's heart.——

Her thoughts were all of him she loved so much;
And balanced in her mind were hopes far
Dearer than her own sweet life; for, had the World itself been weigh'd against her love it
Would have proved no more than dust in love's sweet Balances.

A film came slowly o'er the tearless disk
Of her blue eyes and while the fell eclipse
Threw desolation on her path, she saw
A spectre, pale and dim, that crossed the Threshold of her future life, and with its Shadowy hand, it trailed a wreath of Faded flowers!

O! life, how little do we know of thee!
How many hopes we too have nursed—how
Many wreaths have we too put upon the
Brow of love, that since have turned to dust
And ashes!

A pale and wilted flower would fitly
Represent that fair young girl, whose dimpled
Chin was resting on the frail support of
One small ivory hand, whose ungloved
Beauty charm'd the poet-eye with transports
"Less of Earth than Heaven!"—
Her dark hair floating down in streams of jet——
Each glossy curl, to woo her bosom's
Paradise.

——But Ada did not reck of self.
He was, alone, her heart's dear god, and
Prison'd in her breast, his image nurs'd—
As bees in blossoms live—till all the Sweetness of her angel heart was given to Him, in fondest usury of love, nor
Kept one honied drop behind.

Alas! it is a fearful thing to love
So wildly, when the image we would Clasp, is made of clay, and sways in every Breeze upon its pedestal of dust!

He did not leave her willingly, but was Wrenched away by vile necessity. He knew
He trailed her heart strings with him; and had the Angels gone with him, it would have seemed no
Less the road to death—for they were never
More to meet.

The Moon, pale queen of night, rose blushing on
A throne of clouds, and threw her beams athwart
The sufferer. Poor Ada raised her drooping
Head, and looked about that dimly-lighted
Room, as one aroused from painful
Dreams;—then gazing in the far-off starry
Depths, as one in quest of hope' she sees a
Beckoning hand!——

A dreamy mist creeps o'er her closing eyes
And in her swoon the angels call her name!
——It is enough;
A sweet smile plays upon her marble lips,
And she is dead.

MYSTERIOUS.—In another column there is an advertisement of a horse, tolied before Magistrate Ramph, which horse, we are informed, has been the cause of considerable excitement and speculation. He was taken up at Givhan's Ferry, with saddle and bridle, and as yet no one has claimed him.—The horse is said to be worth at least $200, and does not belong in the neighborhood. It is thought that the rider was a stranger, and that he was murdered.—Walterboro' Sun.

SLAVE STEALING IN MISSOURI.—The Chicago Press and Tribune, announces with a shout of exultation, that seventy-five fugitive slaves, from Missouri, passed through Grinnell, Iowa, on the 21st inst., on their way to Canada. They were well provided with weapons to defend themselves against pursuers. The negros were enticed from Missouri by abolitionists in Kansas, escorted through Nebraska to the Iowa line, and then shipped via the under ground railroad to Chicago. The business is constantly going on, many trains of slaves, accompanied by their abolitionist conducters, passing through Iowa, without announcement of its arrival. The farmers of Western Missouri feel severely the effect of these depredations, and it is not to be wondered at that they should inflict the most frightful vengeance on their enemies whenever they catch them.—St. Louis News.

MODERN INVENTIONS.

We know of no invention of modern times that deserves or is destined to occupy a higher niche in the temple of fame than the discovery or invention of the Vegetable Epileptic Pills for curing Epilepsy, or Falling Fits: Spasms, Cramps and all the various modifications of Nervous Disease. Dr. Seth S. Hance, of 108 Baltimore street, Baltimore, Md., the inventor, is certainly entitled to the best wishes of all the benevolent portion of mankind who experience a pleasure by the alleviation of human suffering, when Dr Hance first prepared these Pills; he he intended them solely for Fits, Cramps and Spasms but subsequent experience satisfactorily proved to him that in addition to their remarkable sanative properties in this class of diseases, they exerted a perfect control over the entire nervous system. He was then induced to try them in cases of Neuralgia, Tic Doloreux Nervous Headache, Palpitation of the Heart, Incipient Paralysis, Hysteria, Muscular Debility and a host of minor diseases springing from a lack of nervous energy in all of which his anticipation were crowned with the most sanguine success. Persons at a distance, by writing and sending a remittance to Dr. Hance can have the medicine forwarded by mail to their post office address, he paying the postage. The prices are for a single box $3, two boxes, $5 or $21 per dozen. We have given his address above.

INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.

Messrs. Perry Davis & Son—Gents—I am at a loss to express with words the satisfaction it gives me to inform you of the benefit I have received from the use of your Pain Killer. About one year since I was attacked with the inflammatory rheumatism, being unable to walk for eight weeks; besides the confinement to the house, the pain I experienced no tongue can describe. But to return to the object of this letter. On the 27th of December last I had a more severe attack than before, I immediately commenced using the Pain Killer made by you, which to my surprise immediately relieve me of pain, and saved me the necessity of being confined to my bed for one day. It is now eleven days since the attack, and the inflammation has entirely subsided. My limbs, which were tremendously swollen, have assumed their natural shape. In short I am entirely well; and feel bound by the common sympathies of my nature for those who may be thus afflicted, to make the above statement, that all may resort to the Pain Killer, that time, expense and a world of suffering may be prevented.

HENRY WEED, Clerk at 117 Genesee Street, Utica.

OBITUARY.

Died, on the 14th inst. near Alexandria Calhoun Co. Ala., MR. JOSEPH GLADDEN, in the 78th year of his age.

The deceased was an old settler of this county, a man of great energy and untiring perseverance.

LITTLE DUDLY, the last born of Dudly, and Prissie Snow, departed this life at the residence of his parents in Oxford, on the 11th day of March, 1859, aged six years.

Little Dudly is dead.
Six summer suns had scarcely rolled
Above his little head
Ere he was called to leave the world,
To dwell among the dead.

Those bright black eyes, that sparkled with such intelligent joy, are closed to all on earth. The patter of those little feet, that ran with so much glad delight to meet a doting father, and fond mother, no more will be heard in the home of love, that angelic voice is hushed to silence—and the little tongue that lisped the names of "Papa" and "Mama" so endearingly, is palsied by death. His happy spirit still lives, a shining star in the firmament of glory.

COLLECTIONS this season have not equalled my expectations. The crop of cotton was large, prices good, and funds comparatively, abundant. Consequently, I expected much. True, some have done well: others, nothing. To the latter I would suggest, "that now is the time." 'Tis much more easy to make payment now, than it was last season, or, than it may be next. Is it not wise then, to improve this "GOLDEN" opportunity, and while money is cheap, to extinguish old liabilities?

I am anxious to collect my old debts. From those who have done nothing, or but little yet, I shall expect liberal payments in March.

GROVER & BAKER'S

CELEBRATED

FAMILY SEMING MACHINES.

NEW STYLES—PRICES FROM $50 to $120

EXTRA CHARGE OF $5 FOR HEMMERS.

495 Broadway, : : : : New York.
33 St. Francis, St., : : : : Mobile.

These Machines sew from two spools, as purchased from the store, requiring no re-winding of thread; they Hem Fell Gather, and Stitch in a superior style, finishing each seam by their own operation, without recourse to the hand-needle, as is required by other machines. They will do better and cheaper sewing than a seamstress can, even if she works for one cent an hour and are, unquestionably, the best Machines in the market for family sewing, on account of their simplicity, durability, ease of management, and adaptation to all varieties of family sewing—executing either heavy or fine work with equal facility, and without special adjustment.

As evidence of the unquestioned superiority of their Machines' the GROVER & BAKER SEWING MACHINE COMPANY beg leave to refer to the following.

TESTIMONIALS.

"Having had one of Grover & Baker's Machines in my family for nearly a year and a-half, I take pleasure in commending it as every way reliable for the purpose for which it is designed.—Family Sewing."—Mrs. Joshua Leavitt, wife of Rev. Dr. Leavitt, Editor of N. Y. Independent.

"I confess myself delighted with your Sewing Machine, which has been in my family for many months. It has always been ready for duty, requiring no adjustment, and is easily adapted to every variety of family sewing, by simply changing the spools of tareaf."—Mrs. Elizabeth Strickland, wife of Rev. Dr. Strickland Editor of N. Y. Christian Advocate.

"After trying several different good machines, I preferred yours, on account of its simplicity, and the perfect ease with which it is managed, as well as the strength and durability of the seam. After long experience, I feel competent to speak in this manner, and to confidently recommend it for every variety of family sewing."—Mrs. E.B. Spooner, wife of the Editor of Brooklyn Star.

"I have used a GROVER & BAKER SEWING Machine for two years, and have found it adapted to all kinds of family sewing, from Cambric to Broadcloth. Garments have been worn out without the giving way of a stitch. The Machine is easily kept in order, and easily used." —Mrs. A. B. Whipple, wife of Rev. Geo. Whipple, New York.

"Your Sewing Machine has been in use in my family the past two years, and the ladies request me to give you their testimonials to its perfect adaptedness, as well as labor-saving qualities in the performance of family and household sewing." —Robert Boorman, New York.

"For several months we have used Grover & Baker's Sewing Machine, and have come to the conclusion that every lady who desires her sewing beautifully and quickly done would be most fortunate in possessing one of these reliable and indefatigable 'iron needle-women,' whose combined qualities of beauty, steength, and simplicity, are invaluable."—J. W. Morris, daughter of Gen. Geo. P. Morris, Editor of the Home Journal.

Extract of a letter from THOS. R. LEAVITT, Esq., an American gentleman, now resident in Sydney, New South Wales, dated January 12, 1858:

"I had a tent made in Melbourne, in 1853, in which there were over three thousand yards of sewing done with one of Grover & Baker's Machines, and a single seam of that has outstood all the double seams sewed by sailors with a needle and twine.

"If Homer could be called up from his murky hades, he would sing the advent of Grover & Baker as a more benignant miracle of art than was ever Vulcan's smithy. He would denounce midnight shirt making as the direful spring of woes unnumbered. —Prof. North.

"I take pleasure in saying, that the Grover & Baker Sewing Machines have more than sustained my expectation. After trying and returning others, I have three of them in operation in my different places, and, after four years' trial, have no fault to find."—J H Hammond, Senator of South Carolina.

"My wife has had one of Grover & Baker's Family Sewing Machines for some time, and I am satisfied it is one of the best labor-saving machines that has been invented. I take much pleasure in recommending it to the public."—J G Harris, Governor of Tennessee.

"It is a beautiful thing, and puts every boy into an excitement of good humor.—Were I a Catholic, I should insist upon Saints Grover and Baker having an eternal holiday in commemoration of their good deeds for humanity."—Cassius M Clay.

"I think it by far the best patent in use. This Machine can be adapted from the finest cambric to the heaviest cassimere. It sews stronger, faster, and more beautifully than one can imagine. If mine could not be replaced, no ney could not buy it." —Mrs. J G Brown, Nashville, Tenn.

"It is speedy, very neat, and durable in its work; is easily understood and kept in repair, I cadnestly recommend this Machine to all my acquaintances and others." —Mrs. M A Forrest, Memphis Tenn.

"We find this Machine to work to our satisfaction, and with pleasure recommend it to the public, as we believe the Grover & Baker to be the best Sewing Machine in use."—Deary Brothers, Allisonia, Tenn.

"If used exclusively for family purposes with ordinary care, I will wager they will last one three score years and ten,' and never get out of fix,"—John Erskine, Nashville, Tenn.

"I have had your Machine for several weeks, and am perfectly satisfied that the work it does is the best and most beautiful that ever was made."—Maggie Aimison, Nashville, Tenn.

"I use my Machine upon coats, dressmaking, and fine linen stitching, and the work is admirable—far better than the best hand-sewing, or any other machine I have ever seen."—Lucy B Thompson Nashville, Tenn.

"I find the work the strongest and most beautiful I have ever seen, made either by hand or machine, and regard the Grover & Baker Machine as one of the greatest blessings to our sex,"—Mrs. Taylor, Nashville, Tenn.

"I have one of Grover & Baker's Sewing Machines in use in my family, and find it invaluable. I can confidently recommend it to all persons in want of a Machine"— G T Thompson, Nashville, Tenn.

"I take pleasure in certifying to the utility of the Grover & Baker Sewing Machines. I have used one on almost every description of work for months, and find it much stronger and better in every respect than work done by hand."—Mrs. D W Wheeler, Nashville, Tenn.

"I would be unwilling to dispose of my Grover & Baker Machine for a large amount, could I not replace it again at pleasure."—Mrs. H G Scovel, Nashville, Tenn.

"Our two Machines, purchased from you, do the work of twenty young ladies. We with pleasure recommend the Grover & Baker Sewing Machine to be the best in use."—N Stillman & Co., Memphis Tenn.

"The Grover & Baker Sewing Machine works admirably. I think the stitch and work far superior to that of any Sewing Machine I ever saw On fine work I think the Machine would be hard to beat."—W J Davie, Memphis, Tenn.

"I find the Machine easily managed, very durable, and take pleasure in recommending it to all who wish convenience, economy, and pleasure,"—Mrs. F Titus, Memphis, Tenn.

This caution is rendered essentially necessary as large quantities of inferior and defective Linens are prepared; season after season sealed with the name of RICHARDSON Irish Houses, who, regardless of the injury thus inflicted alike on the American consumer & the manufacturers of the genuine Goods, will not readily abandon a business so profitable, while purchasers can be imposed on with goods of a worthless character.

POETRY.

ESTRANGEMENT.

"Alas! how light a cause may move
Dissension between hearts that love!
Hearts that the world in vain had tried,
And sorrow but more closely tied;
That stood the storm when waves were rough,
Yet in a sunny hour fell off,
Like ships that have gone down at sea,
When Heaven was all tranquility!
A something, light as air—a look,
A word unkind or wrongly taken—
Oh, love, that tempests never shook,
A breath, a touch like this hath shaken.
And ruder words will soon rush in
To spread the breach that words begin;
And eyes forget the gentle ray
They wore in courtship's smiling day;
And voices lose the tone that shed
A tenderness round all they said;
Till fast declining, one by one,
The sweetnesses of love are gone,
And hearts, so lately mingled, seem
Like broken clouds—or like the stream,
That, smiling, left the mountain's brow,
As though its waters ne'er could sever,
Yet, ere it reached the plain below,
Breaks into floods that part forever."

OUR BROTHER THAT DIED.

BY MABEL ST. CLAIR.

Long ago, one golden Autumn,
When the reapers sound the sheaves,
And the North wind, from the forest,
Stripped the gold and crimson leaves;
Then, across our oaken threshhold,
Came the "angel reaper" bold,
And he wrapped our little brother
Closely in his mantle fold.

But, by faith, we know he took him
Far beyond the ether blue,
Where the clouds of gold and azure
Hide the eternal gates from view.
And we know, by life's bright river,
In green pastures, sweetly fair,
Clothed in robes of snowy whiteness,
We shall meet our brother there.

Meet him on the shores immortal,
Where life's flowers forever bloom,
When we, too, have crossed the portals
Earth is closing o'er the tomb.
Though life's chain has one link riven
Worldly wealth cannot restore,
Yet, this thought sweet balm hath given,
Pain can never reach him more.
Spring Hill.

Summer.

FROM THE GERMAN.

Now the sun, with burning glare,
Lengthens noontide hours,
Men to cooling vales repair,
Or to shady bowers.

Slowly through the meadow green,
Sluggish streams are flowing;
All along their banks are seen,
Roses deeply glowing.

Come, we'll seek the leafy grove,
Sip the cooling fountain,
And, when evening steals, we'll rove
Round the shady mountain.

Then, at night-fall, will we throng
Home through balmy flowers,
And, with many a grateful song,
Bless the summer hours.

Miscellaneous.

The Maniac Brother;
A LEAF FROM AN OLD PORTFOLIO.

Mid-summer winds were abroad on the hills and vales, as in the exuberant gaiety of youth we rode forth in the fresh, clear morning. There were three of us—May, Elenore, and myself—passing a long period of seclusion among the Mountains; and now longing for some wild freak of adventure, we set out without an object, save to break the monotony of our quiet life. It matters not what strange chance first threw us together; enough that we had made a solemn promise, come good or evil, to cling to one another as the gray linches to the trees of the forest. In high spirits, we left our quiet house, following a little wood-path that wound away among the hills. It was covered with long grass apparently untrod by the foot of man. We were well mounted, and gaily we rode on till the track terminated abruptly in a deep wood.—It was a lovely spot; the old trees waved around in solemn grandeur, the thick boughs so interlacing as to throw a green twilight over the waters of a little stream that flowed and murmured between two gentle slopes of moss and verdure. Here we dismounted, & spread our simple luncheon; and afterward leaned back on the moss, and talked & sung till hours had gone by, and we prepared to depart.

"We will follow this," said Elenore, pointing to a path winding away beneath the arching shadow of an avenue us to the highway." But, alas! it seemed interminable. We pressed on and on till the sun disappeared behind a thick bank of clouds, and a leaden hue spread over the face of the sky. Still we had no fears, and fixing our impliments of self-defence closer in our girdles, we hastened along. At last, we beheld the gray outlines of a building rising above the surrounding trees, and drawing nearer, descried a wide old-fashioned farm-house surrounded by clumps of apple and thorn trees, whose guarled trunks betokened their extreme age. In a clover field, beside the house, a man was whetting his scythe. He lay it down as we approached, and saluted us respectfully; but we all thought we had never seen a countenance so dark, so strange and sad. I addressed him, as the oldest of our party:

"Can we rest here an hour," I said, "and procure corn for our weary beasts?"

"Certainly," he returned; "come to the house. I will show you the way."

We dismounted, and calling a boy to take our horses in charge, we followed our conductor through a long passage into a quaint old kitchen. Looking upon it, we seemed to have stepped back to a century. A large fire-place occupied one end of the room, in which the red embers were yet glowing; around were disposed a painted settle and a few high-backed chairs. A rusty firelock hung against the wall, and from the rafters above depended strings of apple, ropes of onions, and a few well-dried hams. A woman with a vacant face stood busied at a small table as we entered.

"My housekeeper, Margery," said our host, as he seated us. "I think she has some clean bread and milk to offer you."

The woman dropped an awkward courtesy when her name was mentioned, and, acting on her master's hint, left the room, to re-appear with a tray containg nice corn bread with dishes of milk and honey, which she arranged upon the table, and then, with a simpering obeisance, invited us to partake. After the tray was removed, we sauntered out into the field, thick with clusters of luscious strawberries. As we plucked them, I put some questions to our host, who stood by, as to the loneliness of the spot, and wondered we had never heard it spoken of at E. village.

"No one ever comes here," he said; "it is long since I sundered the ties that bound me to the world, and came hither to commence a new life. I assure you, I have not always lived thus; tell me, young ladies, what chance has brought you here? I had almost forgotten the existence of such youth and bloom."

"Excuse me," said I, coldly; "I think we will go now, if you are rested, Ellen. We have no time for compliments."

At this moment, ere he replied, the woman he called Margery appeared.—She whispered to him hurriedly, and he followed her to the house, while the stable boy announced to us one of the horses had a stone in his hoof, and was unable to proceed; but somehow, the loneliness of the situation, the strangeness of the master, impressed us so unpleasantly, that we determined, at all hazards, to proceed as far the nearest hostelrie.

We were preparing to depart, when a wild storm arose, and the blackness of midnight settled down upon the mountains. Heavy clouds obscured the west. The lightning flashed vividly, and sheets of rain were dashed against the windows of the dwelling we had been forced to re-enter. In despair, we resigned ourselves to the necessity of spending the night there; for we had no guide, and to venture forth alone were madness.

Supper was served; and after it was cleared away, all sat round the broad harth in silence, watching the fire-light shadow flicker and tremble strangely on the walls. Lost in reverie, our host sat in his arm-chair close to the blazing hearth; finally the stable boy, who had been sleepily peering at us with nondescript eyes, stole from the room, soon followed by old Margery.

Our host roused himself now. He commenced to converse in an animated tone, unconsciously disclosing a mind of superior cultivation and intellect of no common order.

At last he said: "It is wild to-night without, and you need rest. I will lead you to it. Sleep and on the morrow pursue your journey; but I hope you are courageous, for this is an old creaking house, and you may hear strange noises."

"We fear nothing," said Elenor's sweet, resolute voice. "See here"—she drew forth her slender poignard—"we have these, and we can use them."

"But you never have," he said, "yet you are one of my kind;" and he looked admiringly on the girlish beauty.

"Come now; I am ready;" and lighting a dingy lamp, he escorted us up a long winding staircase into a large chamber, where everything wore the aspect of desolation. Instead of the rich, warm carpet and tasteful furniture, to which we had been accustomed, the floor was bare and unpainted, a highpost bedstead, a few old chairs and a small ancient cabinet placed against what seemed the door of a closet, were all the room contained. Our host set down his lamp with a whispered good night, and departed. We listened till the echo of his footsteps had died away on the creeking stairs, and then addressed ourselves to turn the rusty lock of the miserable door.

My companions lay down on the hard bed, and overcome with weariness, fell asleep; but I was thoroughly awake, my eyes riveted upon what I supposed to be the door of the closet. Suddenly I thought I heard a sigh proceeding from that part of the room. I listened: it was again repeated. Placing our lamp in an obscure corner of the chamber, I stole noiselessly across the room, and applied my eye to a crevice in the door. How strange a sight met my gaze! It was another chamber lighted by a small chandelier depending from the round. The walls were hung with blue silk; the floor covered with a rich yielding carpet of gorgeous hues; the chairs and table were of dark, quality carved wood, and in the center of the apartment, a young man lay sleeping on a sofa. He was young, and tastefully dressed, but so pale I judged him ill, and as I listened, I heard him moan in his sleep. I had noticed the window hangings were of the finest lace; but judge of my horror when I saw, on looking again, the sashes were barred with iron!

What was this fearful mystery?

I was turning to awaken my companions, when they both stole to my side.

"Look," I whispered in a smothered voice. They did so, and Elenor's terrified exclamation awakened the sleeper, who arose to his feet. For a moment, he listened intently; then said, in a soft whisper, "Is any one there?"

"Yes," we returned; "some travelers who were overtaken by the storm."

"Oh, release me, then," he said, in the same soft whisper; "for I am confined here by the malice of an enemy who dragged me to this prison on my way to the altar. It is many days since then; but my bride is weeping for me now. Oh, let me fly to her."

For a moment we stood irresolute; then, with our united strength, dragged away the cabinet, and pushed back the heavy bolts that confined the door, and the occupant came forth.

We now remarked in him a certain air of wildness as he advanced & said: "The night wears late and I must away."

He produced a small coil of ropes, and noiselessly opened a window.

"I can descend on this," he whispered. "For this, my Leila will thank you."

In a moment, the cord was securely fastened and he had descended. Leaning from the window, we saw him steal away noiselessly into the dark cloudy night.

We returned excitedly to our couch, and exhausted the hours in watching till the gray lines of day broke in the east, and the birds awoke & piped mournfully as they always do at dawn.

By-and-by, we heard a bustle down stairs, and thought how should we meet the master. Refastening the door, we left the chamber as we found it, and went down stairs. The sun shone cheerily without on the orchard boughs, and sent a glad golden gush across the kitchen, where sat our host less gloomy than the night before.

After breakfast, our horses were brought round, and having learned the way to reach E. village, we prepared to depart, our host refusing all remuneration. We were tying on our hats, when Margery entered, pale and aghast, and whispered to the master. He turned very pale, and was about to leave the room, when, as if recollecting our presence, he said breathlessly, yet sternly, "Have you seen aught of a young man who escaped from this house last night?"

"We have," said Elenore, placing herself in front of me. "He appealed to our sympathies, and we released him. Do not think to intimidate us. Life is of little worth to us all;" and she half drew her weapon from its sheath.

"Weak girl," he said impetuously, "what have you done? Alas! if you knew the whole story—how I have devoted my life to one object, dwelling apart from mankind for one sacred purpose."

"Indeed!" echoed Mary, incredulously, with a curling lip.

"Pity me," he continued, "for, as I live, the person you have released is my brother, my maniac brother!"

We were dumb at this announcement.

He continued: "We were early left orphans—he and I—and this place was our only inheritance; but we went forth into the world, and wealth flowed in upon us, both prosperous merchants. Tenderly I loved my brother Angelo; and when, five years since, he came and told me he was about to marry, I rejoiced with him. The day came for nuptials. On my way, with Angelo, to his Leila's house, we were met by messengers announcing her death. It seemed to turn Angelo to stone. For a while he stood motionless; then broke from me with incoherent ravings. Alas! from that hour he was a hopeless maniac. The sight of a young girl, more than all, distressed him. For him, I left the companionship of my fellows. I could not bear to resign him to the harshness of strangers; so I came hither, accompanied by Margery, an old servant of our mother's. Here, for him, I caused a room to be fitted up like that in which he had ever met with his Leila hoping it would shadow forth tender and gentle images of the past on his disordered mind; but for myself, I adopted a rude, ungainly mode of life, far removed from my former habits, and here have I dwelt for five long years, though he has not known me, and has constantly termed me an enemy, and heaped curses on my head.

Of late, he has seemed gentler; but yesterday he saw you, girl," pointing to Elenore, "and saying she was his lost Leila, his old distraction returned.—Now, oh! where shall I seek him?"

"We will go with you. We will all go with you. We ask pardon for our unjust suspicions," said we all simultaneously.

Hastily, then, we mounted, & wound in a precession from the gray old house. The air was dewy cool, and the sweet odors of fern mingled with the breath of wild roses that grew by the roadside. Our horses were fresh, and miles were soon passed. At last we reached a little valley thickly covered with trees.—Here Mr. Hedgecome, as he was called, paused and listened intently. Then dismounting, he crept forward quietly to a green bank, and there reclined the stranger of the preceding night. He had evidently just fallen asleep, and low sighs came from his parted lips.—Elenore, the image of the dead Leila, reached his side, when [illegible] dry branch. The crackling awoke him. He looked first at her, then at Mr.—Hedgecome, exclaiming:

"Brother, you have brought my bride." Then, with such joy as I never saw in human eyes before, he clasped Elenore in his arms. She tried to disengage herself from his embrace, when his hold relaxed, and with a look of enthusiastic joy on his face, "his worn spirit passed" and only the clay temple remained. In vain we chafed his hands, and bathed his brow. His head lay on Elenore's knee, and her hand was on his brow; but our efforts were vain. Tenderly the brother lifted him in his arms, and slowly backward we retraced our steps to the doubly desolate home. Next day the flower turfs were put back from under an old thorn tree; the village rector came and made a touching prayer, and then we left him to his rest. A few days more, and the old house was without a habitant; for Mr. Hedgecome, worn with sorrow, had left his native country for the Old World, where he hoped, in new scenes, to assuage his sorrows.

It is many years since then. Poor may is dead—I trust she is in Heaven—and I am growing old.

Elenore was a bride long ago—the bride of Mr. Hedgecome Yet, I remember still our night's adventure in the old gray house. Elenore laughs at it now, though, anon, she saddens to think of the "Maniac Brother."

"How could I take you for a villain," she says to her husband, and then the lovelight grows and gathers in her sweet eyes, as she looks upon him; and as I turn away, I hear him answering softly: "Thy fear was cast out by perfect love."—Newbern (N. C.) Gazette.

A SINGULAR CIRCUMSTANCE IN CONNECTION WITH THE LATE POSTMASTER GENERAL.—In his office, on last Saturday four weeks, an incident took place, the solemn verification of which vividly revives it in the mind of the only survivor of three gentlemen present at the interview.

Postmaster General Brown was signing up his official journal—his clerk standing on his left, turning over the pages as each signature was affixed.—Mr. Marron, then the efficient and vigorous Third Assistant Postmaster-General, having under charge at that critical period the important responsibilities of the finance division, entered the room to obtain Mr. B's signature to a draft. Turning to the right he cheerfully signed the paper, and Mr. M. was retiring, when the head of the department remarked, "Marron, I wish you would come in and see me when I get through with this."

Being then long after the usual office hours, Mr. M. turned and said, "Do you wish me to see you again to-day, sir?" "Yes," replied Mr. Brown; "I want to know if you have set your house in order; for, in a month or less, we shall have neither a habitation or a name here." Mr. Marron, with a conviction that his official house was always in order, paused a moment, and with surprise and a smile, remarked, "My house in is order?"

"Yes, sir—your house in order; for in a month or less we shall neither have habitation or a name here," "Well, Governor," replied Mr. Marron, "if the storm comes I can stand it as well as others," and then, pleasantly, left the room.

The lamented head of the department then said that his remarks referred to the action of Congress, indicating the defect of important measures then under review.

How prophetic—lamentably so—was the prediction of that hour! On that very day four weeks the efficient and beloved Assistant was followed to the tomb, and now the nation is called to mourn over the enlightened, patriotic, virtuous statesman from whose lips, with so much emphasis, it fell.

Touching and beautiful, indeed, were the contents of a note handed in to the pulpit of Foundery church on Sunday, morning. Here is the tenor of it:—"The wife of the Postmaster General requests the prayers of Rev. Dr. Nadall and his congregation in behalf of her husband, who is lying dangerously ill."

This desire was devoutly responded to by the whole audience, as well as in many other congregations.

Disappointment of Louis Napoleon.

The French character has been materially modified. The nation is now, like England, "a nation of shopkeepers." The glitter of the dollar has superceded the flash of the sabre, and, whether Napoleon meet it or not, "the Empire is Peace." The sensible Frenchmen of this generation intend to hold him to that declaration. They appreciate the value of trade even more than the English, only they are not so adroit and apt in pursuing it.—According to a Paris correspondent of the Philadelphia North American, the reception given to Napoleon's late speech by the Corps Legislatif, and, indeed, by the entire assembly which met in the new Salle d'Etats in the Louvre to listen to it, was of the most chilling desription. On no public occasion has the Emperor been so coldly received by those who are his warmest and most devoted adherents. It was impossible, says the correspondent, to mistake or misinterpret the feelings and sentiments of the entire audience. Whatever savored of peace was met by a suppressed murmur of approbation, as though the assembly recognized therein its own wishes and opinions, rather than those of the speaker himself. But all the high sounding phrases about the "defence of great national interests," the necessity of a firm as well as conciliatory feeling—all allusions to the lately formed alliance and its motives, fell dead and flat upon unwilling, and apparently unbelieving ears. The very contrary of all this was the case on the following day, when Court de Morny, as President of the Corps Legislatif, delivered the session. The last official demonstration was of a wholly pacific character, and was greeted throughout with the most enthusiastic applause. How far it was spoken with the complete assent and approbation of the Emperor, appears to be doubtful. M. de Morny is generally supposed to be more closely in the Emperor's confidence than any other person; but then there is only too much reason to believe that the speculating President of the Corps Legislatif has his own particular motives just now for desiring to calm the public mind, at least for a season, and give time for the Bourse to rise.

The same writer says that the Emperor is "in the sulks," and refused to appear at the grand ball given the same night at his own palace, in honor of the Princess Clotilde. There is a greater Emperor than Napoleon, the Spirit of Commerce, in whose presence he stands rebuked, which has kicked the chivalry of France out of doors, and will kick the Emperor Louis after it, if he does not give up his Quixotism about making France the armed champion of universal civilization.—Let us hope that he will look with pacific eyes to this hemisphere also, and that the Holy Alliance will continue to civilize each other and mind their own business. The United States are not able to cope with them in arms, but we have the cotton bags and the corn fields, and can make an awful hole in their commerce, if not their ships.

TO THE SWINDLED SUBSCRIBERS.—John Mitchell, the editor of the Southern Citizen, gave notice in his last paper, that he would send his paper to all those persons who subscribed to the swindler who paid us a visit some time since. Send on your receipts taken from the pretended Mr. Mitchell, and you will get the paper for the time.

Rudolph says that once upon a time a colored cook expected company, of her own kind and was at a loss how to entertain her friends. Her mistress said: "Chloe, you must make an apology." "Good Lord! missus, how can I make it? I got no eggs, no butter, nor nothing to make it with."

It is said that electricity is about to be applied to music. A performer, seated before a piano constructed for the purpose, in London, Moscow, or St. Petersburg, will play a morceau, every note of which, by means of the electric wire, will be repeated by another instrument in one of the concert-rooms at Paris.

One of the deacons of a certain church asked the bishop if he usually kissed the "bride at wedding?" "Always," was the reply. "And how do you manage when the happy pair are negros?" was the next question. "In all such cases," replied the bishop "the duty of kissing is appointed to the deacons."

Tuesday, the 1st inst., H. K. W. Ayres, a printer of the Press office, skated from this city across Lake Winnebago, and up the Fox river to Berlin, a distance of 72 miles, performing the feat in just five hours and fifteen minutes, or at the rate of 14 miles per hour.

ANOTHER GOLD MINE.—Col. John Quattlebaum exhibits some very captivating specimens of gold-bearing rock taken from a vein he has recently discovered on Sleepy Creek in this district. The vein is one of high promise so far as tested. Col. estimates that the earth in its proximity will pan out at the rate of $20 per diem to the hand, unless present appearances are very illusory. We wish him an abundant golden harvest. May it be another streak of Dorn good luck.—Edgefield Advertiser.

VALUABLE PLANTATION.—The New Orleans Picayune, of Friday, chronicles the sale by Mr. Laurent Millaudon, of his large sugar plantation, situated above Jefferson city, on the right bank of the river, for the sum of one million of dollars. The plantation is worked by 443 hands, who are comprised in the sale, and covers an extent of several thousand acres. It was purchased by his son, Mr. H. C. Millaudon.

HORRIBLE MURDER AND SUICIDE. At Monticello, Indiana, a horrible murder and suicide was committed on Saturday week. Arthur Burns, an old farmer, who had been divorced from his wife, but was again married to the same woman after a separation of several years, deliberately loaded his gun with heavy slugs, and shot her through the head as she sat knitting before the fire. Reloading the gun, he placed the muzzle to his mouth, and pulling the trigger with his toe blew his brains out. He was instantly killed. The unfortunate woman, although shot through the brain, lingered for a whole day, when she died in great agony.

THREE DEATHS FROM POISONED WHISKEY.—The practice of adulterating all kinds of spirituous liquors—and with the most poisonous ingredients—is becoming so common, as to give the most serious cause of alarm to those who use them. Whiskey, the common and daily drink of many, is adulterated with strychine, one of the most virulent poisons. Recently, as appears by a statement made by the Columbia (S. Ca.,) Guardian, two men, all in good health, drank whiskey in a store kept in Bennettsville in that State, by a man by the name of Terrell, and were soon after seized with violent convulsions.—Physicians were called in, but could give no relief—they both died in a few hours. A third individual drank on the same day of the same whiskey, and was soon attacked with like symptams. He too died in a few hours. The verdict of the coroner's inquest was—"death from strychnine."

A farmer and his son Hans having been to market in the next town, and disposed of their load of potatoes and got ready to start home. The farmer said himself down & commenced sleeping. Soon Hans commenced thinking about the baked peas and pork his mother had promised to keep him until his return, smacked his lips and drove the horses faster.

The old man lifted himself upon his elbow and exclaimed:

"Hans, don't drive them horses so fast. They had a good, full load this morning," and laid himself down and snoozed again.

A little time the horses were driven slower; then again Hans thought of the pork and peas, and imagining that the old man was asleep, he whipped up the horses at full speed.

The old man set up in the wagon a second time and exclaimed:

"Hans how many times do you want me to tell you not to drive them horses so fast! Oh, boy, if I would have done so

Those who cannot apply in person can send their orders, and we will fill them, assorting the various kinds of Blanks in proper proportions.

Bartlett Owen, Esq. Tax Assessor of Calhoun County, will receive and transmit to us the names of persons who may wish to subscribe for this paper at his various appointments for assessing or other places. He is also authorized to receipt for any subscription money which may be paid to him.

An Inducement.—We now propose to all our subscribers who owe for over one, two, three or more years, to receive their dues at two dollars per year, until after the close of our approaching spring term of the Circuit Court.

BUSINESS ENERGY.—The office of the Memphis Avalanche, recently destroyed by fire, the work of an incendiary, was replaced by new materials and the paper issued in little over a week. The materials were procured from St. Louis, and we presume the order sent by telegraph. Thirty years ago it would have taken three months or more to have arranged for the issuance of a new paper.

THE IRON IS BOUGHT!—We were shown, says the Selma Reporter, a telegraphic dispatch, on yesterday, from Judge Walker to Col. Lewis, of this place stating that the former had just closed a contract for the iron to reach to the town of Talladega. It is to be delivered in three weeks, and to be paid for on delivery. We suppose the fifty thousand dollars to be raised in Talladega, is, or will be by that time, ready, and that there will be no delay. It is all-important that the iron should be delivered at this point at an early day—while the river is up, so that the work can be pushed through with speed.

INDIAN WAR.—Another battle has been fought between the U. S. Troops, under Lt. Powell and the Camanche Indians, in which five Indians and one soldier were killed, and two soldiers wounded.

Daring Robbery.—We learn by a letter from J. M. Owens, that a Store was broken open, in the eastern part of this County, and robbed of a considerable amount of goods; and the robbers also stole a horse in the neighborhood. The crime was committed by two boys, one nearly grown and the other only about 11 years of age. The goods and horse have been recovered, but the robbers have made their escape.

New York & Charleston Steamship Line.

The attention of the travelling public is invited to the advertisement of this admirable line, in another column. Arrangements have been effected by which through tickets to New York may be obtained in New Orleans, Mobile, Montgomery, Atlanta or Augusta, upon very cheap terms. The price of freight upon goods too, has been greatly reduced. For travel, this may be truly said to be a safe, cheap and speedy line.

☞We are compelled to defer until next week, the publication of the obituary notice of T. M. Barker, Esq., recently Circuit Clerk of St. Clair Co.

Breaks in the Levees on the Mississippi.—Already, accounts of breaks in the levees on the Mississippi, are pouring in. They have broken in several places in Washington and Issaquena counties. At Cammack's landing the break is a very large one and the current [illegible] crevasse has been formed some six feet deep, and so large that the workmen were compelled to abandon it.

☞The communication of "Nuvni" will appear next week.

☞The obituary notice of A. Hart, late of this county will be published in our next.

THE WAR RUMORS IN EUROPE.—A Paris correspondent of the New York French paper, the Courrier des Etats Unis, in a recent letter says:

Three days ago a gentleman who fills a high office in the Palace of the Tuileries said to me: "The resolution of the Emperor is irrevocably taken; and war will take place in a month or two at the latest. Napoleon III, will command in person the principal body of the army; this is one of his aspirations, the oldest and most ardent He has already shown that he possessed the genius of his uncle as a politician; he wishes also to show that he has inherited his military genius. A Bonaparte ought to be a soldier.—The determination of the Emperor is well known, and matters are so far advanced that all opposition is henceforth abandoned as useless and dangerous. No one wanted war yesterday, every body will wish it to morrow.

American Literature.

American Literature is, as yet, in its embryo, buried beneath the soil of a free land, and propagated by the atmosphere and light of a happy clime. It is of slow & steady growth, like the mountain oak which penetrates deep and wide into the bosom of the earth, braving the howling tempest and the furious thunderbolt. When the years of extreme old age shall come upon it, it will not lose any of the freshness and vigor which characterized it in its tender state, but be even more tenacious of life, and more verdant in its foliage, than in its young and palmy days.

If we take a retrospective glance down the concentrating vista of the past, we will see an epoch, which was never refreshed by its presence, until the tawny tribe began to disappear, beneath the sword of the pale face, and peace became the prevailing sceptre of our country.

Genius was sparkling, intellect urging and necessity calling. The lap of nature, was filled to overflowing with caskets of thought from which the fruitful and persisting mind, might remove beautifully, and not impoverish her store. The new world was nature in her purest form The warwhoop of her Indians, which reverberated through forests and even mountains, with an air of freedom and pure delight, told of her primitive vestment, and the permission of talent, to mow with its mental implements, the harvest which was fruit for literature.

Man, with his aegis of resistance, could not repel its force; but gently yielded to its power, which has given him the authority of creating species which never before were popularly known. Although they are not numerous, yet sufficiently various to hold spellbound a Grecian amateur or an English critic. The writers of biography, history, poetry and fiction cannot find superiors in the living world, nor would it scarce be to much to say of those, whose ashes are reposing in the sepulchers of the past, or distributed to the warring elements of heaven. In no country has litrature ever been so magical or vehement as in this our land of liberty. Not a hundred years have yet circled and passed away since the joyous peals of freedom resounded through America and ascended in volumes, like the fumes of incense. The sun of many a genius might have set, at her dawning stained by no inglorious blood of the great Revolution. There was no rest for the mind save when fanned by the gentle wings of sleep; no relaxation of the body except when leaning upon the musket or bending over the sword in its scabbard: But, so soon as strife and commotion passed away the unsatiated thirst began to be appeased by deep draughts from the "Pierian Spring."

Washington Irving leads the host, and is clothed with all the royalty, and receives all the reverence due to one of the first writers of America. He is one of the most ancient, as well as, the most renowned of our authors.—He still treads the walks of life, leaving footprints upon time and immortality; and proudly would avaricious England rob us of him, as her own, because he has spent years on her shores, and she thinks he has there supplied his inspiration. But living is ours and he shall not be taken away.

Prescot, whose life, closed with the beginning of this present year, was truly one of the foremost men of his time, and his death the greatest stroke American literature has ever sustained. Our Republic in its infancy has produced an Historian, whose fame ranks with that of Hume and Gibbon. He has left monuments complete, that will ever elicit the admiration of the good and the great, and one "The Reign of Philip the Second," the last upon which his skill was bestowed, that indicates how ruthless is the hand of death, and how uncertain is its visitation. It hailed him in death, and bore him off in the flash of an instant. May his greatness on earth, be but an imperfect type of his glory in heaven.

Among our poets, Longfellow ranks highest, but he stands not alone. Bryant and Willis are in close companionship to him.—They are wreathing fresh garlands of laurels to crown their brows not only from the merits of their works, but also from those who love to cherish the first born of their native land. They are lavishly sprinkling the seeds of knowledge into the bosom of a fertile soil which many days hence will yield an abundant reward.

In fiction our authors are quite numerous, and shouldnot be overlooked, simply, because, they are not dealers in reality: for England has her Bulwer and doubtless feels proud of him: why then should not America, yet so young, rejoice in her Mrs. Hentz and Mrs. Southworth? So long as fiction is held in repute, so long will their names live.

The cultivation of literature in America, should then be the object of the tenderest care to those who sit beneath her banner and experience the thrills of heavenly emotion, suffused by her gentle impulse. The more we give, the more we will receive: for it is the promulgation of a light that will shine upon the great and small, the rich and poor, without sense of partiality or regard of gratitude. BLANCHE.

ITALY.—The Philadelphia Inquirer groups together some fact in regard to Italy, which its present political condition renders of unusual interest. The peninsular projects into the Mediterranean from Switzerland and the Tyrol southwards, about 650 miles—in breadth differing from 30 to 400 miles. Commencing at the northwest, there is the kingdom of Sardinia, with a surface of 28,850 square miles, and population of about 5,500,000. The capital, Turin, has 100,000 inhabitants, and the population generally throughout the kingdom number 172 to the square mile. Religion Catholic; yet about 22,000 Waldenses (Protestants) live in the northern valleys of Piedmont (Sardinia). The revenue is $2,500,000, of which $25,000 are derived from the Island of Sardinia. The army has 100,000 men, navy 12 ships. The government is a limited monarchy, the king, Victor Emanuel II, being aided by two Parliamentary Chambers elected by the people. Eastward are the old State of Lombardy and Venice, containing 17,511 square miles and 5,000,000 of inhabitants, being 276 to the square mile. These are now Austrian Provinces—the iron-crowned kingdom of Lombardy being no more, and the Republic, or rather oligarchy of Venice having passed away. Thence southward, we reach the two small Duchies of Parma and Modena, the former containing 500,000 inhabitants, and the latter 600,000. Both are absolute sovereignties—Robert being Duke of Parma, and Francis V. of Modena. South of Modena, there is Grand Duchy of [illegible] square miles of territory, and [illegible] people. The government is that of absolute monarchy, and the present Grand Duke is Leopold II—under Austrian influence. His revenue is $1,500,000—army, 30,000; navy, 5 ships.—The capital, Florence, has 80,000 inhabitants. The port, Leghorn, has a population of 80,000 souls. Thence extending from the Austrian Province of Venice in Northern Italy, southward to the Kingdom of Naples, and with one sea coast on the Mediterranean, and another on the Adriatic, we have the "States of the Church," governed by the Pope, whose capital and other towns are now garrisoned by French and Austrian troops. Extent of territory, seventeen thousand square miles, population three millions, army seventeen thousand men, public debt thirty-four millions of dollars. The population of the city of Rome is 200,000.—Naples, or the "Two Sicilies," governed by the tyrant Bomba, comprehends all Southern Italy and the great island of Sicily; extent of territory forty-one thousand square miles; population nine millions; army fifty thousand men; navy sixty ships and steamers. The population of the capital, Naples is 420,000. In the midst of these monarchies and despotisms, is the little Republic, San Marino, with twenty-two square miles of territory, and seven thousand six hundred people, which has existed for thirteen hundred years under the protection of the Pope.—There is also the small Principality of Monaco, with fifty square miles and seven thousand people. The whole population of Italy is about twenty-five miles. It is in the now Austrian provinces of Lombardy and Venice that revolt and revolution are imminent.—Richmond Dispatch.

SUPPORT YOUR MECHANICS.—There is scarcely anything which tends more to the improvement of a town, than a fair and liberal support afforded mechanics of every description. Population is necessary to the prosperity of the town and country, and that population being of an honest and industrious character, renders prosperity more certain, uniform and unvarying. Scarcely has any place ever risen to much importance, even when possessed of the utmost commercial advantages, without a due regard to the encouragement of the mechanical arts. For, though the exportation of merchandise may form leading features of such a place, the various arts of mechanism are invariably called into requisition, and are indispensable to render the progress of commercial operations safe and easy.—To an inland town, mechanics are equally important as elsewhere. They constitute a large and respectable portion of society in all countries; but in our towns and villages they are almost a leading constituent part of their growth and population. To afford ample support to a class of citizens so highly us ful and necessary, is certainly the duty of those engaged in other pursuits.

Revolutionary Relics.—Mr. T. J. Headly is publishing in a weekly religious paper, "The Diary of a Chaplain in the army of the Revolution." From it we extract the following:

"At the battle of Banker Hill, as the British were advancing through Charlestown to the attack, a soldier entered a house where the husband lay sick. His wife was young and beautiful, and hearing the soldier in the next room, went out to meet him. He immediately addressed insulting proposals to her. Being angrily repulsed, he attempted violence, when her screams arouse her sick husband from his bed Nerved with the sudden excitement he leaped up, and seeing his wife struggling in the arms of a British soldier ran him through the body. The soldier fell back on the floor, and as his eyes met those of his destroyer; he shrieked out, "my brother." The recognition was mutual, and with the exclamation, "I have murdered my brother," the overexcited invalid husband fell dead on the corps. These unhappy brothers were Scotchmen. One had emigrated to America several years before, the other had joined the English army, and, after a long separation, thus met to perish together."

MRS. CUNNINGHAM AGAIN.—The New York Evening Post recently brought this notorious woman to light, and in no enviable either, in the course of a series of papers under the general title of "Matrimonial Brokerage in the Metropolis."—Mrs. C. stoutly denied the statement and threatened to sue the Post for libel. The editors thus challenged, reiterated the allegation of the truth of the said articles, and substantiated them by affidavit of two of their reporters. The following are the main facts in case. By the advice of the editor, Mr. Hills, a reporter, was induced to examine the nature of the Matrimonial Traps of New York. He did his work thoroughly, and while pursuing it he was introduced to Mrs. Cunningham as a very agreeable widow. He knew her well, and managed to have three interviews. At the third one she proposed to make a punch for him to cure his cold, and she was anxious that he should meet her at a private room, which was declined. From the circumstances he judged that she wished to rob him, and he was twice forcibly detained when he tried to leave the house, outside of which he had taken the precaution to station Mr. Marsh, another reporter, who testifies that he, knowing her, saw Mrs. Cunningham go into the house and follow'd her when she left it to a house in White-street, toward West Broadway. The identification of the woman was complete, and it is quite evident that she is continuing the games at which she is an adept.

The correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer, noticing these facts, adds the following:

I may as well say now what has been said before, that prior to the trial of Mrs Cunningham for the murder of Dr. Harvey Burdell, the District Attorney here had a keen detective engaged in seeking her history. It was very voluminous, and disclosed a life that caused the prosecuting officer to use that powerfully vituperative speech with which he opened the case. Of course he could not tell what he knew, as it could not be introduced as testimony, but I am informed that a remarkable history of the woman is in existence. As from the evidence now brought forward it is apparent that the woman has still the same activity that has characterized her through life, it is reasonable to believe that she will continue till she is at last overtaken in some shame that will close her eventful life. The affidavits in the Evening Post show her to be the same desperate and [illegible] as shown on her trial.

A CAR ROLLING DOWN HILL SIDEWAYS WITH PASSENGERS AND A RED HOT STOVE.—We learn from the Rochester (N. Y.) Democrat the particulars of an accident which occurred on the William-port and Elmira Railroad, on Friday last. Some fifteen miles below the former place the train passed over a broken rail, while running on a curve dug into the side of the mountain. On the left was a precipitous declivity of seventy-five feet to the river. The engine and baggage went over the gap, and kept the track; but the first passenger-car, in which were Col Paine, the Postmaster of Rochester, and seven other gentlemen; uncoupled both in front and rear, left the track, and started down the precipice. It turned once and a half in going twice its length, and then brought up against some rocks, with the passengers and all the fixtures in it, including the stove, in a promiscuous pile at the lower end.

Colonel Paine writes that he clung to his seat, and in all the leaping and rolling of the car, never let go his hold. Seeing the hot stove coming down the aisle toward him, he checked it with his foot, and prevented it from striking those below with as much violence as it would otherwise have done. The car took fire before any of the passengers could extricate themselves, but they finally broke through the windows and made their escape.

A BLACK REPUBLICAN PRESDIENT

"The question is, shall the achievemen be reserved for a black republican administration?",

Such are the ominous words with which the Washington States closes an able and searching article on the retrenchment of Federal expenditures—an article which exposes the fact and evils of extravagance with a boldness and vigor which invokes the genius of "Macon and the men of his school" to reform the abuses of these evil days—discards with a just severity the plans of the protectionists—exalts the benefits of governmental economy and purity, and specifies the reforms in the expenditures of the Postoffice, War Naval Interiror. Treasury & State Departments which would reduce the demands of the government very nearly to the just estimate of $40,000,000, which Mr. Stephens recently declared, in the cause of democratic representatives, "an abundance, for the national expense"—an opinion which Mr. Stephens demonstrated to be true, by a statement of fact full of eulogy upon Mr. Polk's administration that "the country had gone though the expensive Mexican War, with sixty-three thousands soldiers in the field, for fifty-three millions and now in time of peace the estimates were seventy-three millions.

But our present object is not to pursue an investigation into Federal finances. A graver subject is suggestad by the extract which we have placed at the head of this article. It is simply and tremendously whether "black republican administration" shall ever be installed in the Federal capital.

Once there, and invested with the power of the national purse and sword, supported by congressional majorities, and cheered on in its black and bloody work by the fanatical masses at the North, which clamor for the advent of the Rochester millenium, we shall fear no "glory" it will ever achieve in the work of retrenchment or any other good & commendable work. The overwhelming disasters to the people and States of this Republic which such an administration would entail upon them, would sink all questions of finance into insignificance.

We are not now considering whether such an administration could be installed in Washington city—whether the election of a black republican President would or ought to result in immediate revolution a total and final separation of the slave holding States from the quick and poisonous body of abolitionism; but how simultaneously and thoroughly its peaceful and successful installation would revolve these confederated State into an odious despotism, and these southern States into Celtic slavery. Instead of United States, consisting of sovereignties we would behold a Union not dissimilar but more intense, oligarchical and corrupt than the United Kingdom. Suffrage would remain as the instrument of despotism—the constitution would become a huge armory of destructive weapons its foundations secure in absolutism; its limitations torn loose from the arm of the majority power; its sacred altars profaned by the blood of its very priesthood.

Union men as we are, and determined to stand by the covenant of our fathers or fall in its defence against all sectional attacks upon it, from whatever quarter we confess that the accession of black republicanism to the departments of this government would leave us no hope for the future, and no alternative but the dire necessity of summoning all our resources to maintain an existence rendered valueless in a Union whose badges would be the banners of death and whose dissolution would become the condition of life and liberty to our proscribed section. In a question of Union or Disunion we are for the Union. Whenever it becomes a question of life or death, we shall elect to live freeman, or die attesting the dignity and glory of our revolutionary ancestry. Murder and Suicide in Hartford.—A horrible murder was committed in Hartford, on Sunday. Some weeks since, Mrs. Colson obtained a divorce from her husband, Christophe. C. Colson, on the ground of cruelty and habitual drunkenness. The Hartford Times says,

Since then, Colson has been very bitter toward her, and has threatened to injure her, and watched for her at various places where he supposed she might be found. He has also threatened personal violence to her mother and sister. For this purpose, it is supposed, he has kept on their track for sometime past, and on Saturday he went to Brainerd's fish market and looked at the fish knives. After examining them, he said they were dull and ought to be sharpened up. Mr. Brainerd told him they would go and sharpen them the next day.—He took one of the knives and remarked, «I am going to take this one and grind it myself." He went to James Weeks', on the corner of Commerce and Ferry-streets, and asked him if he might grind there. Mr. Weeks told him he might, and Colson then got Levi Welles, who was present, to turn the grindstone for him. He ground the knife on both sides. Mr. Welles asked him what he was going to butcher with that knife. He replied, «I am going to dress shad." He then asked Mr. Welles for the oil-stone, and after sharpening the knife on the oil-stone, he put the knife in his pocket and went out.

On Sunday, about 1 P. M., Colson came to the house of his brother, where his wife was, approached the deceased, and said he wanted to talk with her.—She retreated from him; he caught her by the dress, drew his hand from below him, and at once plunged a knife into her throat. The woman fell, and died in a very short time. Colson went to the street, and as he walked along took some opium, which he dropped at a saloon for a drink, and was soon after arrested and imprisoned. The knife with which he committed the murder he left on the floor. Colson was about forty five years of age. The deceased was about thirty two. They had three sons, the oldest about sixteen, and the youngest eight years. Two of them resided in Hartford. The second son is living in Westfield, Mass. On Monday afternoon Colson died in prison.—His death was caused by the opium he had taken; combined with the sudden stoppage of his liquor. Thus the Hartford tragedy ended.

A LUMP OF GOLD.—A lump of gold, weighing forty-five ounces, and worth $775, was taken out on Sunday, December 15th, from Meehan & Co.'s claim, in Illinois Canon, just above Picker's Flat, Sierra county, California. We have known amounts of gold, not in quartz lump, but in hard dollars drawn out of some of our places nearer home, of a much larger figure.

A few weeks since, a gentleman in St Louis dug up $30,000; another, in Philadelphia, the same sum; another in New York, $20,000; and many others could be mentioned. The mine from which these large amounts were taken was the celebrated Lotteries of Wood, Eddy & Co., Wilmington, Del., and Augusta, Ga. By sending a $10, 80, or $22, to their address at either place, you secure an interest in a claim that has yielded a better return the past year, to speculators than Pike's Peak, or many other celebrated gold mines.—N. Y. Leader.

Additional by the Europa.

Paris is teeming with pamphlets about the war. The last pamphlet on the subject is from the pen of the celebrated M. de Girardin. La Guerre shows sardinia at the head of confederated Italy by the arms of France, would never do—it would be a paltry war.—"How would you settle Italy," he asks his country-men, "when you have driven out the Germans? Would you keep up the reigning Princes? Would you place the Pope at the head of a Confederation? But in both cases, you offend the liberal party, who look on the Papacy as the inspiration and the Princes as the tools of the Austrian Court.—And how would you compensate Austria in order to reconcile her to a cession of territory without years of war?—You could not give her the Principalities, which you have just constituted as a State; you could not give life to one nationality by the destruction of another."

M. de Girardin is in favor of a war which will avenge Waterloo, which will give to France her lost frontiers, which will place Europe in equilibrium, which will put an end to the burdensome charges of an armed peace—a war which will cause reciprocity to succeed in rivalry—a war undertaken, not in the view of nationality, but of unity—a logical war, which may leave conquerors and conquered, but not oppressors and oppressed—a war which will abolish the feudality of the seas by the neutrality of the Straits—a war in which force should be at the service of ideas;—in a word, let it be the last convulsion of the Old World, "expiring and giving place to the New World, announced by the captive of St. Helena and the prisoner of Ham." All this is to be affected by a union of France and Russia, and the result of the war would be the partition of Europe into two Empires—that of the East and West, as announced by M. de Persigny as far back as 1834. This pamphlet, which has been met with mingled ridicule and banter in England, appears to have tickled the fancy of the Parisians.

The French paper La Presse has been "noticed" on account of an article "on the hopes of Italy." The general tenor of this article is said to be in precisely the strain that La Presse has adopted for the last six months. It is also affirmed that the notice has been given on the representation of the Austrian Ambassador. The following passage may be taken as an index to the tone of La Presse: "Italy does not rely on her own unaided efforts to throw off the yoke of her oppressors; she invokes the co-operation of generous nations. Ought we not to welcome with gratitude the opportunity of putting a term to the anxiety which torments Europe?" &c. It is said the Austrian Ambassador threatened to demand his passports if some satisfaction were not given for these assertions, and that, consequently, in opposition to the opinion of Prince Napoleon, and several members of the Council, notice was given. Military preparations have not in any way abated. The army of Lyons is ordered to be put on a war footing without delay.

It is stated that Austria is by no means inclined for war, her preparations being purely defensive, and one journal adds that 1000 guns of the heaviest calibre are to be cast this year. The Austrian Journals have received instructions to moderate their tone with regard to France. In Vienna great despondency is said to prevail owing to the prevalent conviction that Louis Napoleon is determined to quarrel with them, and that if one means fails he will seek another. To strengthen her position Austria is said to have concluded treaties with the second-rate German powers, such treaties to come into operation in the event of the theatre of war being removed from Italy Prussia has now the reputation of holding in her hand the key to the future of Europe, and if, as it is said, upon her decision will rest the question of peace or war, there can be little doubt that she will throw her influence into the lap of Austria.

We take the following Editorial notice from a late number of the Savannah Daily News, and would refer our readers to the advertisement of McKinney & Co's, in another column.

The Georgia State Lottory, of McKinney & Co's., draws this evening. The scheme is a very attractive one indeed. In fact, so are all their schemes for the months of March and April. It will be observed that this Lottery draws on each Saturday in every month. The offer to the public, as set forth in their schemes, is very liberal indeed—none more so.

Those who desire to court the fickle dame Fortune, have a firstrate opportunity offarded them by the Georgia State Lottery, managed by McKinney & Co. We are informed that this concern is strong and that it is doing a large business on the most liberal terms. It will be recollected that this Lottery is drawn for the benefit of the Monticello Union Academy. The Academy, it is said, by its aid and the merits of its able and learned professorships, has been placed among the most flourishing and popular schools of this State.

Sad Calamity in Forsyth County near Canning, Ga.—On last Friday night, the house of Mr. Ellis Waldrip, was entirely destroyed by fire and four children perished in the conflagration—two boys and [illegible] one was burnt off and the arm of another and all four were frightfully disfigured. Mr. and Mrs. Waldrip after getting their children asleep went out to a neighbor house on an evening visit about a quarter of a mile from home and remained about an hour, and on returning home found the house and its contents so nearly consumed by the fire, that they could save nothing, not even their children. The origin of the fire is unknown.

We learn from one who was on the ground after the burning that when the remains of the children, all Mr. Waldrip had, were gathered from the ruins, it furnished one of the most heart-rending scenes that he ever witnessed.

This sad calamity should deter parents from leaving their houses at night with none but children in possession. No doubt Mr. and Mrs. Waldrip thought all was safe but now they are childless.—Atlanta Intelligencer, 15th instant.

Chinese Sugar Cane.

A correspondence of the Farmer and Planter, "Glucose," thus speaks of the Sorghum as food:

The great value of the sorghum rests not in its syrup-making qualities, but in its being, for all animals, one of the cheapest, most delicious, and nutritious article of food; particularly during a season of the year when a scarcity prevails. The period between the small-grain harvest gleanings and the pea crop, is a very trying one; and my friend, Maj. W. S. Lyles, asserts, from carefully conducted experiments, that land planted in sorghum will pay better in food for hogs, horses, mules, and cattle, during the autumnal months, than anything else.

If a few acres of sugar cane—even on the best land a man has—will keep his stock out of his corn cribs until the pea fields are open, and start them into winter quarters in good order—fat, sleek, and contented—there is no telling its value.

For Grant's Republican.

To Mrs. B. in Heaven.

BY R. E. N.

Thou art gone, dear one;
The angels took thee from this sinful world
To that far-off, beautiful realm, where tears
And sickness are not known, & where thy cheeks
Will n'er grow pale again. 'Tis well, for thou
Wert far too pure & good for Earth!
Thy dove-like spirit now hath flown away
To amaranth bowers above the stars,
To fold its wings in peace forever:—

—But we are desolate-smitten of God!
Thou wert an angel in our pathway, a
Beautiful fugative from Paradise,
Permitted by the Maker of Flowers
To stay in our midst a little season,
Then taken away in all thy gentle
Loveliness, leaving us to muse o'er thy Transit from Earth to Heaven, till we could Almost wish ourselves now where thou art.

Dear, sainted one!
If thou canst yet traverse this Earth, and list
To the low moan of anguish as it comes
Gurgling up from the bleeding heart, I pray
That thou mayest rest like a tired bird
Upon my bosom, and read the record of
Its sorrows. I would not make thee sad—
Indeed I know that thou art blest;
But I would have thee know, my dear dead wife,
How I have mourn'd thy absence, and how I
Oft have wept upon thy grave, & lingered
With the sacred dust till the sun had set,
And night's baptism of dew came down like
Angel tears to soothe the brow, when the Storm of agony has passed, & the pale
Lips would move no more in prayer.

"'Tis weak," the hollow world will say,
To grieve so much. 'Tis even so; my strength
Is all in love!—the love I bear for thee
All absent as thou art.

The cherub babe that thou didst leave me here,
My all this side the portals of the grave,
Is thy exact image, & I must live
For it, else I could wish myself a grave
Beside that lonely one of thine, for I
Am weary, and would love to rest.

Sleep on, sweet one;
It cannot now be long ere we shall meet.
The days will come and go, years roll away
And then the hour will fast approach when death
Shall break the last partition bars my Soul from thine!

Roll on blest hour, roll on!
Thy swift yet tardy years, and yawn, O grave,
Romorseless, greedy grave!

For the Republican.

MR. GRANT: It may be that I have published the following before now, I don't remember that I have; and if so, yet it may be new to some persons. If you think proper you may give it a place in your paper.

Things I Like, & Things I don't Like.

I like ruby a pouting lip,
It is the gem of grace
I do not like a girl that walks,
As though she run a race.

I like to see a dimple chin;
There's much expression there,
I do not like to see the neck
And shoulders, quite so bare.

I like to see a good size nose,
For it is well enough;
But I dislike to see a girl
E'en take a "Pinch" of snuff!

I like the jet or aburn hair
Which o'er the forehead flows;
I do not like to see a hole
In silk, or cotton hose.

I like a tinny plump white hand,
There's magic in the touch,
But when it's covered o'er with rings
I do not like it much.

I like to see a woman have
Some piety with all,
But do not like to hear each day
A loud incessent bawl.

I like to see things in their place
And would 'twer better known
Where lovely woman's place should be!
It is to stay at home.

Not always should she be at home,
Yet in her time and space,
Man too, has something to do in space.

THE BOWELS & THEIR FUNCTIONS.

As perfect health is the greatest blessing that we can enjoy, without which all other blessings are of little consequence, we deem it of great importance to point out the way for you to enjoy it. The bowels must be kept in a state by which they are enabled to carry off the useless matter; they are the main channel which nature has appointed to carry everything that is unnecessary.—And it is impossible to tell what a large amount of sickness has been caused by constipation, or costiveness; in other words, by not keeping the bowels regular; it is the main road to all diseases: it is the cause of unnatural irritation to the mucous, or lining membrances of the bowels. Having lost their natural strength, they cannot object to what is required of them. Hence, the bowels become inflamed, and unless you find a speedy relief, a thousand other complaints are ever ready to drag you through a miserable and wretched life. Such medicines must be given as will cleanse the stomach and bowels, and restore their natural strength. To accomplish this there is no compound so valuable as these Pills; all other medicines sink to utter insignificance when compared to them; it seems as though the Author of Nature had designed them for this as well as other complaints. From two to five Pills a day will increase strength and appetite, & cleanse the stomach and intestines from whatever is injurious.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are sold by all dealers in Medicines.

Editors and Printers.

GOV. PACKER, of Pennsylvania, was recently invited to take a seat in an editorial convention at Harrisburg, when he made the following speech:

Mr. President and Brother Editors: Your worthy President has done me too much honor, certainly. When I was invited to take a seat among my brother editors—for I am proud to call myself still an editor, although it is a long time, some fifteen years, since I have had anything to do with the publication of a newspaper—I did not expect to be thus specially honored. Nearly forty years ago, I entered a printing office, when I was a small boy. I went through all the grades, from the lowest printer's apprentice, to that of the conductor of a public journal, and I published a paper for some fifteen or twenty years. I certainly did not distinguish myself as an editer, as my friend on my left has done, although I believe he never was a practical printer.

The President.—I never had that honor, and I am sorry that I had not.

GOV. PACKER—Brother Editors: It is the highest honor that has ever been conferred upon me, and I look back to it with pleasure. I passed through the poor boy's college, in making my way through life. My first place was that in which many of the editors here present have made their first appearance. Printers and editors have a right to be proud of their art. I need not say to you, my fellow citizens, that I did not come here to make a speech, because you will learn that before I am through Printers, I say, have a right to be proud of their art. Cast your eyes back for a few centuries, when there were no printers, and you will find that the whole world was enveloped in darkness, and that to be a poor man was to be a serf and a slave. Now, civilization, and the arts and sciences, march behind the printing press.—Wherever you send your army, the most potent machine that goes with that army, more formidable than the cannon more terrible than the sword, is the printing press that is carried with it; every platoon contains a printer, and in every battle that has been fought on this continent, the printers have not only done their part with the sword, but with the printing press; and to-day, the printing press is most feared by the tyrants of this world—for it is the tyrant's foe and the people's friend. The printing press is more feared this day, among the old rotten aristocracy of Europe, than all the armies of the world.—What is it that Louis Napoleon most fears? If two hundred thousand resolute soldiers were to appear at Paris to-morrow, they would not alarm him half so much as the news that two hundred thousand newspapers, containing the true record of his government, had been circulated within the city of Paris.—Only four hundred years ago there was no printing presses. Contrast that period with the present, and see the advancement that has been made in all the elements of greatness. How do you account for it? Do you think at this day there is more patriotism, that the country is more enlightened since the invention of the printing press? Certainly not; it is that the sheets that come from off the toiling printing presses enlighten the world; and in enlightening the millions, you promote their welfare and comfort.

Mr. President: I do not come, as I said before, to make a speech I thank my brother editors for doing me the honor of inviting me here—I thank you from the bottom of my heart. Whatever affects the printer, affects me, for I feel myself a printer. Whatever affects an editor, affects me, for I have been myself an editor. I again thank you, gentlemen, for the honor you have conferred on me.

P. M.

We have but little confidence in the trumpet tongued statements of the proprietors of advertised medicines generally, but we are forced to concur in the opinion, uniformly expressed by all who have used Perry Davis' Pain Killer, that it is a very valuable article, and one that it would be well for every householder to have at hand, in case of bruises, scalds, burns, diarrhea, dysentery, cholera, fever and ague, and the host of diseases, external and internal, which it is adapted to cure or alleviate. No article of medicine ever attained to such unbounded popularity and extensive diffusion. Invented only sixteen years since, its curative powers have been experienced by many, many thousands in every section of the united States and Canada. It has penetrated to every part, even the most remote of the known world, bearing with it its healing influences more potent than those of the species of "Araby the blessed." We are informed by our principal druggists, that they sell more of this article for exportation than of any or all others, and that the demand is constantly increasing.—Salem Observer.

The Stain on linen from the use of the Pain Killer is easily removed by washing in alcohol.

Pain Killer.—We are willing to vouch for the efficacy of Perry Davis, Pain Killer notices of which have appeared in this paper for nearly a year past: We have bought it for our own use and having [illegible] this voluntary testimony to it.—Bellows Falls Times.

Listen!!!

COLLECTIONS this season have not equalled my expectations. The crop of cotton was large, prices good, and funds comparatively, abundant. Consequently, I expected much. True, some have done well: others, nothing. To the latter I would suggest, "that now is the time." 'Tis much more easy to make payment now, than it was last season, or, than it may be next. Is it not wise then, to improve this "Golden" opportunity, and while money is cheap, to extinguish old liabilities?

I am anxious to collect my old debts. From those who have done nothing, or but little yet, I shall expect liberal payments in March.

THE LIVER

INVIGORATOR!

PREPARED BY DR. SANFORD.

COMPOUNDED entirely from GUMS, IS ONE OF THE BEST PURGATIVE and Liver Medicines now before the public, that acts as a Cathartic. It is not only a Cathartic, but a Liver remedy, acting first on the Liver to eject its morbid matter, then on the stomach and bowels to carry off that matter, thus accomplishing two purposes effectually, without any of the painful feelings experienced in the operations of most Cathartics. It strengthens the system at the same time that it purges it; and when taken daily in moderate doses, will strengthen and build it up with unusual rapidity.

The Liver is one of the principal regulators of the human body; and when it performs its functions well, the powers of the system are fully developed. The stomach is almost entirely dependent on the Liver for the proper performance of its functions; when the stomach is at fault, and the bowels are whole system suffers in consequence of one or the other having ceased to do its duty. For the disease of that organ, the proprietors has made it his study, in a practice of more than twenty years, to find some remedy wherewith to counteract the many derangements to which it is liable.

To prove that this remedy is at last found, any person troubled with liver complaint, in any of its forms, has but to try a bottle, and conviction is certain.

These Gums remove all morbid or bad matter from the system, purifying the blood, giving their place a healthy action to the whole machinery of the stomach, bowels, digest well, purifying the whole machine—cause of the disease rejuvenate and health to it by removing the cure.

Billious attacks are cured, and what is better, prevented by the occasional use of the LIVER INVIGORATOR.

One dose after eating is sufficient to relieve the stomach & prevent the food from rising & souring.

Only one dose taken before retiring, prevents Nightmare.

Only one dose taken at night, loosens the bowels gently, and cures Costiveness.

One dose taken after each meal will cure Dyspepsia.

☞One dose of two teaspoonfuls will always relieve Sick Headache.

One bottle taken for female obstruction removes the cause of the disease, and makes a perfect cure.

Only one dose immediately relieves Cholic, while one dose often repeated is a sure cure for Cholera Morbus, and a preventive of Cholera.

☞Only one bottle is needed to throw out of the system the effects of medicine after a long sickness.

☞One bottle taken for Jaundice removes all sallowness or unnatural color from the skin.

One dose taken a short time before eating gives vigor to the appetite, and makes food digest well.

One dose often repeated cures Chronic Diarrhœa in its worst forms, while Summer and Bowel complaints yield almost to the first dose.

One or two doses cures attacks caused by Worms in Children: there is no surer, safer, or speedier remedy in the world, as it never fails.

☞A few bottles cures Dropsy, by exciting the absorbents.

We take pleasure in recommending this medicine as a preventive for Fever & Ague, Chill Fever, and all Fevers of a Bilious TYPE. It operates with certainty, & thousands are willing to testify to its wonderful virtues.

ALL WHO USE IT ARE GIVING THEIR UNANIMOUS TESTIMONY IN ITS FAVOR.

MIX WATER IN THE MOUTH WITH THE INVIGORATOR, AND SWALLOW BOTH TOGETHER.

The Liver Invigorator

IS A SCIENTIFIC MEDICAL DISCOVERY, and is daily working cures, almost too great to believe. It cures as if by magic, even the first dose giving benefit, and seldom more than one bottle is required to cure any kind of Liver Complaint, from the worst Jaundice or Dyspepsia to a common Headache, all of which are the result of a Diseased Liver.

DR MORSE'S.

INDIAN ROOT PILLS.

DR. MORSE, the inventor of Morse's Indian Root Pills, has spent the greater part of his life in travelling, having visited Europe, Asia, Africa as well as North America—has spent three years among the Indians of our Western country—it was in this way that the Indian Root Pills were first discovered. Dr. Morse was the first man to establish the fact that all diseases arise from IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD—that our strength, health and life depended upon this vital flood.

When the various passages become clogged and do not act in perfect harmony with the different functions of the body, the blood loses its action becomes thick, corrupted and diseased; thus causing all pains sickness and distress of every name; our strength is exhausted our health we are deprived of, and if nature is not assisted in throwing off the stagnant humors, the blood will become choked and cease to act, and thus our light of life will forever be blown out. How important then that we should keep the various passages of the body free and open. And how pleasant to us that we have it in our power to put a medicine in your reach, namely, Morse's Indian Root Pills, manufactured from plants and roots which grow around the mountaneos cliffs in Nature's garden, for the health and recovery of diseased man. One of the roots from which these Pills are made is a Sudorific, which opens the pores of the skin, and assists Nature in throwing out the finer passage parts of the corrupion within. The second is a plant which is an Expectorant, that opens and anclog- the passage to the lungs, and thus, in osoothing manner performs its duty by throwing off phlegm, and other humors from the lungs by copious spitting. The third is a Diuretic, which gives ease and double strength to the kidneys, thus encouraged, they draw large amounts of impurity from the blood, which is then thrown out bountifully by the urinary, or water passage, and which could not have been discharged in any other way. The fourth is a Cathartic, and accompanies the other properties of the Pills while engaged in purifying the blood, the coarser particles of impurity which cannot pass by the outlets are thus taken up and conveyed off in great quantities by the bowels.

From the above, it is shown that Dr. Morses Indian Root Pills not only enter the stomach, become united with the blood, for they find way to every part, and completely rout out and cleanse the system from all impurity and the life of the body, which is the blood becomes perfectly healthy, consequently all sickness and pain is driven from the system for they cannot remain when the body becomes so pure and clear.

The reason why people are so distressed when sick, and why so many die, is because they do not get a medicine which will pass to the afflicted parts, and which will open the natural passages for the disease to be cast out hence, a large quantity of food and other matter is lodged and the stomach and intestines are literally overflowing with the corrupted mass; thus undergoing disagreeable fermentation, constantly mixing with the blood, which throws the corrupted matter through every vein and artery, until life is taken from the body by disease, Dr. Morse's Pills have added to themselves victory, upon victory, by restoring millions of the sick to blooming health and happiness. Yes, thousands who have been racked or tormented with sickness pain and anguish, and whose feeble frames have been scorched by the burning elements of raging fever, and who have been brought as it were, within a silent step of the silent grave, now stand ready to testify that they would have been numbered with the dead, had it not been for this great and wonderful medicine, Morses Indian Root Pills. After one or two doses had been taken, they were astonished, and absolutely surprised, in witnessing their charming effects. Not only do they give immediate ease and strength, and take away all sickness; pain and anguish, but they at once go to work at the foundation of the disease, which is the blood. Therefore it will be shown, especially by those who use those Pills, that they will so cleanse and purify, that disease—that deadly enemy—will take its flight, and the flush of youth and beauty will again return, and the prospect of a long and happy life will cherish and brighten your days.

Cotton Cultivator.

LETTERS PATENT were granted to the undersigned, on the 6th day o July, 1858, for his improvement in Cotton Cultivators: to which he calls the attention of both Cotton and Corn Cultivators.

The plow will penetrate the ground to any required depth, and will pulverise and loosen the soil, and cut off all the weeds. It will mow close to the stalks of cotton or corn, and loosen the soil near the roots without injuring or destroying them. It does not make a furrow, or turn over the soil, but loosens it up and lets it fall back into its place again. It is peculiarly adapted to the cultivation of cotton; and one horse power is sufficient to propel it.

It is believed, as will be seen by the following certificate, that it will save 25 per cent. of labor over the best improvements, and at least 50 per cent. over the common plow.

He believes the cultivator entitled to all he claims for it, and in support of his belief, he calls the readers attention to the subjoined certificate of Messrs. Moragne and Hollingsworth, who are the only persons who have tried the Cultivator. As to its utility no more need be said—TRY IT—its BEST recommendation is ITS USE.

He offers for sale County or State rights at reasonable prices. Address.

ASBERRY SMITH,
Jan. 20, '59—6m. Jacksonville, Ala.

Gadsden, Ala., Jan. 15, 1859.

The undersigned have used the Cotton Cultivator of Asberry Smith, and we take pleasure in saying, that is a most excellent plow; superior to any we have ever used in the cultivation of cotton, & saves at least 25 per cent. in labor, over any plow we have ever tried, and from 30 to 50 per cent. over the common plow. In the cultivation of young corn it is superior to any we have tried. We take pleasure in recommending it to the public as worthy of patronage; as we believe from actual experiment, it comes fully up to all that is claimed for it.

ISAAC P. MORAGNE.
THOS. HOLLINGSWORTH.

I am personally acquainted with Isaac P. Moragne and Thos. Hollingsworth, and I have the utmost confidence in the above statement made by them.
