POETRY

THE PEN AND THE PRESS. BY JOHN CHITCHELY FRISKE.

Young Genius walked out by the mountain and streams, Entranced by the power of his own pleasant Till the silent, the wayward, the wandering thing.

But his magical eye discovered not yet, Till he dipped its bright tips in a fountain of snow.

Young Genius went forth on his rambles once more, The vast sunless caverns of earth to explore.

The Pen and the Press, best alliance combined, To soften the heart, and enlighten the mind.

And this sent them forth to the ends of the earth, Their battles for truth were triumphant in death.

Miscellaneous. Heroic Conduct of a Missouri Girl. The Sunday Times has lately given a sort of romantic history of an event which occurred in Southwestern Missouri not many years ago.

On the 4th of July, 1810, the lynchers of Jasper were all in motion, The captain of the band had made requisition for their whole force.

The company left the court house, which on the frontier, is the public hall for all sorts of meetings, and set out on their campaign at five o'clock in the morning.

As the lynchers themselves they seemed to labor under no gloomy apprehensions, as the following conversation (sworn to afterwards in open court) will show:

Time! Time is Money. If you wish your Watches to keep some call at the old stand, next door to Kain's, where you will find W. C. & A. W. BUNGAN.

human being. She is the most tender hearted woman God ever created. I wish you could have seen her weep at the death of her little spotted fawn, torn to pieces by the dogs through mistake.

Barker.—That's no sign, Parson Brady, you remember, eight one day orator his dead horse, and the next day killed Jack Counter by calling him "Old Snuffler." Tears are as great a humbug as smiles, and I would not trust either father than I could trust a blacksmith's avvil.

While the lynchers were on their way, let us anticipate their goal, and view the position of their enemy.

Immediately on the Southern bank of Spring River, embowered in the shade of a clump of grand magnolia—the only speck of timber visible in a large prairie—might be seen the log cabin of Lewis Silmore.—The spot was surrounded by palings, enclosing some half an acre or more, to which the approach was through a whitewashed gate.

The owner of the farm was a Yankee—at all events such was the general belief. He had emigrated three years previously, was poor at the period of his arrival, and acquired his property since by counterfeiting practices.

Silmore was arrested about a year before the date of the visit by the lynchers soon to be described, and brought to trial for passing spurious money to the amount of five thousand dollars.

On the 4th of July, 1810, the lynchers of Jasper were all in motion, The captain of the band had made requisition for their whole force.

right with terror. The father could not answer, but sunk down quaking to the floor.

"Then let me shoot," cried the young heroine, springing to a gun, as the savage advanced half way from the gate to the door.

"No!" articulated Silmore in tremulous tones, so faint as to be scarcely an audible whisper; and the same instant the mother and Eliza caught, startled and dismayed, with countenances rigidly prevented her from uttering a word that under the circumstances would have looked like madness; for what might the despairing bravery of a girl avail against two hundred of the most desperate lynchmen in all the backwoods?

Little time, however, was allowed for action. In a moment the door was beaten from its hinges. The avengers entered and dragged the quivering counterfeiter forth, his wife and Eliza following after, and calling out in most piteous tones in vain—"Retreat! retreat! dear friends! retreat! to the charms of music!"

"Let us hang the wretch to the first limb," shouted Captain Mays. "Hang him to the first limb!" cried the two hundred voices.

"Here is a rope," said the captain drawing a strong cord from his pocket. "Merry! merry!"

"Climb up into that magnolia, and tie one end of this to the tender swinging limb, while I bestow the other upon the villain's neck, and when I give the word, pull him up six feet—let him go off high and dry," ordered the lynchers.

Bob Mays, a brother of the captain, and another man ascended the old tree in the yard, as directed, one of them holding the rope between his teeth, while the leader proceeded to adjust the noose on the fainting victim's throat.

"Merry! merry!" Still arose that fainting cry, in shrieks dreadfully loud and shrill.

"Take away these yelling women!" said the captain, as the two females fell on their faces before him, and clasped their arms so closely about his neck, that the command was executed, and as the rule numbers bore the rule, they both screamed "merry" and Eliza added "Come, come, sister Mary, and let the captain for mercy. He once loved you so well perhaps he will hear you."

Mary turned pale and glanced his eyes towards the cabin. No one had been seen there, and the door was shut and fastened with strong wood.

"All ready!" said the executioners, perched in the magnolia, tightening the fatal cord.

"Then—" But the captain's voice was drowned in those screams for "mercy," and by sudden shock of air, more terrible still, and far more difficult to withstand.

"Bow! boom!" and heavy reports, that rattle almost together, pealed from the door of the log cabin, and had begun her work.

The commenced entrance of the captain's life. He fell to the earth, his body pierced, his head torn to pieces by bullets and lead shot, for the line had taken aim with a double-barrel gun, and had given the enemy both wounds at once.

"Bow! boom!" sounded two others, as the panic-stricken lynchmen fled away from the bloody field, besides their dead captain several others had been cast behind them in their flight.

The news of this tragedy created, as may well be conceived, a tremendous excitement, and led to the adjournment of the lynchmen in the prairie.

"Never!" exclaimed the lovely Mary. "Never run from such a band of murderers. No, dear father, defend your own house or die with you. I will help you defend it, and die with you."

In a few moments their feet were at the gate. They alighted, hitched their horses to the palings, and were in the act of entering the gate was fifty paces from the house.

"Now father, is the time to fly. Let us shoot sure and quick," said Mary, in a low and calm voice.

But Silmore was in no state of mind to heed such excellent advice. His courage had vanished in the exact ratio of the enemy's approach, until he stood pale, trembling and powerless as an infant.

sonate, living heart while fiction is forged in the cold crafty intellect. The one is wrought in figures of fire, the other in embroidery of frost-work.

The glasshopper set on the sweet potato vine. On the sweet potato vine, When the turkey gold came up behind, And yanked him off the sweet potato vine.

The rural simplicity of this little poem reminds us of some of Woodbury's happiest efforts, but we doubt whether the verses of the Lake poet, any where exhibit such compactness and roundness; or such a musical union of sound and sense.

It is not our intention to go into a critical analysis of the poem. We feel that our humble pen is not adequate to the task, but our readers will pardon us if we call attention to a few of its beauties.

The poet begins with no long invocation of the Muses, no flattering dedication, but plunges at once into the subject matter. "The glasshopper set on the sweet potato vine." What a lovely scene!

The scene is one of peace, contentment and happiness. The next line is full of solemn warning. "The Turkey Gold came up behind." The verses proceed to the denouement. The turkey is evidently the villain of the piece, else why the approbrious epithet of the golden bird, with which the author signifies him. The plot thickens, and rapidly approaches its final consummation. "And yanked him off the sweet potato vine." It is difficult at first to appreciate the force of this tremendous line. The word yanked alone expresses volumes.

We see the final grasp of the golden bird, the victim clinging to it with which he seems to hear his shrieks as he passes from the light of day into another world. The catastrophe of the poem, is indeed sublime. As an allegory, its moral is most interesting. We know of no song which the occasion in which it was sung, for we are all not graspingly sitting in fancy, while the all-consuming golden Time, is stealing up behind to snuff or later to "yank us off, or to cut away the frail vine on which we rest."

BURNING FIELDS.—Mr. E. Meriam, of Brooklyn, states that he has kept a record of deaths, injuries and emigrations, from the time of emigration, since July 22, 1850. Since that date he has recorded the deaths of three hundred and seventy persons, and the injuries of four hundred and seventy seven persons.

A MONSTER PRAYER MEETING. The Edinburgh Witness gives a very interesting account of the open air Prayer Meeting, held in the open air at Belfast, at which thousands attended.

Some idea of the interest felt, may be imagined when we state that it is computed that no fewer than fifteen thousand individuals arrived in Belfast, and that from thirty-five to forty thousand persons in all were present at the little services. The leading streets of the town presented during midday, a most remarkable aspect, particularly after the arrival of trains, and more than five hundred respectable looking people from the country, not passing along with the usual easy going air of pleasure seekers, but with a stern and solemn demeanour—the younger as well as the older, and the majority with white or henna locks in their hands, as if new converts to Sabbath services.

Thus the living stream, such a stream, poured onward for last two hours along both sides of the streets.

The Rev. John Johnson, Moderator of the General Assembly of the Irish Presbyterian Church, presided, and he was supported by the ministers of the different Protestant denominations in and around Belfast. Many were also present from Scotland.

At one time there were no less than twenty subordinated meetings, numbered each.

At the close of the general meeting, one of the ministers of the town, who was never before witnessed in Belfast, along both sides of the streets.

From the Journal of Commodore. MESSRS. EDITORS.—When a son has been wayward, and has offended his father, that can be more agreeable to the latter, than creditable to the former. In such expressions of love and affection for his misdoings are contained in the following letter?

BETHANY, VA., Aug. 1, 1850. My Dear Father—It has been a long time since I received a letter from you, and I thought a painful recollection of the thoughts about me, which appeared to be on your mind some time ago. I feel that you must be offended with me, and that I cannot seek to soothe your kind forgiveness of what you or error, either of judgment or speech, it may appear to you to have committed. It is impossible for me to desire to offend you, and when you have been made conscious of having caused you pain, I have felt as if a permanent separation had fallen upon me; I pray you, then, to forgive me, for my heart is exceedingly oppressed, and I do sincerely repent of having done or said any thing that displeases you. If it were possible for me to realize the brightest prospects that ever one enjoyed, I should yet be sorry to "vanish" from the love and confidence of my father. Without these, abundance is hardly worth the "hopes that the spirit did not" and though I might be in the midst of riches and friends, yet must I feel like the poor proscriber in far country, that "perish with hunger." Besides, though I am young in years, I have experienced already what the aged call sorrow, and the disappointment, and if my father's friendship, which has done me, whether can I look for encouragement and help, when health and friends and ambition are gone, and I drop, a "broken reed?" No, father, forgive me, and if I have been hard-headed, and, in spite of good council and warning, have turned aside to folly, I will try not to do so more!

Gossip about the interview of the Emperor Napoleon with the Emperor Francis Joseph, at Vienna, about thirteen or fourteen days ago, and distinguished himself at Montebello, Magenta and Solferino, that he got the Cross of Maria Theresa.

The Prince, who was already acquainted with the Emperor Napoleon, was extremely well received by his Majesty, who graciously told him that he "ardently wished" for peace. In the course of conversation the French monarch expressed a desire to have an interview with his Imperial adversary, "whose personal acquaintance he estimated as upwards of one million of dollars." Mr. Meriam says that when the weather becomes hot, in summer, the danger in the use of burning fluids will increase.

The short term of thirty-six days, the death of nine persons by emphysema and burning fluid.

RICHARDSON'S
IRISH LINENS,
DAMASKS, DIAPERS, &c.
CONSUMERS OF RICHARDSON'S LIN-ENS, and those desirous of obtaining the GENUINE GOODS, should see that the ar-

name of the firm,
RICHARDSON, SONS & OWDEN,
as a guarantee of the soundness and duabi-lity of the Goods.
This caution is rendered essentially necessary, as large quantities of inferior and dissimilar Linens are prepared; season after season and sealed with the name of RICHARDSON passing off as the goods of the firm, and thus inflicting alike on the American consumer and the manufacturer of the genuine Goods, the loss of a business so profitable to the latter while purchasers can be imposed on with Goods of a worthless character.

POETRY.
[Prepared for the "Constitution"]
EDEN IS MY HOME.
Oh! I have roamed through many lands,
A stranger to delight;
Not Friendship's hopes, nor love's sweet smiles,
Could make my pathway bright,
Till on the sky a star arose,
And lit my heart's sable dome.
Oh! sweet my home, that sweet star,
For Eden is my home.

Oh! Eden is my place of rest,
I long to reach thy shore,
To shake these troubles from my breast,
And weep and sigh no more;
To that fair land my spirit flies,
And angels bid me come—
Oh! steer my bark o'er Jordan's wave,
For Eden is my home.

Oh! take me from this world of woe
To my sweet home above,
Where tears of sorrow never flow,
And all the air is love;
My sister spirits wait for me,
And Jesus bids me come—
Oh! steer my bark to that bright land,
For Eden is my home.

For the New Orleans Pleasure.
A Gem of Southern Verse.
We are indebted to Mr. Walter Morlan, of this city, for the following beautiful tribute to a Southern home, which he tells us he has written for the "Violet Home."
TO THE "VIOLET HOME"
The residence of the Messrs. Martin, Columbus.

BY CAROLINE LEE HENTZ.
Sweet violet home, the fragrant air
That round thee breathes, proclaims
The flowers that own thy guardian care,
And the white cottage names.

Rich is the violet's breath of lawn,
And fair its purple bloom;
But there's another, dearer charm,
In this sweet "Violet Home."

I love thy graceful winding chain
Of mingling flowers and shells,
But more I love the gentle twain
That in thy bosom dwells.

Dear sisters! in thy hearts there lives
A sweeter, fairer bloom,
Than decks the violet's velvet leaves,
Or gives its deep perfume.

What though the willow's bough no more
Weeps o'er the violet's bed,
May this loved blossom ne'er deplore
Its lowly home's shed.

Ne'er may the blighting wind and storm
The violet home impair,
But may the richest sunbeams warm
And beam in blessings there.

*A beautiful weeping willow waved in front of the cottage, but was destroyed by a gale.

A Few Words to our Distant Subscribers.

We send a number of papers to subscribers scattered about in Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas and other States. Each of these papers have to be separately enveloped and directed, which requires more of both labor and expense than others; and we are sorry to say that many of these subscribers whom we have implicitly trusted, at so great a distance, have not been so prompt as they ought to have been, in forwarding the subscription dues. Some of them however have been very prompt, forwarding as much as two years in advance, to whom we tender sincere thanks. We write their names always, with a cheerful confidence, that they will not accept our labor and means without remuneration, with the additional depressing sense of neglect and wrong. But to another class, some of whom are in arrears one year and some longer, we say, after giving this notice time to be responded to, if we receive nothing from them, we shall sweep their names indiscriminately from the list.

Every paper sent to a distant part of this State, or out of the State, ought to be paid for in advance, or at least within the first three or six months, and we will continue no papers in future that are not paid at least within the year.

Woodward & White

Inform your friends in today's paper, of the reception of their Fall and Winter stock of Goods.

For us to attempt any thing in the way of commendation of this long established and well favored known house, would be like attempting to paint the rose or gold refined gold. We will say however, that their stock is unusually large and select, and that they are prepared to furnish all with every variety of goods upon uniformly reasonable terms.

The particular attention of Planters is invited to their stock of Blagging & Rope, which they are selling very low. They have also received a fresh stock of choice Groceries.

Give them a call. And buy part of all.

THE SOUTHERN TEACHER, published at Montgomery and edited by Prof. W. S. Barton, comes to us this week, filled with ably written and well selected articles.

We are glad to see this periodical for the South has long felt the need of a work of this kind.

Professor Barton, who has had long and successful experience as a teacher, and is the author of a valuable series of School Books, is well qualified for the editorship of this Journal.

We trust every one feeling an interest in the great work of education, will lend a helping hand in its support. Terms, $1 per annum in advance.

False Prophecy.—For a few months past, nearly every Whig or opposition paper we open, seems to be exceedingly exercised in prophesying the speedy dissolution and downfall of the democratic party. But they are not the first false prophets which have appeared in the world; and their prophecies, like imperfect fruits, are always rotten before they are ripe. We have heard of the "wish being father to the thought;" but in this case, the wish is father to the prophecy; and the parent too of a very numerous and short lived progeny; for no sooner does one batch of such predictions prove false, than it is followed by another, their utterances being nothing daunted by frequent failures; but it is a wonder that hope so long deferred does not make them heart sick.

It is true that the democratic family has its jars, but not more serious or hard to reconcile than other families equally numerous; and it never yet has been so far irreconcilably divided, but so that it could come together again when necessary required; and never so far hindered or impeded in its progress as to prevent it from waging every honorable and just war, and concluding every advantageous peace in the history of our country. It has enlarged the "area of freedom" by the acquisition, at various times, of an empire in territory, unparalleled in fertility and mineral wealth. And from the infancy of the country, under democratic rule, with only two or three accidental intermissions, it has increased its population ten fold, and grown from a feeble nation to the fourth power of the world. It has kept in check, by its wise, firm, and steady administration of the government, the wild and furious storm of abolition fanaticism, and steered the ship of State safely through ever difficulty and danger; and is today we believe, notwithstanding all these evil predilections, stronger than at any other period of its previous history. The principles of the great national democratic party, always have and do now embody the very spirit and genius of our free institutions; and should it ever be totally destroyed, the government itself must of course go with it; but as its enemies are not likely soon if ever, to be gratified in this, we suppose they ought to be indulged, in the not very dangerous pleasure of wishing, and hoping, and predicting its ruin.

Land for Sale.—Persons who may wish to purchase a valuable tract of land are referred to the advertisement of Mr. G. C. Mattison, Adm'r. of the Estate of George Mattison, dec'd. The tract offered is large, advantageously situated on the road from Oxford to Talladega, & is one of the most valuable in the County. It will soon have the advantage of a railroad passing immediately by it.

The attention of persons who may wish to purchase goods, is invited to the advertisement of Messrs. Smith & Self. These gentlemen have had a stock of goods, purchased in New York on advantageous terms, selected with care, nearly double what they ever have before. We know they are anxious to increase their trade and business, and for this purpose will give good bargains to their customers. Not to mention other departments, we can state from personal knowledge, that their stock of Boots, Shoes and Bagnons, Hats, Caps, &c., is very large, of good quality and offered cheaper than any we have seen since. If you want to be perfectly satisfied, that they will give you good bargains just go and examine and price their goods.

Charleston Convention.—There has been for months past, a good deal of what we have considered unprofitable controversy in many democratic papers, respecting the platform to be adopted by, and probable candidates to come before the next national democratic Convention at Charleston. Some of our readers doubtless have thought it very strange that we had so little to say on the subject, & we wish here to give a reason for our course.

In the first place we do not think it good policy on the part of our democratic contemporaries, unably to press the claims of some, and disparage the claims of others, when it is supposed may be presented to the Convention. A good deal of ammunition has already been wasted in this way, and some ill feeling engendered and some of them may have a good deal to take back, or else be placed in the awkward position in which they cannot support the candidate of their party. Every one it is evident, cannot have his choice; and it is unjust to press that choice in advance upon others, or to disparage the merits of true and able demerits, whose names may not even be mentioned in the Convention.

We have no the slightest fear that the Charleston Convention will adopt a platform unpropitious to the Southern regard it as hardly a bare possibility that an individual will be nominated who could not freely and heartily support, but even if this should be the case, we shall feel free to pursue the course dictated by principle, as if we had had no years of previous controversy on the subject.

We know that our opinions or the course we might think proper to pursue is a matter of but little consequence, but we have thought that what we have said above in reference to our opinions and purposes, was due to our worthy patrons and friends.

We sincerely hope that harmony may prevail in the Convention & a spirit of compromise and concession, not to the vital principle, but relative to the claims of individuals, may prevail; the whole party North and South.

The Runners's Vision, by Mac, shall have a place in our next.

Sincerely M. H. C. G. Our first mention of this institution, we have received a copy of the Annual Announcement. From that we learn, that it was chartered in 1838, with power to the next April, and went into operation some years after. The College building and apparatus for demonstrating the various branches, have cost over forty thousand dollars. The Museum has anatomical preparations, with models and drawings, to assist in the various branches taught, and one of the finest microscopes in the United States. The Faculty then confidently offer to the student seeking a sound medical education, such as will fit him to encounter successfully the diseases of Southern latitudes, opportunities of instruction equal to those of any other institution.

OPINION IN LIVERPOOL ABOUT COTTON.—The Liverpool correspondent of the Savannah Republican, in a letter dated August 20th, thus speaks of the prospects of cotton:

Political considerations have been connected to exercise the slightest influence upon our market, and the question turns, as inevitably it will do, upon the profitable supply and demand for the coming four months. With such a stock as we hold here, the flattering accounts of your crop, and the unsatisfactory advices from India and China, I consider that our market keeps remarkably steady, and I should be surprised at it, were it not that the latter is general, that worse accounts of your crop must shortly be received, and better accounts from the important markets of the east, in answer to the peace news.

The general news is not important. We have received only the Sunday papers of the 4th inst. in which we find nothing concerning the Persia.

A Few Words to our Distant Subscribers.

We send a number of papers to subscribers scattered over Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas and other States. Each of these papers have to be separately enveloped and directed, which requires more of both labor and expense than others; and we are sorry to say that many of these subscribers, whom we have, implicitly trusted, at so great a distance, have not been so prompt as they ought to have been, in forwarding the subscription dues. Some of them however have been very prompt, forwarding as much as two years in advance, to whom we tender sincere thanks. We write their names always, with a cheerful confidence, that they will not accept our labor and means without remuneration, with the additional depressing sense of neglect and wrong. But to another class, some of whom are in arrears one year and some longer, we say after giving this notice time to be responded to, if we receive nothing from them, we shall sweep their names indiscriminately from the list.

Every paper sent to a distant part of this State, or out of the State, ought to be paid for in advance, or at least within the first three or six months, and we will continue no papers in future that are not paid at least within the year.

False Prophecies.—For a few months past, nearly every Whig or opposition paper we open, seems to be exceedingly exercised in prophesying the speedy dissolution and downfall of the democratic party. But they are not the first false prophecies which have appeared in the world; and their prophecies, like imperfect fruits, are always rotten before they are ripe. We have heard of the "wish being father to the thought;" but in this case, the wish is father to the prophecy; and the parent too of a very numerous and short lived progeny; for no sooner does one batch of such predictions prove false than it is followed by another, their utterances being nothing daunted by frequent failures; but it is a wonder that hope so long deferred does not make them heart sick.

It is true that the democratic party has its jars, but not more serious or hard to reconcile than other families equally numerous; and it never yet has been so far or irreconcilably divided, but that it could come together again when necessity required; and never so far hindered or impeded in its progress as to prevent it from veering every honorable and just war, and concluding every advantageous peace in the history of our country. It has enlarged the "arms of freedom" by the acquisition, at various times, of an empire in territory, unparalleled in fertility and general wealth. And from the infancy of the country, under democratic rule, with only two or three accidental intermissions, it has increased its population ten fold, and grown from a feeble nation to the fourth power of the world. It has kept in check, by its wise, firm, and steady administration of the government, the wild and furious storm of abolition fanaticism, and steered the ship of State safely through ever difficulty and danger; and is to-day we believe, notwithstanding all these evil predictions, stronger than at any other period of its previous history.

The principles of the great national democratic party, always have and do now embody the very spirit and genius of our free institutions; and should it ever be totally destroyed, the government itself must of course go with it; but as its enemies are not likely soon if ever, to be gratified in this, we suppose they ought to be indulged, in the not very dangerous pleasure of wishing, and hoping, and predicting its ruin.

Land for Sale.—Persons who may wish to purchase a valuable tract of land are referred to the advertisement of Mr. G. C. Mattison, Adm'r. of the Estate of George Mattison, dec'd. The tract offered is large, advantageously situated on the road from Oxford to Talladega, & is one of the most valuable in the County. It will soon have the advantage of a railroad passing immediately by it.

The attention of persons who may wish to purchase Goods, is invited to the advertisement of Messrs. Smith & Self. These gentlemen have laid in a stock of goods, purchased in New York on advantageous terms, selected with care, nearly double what they ever have before. We know they are anxious to increase their trade and business, and for this purpose will give good bargains to their customers. Not to mention other departments, we can state from personal knowledge, that their stock of Boots, Shoes and Brogans, Hats, Caps, &c., is very large, of good quality and offered cheaper than any we have seen priced. If you want to be perfectly satisfied that they will give you good bargains just go and examine and price their goods.

Charleston Convention. There has been for months past, a good deal of what we have considered unprofitable controversy in many democratic papers, respecting the platform to be adopted by, and probable candidates to come before the next national democratic Convention at Charleston. Some of our readers doubtless have thought it very strange that we had so little to say on the subject; and we wish here to give a reason for our course.

In the first place we do not think it good policy on the part of our democratic contemporaries, notably to press the claims of some, and to disparage the claims of others, whose names it is supposed may be presented to the Convention. A good deal of enmity has already been sown in this way, and some ill feeling engendered and some of them may have a good deal to take back, or else be placed in the awkward position in which they cannot support the candidate of their party. Every one it is evident, cannot have his choice; and it is unjust to press that choice in advance upon others, or to disparage the merits of true and able democrats, whose names may not even be mentioned in the Convention.

We have no the slightest fear that the Charleston Convention will adopt a platform unacceptable to the Southern regard; it has hardly a bare possibility that an individual will be nominated who could not truly and heartily support. But even if this should be the case, we should have free to pursue the course dictated by principle, as if we had indulged in years of previous controversy on the subject.

We know that our opinions or the course we might think proper to pursue is a matter of but little consequence; but have thought that what we have said above in reference to our opinions and purposes, was due to our worthy patrons and friends.

We sincerely hope that harmony may prevail in the Convention; & a spirit of compromise and concession, not as to vital principle, but relative to the claims of individuals, may prevail the whole party North and South.

The Rumors of the Vision, by Mac, shall have a place in our next.

Savannah Medical College.—Since our first mention of this institution, we have received a copy of the Annual Announcement. From this we learn that it was chartered in 1858, with powers of the most ample kind, and went into operation some years after. The College building and apparatus for disseminating the various branches, have cost over forty thousand dollars. The Museum has anatomical preparations, with models and drawings, to assist in the various branches taught, and one of the finest microscopes in the United States.

The Faculty then confidently offer to the student seeking a sound medical education, such as will fit him to encounter successfully the diseases of Southern latitudes, opportunities of instruction equal to those of any other institution.

ALABAMA.—We are rejoiced to learn that our old native State, Alabama says the Elmore (Ark) Times, has again proven true to herself and Southern Rights; has again administered a sound spanking to the unruly and refractory compositionists, by sending an entire Democratic delegation to Congress in the recent election. Every District elected a Democrat. The contest in the 2nd District was as it has been for several years animated and close.—That District has been represented the two last terms by Hon. J. F. Dowell (than whom a sounder and more talented Southern Rights man cannot be found in the State) This year Mr. Dowell retired, and David Clopton—a staunch Democrat—was nominated in his stead and has been elected by a handsome majority over Tom Judge one of the most talented Opposition speakers in the State. This is the second time Mr. Judge has been defeated in that District; and we presume, unless his faith in the charms of a third trial is unshaken he will retire to the "shades of private life."

But the result in our District in State gives us more satisfaction than that of the "bloody Seventh"; in the election of Hon. J. L. M. Curry, Sampson W. Harris—an excellent man was for several years the Representative of this District. He died in 58 and his place was supplied by Mr. Curry who has been elected for the two last terms, without opposition.—He is a young man perhaps not over thirty-five—but a man whose extraordinary talents, sound Southern Rights principles and manly straight-forward course in Congress, has endeared him to and so completely won the confidence of his constituency that it would be hard, indeed, to fill his place, and an impossibility to defeat him. This is doubtless the cause of his having no opposition. Would that the entire Southern delegation in Congress was composed of such men as the Hon. JAMES M. CURRY.

A SOUTHERN STATEMENT.—A mechanic residing in New Orleans in 1851, commenced purchasing tickets in the Alabama Lottery then first started. He continued purchasing until he had expended $25,000 without success. In 1855 he removed to Talladega, still continuing his purchases, till he had expended $25,000 in lottery tickets without drawing in lottery tickets, more than $100 during that aggregate time. In June 25, 1858, a Lottery ticket No. 47011, and drawing the capital prize of $50,000, was made by W. J. Eddy & Co., at San Francisco, California. A singular evidence of the extraordinary perseverance of N. F. Times.

FIGHT WITH INDIANS.—Fifty killed.—It has been stated that a fight occurred on the 14th ult., near Fort Mifflin, New Mexico, between Major Armstrong, with twenty-five United States troops, and fifty of the latter were killed. The Indians surrounded the troops, and were driven off, but when the soldiers were returning to the fort, made another attack. The Los Angeles Star says:

"The command had not proceeded far when the Indians again rallied, and engaged the legion at the junction of the river. The Major's force was left in great numbers. Major Armstrong, accompanied by the major, led the command, fired by the rear rank, and deployed them on the bank of the river, which was here wide and deep. The whole body of Indians were running up, cutting and whizzing, and charged fearlessly upon the command, the bravest of them coming up to within ten or fifteen yards of the muzzle of the rifles; the smoke of the steady and well directed fire of the men led them in check, when, after thirty minutes' hard fighting, Major Armstrong ordered the command to charge them, which was done fearlessly. The Indians raised and broke in every direction perfectly disorganized, not a yell or sound of any kind was to be heard; for this victory was to our Army. A number of the Indians were found dead on the spot; the general for their valor was most commendable. In fact, many of them were seen carrying the dead of our wounded to the field. It is supposed that one fifty or sixty have been killed. Of the command, three men were slightly wounded. The command returned to the fort on the evening of the 15th.

We very cheerfully give place to the following communication and feel free to say, that we have no doubt Mr. Cooper would make an able, dignified and impartial presiding officer. As stated by "Fair Play," we believe our relations to the democratic party, have been for some time, & are now, all right.

COMBINATION.—A writer in the Atlantic Monthly, of the 21st ult. truly says:—"In the opinion of Speaker of the House, it has been customary in Alabama, for several years to alternate between North & South Alabama."

Now, sir, without wishing to disparage the claims of any gentleman, from either of these sections, whose name has been suggested in connection with the honorable and responsible position of Speaker of the House, I desire to enter a protest against the longer continuance of a custom which virtually ignores the existence of such localities as East and West Alabama.

Gentlemen of enlarged legislative experience will represent both of these sections in fact, at no greater disadvantage, for years, than the present East & West Alabama, than they would be if they were chosen to represent East & West Alabama.

Allow me then, sir, to suggest the name of the Hon. THOS. B. COOPER, one of the Representatives from East Alabama, as a gentleman worthy the high position sought for others, by his friends. Mr. C. is no novice in parliamentary proceedings—he has represented the County of Cherokee before the General Assembly, and is well qualified to the chair, while his uniform correctness in his promptness in decision—his fairness and energy—all combine in declaring him eminently worthy the place of Speaker of the next House.

Mr. C. is one of those "old line whigs" who seeing the truth abandoned his old party associations—united with the democracy—a democratic Unionist—and is wholly committed to the defence of democratic principles.

Gentlemen, similarly situated, have been honored with "high places" from North and South Alabama—Give East Alabama the Speakership, in the person of the Hon. T. B. COOPER, and thus, other sections may claim that they, too, have a "fair play."

Important from Salt Lake.

We have received Salt Lake papers of the 17th ultimo. They are filled with outbreaks in the Mormon country. Superintendent Jorney reports that from the information which he has acquired in relation to the recent Indian massacre, in which six men and one woman were killed, and six men and one little girl wounded, he is led to believe that butchery was instigated by white men. Statements have been made, under oath, to the effect that white men were engaged with the Indians in the work of slaughter.

Capt. Simpson, of the Topographical Engineers, has made a report that he has explored and surveyed two new routes to California; the result of which is that there is a saving of three hundred miles over the Humboldt and St. Mary's river route.

Lloyd Pike was arrested by a Missouri named Spencer, while attending court at Salt Lake. The affair created an intense excitement there. The assassination of Frank McVey, and the murder of the late Indian, have been done by order of Brigham Young. The Mormons declare that the Gentiles elected to the Legislature shall not take their seats.

In a battle between Guy's company of dragoons and a party of Sashone Indians, the enemy was repulsed with the loss of thirty killed.

The Apache and Comanche Indians were becoming quite troublesome along the route.

GENERAL INTELLIGENCE.—A late Berne telegraph reports that the Conference at Zurich were contradictory. There was every reason to believe that the Sardinian Plenipotentiary would not affix his signature to any protocol favoring the return of the deposed Duke.

The Paris correspondent of the Times, states that private conferences continue to be held, but nothing has been accomplished, and the Conference was expected to dissolve in a few days. The choice will probably be between a general Congress or war.

LEVER'S proposition in relation to the Great Eastern had been declined. The ship would leave the Thames in a day or two.

The Liverpool correspondent of the Savannah Republican, in a letter dated August 26 h, thus speaks of the prospects of cotton:

Political considerations have ceased to exercise the slightest influence upon our market, and the question turns, as invariably it will do, upon the profitable supply and demand for the coming four months. With such a stock as we hold here, the flattering accounts of your crop, and the unsatisfactory advices from India and China, I consider that our market keeping remarkably steady, and I should be surprised at it, were it not that the belief is general, that worse accounts of your crop must shortly be received, and better accounts from the import markets of the east, in answer to the peace news. This, it is hoped by holders, will open the eyes of a Manchester, and make them keep up a heavy fire, until the stock reaches a moderate amount, when prices will be entirely governed by the course of events on your side.

BISHOP SOULE.—One of our Church papers lately contained the following: "In regard to this venerable man of God: Bishop Soule preached the funeral sermon of Sister Ferguson wife of Rev. S. H. Ferguson last he being on a visit here. His daughter is at Lebanon, N.H., at the Methodist church, Sabbath 11th, at 11 o'clock he preached in the Methodist church of the same place, on the Prudigal Son, occupying one hour and twenty minutes with his discourse. Some of his allusions to his early ministerial life the death of his colleagues, whatcott M'Kenzie George, and others were very touching. "Sixty years ago," said he, "the 5th of January last, I left my father's house to begin the work of a Methodist traveling preacher, and this day 21st, I close the 78th year of my life. He spoke with a distinctness and volume of voice sufficient to make a thousand persons hear."

There is more truth than poetry found in this verse from one of Poor's Richards Almanacs: A sabbath well spent Brings a week of content, And strength for toils of the morn; But a sabbath profaned, Whatsoever be gained, Is a sure forerunner of sorrow.

It is said in Paris that a young workman named Job a Turner in copper, has accidentally discovered a new motive power. While seeking to increase the power of the turning lathe he discovered a means whereby he has been able to construct a machine which increases two hundred fold the motive power of one man, and may be increased to an unlimited extent. A statement of this kind, at this age will require very strict demonstration, before it can be received as true.

SUICIDE.—The Savannah Republican says that a young woman named Emma Brown, committed suicide in Florida, that she a few days ago. She was tired of life, and took poison to destroy the "genecium of clay" she had served as a warning to those who would enter upon a life of dissipation and idleness. But alas! the lesson is destined to be unheeded by thousands. These frightful examples dot thickly the road of the transgressor, yet how few are deterred thereby from treading the fatal course.
