POETRY.

Days that are Gone.

BY WM N STANTON.

Many years ago, Coz, when we were very young
Your father's halls were merry with the pleasant songs we sung.
A happy crowd of little ones, we played together there,
Our hearts were beating joyfully, our steps as free as air.
The dear old porch where we would sit at twilight's gentle hour.
Our merry voices even stilled by its bewitching power;
The flowering bean that used to twine the window shutters o'er:—
The grassy bank we often sought for flowers rich and rare.
I well remember these, and all we loved so foundly there:
'Twas very long ago, Coz, and most of those who played
Amid that band of merry ones, beneath the sod are laid;
And we a thousand miles from home, in a strange land have met;
We loved each other then Coz, we love each other yet!
We both left dear ones sleeping there in that old quiet home,
And we hardly knew how much we lost, when we commenced to roam;
And tho' perhaps, to you, Coz, the thought of home may bring
A sudden tear upon your cheek than ever mine will fling:
Yet this I know my, cousin dear, now that again we've met,
The love we cherished long ago, thrills in our bosoms yet;
And time can never bid our hearts their youthful days forget.

Not Lost Forever.

Not lost forever, though on earth we've parted!
Not lost forever, though we meet no more!
They do not wander lone and broken hearted,

Not lost forever! every gentle token
That memory brings me from the far away,
Shall fill my soul, though all our ties are broken,
With tenler grace, that never can decay.

Not lost forever! while around me springing,
The violets weep, the roses blush and bloom;
And summer birds, in summer woodland singing,
Flood with soft music all the tranquil gloom.

There will be meaning in the stars, the flowers,
The grand and solemn voices of the sea—
Telling of happy dreams & happy hours,
When life had sunshine, which it caught from thee.

Not lost forever! thou shalt still be near me,
Through every fortune and in every clime;
When cares oppress, or gentle memories cheer me,
Thou shalt be with me, dearest, all the time.

"MARY OF THE GLEN."

Has anybody spoke for you,
Mary of the Glen?
Is there a heart that's broke for you,
Mary of the Glen?
I have lands and I have leases,
I have gold and cattle, too;
I have sheep with finest fleeces—
Can I marry you?

Nobody, sir, has spoken for me,
Mary of the Glen,
There's no heart that's broke for me,
Mary of the Glen;
But there is blue-eyed Willie,
Who labors with the men,
Who brings the sweet pond lily,
To Mary of the Glen!

He has neither lands nor leases,
But his cheek is cherry red,
And finer than your fleeces
Are the curls upon his head;
And though he's never spoke for me,
I know he loves me true,
And his heart would be broke for me,
If I should marry you.

TOO MANY STUDIES AT ONCE.—One of the great evils of our present misdirected system of education, is that of overtaxing the brain of pupils by too many studies at once. Like the persons in the play, they 'remember a mass of things but not distinctly.'—When we see half grown girls bending under the weight of an armful of books, we pity the fashionable ignorance which can uphold a system attended with such deplorable evils. If the muscles are overtasked, by merely carrying such a load of (to them) worse than useless lumber, what must a brain suffer in an attempt to master their contents? When will people learn wisdom, instead of remaining the willing dupes of fashionable folly?

GOING HOME.—The following incident is related in connection with the disaster at Lawrence.

A touching incident is related of a company of girls, who were safe, and comparatively uninjured, until the fire broke out. They would soon have been rescued if the devouring flames had not shut out every hope from the prison in which they were immued, but when the fire began to roar around them they as if by inspiration, joined in singing the hymn—

"We are going home to glory

Their voices rose clear and musical above the cracking of the flames, but they were soon silenced to be heard no more until they had passed the narrow sea that divided them from the heaven of their faith.

No Right to Endorse.—We think the following worth the serious consideration of our business men:

1. A man has no right to endorse when the failure of the first party to meet his obligation will render the creditors of the endorser liable to loss in consequence of such endorsement.

2. He has no reght to endorse for another man, unless he make provision for meeting such obligations.

3. He has no right to endorse unless he fully intends to pay what he promises to, promptly, in case the first party fails to do so. Few endorsers prepare for this.

4. His relations to his family demand that he shall not obligate himself to oblige another simply, at the risk of defrauding or depriving them of what belongs to them.

5. He should never endorse or become responsible for any amount without security is furnished by the first party. It should be made a business transaction—rarely a matter of friendship. It is equivalent to the loan of capital to the amount of the obligation, and the same precaution should be taken to secure it.

6. A man has no more right to expect another to endorse his note without recompense than to expect an insurance company to insure his house or his life gratuitously.

7. It is not good business policy for one to ask another to endorse his note, promising to accommodate him in the same manner The exchange of signatures may have, and usually does have a very unequal value. It is better to secure him the amount, and exact a like security for the amount of the responsibility incurred.

8. It is better to do a business that will involve no necessity for asking or granting such favors, or making such exchanges.—It is always safe and just to do so.

"THERE'S ALWAYS ROOM UP STAIRS."

A young man who was thinking of studying law, said to Daniel Webster: "Mr Webster, I understand the profession of law is quite full, and that there are more lawyers than are needed; do you think there is any chance for me?" "There is always room up stairs," was the reply—and as true as it was ingenious Only a few persons reach the high places, and these are always in great demand—"there's room enough up stairs." First class farmers and mechanics, as well as physicians, lawyers, etc., always find plenty of room, plenty of work, and good pay.—Whatever calling you choose, and it matters little, if it be an honestone, resolve to go into an upperstory; but don't try to jump there by a single leap or you may fall disabled. Rather begin at the bottom of the ladder, and patiently step upon each round.

IMPORTANCE OF PUBLICITY —Hunts Merchant's Magazine, for February, says: "Notoriety or publicity is an indispensable element of success to the merchant, mechanic, or manufacturer, who would give a speedy and wide distribution to the commodities and productions which he seeks to exchange for money. He may have capital, skill, convenient position, punctuality, industry and honesty—every possible fitness for his business—and all is nothing, if he has not sufficient notoriety. This notoriety, let it cost more or less, he must purchase or provide for as carefully as he purchases or manufactures his stock of goods. And it must, in extent bear a certain relation, to the business he would do; it must be both posit've & comparative. People must not only know him and his busines, because otherwise they will not find him; but they must know him, because otherwise they will find and trade with those who are better known. To do a successful and profitable busine s, a merchant must advertise—no matter what he sells.

A Modern Laocoon.

Terrible Conflict with a Snake—Narrow escape from Death of his Keeper.

It was only a week or two since that we announced the arrival at Salem, from Africa, of a monster boa constrictor, in size one of the largest ever brought to this country. Its length, in its quiet state, was full thirty feet, with the capability of etension when in motion, to nearly forty feet. In his largest part it was some twenty inches in circumference.

This snake was purchased by Mr. Goodwin : broker of this city and placed on exhibition at Horticultural Hall, School Street, where it proved quite attractive. Last week however his snakeship exhibited symptoms of illness in the form of indigestion, and upon one occasion Mr. Bishop the keeper removed a number of feathers of an animal which the reptile had swallowed from its throat.

On Sunday the snake was treated to a warm bath, and Mr. Bishop was again attempting to remove some obstructions from its throat, when the snake suddenly exhibited signs of hostility, erected its head, seized Mr. Bishop by the hand, and commenced to coil its enormous length about the body of the keeper, in order to crush him to death. The other attendants in the first moments of alarm retreated, but recalled by the cries for help of the imprisoned keeper, they armed themselves with clubs and commenced to belabor the snake in order to induce him to release his hold.

No impression was made however, and one coil was already around the body of the unfortunate man, when a brother of Mr. Goodwin came to the rescue with a large hammer. With this he struck the snake two violent upon the head which together with a violent choking about the throat, induced the reptile to unloose its coil, when Mr. Bishop was at once set free from his horrible imprisonment. The snake soon began to sink under the treatment which it had received, and in two hours was dead. Its remains were purchased by Mr. Vickery of Lynn, who will have the skin stuffed for preservation.

THE MURDER OF DR CROXTON IN ESSEX COUNTY, VA.—Full Particulars.—The Tappahannock (Va) Southerner, of the 4th inst., furnishes the following full account of the murder of Dr. Croxton, of Essex county. which was briefly noticed in the Delta of the 9th inst. It now appears that the murder was committed by two slave women, instead of men, as stated in the former account:

On Tuesday last the citizens of Tappahannock were shocked by the intelligence that a most brutal and horrible murder had been committed within a few miles of this town. The details are too sickening and dreadful for us to dwell upon, and we will, therefore, briefly state the main facts:

Dr. William S. Croxton, an aged and well-known citizen of this county, on Monday morning last was seen by his son and overseer alive and well, at his own house, about four miles from this place. His son went off to school, and his overseer to attend to some farm duty, both intending to return at night Dr. Croxton two negro women and a small negro girl, being the only persons left on the place.

At night the young man returned from school at the usual hour, and was told by the servants that his father had gone away. Shortly after, the overseer also returned and after waiting till bedtime and the old man being still absent they were naturally alarmed for his safety but knew not where to look for him. The two negro women were again interrogated but they persisted in declaring that their master had gone out through the gate, on horseback since which time they had seen nothing of him. While they were still talking one of the neighbors came to the house bringing Dr. Croxton's horse having found him at a straw stack at a considerable distance from the place. The saddleskirts were cut in several places and there were other evidences to lead to the suspicion that there had been foul play.

Nothing further was elicited that night but the following morning several neighbors assembled and together with the overseer went to the stable and tracked the horse in a contrary direction to that which the women said he had taken and this circumstance together with the confusion manifested by the negroes directed suspicion to them. The little girl whom we have above referred to stated that she had not seen her master since Monday morning; but that there was a great fire in the kitchen all day. The idea was thus suggested to those present that the negro women had murdered the old man and burnt his body. Search was accordingly made and among the ashes in the lye-hopper there were found pieces of human bones a jackknife spectacles buttons, &c, proving conclusively that Dr. Croxton had met a horrible fate. The negroes now terrified to highest degree confessed that they had committed the murder and consumed the body They were accordingly taken before justice Hale who issued a warrant for their committal to jail.

The remains of the deceased were collected and a jury empanneled, the verdict being in accordance with with the above facts.

On Wednesday last we visited the two prisoners now confined in jail. Their names are Ann and Eliza; the former being about thirty two years of age and the latter about twenty. Both have infant children less than two months old. Ann is a dark mulatto with a decidedly bad countenance. Eliza is much lighter and quite good looking. Neither one appears to realize the enormity of the crime they have committed and both talk freely about it. According to their own story they had ploted the murder on Sunday morning at which time their master had chastised them and accordingly on Monday. the old man being left alone with them they determined to carry out their plan.

About 10 o'clock on Monday Dr. C had occasion to use the grindstone near the kitchen door, and while in the act of sharpening a plane iron Eliza came behind and struck him with a grubbing-hoe. Ann, who was turning a grindstone, then seized an ax and struck him another on the head. He fell without a groan or struggle, probably stunned by the first blow. Eliza then seized him by the arms and Ann by the feet, dragged him to the kitchen and threw him on the fire. All day long they kept the fire burning, until the body was, as they thought entirely consumed.

If a woman could talk out of the two corners of her mouth at the same time, there would be a great deal said on both sides.

THE MERCHANT'S CLERK.

BY SAMUEL WARREN, F. R. S.,

Owing to a terrible domestic calamity, it became necessary that Henry Elliott, an only son, educating at Oxford. and destined for the army, should suddenly quit the university, and seek a livelihood by his own exertions in London. The event which occasioned this sudden blight to his prospect was the suicide of his father, Major Elliott; whose addiction to gambling, having for a long time seriously embarrassed his affairs, and nearly broken the heart of his wife, at length led him to commit the fatal act above spoken of. His widow survived the shock scarce a twelvemonth, and her unfortunate son was then left alone in the world, and almost entirely destitute. The trifling sum of ready money which remained in his possession after burying his mother was exhausted, and the scanty pittance afforded by his relatives withdrawn on the ground that he ought now to support himself, when his occasional inquiries after a situation at length led to the information that there was a vacancy for an outer clerk in the great house of Hilary, Hungate and Company, Mincing Lane, in the city. He succeeded in satisfying the junior partner of this house, after submitting to a great number of humilitating inquiries in regard to his respectibility and trustworthiness; and he was forthwith received into the establishment at a salary of 60*l.* per annum.

It was a sad day for poor Elliott when he sold off almost all his college books, and a few other remnants of gay and happy days, gone by probably for ever, for the purpose of equipping himself becomingly for his new and humble functions. He wrote an excellent hand; and being of a decided mathematical turn, the arithmetic of the countinghouse was easly mastered. What dismal dradgery had he henceforth daily to undergo! The tyranny of the upper clerks reminded him, with a pang, of the petty tyranny he had both received and inflicted at the public where he had been educated. How infinitely more galling and intolerable was his present bondage! Two thirds of the day he was kept constanly on foot, hurrying from place to place, with bills, letters, &c., and on other errands; and especially on foreign post nights, he was detained slaving sometimes till nine or ten at night, copying le ters, and assisting in making entries and balancing accounts, till his pen almost dropped from his wearied fingers. He was allowed an hour in the middle of the day for dinner; and even this little interval was often broken in upon to such an extent as proved seriously prejudicial to his health. After all the labours of the day, he had to trudge from Mincing Lane, along the odious City Road up to almost the extremity of Islington, where was situated his lodging, that is, a little back bedroom, on the third floor, serving at once for his sitting and sleeping room, and for the use of which he paid at the rate of seven shillings a week, exclusive of extras. Still he conformed to his cheerless lot calmly and resolutely, with a true practical stoicism that did him honour. His regular and frugal habits enabled him to subsist upon his scanty salary with decency, if not comfort, & without running into debt—that infallible destructive of all peace of mind and all self-respect! His sole enjoyment was an occasional hour in the evening, spent in reading and retracing some of his faded acquisitions in mathematics.—Though a few of his associates were piqued at what they considered his sullen and inhospitable disposition, yet his obliging manners, his easy but melancholy deportment, his punctuality and exactitude in all his engagements, soon gained him the good-will of his brethren in the office, and occasionally an indication of satisfaction on the part of some one of his august employers.

Thus, at length, Elliott overcame the numerous disarrangements of his altered situation, seeking in constant employment to forget both the gloom and gayeties of the past. Two or three years passed over, Elliott continuing thus steadily in his course; and his salary, as a proof of the approbation of his employers, had been annually increased by 10*l.* till he was placed in comparative affluence by the receipt of a salary of 90*l.* His severe exertions, however, insensibly impaired a constitution never very vigorous, and he bore with many a fit of indisposition rather than incur the expense of medical attendance. It may be added that Elliott was a man of gentlemanly exterior and engaging deportment—and then let us pass to a very different person.

Mr. Hillary, the head of the firm, a man of very great wealth, had risen from being a mere errand boy, to his present eminence in the mercantile world, through a rare combination of good-fortune and personal merit—merit, as far as concerns a talent for business, joined with prudence and enterprise If ever there came a man within the terms of Burke's famous philipic, it was Mr. Hillary. His only object was money-making; he knew nothing, cared for nothing beyond it; till the constant contemplation of his splendid gains led his desires into the train of personal aggrandizement. With the instinctive propensities of a mean and coarse mind, he became as tyrannical and insolent in success as in adversity he had been supple and cringing. No spark of generous or worthy feeling had ever been struck from the flinty heart of Jacob Hillary, of the firm of Hillary, Hungate, & Co. He had married the widow of a deceased partner, by whom he had had several children, of whom one only lived beyond infancy—a generous, high-spirited, enthusiastic girl, whom her purse-proud father had destined in his own weak and vain ambition, to become the wearer of a coronet.

This was the individual who, stepping one morning rather hastily from his carriage, at his counting-house door in Mincing Lane, fell from the carriage step, most severely injuring his right ankle and shoulder. The injuries he received upon this occasion kept him confined for a long period to his bed, and for a still longer one to an easy chair in the back drawing-room in his spacious mansion near Highbury. As soon as he was able to attend to business, he issued orders that as Elliott was the clerk whose residence was nearest to Bullion House, he should attend him every morning for an hour or two on matters of business, carrying Mr. Hillary's orders to the city, and especially bringing him, day by day, a sealed envelope, his banker's book. A harassing post this proved for poor Elliott.

Severe discipline had trained his temper to bear more than most men; on these occasions it was tried to the uttermost. Mr. Hillary's active and energetic mind kept thus in comparative and compulsive seclusion from the only concerns he cared for or that could occupy it—always except the one great matter alluded to—his imperious and irritable temper became almost intolerable. Elliott would certainly have thrown up his employment under Mr. Hillary in disgust and despair, had it not been for one circumstance—the presence of Miss Millary—whose sweet appealing looks day after day melted away the resolution with which Elliott every morning came before her choleric and overbearing father, although they could not mitigate that father's evil temper, or prevent its manifestations. He insisted on her spending the greater part of every day in his presence, nor would he allow her to quit it even at the periods when Elliott made his appearance. The first casual and hasty glance that he directed towards her satisfied him that he had, in earlier and happier days, been many times in general society with her, her partner even in the dance. Now, however, he dared not venture to exhibit the slightest indication of recognition; and she, if struck by similar recollections, thought fit to conceal them, and behave precisely as though she then saw and heard of Mr. Elliott for the first time in her life. He could not, of course, find fault with her for this; but he felt it deeply and bitterly. He little knew how much he wronged her! She instantly recollected him, and it was only the dread of her father that restrained her from a friendly greeting. Having once adopted such a line of conduct, it became necessary to adhere to it, and she did. But could she prevent her heart, going out in sympathy toward the poor, friendless, unoffending clerk whom her father treated more like a mere menial than a respectable servant; him whom she knew to be

Fallen from his high estate!"

Every day that she saw him, her woman's heart throbbed with pity towards him, and pity is indeed akin to love. How favourably for him did his temper and demeanour contrast with those of her father! And she saw him placed daily in a situation calculated to exhibit his real character, his disposition, whether for good or evil. The fact was, he had become an object of deep interest, even of love, to her, long before the thought had even occurred to him that she viewed him, from day to day, with feelings different from those with which she would look at the servant who stood at her father's sideboard at dinner. His mind was kept constantly occupied by his impetuous employer, and his hundred questions about what had or had not happened every day in the city. Thus for nearly three months had these unconscious lovers been brought daily for an hour or two into each other's presence. He had little idea of exquisite pain occasioned Miss Hillary by her father's harsh and unfeeling treatment of him, nor of the many timid attempts she made, in his absence, to prevent the recurrence of such treatment; and as for the great man, Mr. Hillary, it never crossed his mind as being possible that two young hearts could, by any means, when in different ranks of society—one rich, the other poor—be warmed into a feeling of regard, and even love, for one another.

One afternoon Elliott was obliged to come a second time that day from the city, flanked on one hand by his daughter, and on the other by a little table on which stood wine and fruit. Poor Elliott looked, as well he might, exhausted with his long and rapid walk through the fervid sunshine.

"Well, sir, what now?" said her father, quickly peremptorily, at the same time eargerly stretcing forth his hand to receive a letter which Elliott presented to him.

"Humph! Sit down there, sir, for a minutes!" Elliott obeyed. Miss Hillary, who had been reading, touched with Elliott's pale and wearied look whisperd to her father, "Papa, Mr. Elliott looks dreadfully tired; may I offer him a glass of wine?"

"Yes, yes," replied Mr. Hillary, hastily, without removing his eyes from the letter he had that instant opened Miss Hillary instantly poured out a glass of wine; and as Elliott approached to take it from the table with a respectful bow, his eye encountered hers, which was instantly withdrawn, but not before it had cast a glance upon him that electrified him; that fell suddenly like a spark of fire amid the combustible feelings of a most susceptible but subdued heart. It fixed the fate of their lives. The train so long laid had been at length unexpectedly ignited and the confounded clerk returned or rather staggered towards his chair, fancying that everything in the room was whirling around him. It was well for both of them that Mr. Hillary was at that eventful moment absorbingly [illegible] sudden arrival of three ships with large cargoes of an article of which he had been attempting a monopoly, and in doing so had sunk a very large sum of ready money. In vain did the conscious and confused girl—confused as Elliott—remove her chair to the window with her back turned towards him and attempted to proceed with the book she had been reading. Her head seemed in a whirlpool.

"Get me my desk, Mary, immendiately," said her father, suddenly.

"No, indeed, papa, you didn't," replied Miss Hillary, as suddenly, for her father's voice had recalled her from a strange revery.

"My desk, Mary my desk; d'ye hear?" repeated her father, in a peremptory manner, still conning over the letter, which told him, in effect, that he would be [illegible] that night four or five thousand pounds poorer than he rose [illegible] ignorant that within the last few moments, if his very presence, had happened that which was to put an end for ever to all his dreams of a coronet glittering upon his daughter's brow.

Miss Hillary obeyed her father's second orders, carefully looking in every direction but that in which she would have encountered Elliott; and whispering a word or two in her father's ear, quitted the room. Elliott's heart was beating quickly when the harsh tones of Mr. Hillary, who had worked him self into a very violent humour, fell upon his ear, directing him to return immediately to the city, and say he had no answer to send till morning, when he was to be in attendance at an early hour.

Scarce knowing whether he stood on his head or his heels, Elliott hurriedly bowed and withdrew. Borne along on the current of his tumultuous emotions, he seemed to fly down the swarming City Road, and when he reached the dull, dingy little back counting house where he was to be occupied till a late hour of the night, he found himself in the fittest humour in the world for his task. Could he possibly be mistaken in interpreting Miss Hillary's look? Was it not corroborated by her subsequent conduct? And, by-the-way, now that he came to glance backward into two or three months during which he had been almost daily in her presence, divers little incidents started up into his recollection, all tending the same way. "Heighho!" exclaimed Elliott, laying down his yet unused pen, after a long and bewildered revery, "I wonder what Miss Hillary is thinking about! Surely I have had a kind of day-dream! It can't have really happened! And yet, how could there have been a mistake? Heaven knows I had taken nothing to excite or disorder me, except, perhaps, my long walk! Here's a coup de soleil, by-the-way, with a witness! But only to think of it; Miss Hillary, daughter of Jacob Hillary, Esq. in love with—an under clerk of her father's—pho! it will never do! I'll think of it to-morrow morning." Thus communed Elliott with himself, by turns writing, pausing, and soliloquizing, till the lateness of the hour compelled him to apply to his task in good earnest. He did not quit his desk till it had struck ten; from which period till that at which he tumbled into his little bed, he fancied that scarcely five minutes had elapsed.

He made his appearance at Bullion House the next morning with a sad fluttering about the heart, but it soon subsided, for Miss Hillary was not present to prolong his agitation. He had not been seated for many minutes, however, before he observed her in a distant part of the gardens, apparently tending some flowers. As his eye followed the movements of her graceful figure, he could not avoid a faint sigh of regret at his own absurdity in raising such a superstructure of splendid possibilities upon so slight a foundation His attention was at that instant arrested by Mr. Hillary's multifarious commands for the city: and in short, Miss Hillary's absence from town for about a week, added to a great increase of business at the counting-house, owing to an extensive failure of a foreign correspondent, gradually restored Elliott to his senses, and banished the intrusive image of his lovely tormentor. Her unequivocal exhibition of feeling, however—unequivocal at least to him—on the occasion of the next meeting, instantly revived all his former excitement, and plunged him afresh into the soft tumult of doubts, hopes, and fears, from which he had so lately emerged. Every day that he returned to Mr. Hillary brought him fresh evidence of the extent to which he had encroached upon Miss Hillary's affections; and strange, indeed, must be that heart which, feeling itself alone and despised in the world, can suddenly find itself the object of a most enthusiastic and disinterested attachment without kindling into a flame of grateful affection. Was there anything wonderful or improbable in the conduct attributed to Hiss Hillary? No. A girl of frank and generous feeling, she saw in one whom undeserved misfortune had placed in a very painful and trying position, the constant exhibition of high qualities; a patient and dignified submission to her father's cruel and oppressive treatment—a submission on her account; she beheld his high feeling conquering misfortune; she saw in his eye, his every look, his whole demeanour, susceptibilities of an exalted description: and beyond all this—last, though not least, as Elliott acted the gentleman, so he looked it—and a handsome gentleman, too! So it came to pass, then, that these two hearts became acquainted with each other, despite the obstacles of circumstance and situation. A kind of telegraphing courtship was carried on between them daily, which must have been observed by Mr. Hillary but for the engrossing interest with which he regarded the communications of which Elliott was always the bearer. Mr. Hillary began, however, at length to recover the use of his limbs, and rapidly to gain general strength. He consequently announced one morning to Elliott that he should not require him to call after the morrow.

ANTI-SLAVERY INCONSISTENCY —"Dr. J. C. Ayer, whom Lowell looks upon as its representative man," said, at a recent union meeting in that place: "If any among us flatter ourselves that our compassion for the slaves is to be accounted unto us for righteousness,' do they remember that a negro would not be employed in one of our mills to keep him from starving, and that in the multitude before me there is not probably one person present who does not approve of this exclusion of the black man from the ordinary means of getting a livelihood,—from every path we tread. That the negro is inferior, is as fully felt and as much acted on in the North, as in the South, and it is simply ignoring the facts before you in every day life, to claim that the South alone puts him in a servile and dependent condition."

Dalton & Jacksonville Rail Road.

We have before us a letter from Hon. L. W. Crook, President of the above named road, addressed to G. C. Whatley Esq. of this place, and dated 23d ult. from which we obtain the following gratifying intelligence of the forward state and onward progress of this important work.

The President and Chief Engineer Mr. Wadsworth, with the surveying party, were at Cross Plains, 13 miles above this place, on the 23rd February, and will finish the location of the road to this place, in a few days. Four or five miles of the road at the Dalton end had already been graded, and a force of 80 hands at work, which it was supposed would finish ten miles by June, and have iron laid and cars running by 1st. Sept. One of the Contractors is also at Cave Spring, &'a considerable force of Irishmen at work. It is also contemplated in a very few days to put a number of hands at work at this place. It is confidently expected that 30 miles of the work will be finished and in running order within 18 months, & the remainder graded.

Ratification Meeting.

On the evening of the 22nd ult. the citizens of Jacksonville and vicinity met in the Court House, at which the following proceedings were had:

On motion of [illegible] G. C. Ellis Col. Jno. R. Clark was called to the chair. The objects of the meeting were briefly stated by the Chairman.

On motion of Maj. Abernathy, Jas. F. Grant and B. A. Brooks were requested to act as Secretaries.

On motion of Maj. Abernathy, a committee of five were appointed, by the Chairman, to report Resolutions expressive of the sense of the meeting, and the following gentlemen composed said committee: M. W. Abernathy, R. G. Earle, G. C. Ellis, M. J. Turnly, and B. A. Brooks.

While the Committee were out preparing resolutions, Gen. R. G. Earle addressed the meeting, in a warm and enthusiastic speech, in which he endorsed the course pursued by our members in effecting the passage of the Rail Road Bill; and in which he spoke of the many advantages, to the people of this country, to result from the completion of the A. & T. R. R. R.

The Committee then returned, and through G. C. Ellis, reported the following preamble and resolutions:

Whereas the present Session of our Legislature has passed an act to loan out the three per cent. fund and its interest. by which the Ala. & Tenn. R. Railroad Co. will receive a loan of two hundred and twenty five thousand dollars, by which the prospect of the completion of the road at no distant day is placed beyond a doubt, and by which various other important Railroad interests have been promoted and aided. The gratification which this intelligence has caused, impresses us with a high sense of the obligation we are under, first to our immediate Senator and Representatives, secondly, to all Senators and Representatives who have co-operated with them in the passage of this measure.

Therefore be it

Resolved, 1st. That we cordially tender our thanks to our Senator and Representatives, for the faithful manner in which they have discharged their duty, and to all others, who have aided them in this great public enterprise.

Resolved, 2nd, That it is with surprise and regret, that we learn the course pursued by the Representatives of Talladega county—that we expected, and think we had a right to expect, their aid and co operation. And, if their object in voting against and in endeavoring to defeat the Rail Road Bill, was to retard the progress and construction of our road, we must say, their course has been illiberal and selfish.

Upon motion for the addoption of the Resolutions, a warm discussion sprang up, in which Maj. Abernathy, G. C. Ellis, and B. A. Brooks spoke in favor of the adoption of the Resolutions, and M. J. Turnley. Wm. M. Hames and others opposed the latter clause of the second Resolution.—Col. J. D. Hoke moved to amend by striking out the latter clause of the second Resolution, which amendment was, upon motion of G. C. Ellis, laid upon the table. Then after some modification of the second Resolution, (which was done by the Committee,) the Resolutions, as above set out, were addopted.

Dr. J. C. Francis moved that upon the return of our Sentor and Representatives, we tender to them a public dinner.

W. M. Hames, Esq., offered the following Resolution, which was unanimously addopted:

Resolved, That in the opinion of this meeting, the Talladega members have "gone in."

Maj. Abernathy moved that proceedings of this meeting be published in the Jacksonville Republican, which was carried, and upon motion, the meeting adjourned, sine die.

J. F. GRANT, B. A. BROOKS, Secretaries. — J. R. CLARK, Chairman.

For the Republican.

MR. EDITOR,

Permit us to call the attention of the citizens of Jacksonville, to the approaching corporation election on Saturday next.

As the peace and good order, and improvement of our town are mainly in the hands of the Town Council, it is very important that every citizen should take an active interest in securing the election of suitable men. Among other things, the Rail Road will soon be approaching us, and we may expect a great influx of all sorts of characters, and a large increase of population. Our town has not been remarkable for its peacefulness, good morals and sobriety heretofore, and it will grow worse if we neglect this matter.

Let all who feel an interest in the character of our town—all who respect decency, sobriety and good order among negroes and white folks—all who esteem morality and religion—all who love their families and their homes—come out to the polls and vote, and take an active interest in the election of good and true men

After consulting with various citizens, we are satisfied we cannot do better than to re-elect the old Council. They have shown themselves capable, faithful and fearless, and worthy of our confidence. They have already done much for the improvement of the town, and the preservation of order and good morals. We therefore propose the following ticket:

For Intendant.
W. H. FLEMING.
For Councilmen.
J. C. FRANCIS,
H. F. VERNON,
J. H. FARMER.
A. ADAMS.
S. P. HUDSON.

From the 25th of August to the 3rd of September last (1859,) Earthquakes at Salvador and in that vicinity were active and severe. Thunder ... and meteors were in attendance ... on the night of the 2d and 3d ... the aurora was there very profuse and its color was ... in a deep blood red. The leaves of a blood red color instead of green. Further South, and beyond the Equator, it exhibited the same deep blood red and the crests of the waves and the spray that over the decks of vessels were of a roseate hue. A vessel off Cape Horn during this auroral display was spangled with fire balls that rested on the spars of the vessel. The auroral display extended to the Antipodes, and was seen in Australia, and affected the telegraph wires. At that same time the aurora was seen from Charleston, S. C., and from over a vast surface of our earth in both the Northern and Southern Hemispheres. The light of that aurora shone over as great a surface as does the sun at the same moments of time.

Earthquakes have been active in the great events of time. Where the Commandments were delivered to Moses on Mount Sinai, the Earthquakes were present as witnesses to the promulgation of the law and where our Holy Redeemer was crucified, an Earthquake was in attendance and Saints who were in their graves came forth and appeared unto many. These witnesses have since then frequently re-appeared.

Prior to the Deluge there is no account of Earthquakes.

Shortness of Life.

Time, passing swiftly o'er, us does unfold
This truth—although were young will soon be old.
In youth, the brilliant mind will penetrate
Whatever Fancy does illuminate;
In youth, the disposition inclines,
It briskly follows what with lustre shines:
Green, purple, red, their graceful hues display
And florid colors decorate his way,
Such scenes as these his eager thoughts pursue
And Happiness is trac'd, but never found.
So Pleasure now appears to be his aim—
It guides his progress through the very flame!
On thoughts it has an influential voice
Are sportively and gaily pass'd away,—
When occupation now his thoughts arrange,
Trouble ensues—he undergoes a change,
Fare well, no more his age is juvenile,
Diversions varise and his sighs express
A knowledge or acquaintance with distress
In life, he enters now a diff'rent's age,
Proceeding, as it were, to middle-age.
Quite oft his mind reverts to former days,
And meditating silently he says:
"My childish and most happy days are o'er
Amusements blithe attract my thoughth no more;
Instead of sport with all its genial train,
Cares, disappointments, occupy the brain."
So he, in life's confus'd, bewild,ring course,
Resorts to Hope—the only cheerful source
Whence partial comforts, partial joys arise,
Which soothe the heavy brow, the sinking eyes.
No time he loves and no moments spares,
But strives, contends, with temporal affairs;
He strive awhile resigns all public strife
His manly strength, his sinew'd muscles fail
His wither'd cheek once bloom'd but now grows pale;
His feeble body once to toil inured,
His palsied hands much labor has endured;
But now all these, with one accord agree,
That Death is near—thereby Eternity.
The mass of mingled failings now conspires
To end his short career—he soon retires—
Retires into the grave, the way of all—
And we succeed, obeying Natures call.
Alas! So sransientare our days, they seem
A passing vision, or pathetic dream.

Night Thoughts.

[Respectfully inscribed to Rev. D. F. S.]

Tis starry night! the moon is high,
And seemeth to my upturn'd eye
As if it were a silver barque—
A cleopatric barge of pearl,
Or some resplendent beauteous Ark
With sails that woo the heavenly world!

It may be, on its deck, some eye
Is gazing at the third blue sky
Where—far beyond the "Milky-way"
Where ruined worlds in fragments shine,
Is seen the light of "endless day,"
And anchor'd ships in ports devine!

And too, the city—dimly seen
Where wave the fields of living green
That heave so sweetly on the view—
Jerusalem!—each spire—each dome!
Where angels wait to meet the crew,
And pilgrims Kiss the sod at home!

Oh! God, what e'er may be my fate—
I pray for death nor soon, nor late;
Give me the cup with bitterest dregs,
Or clothe me in the meanest rags—
So I but reach that heavenly shore,
'Twill be enough—I ask no more!

TO THE PUBLIC.

Ever since my "Aromatic Schiedam Schnapps"—the purest and best Gin for medical purposes—became fully appreciated throughout this country, I have been constantly solicited by druggists, apothecaries, and large numbers of the most eminent physicians, in all parts of the Union, to add to my Gin importations pure Brandies and Wines, and to bottle them the same as I ... and have been doing with the Schnapps; to seal with my seal and give my certificate guarantying their undoubted purity.

I should long ago have endeavored to comply with the flattering requests. but I found it impossible to do so, especially in regard to the important articles of Brandy, Port and Madeira Wines, owing to the high prices in Europe, occasioned by short grape crops for some years. Happy for the success of my new enterprise, the grape crops for the last and the previous years were abundant.

Another point in my favor is this the duty now on French Brandy is 70 per cent. less than it was when my medical friends began to solicit me to furnish pure Brandy and Wines. These favoring circumstances have enabled me to commence a new enterprise.—I have concluded to import Cognac Bandy and Wines, to bottle them for medical as well as for private use. I am well aware, from the bitter experience, the vile attacks, the misrepresentation of motives and enmity of dealers and mixers of bad articles which I met with & conquered i the case of my Schnapps before obtained its present proud pre-eminence over all other Gins, that the new enterprise will be attended with equal opposition more trouble, and involve an immense outly of capital. These difficulties and expenses will be much greater, because I shall have to encounter the malignity and enmity of countless thousands who are engaged in the liquor trade, and making fortunes by the manufacture of infamous imitations of "Brandy" made from poisonous compounds—their use being alike destructive to healthy human life, and of course speedy death to the feeble invalid or those in whose behalf eminent physicians have urged upon me the importation of a pure, invigorating article of Brandy. I shall do so, in spite of all opposition, even that of the dealers and sellers of the stuff in bottles called "Brandy," of which millions of bottles are anually sold, and which is no better than the worst of poisons.

I am perfectly willing and well satisfied to embark in this new enterprize, and have no fears, no doubts about the most ultimate success for myself and the druggists and apothecaries in the thirty-three States, if they will heartily co operate with me in my efforts to drive out of use the vilest of compounds, called "Brandy," and replace it with the pure unadulterated article, which I will faithfully and truly supply.

The medical virtues of French Brandy need not to be told. The Brandy imported by me I will bottle. seal with my seal, my label, and add my certificate that it is of the first quality, and pure and unadulterated as when it left the distillery in France.

I will stake my reputation as a man, my standing as a merchant, and my tried commercial integrity, that what I pledge and certify to with my seal, my label. and my certificate is correct, and can be relied upon by purchasers in any section of the Union to which my Brandy may be sent. I have made arrangements with the best Brandy manufacturers in France, with those who have a world wide renown as the first Brandy exporters. I have selected four eminent firms who will ship me their Brandies. I shall not designate the article by any other name than Wolfe's Genuine Cognac Brandy. If I were to do otherwise it would be useless to the unprincipled persons, who are incessantly engaged in the nefarious traffic of imitating all valuable articles, would soon imitate and adopt my mark as a cloak under which to sell their compound of poisons to cover the vile imposition.

I am now prepared to receive and execute orders for Wolf's Genuine Cognac Brandy addressed to me, No. 22 Beaver Street. Prices will be given to personal application, or in reply to letters.

In this circular I have thus far written mainly about pure Cognac Brandy; I have now to call your attention to other liquors and wines.

I am prepared to supply orders for "Jamaica Rum" imported and bottled by me; also Irish and Scotch Whiskey." The purity and genuineness of the last-named articles, imported for "medical use" I will also guaranty with my seal, my label, and my certificate.

I shall also import the purest and best "Madeira," "Port," and "Sherry" Wines for Medical purposes. These I also guaranty with my seal, my label, and my certificate.

In conclusion permit me to add that I shall be happy to hear from those that this circular reaches, and whose personal or pecuniary interests it may effect, in the combination of articles that I engage to supply. Should any such person visit New York—especially a Druggist, Apothecary or Physician—I shall be most happy to receive a personal call.

There is no importer who possesses more actual experience and knowledge of the importing liquor and wine trade than I do, I have been engaged in it over thirty years.

I have narrated some facts connected with my new enterprize for the particular information of those connected with the practice or the sale of medicines. It I am favored with the visits of any such, or by friends to whom they give letters of introduction to me, they can see with their own eyes, and test my truthfulness by their own observation.

I respectfully crave, for this Circular and its contents a careful and attentive perusal. I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,

UDOLPHO WOLFE.

EDUCATIONAL NOTICE.

The undersigned, having for some time past, contemplated the establishment of an Educational Institute for young Ladies in some locality, affording the greatest facilities for speedy success and permanent usefulness; announces as the result, that, he has finally decided that Jacksonville is the best point for this object.

He will, in the execution of his design, present for patronage, an Institution as favorable as any in the country for acquiring all that is essential in a liberal and accomplished female education.

To accommodate patronage from abroad he will, for the present, procure board for any applying for the benefits of this institution, in good families in the village; hoping at an early day, to be able to provide it for them in his own.

In the instruction and discipline of the pupils, he will be assisted by his wife, who is well known in this community as having been for several years the successful disciplinarian and teacher of the Jacksonville Female Academy.

In offering ourselves to the people of Jacksonville and vicinity as Instructors of youth, we have the confidence that we throw ourselves upon a generous and appreciative public, who will not withhold from us the reward we merit, nor fail to acknowledge our ability for this undertaking, or honest endeavor to discharge our duty both to pupils and patrons.

The RATES OF TUITION in this institution will be the same as in others of a similar grade, viz: for the

1st Class—Embracing primary studies, $10
2d Class " the common English branches; $12 50
3d Class " the higher English branches and the Natural sciences, $16 00
4th Class " the higher branches of mathemetics and the ancient and modern Languages. $20 00

The science of vocal music will be taught gratuitously to all the pupils, as a daily exercise.

Instruction in the department of Instrumental music will be given by accomplished and successful Teachers.

A competent Teacher of the ornamental branches will be provided.

The first session of this School will open on the 9th of January next, at the house of the Principal, and a more commodious place will soon be provided.

While moral and religious instruction will be constantly and faithfully imparted, all sectarian and denominational influence will be conscientiously avoided.

Coming as we do with the best of motives, we are determined to merit, and trust we shall receive a worthy share of your patronage.

Economy & Progression.

In this, the age of advancement, many things new and invaluable have been introduced—not the phantoms and chimeras of other ages, but new ones, of sound and practical utility. In no department is progression better marked or more visibly to be seen than in the medical, when originating with competent men, and confined to scientific limits. Precisely of that character are the following remedial agents; none will prove more efficient, or are so often needed.

DR. LITTLE'S ANODYNE COUGH DROPS.

A new and certain cure for Coughs, Asthma Pain in the Breast; also Croup, Whooping Cough, Colds etc., among children.

This is a pleasant medicine to take, producing immediate relief, and in nine out of ten cases a prompt cure. It exercises the most controlling influence over Coughs and Irritation of the Lungs of any remedy known, often stopping the most violent in a few hours, or at most in a day or two. Many cases thought to be decidedly consumptive have been promptly cured by using a few bottles, and wearing the Little's Strengthening Plasters on the chest. As an anodyne expectorant, without astringing the bowels, it stands paramount to all cough mixtures.

DR. LITTLE'S FRENCH MIXTURE.

This is prepared from a French Recipe (in the forms of No's. 1 and 2, the first for the acute, and No. 2 for the chronic stage,) that has been much improved upon in this country; & from its unexampled success is likely to supercede every other remedy for the cure of the diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Gonorrhœal, Blennorhœal and Leuchorrhœal or Flour Albus Affections. This extensive compound combines properties totally different in taste and character from anything to be found in the United States in Pharmacopœa or in private practice; and in point of safety and efficiency is not rivalled in America.

DOLLAR VERMIFUGE.

Prepared and put up in bottles and vials, only by C. W. Little. In using, nothing else is required to relieve children of worms; and besides being one of the best and cheapest ever offered to the public, its frequent use in families will save much trouble and expense, as well as the lives of many children; for eight out of every ten cases generally require it.

DR. LITTLE'S RINGWORM & TETTER OINTMENT.

Hundreds of cases of Chronic Tetters, Scald Heads and diseases of the skin generally, have been cured by this remedy, and since the introduction of the No 2 preparation (being stronger) scarcely a case has been found that it will not effectually eradicate in a short time. For the cure of Cancerous Sores and Ulcers it is applied in the form of Plasters, and is almost infallible.

In addition, the Proprietor prepares, for the great convenience and certainty in prescribing, Strengthening Plasters, of the most superior quality, Improved Cook's Pills (an easy billious cathartic) Vegetable Pills (a mild cathartic to obviate costiveness) Antacid (for tightness and acidity of the stomach.) Tonic Bitters, etc., which will be sent on consignment, if ordered.

Medicines, like everything else, are better and more economically supplied to the great mass of the people by, merchandize than in any other way.

Physicians are referred to the 13th page of Dr. Little's pamphlet, to the substitute of medicines of the Materia Medica, that he uses in compounding his different remedies, and asked to say if they are not the chief reliance of the profession, as he himself has practised medicine extensively for more than ten years, before retiring to the drug business.

In more than two hundred places in Georgia, and in all the Southern States they are to be had; and as there are scamps about who are counterfeiting his remedies, by palming off their own or something else, by using the same or similar names (for no patent is wanted or secured amid the absurd patents of the day.)

N. B.—All orders and letters on business are to sent in future to LITTLE & BRO. Macon, Georgia, instead of Philadelphia.

This caution is rendered essentially necessary as large quantities of inferior and defective Linens are prepared; season after season and sealed with the name of RICHARDSON by Irish Houses, who, regardless of the injury thus inflicted alike on the American consumer & the manufacturers of the genuine Goods, will not readily abandon a business so profitable, while purchasers can be imposed on with Goods of a worthless character.

AYER'S
Ague Cure
FOR THE SPEEDY CURE OF

Intermittent Fever, or Fever and Ague Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical Headache, or Bilious Headache, and Bilious Fevers, indeed for the whole class of diseases originating in Biliary derangement, caused by the Malaria of miasmatic countries.

No one remedy is longer called for by the necessities of the American people than a sure and safe cure for Fever and Ague. Such we are now enabled to offer, with a perfect certainty that it will eradicate the disease and with assurance, founded on proof, that no harm can arise from its use in any quantity.

That which protects from or prevents the disorder must be of immense service in the communities where it prevails. Prevention better than cure, for the patient escapes the risk which he must run in violent attacks of this baleful distemper. This "CURE" expels the miasmatic poison of FEVER AND AGUE from the system and prevents the development of the disease, if taken on the first approach of its premonitory symptoms. It not only the best remedy ever yet discovered for this class of complaints, but also the cheapest. The large quantity we supply for a dollar brings it within the reach of every body; and in bilious districts, where FEVER AND AGUE prevails, every body should have and use it freely both for cure and protection. It is hoped this price will place it within the reach of all—the poor as well as the rich. A great superiority of this remedy over another ever discovered for the speedy and certain cure of Intermittents is, that it contains no Quinine or mineral, consequently it produces no quinism or other injurious effect whatever upon the constitution. These cures by it are left as healthy as if they had never had the disease.

Fever and Ague is not alone the consequent of the miasmatic poison. A great variety of disorders arise from its irritation, among which are Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Headache, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitation, Painful Affection of the Spleen, Hysterics, Pain in the Bowels, Colic, Paralysis, and Derangement of the Stomach, all of which, when originating in this cause, put on the intermittent type, or become periodical. This "CURE" expels the poison from the blood, and consequently cures them all alike. It is an invaluable protection to immigrants and persons travelling or temporarily residing in the malarious districts. If taken occasionally or daily while exposed to the infection, that will be excreted from the system and cannot accumulate in sufficient quantity to ripen into disease. Hence it is even more valuable for protection than cure, and few will ever suffer from intermittents, if they avail themselves of the protection this remedy affords.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

FOR ALL THE PURPOSES OF A FAMILY PHYSIC

are so compounded that disease within the range of their action can rarely withstand or evade them. Their penetrating properties search, and cleanse and invigorate every portion of the human organism, correcting its diseased action, and restoring its healthy vitalities. As a cleansing agent of the properties, the invalid who is bowed down with pain or physical debility is astonished to find his health or energy restored by a remedy at once so simple and inviting.

Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also many formidable and dangerous diseases. The agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac containing certificates of their cures and direction for their use in the following complaints: Costiveness, Heartburn, Headache arising from disorder of Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Pain in and and Morbid Inaction of the Bowels, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, Jaundice, and other kindred complaints arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions. They are an excellent alterative for the renovation of the blood and the restoration of tone and strength to the system debilitated by disease.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced stages of the disease.

So wide is the field of its usefulness and so numerous are the cases of its cures, that almost every section of country abounds in persons publicly known, who have been restored from alarming and even desperate diseases of the lungs by its use. When once tried, its superiority over every other medicine of its kind is too apparent to escape observation, and where its virtues are known, the public no longer hesitate what antidote to employ for the distressing and dangerous affections of the pulmonary organs that are incident to our climate. While many inferior remedies thrust upon the community have failed and been discarded, this has gained friends by every trial, conferred benefits on the afflicted they can never forget, and produced cures too numerous and too remarkable to be forgotten.

Economy & Progression.

In this, the age of advancement, many things new and invaluable have been introduced—not the phantoms and chimeras of other ages, but new ones, of sound and practical utility. In no department is progression better marked or more visibly to be seen than in the medical, when originating with competent men, and confined to scientific limits. Precisely of that character are the following remedial agents; none will prove more efficient, or are so often needed.

DR. LITTLE'S ANODYNE COUGH DROPS.

A new and certain cure for Coughs, Asthma Pain in the Breast; also Croup, Whooping Cough, Colds etc., among children.

This is a pleasant medicine to take, and in doing immediate relief, and in nine out of ten cases a prompt cure. It exercises the most controlling influence over Coughs and Irritation of the Lungs of any remedy known, often stopping the most violent in a few hours, or at most in a day or two. Many cases thought to be decidedly consumptive have been promptly cured by using a few bottles, and wearing the Little's Strengthening Plasters on the chest. As an anodyne expectorant, without astringing the bowels, it stands paramount to all cough mixtures.

DR. LITTLE'S FRENCH MIXTURE.

This is prepared from a French Recipe (in the forms of No's. 1 and 2, the first for the acute, and No. 2 for the chronic stage,) that has been much improved upon in this country; & from its unexampled success is likely to supercede every other remedy for the cure of the diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder. Gonorrhœal, Blenorrhœal and Leucorrhœal or Flour Albus Affections. This extensive compound combines properties totally different in taste and character from anything to be found in the United States in Pharmacopœa or in private practice; and in point of safety and efficiency is not rivalled in America.

DOLLAR VERMIFUGE.

Prepared and put up in bottles and vials, only by C. W. Little. In using, nothing else is required to relieve children of worms; and besides being one of the best and cheapest ever offered to the public, its frequent use in families will save much trouble and expense, as well as the lives of many children; for eight out of every ten cases generally require it.

DR. LITTLE'S RINGWORM & TETTER OINTMENT.

Hundreds of cases of Chronic Tetters, Scald Heads, and diseases of the skin generally, have been cured by this remedy, and since the introduction of the No 2 preparation (being stronger) scarcely a case has been found that it will not effectually eradicate in a short time. For the cure of Cancerous Sores and Ulcers it is applied in the form of Plasters, and is almost infallible.

In addition, the Proprietor prepares, for the great convenience and certainty in prescribing, Strengthening Plasters, of the most superior quality, Improved Cook's Pills (an easy bilious cathartic) Vegetable Pills (a mild cathartic to abate costiveness) Antacid (for tightness and acidity of the stomach) Tonic Bitters, etc., which will be sent on consignment, if ordered.

Medicines, like everything else, are better and more economically supplied to the great mass of the people by merchandize than in any other way.

Physicians are referred to the 19th page of Dr. Little's pamphlet, to the catalogue of medicines of the Materia Medica, that he uses in compounding his different remedies, and asked to say if they are not the chief reliance of the profession, as he himself has practised medicine extensively for more than ten years, before retiring to the drug business.

In more than two hundred places in Georgia, and in all the Southern States they are to be had; and as there are scamps about who are counterfeiting his remedies, by palming off their own or something else, by using the same or similar names (for no patent is wanted or secured amid the absurd patents of the day.)

N. B.—All orders and letters on business are to sent in future to LITTLE & BRO. Macon, Georgia, instead of Philadelphia.

Sold in Jacksonville by Hendrick & Nisbet.

In Oxford by Dr. S. C. Williams, and by Merchants & Druggists generally. July 21,

This caution is rendered essentially necessary as large quantities of inferior and defective Linens are prepared; season after season and sealed with the name of RICHARDSON by Irish Houses, who, regardless of the injury thus inflicted alike on the American consumer & the manufacturers of the genuine Goods, will not readily abandon a business so profitable, while purchasers can be imposed on with Goods of a worthless character.

AYER'S

FOR THE SPEEDY CURE OF

Intermittent Fever, or Fever and Ague Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical Headache, or Bilious Headache, and Bilious Fevers, indeed for the whole class of diseases originating in biliary derangement, caused by the Malaria of miasmatic countries.

No one remedy is louder called for by the necessities of the American people than a sure and safe cure for Fever and Ague. Such we are now enabled to offer, with a perfect certainty that it will eradicate the disease and with assurance, founded on proof, that no harm can arise from its use in any quantity.

That which protects from or prevents the disorder must be of immense service in the communities where it prevails. Prevention better than cure, for the patient escapes the risk which he must run in violent attacks of this baleful distemper. This "Cure" expels the miasmatic poison of Fever and Ague from the system and prevents the development of the disease, if taken on the first approach of its premonitory symptoms. It not only the best remedy ever yet discovered for this class of complaints, but also the cheapest. The large quantity we supply for a dollar brings it within the reach of every body; and in bilious districts, where Fever and Ague prevails, every body should have and use it freely both for cure and protection. It is hoped this price will place it within the reach of all—the poor as well as the rich.

A great superiority of this remedy over another ever discovered for the speedy and certain cure of Intermittents is, that it contains no Quinine or mineral, consequently it produces no quinism or other injurious effect whatever upon the constitution. These cures by it are left as healthy as if they had never had the disease.

Fever and Ague is not alone the consequence of the miasmatic poison. A great variety of disorders arise from its irritation, among which are Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Headach Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitation, Painful Affection of the Spleen, Hysterics, Pain in the Bowels, Colic, Paralysis, and Derangement of the Stomach all of which, when originating in this cause, put on the intermittent type, or become periodical. This "Cure" expels the poison from the blood, and consequently cures them as it does. It is an invaluable protection to immigrants and persons travelling or temporarily residing in the malarious districts. If taken occasionally or daily while exposed to the infection, that will be excreted from the system and cannot accumulate in sufficient quantity to ripen into disease. Hence it is even more valuable for protection than cure, and few will ever suffer from Intermittents, if they avail themselves of the protection this remedy affords.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

are so composed that disease within the range of their action can rarely withstand or evade them. Their penetrating properties search, and cleanse and invigorate every portion of the human organism, correcting its diseased action, and restoring its healthy vitalities. As a consequence of these properties, the invalid who is bowed down with pain or physical debility is astonished to find himself restored to energy restored by a remedy at once simple and inviting.

Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also many formidable and dangerous diseases. The agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac containing certificates of their cures and directions for their use in the following complaints: Costiveness, Heartburn, Headache arising from disorders of the Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Pain in and Morbid Inaction of the Bowels, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, Jaundice, and other kindred complaints arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions. They are an excellent alterative for the renovation of the blood and the restoration of tone and strength to the system debilitated by disease.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced stages of the disease.

So wide is the field of its usefulness and so numerous are the cases of its cures, that almost every section of country abounds in persons publicly known, who have been restored from alarming and even desperate diseases of the lungs by its use. When once tried, its superiority over every other medicine of its kind is too apparent to escape observation, and where its virtues are known, the public no longer hesitate what antidote to employ for the distressing and dangerous affections of the pulmonary organs that are incident to our climate. While many inferior remedies thrust upon the community have failed and been discarded, this has gained friends by every trial, conferred benefits on the afflicted they can never forget, and produced cures too numerous and too remarkable to be forgotten.

POETRY.

Miscellaneous.

THE WIND STORM.

About ten o'clock, last evening, we first observed that the wind from the North was striking out new and strange variations. Tones soft and low, shrill and high, wierd and solemn, came from above, beneath, around. Every leafless branch of a tree seemed strung like an Æolian wire: under every doorway and at each casement Æolian harps were playing symphonies, dirges, snatches of tunes, both sad and merry. Spirits were in the air, they danced on the roof, they played hide and seek in the chimneys; they swang upon shutters and gates; they rattled window frames. Lovers of dark eyed beauties, now in their graves, saw by sympathy their shadowy images, and sang:

> And all my days are trances,
> And all my nightly dreams
> Are where thy dark eye glances,
> And where thy footsteps gleams,
> In what etherial dances,
> By what eternal streams!

Unwritten music filled the universe; Mozart, Beethoven, or Strauss might have caught the wild and sweet melody of ten thousand new marches or waltzes ere the clock struck twelve. The authoress of "Sir Rohen's Ghost" might have been inspired with the words of a new and marvelous chapter on air music; Dickens might have improved his description of the rising of the wind over Yarmouth flats; and had Charlotte Bronte been in the land of the living, it would have keyed up every one of her delicate nerve-fibres, until she saw all the spirits that "walk" the moors and glens of Yorkshire. At half-past twelve o'clock, the air current took a higher range, a louder voice, a more brattling tongue. It fought with the trees, and swayed them like giants; it tore at the shutters, it jarred firm foundations and sang rude Northern rhymes like an inspired or drunken Titan, with ten thousand fingers. People in bed awoke and shivered; they thought of the homeless poor; they prayed for mariners at sea—that the bright morn, rushing through an unstained sky, might guard barks in distress; that helmsmen might turn from the tiller only to meet the radiance of the North star; that no shock but that of the gale might touch tossed ships; that reefs might hold; that sails might not be blown from the yards; that false lights might not be seen on the lee shores; that the steady gleam of all true beacons might stream over the angry waves; and that wheresoever an anchor should be cast, its hold might be sure and steadfast. A wild night was it, and remembrance, young or old, could hardly find its parallel. Let us hope it struggled with no secret knowledge of wrecks and drowning wretches of whose fate no other chronicle remains.

CRINOLIE SUBDUED.—The London Times reporter, in sketching the scenes at the recent opening of Parliament, remarks: "As the ladies sat closer and closer together, first six, then seven, then eight, and at last nine upon a moderate bench, a great light flashed upon all beholders, and they saw that the reign of crinoline was over, the literal and metaphorical iron despotism of fashion was broken at last. The exceptions to this rule, it is true, were neither few nor unimportant, but still they were the exception, and, taken as a whole, the sitting space allowed by that sumptuary censor, the Lord Chamberlain, was generally allowed to be enough.

A PRINTER IN COURT.—A suit came on the other day in which a printer named Kelvy was a witness. The case was an assault and battery that came off between two men named Brown and Henderson.

"Mr. Kelvy, did you witness the affair referred to?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, what have you to say about it?"

"That it was the best piece of punctuation I have seen for sometime."

"What do you mean by that?"

"Why, that Brown dotted one of Henderson's eyes, for which Henderson put a period to Brown's breathing for a half minute."

"The court comprehended the matter at once, and fined the defendent fifty dollars."

PASS 'EM ROUND.—Two brothers, purporting to be from Norfolk, Virginia, and giving their names as Robert Blake and J. M. Blake, were arrested and brought before a meeting of the citizens on Monday evening last, on a charge of not being "sound on the goose question," and being too free and social with a slave, treating him to oysters, liquor, &c., and inquiring particularly whether or not he could read and write?

After canvassing the matter, it was decided that they be ordered to leave for a soil more congenial to their taste.

They are quite plausible fellows, and itinerant jewelers.

We ask the press to "pass 'em round," with this cartoon attached—"Not sound on the goose question."—Clayton Banner.

THE LATE RAINS.—On last Friday night and Saturday morning thereafter such a flood came as has not been seen this season. Nearly all the bridges & turnpikes, in this section, so far as we have been able to learn, have been in part carried away by the high waters, and at least two thirds of the water mills have been totally ship wrecked. We never complain of providential occurrences, but could we have our choice hereafter, we would take floods of this sort at inter vals of a hundred years.—Abbeville Banner.

SHEEP IN TEXAS.—A correspondent of the Southern (Ala.) Champion says: "I saw yesterday (8th instant) two thousand sheep in one flock on the prairie, guarded by two men and four dogs of almost human intelligence. What those dogs will do is almost incredulous. I understand that a gentleman, last summer, sold off part of his sheep, and they were driven off to a distance, and kept up two days, after which time his dog went and took them from the purchaser by force and carried them back home. Sheep are said to be profitable here, yielding as high as sixty per cent. annually on their value."

☞ A rough common sense pervades the following in which there is certainly "more truth than poetry:"

"Great men never swell. It is only your three cent individuals, who are salaried at the rate of two hundred dollars a year, and dine on potatoes and dried herring, who put on airs & flashy waistcoats, swell, puff, blow, and endeavor to give themselves a consequential appearance. No discriminating person ever mistakes the spurious for the genuine article. The difference between the two is as great as that between a barrel of vinegar and a bottle of the pure juice of the grape."

☞ It has been observed that the fires which have occurred so frequently in vessels laden with cotton have been confined principally to ships in which the convex-lights called bull's eyes are a peculiarity. The theory based on these facts is that the bull's eye acts as a burning lens, whenever the sun chances to shine through it, and will ignite any combustible article that lines within its focus.

☞ A good printer will set about 8,000 ems a day, or about 24,000 letters, the distance traveled by his hand will average one foot per letter, going to the box in which they are contained, and of course returning, making two feet for every letter he sets.—This would make a distance each day of 48,000 feet or a little more than nine miles, and in the course of a year leaving out Sundays, the member travels about 3,000 miles. Truly this is hand power.

A CAT ATTACKS AN INFANT.—It has been doubted by many that cats will assail or injure small children in their sleep, but a case has occurred which proves that cats are as treacherous in their nature as they are stealthy in their nocturnal movements. The Boston Transcript says:

J. Jones, a Journeyman barber, has a little boy two years old, and yesterday afternoon a strange cat visited the premises, and was immediately taken into companionship by the child. The little boy played with the cat during the afternoon, receiving a single scratch. When the child went to sleep the cat was under the bed. In the night the parents noticed that the little fellow was quite uneasy from time to time; and at length he cried out that the cat hurt him, and in such a manner as to attract their attention. Upon examination, they found the cat on the bed over the child's face and the pillow and bed saturated with blood. The child was taken up and washed, but no wound could be discovered. All the blood came from the nose, and it was evident that the cat had been imbibing the vital fluid by suction.—A physician was called in and the hemorage was stopped.

A WOMAN'S GENIUS.

A lady friend of ours, not a hundred miles off, has a husband whose business calls him occasionslly to the South. He is, when at home, one of these "Black Republicans" about which we hear so much in the newspapers, and who are in particularly bad order on the south side of Mason and Dixon's line. It so happened that imperious business demanded his attention at New Orleans, just after the Harper's Ferry outbreak, and turned the heads of the whole South, and when anything Black (or even Brown) was challenged by all good "national men" in that quarter. It was well for our friend that, in such circumstances, he was married. "He that findeth a wife," says the wise man, "findeth a good thing." Our South going friend had the amplest evidence that this text was inspired. She not only packed his trunks and attended to his linen, but she took care that there were no suspicious letters in his pockets, no Helper book, she rolled his shaving box in the Statesman, folded his slippers in the Newark Advocate, tucked the "Buckeye Abroad" in the corner of his trunk and put half a dozen New York Observers, and a whole pile of tracts from the orthodox mint in New York, in his pockets for Sunday reading. Thus furnished, he went out with as much confidence as David did, after having waded in the brook and filled his pockets with those fatal pebbles. The event justified the genius of the wife. Every cross examination brought out certificates of soundness which were beyond question, and our friend passed through every ordeal unscathed. Not a hand was laid on him in violence.—Newark (O.) North American.

YOUNG WOMANHOOD.—The sweet moon on the horizon's verge; a thought matured, but not uttered; a conception warm and glowing, yet not embodied; the rich halo which precedes the rising sun; the rosy down that speaks the ripening peach; a flower which is not quite a flower, yet no longer a bud.

GAMBLING.

There can be no doubt but gambling is one of the greatest vices with which our country is afflicted. It pervades all classes, and is indulged in in every possible form. Every town has its faro banks, and you will see collected there nightly, gentlemen and blacklegs, the young and the old. All who play really appear to be afflicted with a demon which exerts its influence over them in spite of their own will. The other day we entered one of those hells for the purpose of beholding a new phase of life, and we were terribly shocked. The room was full of gentlemen, and the faro table was surrounded by a great many players who were intently occupied with the game. We watched the game with a great deal of curiosity, and soon saw that one person at least was more deeply interested in it than the rest. He was a young man certainly not more than twenty-two or twenty-three years of age. What attracted our notice first was the fact of his throwing down a hundred dollar bill, and receiving in exchange twenty red "chips," each being worth five dollars These were all lost in a few minutes he bought a second and third hundred which soon found their way back again into the banker's hands. He went on losing; we looked into the player's face, and we saw a look there which we hope to God we shall never see again It was a mixture of despair and desperation—the young man's expression was horribly perverted, and all God's image blotted out. We made inquiries into the matter and learned a sad, sad story. This young man had recently married and had come into a large fortune. He had been enticed into a gambling house, and had yielded to the fascination of the game. He visited the house nightly, and had lost thousands in a few short weeks. All his fortune was being rapidly spent, and his young wife was left to mourn his absence nightly, for he never left off playing until the bank closed. All his friends had endeavored to withdraw him from the vortex into which he had plunged, but their efforts had been of no avail. He stated, in answer to their entreaties, that he knew he was bringing ruin upon himself and upon his young wife; but the demon had him in his clutches, and he could not escape. A few more weeks, and that young man will be irrevocably lost; he is already a confirmed gambler, and will end by being a beggar, without the power to enter upon any vocation which may even earn him his daily bread.

This is but a single episode, and such instances are of daily occurrence. If there had been no gambling houses in existence, in all probability this young man would not have reached his present degradation How necessary then, that the laws against gambling houses should be enforced; instead of which, these places are never interfered with, and the authorities render themselves culpable by passive complicity. Let the matter be agitated, and let every well wisher of his country use all his influence to put down those sinks of iniquity—the gambling halls.

CHILDREN think because they are children there is little they can do; but there is one thing harder to learn than all science, better to have than all gold, sweeter to friend than all outward loveliness, and attained by the child easier than by the man. It is patience the secret of all true happiness, the securer of lasting affection, and the strongest lever of success.

ARGUMENT, as usually managed, is the worst sort of conversation; as it is generally, in books the worst sort of reading.

From the Diary of a Late Physician.

"That's a dear good girl—that's my own Poll! And hearken," he added, with a mixture of good-humour and anxiety, "make yourself look handsome; never mind the cost; money's no object, you know! So tell that pert minx, your maid Joliffe, that I expect she'll turn you out first rate that day, if it's only to save the credit of us—poor—merchants!"

"Gracious, papa, but why are you really so anxious about my dressing so well?"

Her father, who had sat swallowing glass after glass with unusual rapidity, at the same time unconsciously mixing his wines, put his finger to the side of his nose, and winked in a very knowing manner. His dangter saw her advantage in an instant; and with the ready tact of her sex resolved at once to find out all that was in her father's heart concerning her. She smiled as cheerfully as she could, and affected to enter readily into all his fellings. She poured him out one or two glasses of his favourite wine, and chattered as fast as himself, till she at length succeeded in extracting from him an acknowledgement that he had distinctly promised her to Lord Scamp, whose visit on the ensuing Sunday would be paid to her as to his future wife. Soon after this she rang for candles; and kissing her father, who had fairly fallen asleep, she withdrew to her own, and there spent the next hour or two in confidential converse with her maid Joliffe.

Sunday came, and, true enough, with it Lord Scamp; a handsome heartless coxcomb, whose cool, easy assurance and business-like attentions to Miss Hillary excited in her a disgust she could scacely conceal. In vain was her father's eager and anxious eye fixed upon her; she maintained an air of uniform indifference; listened almost in silence, the silence of contempt, to all the lisping twaddle uttered by her would be lover, and so well acted, in short, the part she had determined upon, that his lordship as he drove home, felt somewhat disconcerted at being thus foiled for as he imagined, the first time in his life; and her father, after obsequiously attending his lordship to his cab summoned his daughter back from her mother's apatment into the drawing-room, and assailed her with a fury she had never known him to exhibit, at least towards any member of his family.

From that day might be dated the commencement of a kind of domestic reign of terror at the hitherto quiet and happy Bullion House. The one great aim of her father concerning his daughter and his fortune had been—or, rather, seemed on the point of being—frustrated by that daughter. But he was not lightly to be turned from his purpose He redoubled his civilities to Lord Scamp, who kept up his visits with a systematic punctuality, despite the contemptuous and disgraceful air with which the young lady constantly received him. The honourable roue was playing, indeed, for too deep a stake —an accomplished and elegant girl, with a hundred thousand pounds down, and nearly double that sum, he understood, at her father's death—to admit of his throwing up the game while the possibility of a chance remained.—Half the poor girl's fortune was already transferred, in Lord Scamp's mind, to the pockets of half a dozen harpies at the turf and the table; so he was, as before observed, very punctual in his engagements at Bullion House, with patient politeness continuing to pay the most flattering attentions to Miss Hillary—and her father. The latter was kept in a state of constant fever. Conscious of the transparent contepmt exhibited by his daughter towards her noble suiter, he could at length hardly look his lordship in the face, as, day after day, he obsequiously assured him that "there wasn't any thing in it;" and that, for all his daughter's nonsense, he already "felt himself a lord's father-in-law!"

Miss Hillary's life was becoming intolerable, subjected as she was to such systematic persecution, from which at length the sickchamber of her mother scarce afforded her a momentary sanctuary. A thousand times she formed the desperate determination to confess all to her father, and risk the fearful consequences; for such she dreaded they would be, knowing well her father's disposition and the terrible frustration of his favourite schemes which was taking place. Such constant anxiety and agitation, added to confinement in her mother's bedchamber, sensibly affected her health; and at the suggestion of Elliott, with whom she contrived to keep up a frequent correspondence, she had at length determined upon opening the fearful communication to her father, & so be at all events delivered from the intolerable presence and attentions of Lord Scamp.

By what means it came to pass, neither she nor Elliott were ever able to discover; but on the morning of the day she had fixed for her desperate denouement, Mr. Hillary, during the temporary absence of his daughter, returned from the city about two o'clock, most unexpectedly, his manner disturbed, and his countenance pale and distorted. Accompanied by his solicitor, he made his way at once to his daughter's apartment, with his own hand seized her desk and carried it down to the drawing room, and forced it open. Frantic with fury, he was listening to one of Elliott's fondest letters to his daughter being read by his solicitor as she unconsciously entered the drawing-room in walking attire. It would be in vain to attempt describing the scene that ensued. Old Hillary's lips moved, but his utterance was choked by the tremendous rage which possessed him, and forced him almost to the verge of madness. Trembling from head to foot, and his straining eyes apparently starting from their sockets, he pointed to a little heap of opened letters lying on the table, on which stood also her desk. She perceived that all was discovered, and with a smothered scream fell senseless upon the floor. There, as far as her father was concerned, she might have continued; but his companion sprang to the bell, lifted her inanimate form from the floor, and gave her to the entering servants, who instantly bore her to her own room.—Mr. Jeffreys, the solicitor, a highly respectable man, to whom Mr. Hillary had hurried the instant that he recovered from the first shock occasioned by discovering his daughter's secret, vehemently expostulated with his client on hearing the violent and vindictive measures he threatened to adopt towards his daughter and Elliott; for the tone of the correspondence which then lay before him satisfied him of the fatal extent to which his daughter's affections were engaged.

Now her treatment of Lord Scamp was accounted for! Her dreadful agitation on first hearing his intentions concerning that young nobleman & herself was explained. So here was his fondest hope blighted; the sole ambition of his life defeated, and by one of his own, his inferior servants, an outer clerk in his establishment at Mincing Lane! Confounded by a retrospect into the last few months, "Where have been my eyes, my common sense?" he groaned; "the devil himself has done it all, and made me assist in it! Oh, I see! I remember! Those cursed days, when he came up from the city to me, and when—I must always have her with me! There the mischief was begun; oh, it's clear as the daylight? I've done it! I've done it all! And now, by ——! I'll undo it all!" Mr. Jeffreys at length succeeded in subduing the excitement of his client, and bringing him to converse calmly on the painful and embarrassing discovery that had been made. Innumerable were the conjectures as to the means by which this secret acquaintance and correspondence had been carried on. Every servant in the house was examined, but in vain. Joliffe his daughter's maid, came at length, however strongly suspected, still undiscovered, out of the fierce and searching scrutiny. Poor Mrs. Hillary's precarious situation even did not exempt her from the long and angry inquiries of her exasperated husband. She had really, however, been entirely unacquainted with the affair.

The next morning Elliott was summoned from the city to Bullion House, whither he repaired accordingly about twelve o'clock, little imagining the occasion of his summons; for Miss Hillary had not communicated to him the intention she had formed of breaking the matter to her father, nor had she any opportunity of telling him of the alarming discovery that had taken place. He perceived, nevertheless, certain symptoms of disturbance in the ominous looks of the porter who opened the hall door, and the servant who conducted him to the drawingroom, where he found Mr. Hillary and another gentleman—Mr. Jeffreys—seated together at a table covered with papers, both of them obviously agitated.

"So, sir," commenced Mr. Hillary, fixing his furious eyes upon Elliott as he entered, "your villany's found out, deep as you are!"

"Villainy, sir?" echoed Elliott, indignantly, but turning very pale.

"Yes, sir, villainy! villainy! d—ble villainy! ay, it's all found out! Ah—ah—you cursed scoundrel!" exclaimed Mr. Hillary, with quivering lips, and shaking his fist at Elliott.

"For God's sake, Mr. Hillary, be calm!" whispered Mr. Jeffreys, and then addressed Elliott with a quiet severity,: "Of course, Mr. Elliott you are aware of the occasion of this dreadful agitation on the part of Mr. Hillary?" Elliott bowed with a stern inquisitive air, but did not open his lips.

"You beggarly brute; you filthy, d—d upstart; you—you—" stammered Mr. Hillary, with uocontrollable fury, your father was a scoundrel before you, sir: he cut his threat, sir!"

Elliott's face whitened in an instant, his expanding eye settled upon Mr. Hillary, and his chest heaved with mighty emotion. It was happy for the old man that Elliott at length recollected in him the father of Mary Hillary. He turned his eye for an instant towards Mr. Jeffreys, who was looking at him with an imploring, compassionate expression; Elliott saw and felt that he was thunderstruck at the barbarity of his client. Elliott's eye remained fixed upon Mr. Jeffreys for a minute, and then filled with tears. Mr. Jeffreys muttered a few words earnestly in the ear of Mr. Hillary, who seemed also a little staggared at the extent of his last sally.

"Will you take a seat, Mr. Elliott?" said Mr. Jeffreys, mildly. Elliott bowed, but remained standing, his hat grasped by his left hand with convulsive force. "You will make allowance, sir," continued Mr. Jeffreys, "for the dreadful agitation of Mr. Hillary, and reflect that your own conduct has occasioned it."

"So you dare think of marrying my daughter, eh?" thundered Mr. Hillary, as if about to rise from his chair. "By ——, but I'll spoil your sport though—I'll be even with you!" gasped the old man, and sank back panting in his seat.

"You cannot really be in earnest, sir," resumed Mr. Jeffreys, in the same calm and severe tone and manner in which he had spoken from the first, "in thinking yourself entitled to form an attachment and alliance to Miss Hillary.

"Why am I asked these questions sir, and in this most extraordinary manner?" inquired Elliott firmly. "Have I ever said one single syllable—"

"Oh, spare your denials, Mr. Elliott," said Jeffreys, pointing with a bitter smile to the letters lying open on the table at which he sat, "these letters of yours expression your feelings and intentions pretty plainly. Rely on it, everything is known."

"Well, sir, and what then?" inquired Elliott, haughtily; "these letters, I presume, are mine, addressed to Miss Hillary?" Jeffreys bowed. "Well, then, sir, I now avow the feelings those letters express. I have formed, however unworthy myself, a fervent attachment to Miss Hillary, and I will die before I disavow it."

"There! hear him! hark to the fellow! I shall go mad—I shall!" almost roared Mr. Hillary, springing out of his chair, and walking to and fro between it and that occupied by Mr. Jeffreys, with hurried steps and vehement gesticulations. "He owns it! he does! the—" and he uttered a perfect volley of execrations. Elliott submitted to them in silence. Mr. Jeffreys again whispered energetically into the ear of his client, who resumed his seat, but with his eyes fixed on Elliott, and muttering vehemently to himself.

"You see, sir, the wretchedness that your most unwarrantable, your artful, nay, your wicked and presumptuous conduct has brought upon this family. I earnestly hope that it is not too late for you to listen to reason—to abandon your insane projects." He paused, and Elliott bowed. "It is in vain," continued Mr. Jeffreys, pointing to the letters, "to conceal our fears that your attentions must have proved acceptable to Miss Hillary; but we give you credit for more honour, more good sense than will admit of your carrying farther this most unfortunate affair: of your persisting in such a wild—I must speak plainly—such an audacious attachment, one that is utterly unsuitable to your means, your prospects, your station, your birth, your education—"

"You will be pleased, sir, to drop the last two words," interrupted Elliott sternly.

"Why, you fellow! why, you're my clerk! I pay you wages! You're a hired servant of mine!" exclaimed Hillary, with infinite contempt.

"Well, sir," continued Jeffreys, "this affair is too important to allow our quarrelling about words. Common sense must tell you that under no possible view of the case can you be a suitable match for Miss Hillary; and, therefore, common honesty enjoins the course you ought to pursue. However, sir," he added, in a sharper tone, evidently piqued at the composure and firmness maintained by Elliott, "the long and short of it is, that this affair will not be allowed to go farther, sir. Mr. Hillary is resolved to prevent it, come what will."

"Ay, so help me God!" ejaculated Mr. Hillary, casting a ferocious glance at Elliott.

"Well, sir," said Elliott, with a sigh, "what would you have me do? Pray, proceed, sir."

"Immediately renounce all pretensions," replied Mr. Jeffreys, eagerly, "to Miss Hillary; return her letters; pledge yourself to discontinue your attempts to gain her affections, and I am authorized to offer a foreign situation connected with the house you at present serve, and to guaranty you a fixed income of 500*l*. a year.

"Ay! hark'ee, Elliott, I'll do all this, so help me God!" suddenly interrupted Mr. Hillary, casting a look of imploring agony at Elliott, who bowed respectfully, but made no reply.

"Suppose, sir," continued Mr. Jeffreys, with an anxious and disappointed air, "suppose, sir, for a moment that Miss Hillary were to entertain equally ardent feelings towards you with those which, in these letters, you have expressed to her; can you, as a man of honour, of delicacy, of spirit, persevere with your address where the inevitable consequence of success on your part must be her degradation from the sphere in which she has hitherto moved; her condemnation to straitened circumstances—perhaps to absolute want—for life! For believe me, sir, if you suppose that Mr. Hillary's fortune is to supply you both with the means of defying him; to support you in a life, on her part, of frightful ingratitude and disobedience, and on yours of presumption and selfishness, you will find yourself awfully mistaken!"

"He's speaking the truth, by —— he is!" said Mr. Hillary, striving to assume a calm manner. "If you do come together after all this, d—n me if I don't leave every penny I have in the world to a hospital or to a jail, in which one of you may perhaps end your days after all!"

"Perhaps, Mr. Elliott," resumed Jeffreys, "I am to infer from your silence that you doubt, that you disbelieve these threats. If so, I assure you, you are grievously and fatally mistaken; you do not, believe me, know Mr. Hillary as I know him and have known him these twenty years and upward. I solemnly and truly assure you that he will as certainly do what he says, and for ever forsake you both, as you are standing now before us!" He paused. "Again, sir, you may imagine that Miss Hillary has property of her own, at her own disposal. Do not so sadly deceive yourself on that score! Miss Hillary has, at this moment, exactly 600*l*. at her own disposal—"

"And how long is that to last? Come, sir, allow me to ask you what you have to say to all this?" inquired Mr. Jeffreys, folding his arms, and leaning back in his chair with an air of mingled chagrin and exhaustion. Elliott drew a long breath.

"I have but little to say, Mr. Jeffreys, in answer to what you have been stating," he commenced, with a melancholy but determined air. "However you may suspect me, and misconstrue and misrepresent my character and motives, I never in my life meditated a dishonourable action." He paused, thinking Mr. Hillary was about to interrupt him, but he was mistaken.—Mr. Hillary was silently devouring every word that fell from Elliott, as also was Mr. Jeffreys. "I am here as a hired servant, indeed," resumed Elliott, with a sigh, "and I am the son of one who—who—was an unfortunate—" His eyes filled, and his voice faltered. For some seconds there was a dead silence. The perspiration stood on every feature of Mr. Hillary's agitated countenance. "But, of course, all this is as nothing here." He gathered ——, and proceeded with a calm and resolute air. "I know how hateful I must appear to you; I do deserve bitter reproof; and surely I have had it, for my presumption in aspiring to the hand and heart of Miss Hillary. I tried long to resist the passion that devoured me, but in vain. Miss Hillary knew my destitute situation, she had many opportunities of ascertaining my character; she conceived a noble affection for me; I returned her love; I was obliged to do it secretly, and, as far as that goes, I submit to my censure; I feel, I know what I have done wrong! If Miss Hillary choose to withdraw her affection from me, I will submit though my heart break. If, on the contrary, she continue to love me"—his eye brightened—"I am not cowardly or base enough to undervalue her love." (Here Mr. Hillary struggled with Mr Jeffreys, who, however, succeeded in restraining his client.) "If Miss Hillary condescend to become my wife—"

"Oh Lord! oh Lord! oh Lord!" groaned Mr. Hillary, claping his hands upon his forehead; "open the windows, Mr. Jeffreys, or I shall be smothered. I am dying; I shall go mad!"

"I will retire, sir," said Elliott, addressing Mr. Jeffreys, who was opening the nearest window.

"Now but you sha'n't though," gasped Mr. Hillary; "you shall stop here"—he panted for breath. "Hark'ee, sir—d'ye hear, Elliott—listen—he could not recover his breath. Mr. Jeffreys implored him to take time to be cool. "Yes; now I'm cool enough—I've—taken time—to consider—I have! Hark'ee, sir—if you dare to think—of having—my daughter—and if she—is such a cursed fool—as to think of having—you"—he stopped for a few seconds for want of breath—"why—look'ee, sir—so help me God—you may both of you—and your children—if you have any—die in the streets—like dogs—I've done with you—both of you—not a farthing—not a morsel of bread—d—n me if I do!" Here he breathed like a hard-run horse "Now, sir—like a thief as you are!—go on courting—my daughter—marry her! ruin her! go, and believe that all I'm saying is—a lie!—go, and hope—that, by and by, I'll forgive you—and all that—try it, sir! Mary, and see whether I give in! I'll teach you—to rob an old man—of his child! The instant you leave this house, sir—this gentleman—makes my will—he does!—and when I'm dead—you may both of you—go to Doctors' Commons—borrow a shilling, if you can—and see if your names—or your children's—are in it, ha, ha, ha!" he concluded, with a bitter and ghastly laugh, snapping his shaking fingers at Elliott. "Get away, sir—marry after this if you dare!"

Selma Upward and Onward!—The Meeting Thursday Night!—We have not been furnished with the proceedings of the meeting that took place at the City Council Chamber on Thursday night last, but the substance of it was this: That, after carefully considering the facts, as presented by John W. Lapsley, Esq., and Judge Walker, with speeches from Col. Byrd, Col. Waddill & others, the meeting resolved nemine dissentiente that Selma shall or will contribute one hundred thousand dollars more to the completion of the Ala. & Tenn. Rivers Road to Gadsden, provided an equal amount shall be contributed in the upper country. This is done on the assurances of the Board of Directors of the Ala. & Tenn. Rivers Railroad that it, with their other means in bonds and land grant, will furnish them ample means to complete the road in running order to Gadsden, probably, in eighteen months; at all events, in two years.

The meeting was a very interesting one to those feeling any interest in the prosperity of Selma. Every one present appeared to be well satisfied that the action proposed was expedient and eminently proper—that we should make one strong effort and set Selma another long stride forward to her great career as the 'Central City of the Empire, Alabama.

Judge Walker gave assurances of what the upper country would do, and we believe they will march up to the work, like men to a good dinner. The results to flow from this action will be of the richest value to them and to us. We regret we have not space or time to say more.—Reporter.

Attempt to Poison.—An attempt was made last Saturday morning by some of the servants of Mr. Frank Nevitt, who resides near this place, to poison his family. It seems that the poison was put in the coffee at breakfast. Mr and Mrs. Nevitt and Mr. Norwood, the overseer, were the only members of the family who drank coffee, and soon after breakfast they were all affected with a peculiar blindness, dizziness and weakness of limbs, which convinced them of the effort that had been made to take their lives. A physician was soon called in, and they were relieved from the effects of the poisonous drug.—We understand that they have been unable to learn which servant did the fiendish act. It is to be hoped that it will be found out and the proper punishment visited upon the perpetrator of such a deed.—West Alabamian.

Death of an old Indian Princess. On Wednesday of last week, Eunice Mauwee, the last full blooded Indian of the Pishgachtigoh tribe, and a resident of the Indian Reserve, in Kent, N. Y., died at the age of 103 years. She was the grand daughter of Gideon Mauwee..., the last sachem of the tribe, and the first convert made by the Moravian Missionaries in that region.

Withdrawing from Liberia.—The Maryland House of Delegates on Wednesday cut off from the Colonization Society the annual appropriation of $5,000 by a decided vote, and left only the clause of the Code giving $70 per capita for each free negro that may be taken from the State.

Presidential Receptions.—Miss Lane's appearance at the last White House reception is described by a female gossip. Miss Lane is a tall, robust-looking girl, with blue eyes and light brown hair, rather a blonde than otherwise. She was dressed in a white silk, with two deep flounces of tulle, caught up by streamers of wide Scotch plaid velvet ribbon, extending from the waist, and tulle bertha. Each flounce was edged with quilled scarlet ribbon. A wreath of scarlet geranium buds and green geranium leaves encircled her hair, with drooping pendants of buds, and her necklace was six or seven strands of small pearls.

"Wife wife, what has become of the grapes?" "I suppose my dear the hens have picked them off," was her moderate reply. "Hens—hens—some two legged hens, I guess," said her husband, with some impetuosity. To which she calmly replied: "My dear did you ever see any other kind?"

Jacksonville Republican.

JACKSONVILLE, ALA.

March 15, 1860

☞We are authorized to announce Gen. James B. Martin, as a candidate for Judge of the Circuit Court in this, the 10th Judicial Circuit.—Election 1st Monday in May next.

BARTLETT OWEN, Tax Assessor of this County, at his various appointments, will receive the names of persons who may wish to subscribe for the REPUBLICAN.

He is authorized to offer very liberal terms, and also to receive and receipt for subscriptions.

☞Our Senator, Hon. T. A. Walker, arrived at home in good health, on Friday evening last. We have had but little opportunity to converse with him since his return, on the subject of our railroad; but learn that at the late meeting of the Board of directors, the necessary bonds and papers were prepared, and that Judge Walker expects to meet the Governor in Montgomery in a few days, for the purpose of obtaining the money. So soon as a few miles of iron can be obtained, the work of track laying will be resumed.

We received last week a copy of the "Humboldt Times," printed at Eureka, California, which contained particulars of the dreadful wreck of the Steamship Northerner, by striking on a rock, and by which some 20 or 30 of the passengers and crew were lost. The Times in speaking of those saved from the wreck, has the following paragraph:

"Typos." Among the passengers saved from the Northerner, are two brother "chips," named J. F. Gould and John I. Ginn. They are from San Francisco, and were on their way to Victoria to work for the British Government. They lost every thing they had, and landed here entirely out of sorts." They are faring well now, and will return to San Francisco next week."

J. I. Ginn, mentioned in the above paragraph, was formerly an apprentice in this office. After his time expired he went to Kansas; and is the same individual, from whose letter, we published, some two years ago, a brief sketch of his travels and hardships. Among other things, we remember his having joined the government expedition, sent out to open a road to Utah. Most of this company disbanded on the head waters of the Platte, and Ginn, with another named Logan, started alone and on foot to Great Salt Lake city. For four months they never slept in a house, and sometimes awoke in the morning with several feet of snow upon them. When they finally arrived at Salt Lake, the Mormon war was in progress, and they were kept guarded as prisoners several months, compelled a part of the time to dig potatoes with a piece of wagon tyre. With great difficulty Ginn obtained leave to join a Mormon trading company to California. Shortly after they left Salt Lake city they passed the scene of the Mountain Meadows massacre, where about 150 emigrants, men, women and children, were murdered in cold blood by the Indians and Mormons, their bodies still unburied and laying in three different groups, as if their murderers had returned to the attack, from some cause, three different times. The trading company which G. had joined was several times, on their route to California, closely besieged, at one place 5 days, threatened and in great peril from the hostile tribes of Indians thro' which they passed, and only saved by the great influence which the Mormons had obtained over these wild tribes. They however arrived safely in California.

Our friend Ginn, after passing all these perils, has now escaped the greater one of shipwreck, and may well be considered a man of destiny. He may safely infer for the future, that he is not to perish in the Snows of the Rocky mountains, be devoured by bears or panthers, be murdered by the Indians, or lost by shipwreck. He may also infer that it is safer to work for Uncle Sam than Queen Victoria.

☞Rev. E. Patton will please accept our thanks for the two lists of subscribers forwarded by him. We also tender our thanks to the gentlemen who extended their patronage to our paper.

☞An error occurred in the 4th line of the first paragraph of Judge Woods, letter in our last paper. A word was omitted by the printer. It ought to have read, "on the minds of the voters of Calhoun County.

☞We invite the attention of those who may wish to purchase valuable Lands to the Trust sale by H. W. Pickens, Trustee.

☞H. W. Box, Esq., Tax Assessor of St. Clair County, will receive and forward the names of persons who may wish to subscribe for the Jacksonville Republican. He is also authorized to receive and receipt for subscription paid to him.

☞We renew our call of attention to the advertisement of Henry Missroon & Co's Steamship line from Charleston to New York.

This line has been established some 12 or 15 years, making regular weekly trips; & yet so admirable have been the arrangements of the company, in having first class Steamships, always keeping them in safe and seaworthy order, & having none but the most competent, experienced and careful officers, that we believe no serious accident has occurred, in all that time, involving loss of life. This line certainly deserves both the confidence and patronage of the travelling public.

It will be seen that through tickets may be obtained, at very moderate rates at Mobile, New Orleans, Montgomery, Atlanta and other points.

At the election for intendant and Town Council, on Saturday 3d inst. the following named gentlemen were elected.

Wm. H. FLEMING, Int.
Dr. J. C. FRANCIS,
H. F. VERNON,
A. ADAMS,
S. P. HUDSON,
J. H. FARMER.

Hardware House, Charleston, S. C.

We invite the particular attention of Merchants trading at Charleston, to the advertisement of W. R. Morton, Hardware Merchant of that city. They could not perhaps procure their supplies of Hardware from a better point than Charleston; and we think it would be difficult for them to find a more reliable dealer, or one with whom they would be better pleased, than Mr. Morton.

The Tenth Judicial Circuit.

This Circuit composed of the countise of Calhoun, Randolph, Talladega and St. Clair, has heretofore had no existence in the judicial organization of Alabama. As our readers have already been apprised it was organised by the Judicial Circuit Bill recently enacted by the Legislature to the great relief not only of the Judges and other gentlemen dealing in the "perfection of human reason," but to the litigious citizens of the Circuit themselves.

This change creates with it the necessity of electing a new judge. In selecting an officer for this high and honorable trust there will be no difficulty. Gen. James B. Martin, our esteemed townsman is a candidate for the position and there is no probability of opposition. Nor is it necessary that there should be. A genial courteous gentleman, of spotless integrity, and possessing as he does, every judical qualification we regard him as eminently fitted to adorn the station to which he aspires. Regarding his election as beyond all doubt we venture to predict that he will wear the judicial ermine with becoming mien, and return it to his successor without stain or blemish.

Watchtower.

The Representative Man.

The Boston Journal affirms that Mr. Sherman, the candidate for Speaker, is "a purely representative man" of the Republican party. Mr. Sherman is an endorser of the Helper crisis. That Book says—

"Slavery must be throttled. The great revolutionary movement of 1775 will not be terminated until every slave in the United States is freed from the tyranny of his master. Every victim of the vile institution must be reinvested with the sacred rights and privileges of which he has been deprived by an inhuman oligarchy. Non-slaveholders of the South, we appeal to you to join us in our earnest efforts to rescue the soil of the South from the usurped and desolating control of these political vampires. Once and forever, so far as this country is concerned, the infernal question of slavery must be disposed of. A speedy and absolute abolishment of the whole system is the policy which we propose to pursue. Will you assist us? Will you be free men or will you be slaves? Do not reserve the strength of your arms until you shall have been rendered powerless to strike."

Again it says—

"At this day there is scarcely a grain of pure patriotism in the South except among the non-slaveholders."

"The North is remiss in their national duties in making no positive attack upon the institutions of the South. Freemen of the North, we ask you to organize as one man under the banners of liberty and aid us in exterminating slavery. In this crisis of affairs no man can be a true patriot without first becoming an Abolitionist."

It thus describes the purpose of the Republican party:—

"We expect to elevate to the Presidency in 1860 a representative of the Republican platform adopted at Philadelphia in 1856 [No more slave States and extermination of those twin relics of barbarism, slavery and poliygamy.] And forever thereafter we will if we can by our suffrages hold the Presidential Chair and other official positions in the federal government sacredly intact from the occupancy and polution of proslavery demagoguges, whether from the North or the South, and if the oligarchs do not quietly submit, the first battle between freedom and slavery will be fought at home, and may God defend the right."

"Inscribed on the banner which we unfurl to the world, to stand by it or die by it are the mottoes. Never another vote to any one who advocates the retention or perpetuation of slavery. No cooperation or association with proslavery men in politics, religion or society. No dealings with pro-slavery merchants, hotel-keepers, lawyers, physicians, or parsons, and abrupt discontinuance of subscriptions to all proslavery newspapers."

"We have determined to abolish slavery, and so help us God, abolish it we will. Take this to bed with you tonight. Live and think about it, dream over it, and let us know how you feel to-morrow morning."

These, then are the avowed doctrines of the "representative men" of the Republican party and who of any manly or national sentiment can fail to see that it would forever dishonor and disgrace Southern men or Northern Democrats to vote for such a Represetative man as Speaker Sherman! This is a sufficient justification of all the delays in the organization of the House. Let us now hope that Mr. Sherman and such men as he are to be laid on the shelf.—Boston Post.

"To-morrow" is the day on which lazy folks work, and fools reform.

[From the Advertiser and Gazette.]

[Lat]est from Washington.

[WA]SHINGTON, March 6.—In the [Senate] to-day, Thaddeus Hyatt was [brou]ght before that body for contempt. [He wi]ll have a hearing on Friday. Sen[ator] Brown's Territorial resolutions [were] debated and laid over. Wigfall's [amend]ment to the Military Academy [bill a]ppropriating a large sum for the [defen]ce of Texas, was discussed. Du[ring t]he debate, Gov. Houston's letter [and t]he accompanying communication [of] President Buchanan were read. [The s]ubject will be resumed to morrow. [In t]he House the bill reducing mile[age 5]0 per centum passed by a large [majori]ty. The resolution appointing a committee of five to investigate [the ch]arge of executive interference in [legis]lative action was adopted.

[A]RRIVAL OF THE CAHAWBA.

[NE]W YORK, March 6.—The steam[er C]ahawba has arrived from Havana, [bringi]ng $100,000 in specie. She re[ports] having passed the remnant of a[n] unknown ship, which had been [burnt] to the water's edge.

GENERAL NEWS.

[It] is stated in official circles that [Fran]ce will not annex Savoy without [the] general consent of the great pow[ers o]f Europe.

[Th]e attention of all classes in Eng[land] seems to be concentrating on the [princ]iples and policy of the Budget of[fered] in the House of commons by the [Chan]cellor of the Exchequer. Mee[tings] in relation to it are being held in [almo]st every part of England, some in [favor] of the Budget and some in oppo[sitio]n to it. The conservative hostility is increasing, and also in opposi[tion] to the recently concluded commer[cial] treaty with France.

[Th]e army estimates show an increase [of n]early two million pounds sterling.

[Th]e intelligence from the scene of [the] operations between Spain and [Moro]cco continue in about the condi[tion] that former reports left it.

[The] Moors are quite anxious for peace, [and] Spain will doubtless grant it after [a few] more victories and satisfactory [negotia]tions.

[MI]SSISSIPPI DELEGATE TO VIRGINIA.

[RI]CHMOND, March 5.—Gov. Fletch[er on] Saturday sent to the Legislature [a com]munication from Mr. Starke, the [Miss]issippi Commissioner, urging spee[dy ac]tion in favor of a Southern con[feren]ce for self-preservation.

[THE] PRESIDENT ON TEXAS AFFAIRS.

[W]ASHINGTON, March 3.—It is an[noun]ced in well informed circles that [the] President disapproves of the act [of G]ov. Houston, of Texas, in calling [out t]he Texan volunteers. The Presi[dent] has ordered a large federal force to [the f]rontier. No unconditional order [has] been issued for our troops to cross [into] Mexico, but permission to do so [is sh]ortly expected by virtue of pen[ding] negotiations.

[N]EGRO SUFFRAGE.—The question of [conf]erring upon negroes the right of [suffra]ge is to be submitted to the people [at th]e next general election. The res[olut]ions to amend the Constitution so [as t]o make them voters, sanctioned by [the] last Legislature of that State, have [pass]ed the present Assembly by an af[firm]ative Republican vote of 70, only [two] Republicans voting in the nega[tive].

[STE]AMBOAT EXPLOSION—DREADFUL LOSS OF LIFE

[E]ASTON PA., March 7.—A new steam[boat] was in the act of starting this fore[noon], on a trial when its boilers exploded, [and] produced a total wreck of the boat [and m]achinery, and the appalling loss of [life a]nd the painful wounding of many [pers]ons.

[S]even bodies have been recovered, in[clud]ing that of Judge Sharp, of Belvidere; [bu]t of the wounded have been rescued. [The] number of killed and wounded have [not] been ascertained.

[W]ASHINGTON, March 8.—In the Senate [to-d]ay, Mr. Grimes, of Iowa, gave notice [that] he would move to retrocede the Dis[tric]t of Columbia to Maryland, and re[mov]e the Capitol elsewhere. Mr. Brown's [Terr]itorial resolutions were debated.

[I]n the House, bills were reported from [the] appropriate Committees, to establish a [nati]onal printing office, a military appro[pria]tion, and one route for entire mail be[twe]en the Atlantic and the Pacific. All [refe]rred to Committee of the whole on the [Sta]te of the Union.

[From the Selma Reporter]

[W]e had intended to publish some days [sin]ce, the following extract from a letter [wh]ich lately appeared in the Mobile Ad[ver]tiser. This letter contains a summary [of f]acts and takes positions that cannot be [too] well noted by the friends of Selma. It [app]ears to have been a private letter, but [m]ay do the people good to read it:

"We have just received news of the fi[nal] passage of the three per cent. appro[pri]ation bill. This gives for the Alabama [an]d Tennessee Rivers Rail Road, as you [wi]ll have noticed, $225,000; to the Wills [Va]lley Road, $75,000; to the Selma and [Gu]lf, only $40,000, and, finally, all of the [am]ount of $663,000, besides the annual [int]erest of near $40,000, to the Central.

[The]se amounts will all set us forward ama[zin]gly. They improve the value of the Sel[ma] and Gulf stock largely.

[Th]e Alabama and Tennessee road should [no]w be operating to Jacksonville—35 mile[s fro]m its present terminus, Talladega—in [tw]elve or fifteen months; and, in twelve or [fift]een months after that, we shall proba[bly] have all three connections northward—[to] wit: from Jacksonville to Dalton, [ ] miles; (and New York, etc.); from [Ga]dsden to Chattanooga (the Wills Val[ley]); and from Gadsden to Guntersville [an]d Winchester, and shortly after that the [Cen]tral may be opened from Montevallo [to] Decatur, making the distance from Sel[ma] to Nashville only 290 miles—as near [as] Atlanta is to Nashville. Now if we [ha]d the line open very direct from Selma [to] Mobile, say 145 miles, as we should [hav]e it, Montgomery would be now here.

[T]his direct rout would be of vast bene[fit] to Mobile, and, I think, to Selma, also—[it w]ould make ours the great route of trav[el] from the Gulf to all the great points of [the] North, East and Europe, and also of [the] central West. We shall have a large [adv]ance in our favor over the routes tal[ked] of—via Montgomery, Columbus, Ga., [an]d the Northeast and Southwest; and the [fin]est coal beds to the Gulf will find our [rou]te fifty or sixty miles nearer to Mobile [tha]n by any talked of via Montgomery, [an]d then we have easier grades and curves [of] 60 feet, they 47, and so on.

[W]e intend to make the Selma and Gulf [a v]ery superior road, for fast time, and [hea]vy loads. No grade exceeding 40 feet no curve exceeding 2 1-2 or 3 deg., and very little of this. The grade, too, is so distributed as to prevent no very long stretch of 40 feet continuously. In the line across Dallas and Wilcox counties, from Selma to the Monroe county line, we lose only 1 1-4 miles, air line from the North bank of the river to line of Monroe 39 1-2 miles, and railroad 40 3-4. There are some six to eight miles tolerably heavy work; but the average estimate for the grading, at good prices, will be but little over $5,000 per mile.

We want to manage to complete the road through in two years, if possible. If Mobile will aid us a little, we can do this. She is deeply interested, as there will be on the line of our road near 40,000 bales, and out of the 150,000 bales and that will be received at Selma in two or three years, 75,000 or 100,000 bales will pass over this road, and other articles I will not now attempt to enumerate. What the coal tonnage will amount to, no one can guess; something between 100,000 and 500,000 tons, probably. One thing you may be certain of, there will pass down our road more cotton than DOWN the Ala. and Fla. and Girard roads. Make a note of this, if you please. I wish I had time to say more. I enclose you something that may be further suggestive to your intelligence. I am too much pressed to write at all satisfactorily.

I must say, however, that I think the Dalton and Jacksonville road is now in good hands, and that good progress will be made towards Jacksonville, and perhaps make the connection in the course of two years. I know the present President, Judge Crook, of that road. He is a man of decided energy, intelligence, prudence and character, and he is anxious to make this connection, to get to the Gulf markets.

With this line complete and ours, the distance from Mobile to Dalton will be about 380 miles. The distance from Mobile to Jacksonville, about 260 miles, perhaps a mile or two, less or more—Selma half way house. Mobile to Knoxville will be only 490 miles—between 50 and 60 less than by the N. E. and S. W. road; 40 or 50 miles shorter than any line by Montgomery, supposing she should build up to some point on the Ala. and Tenn. Rivers road, in Shelby, and 75 or 80 miles less than to go from Montgomery by Atlanta to Dalton. Thus, you see, we have the route from the Gulf to the North.

Yours truly.
LOCOMOTIVE.

RAIL ROADS.—We learn that last week the Surveying parties of the Ga. & Ala., and of the Dalton & Jacksonville R. R. Companies, were at Cave Springs, and that of the R. R. Company from Marietta to Jacksonville, passed through Cedar Town, on their way to the same place. A Road is also projected from Griffin to Jacksonville. Thus, it seems, that point is very important for Railroad connections and will be greatly benefitted by them—if they are all made.—Rome Courier.

TERRIBLE TRAGEDY IN ARKANSAS—A MAN MURDERED IN HIS OWN HOUSE—LYNCH LAW—TWO MEN, THE MURDERERS, AND THE WIFE OF THE DECEASED HUNG BY A MOB.—The particulars of a most bloody tragedy, which was enacted in Courtland county, Arkansas, near St. Francis river, about 25 miles from this city, came to our knowledge yesterday. On the night of the 21st ult., a man named Robinson was shot through the window and instantly killed by some person on the outside of his house. When the diabolical deed was committed, as was afterwards ascertained, nobody was in the house with him but his wife, and he was in the act of undressing, preparatory to going to bed. The whole matter remained buried in the deepest mystery until several days had elapsed, when some of the neighbors of the murdered man arrested his wife on suspicion. She confessed that she knew something of the killing, and implicated two brothers, whose names our informant did not ascertain. On Wednesday last the two men were arrested. One of them confessed that it was arranged that when Robinson was put out of the way he was to marry his widow, and that he had paid his brother one hundred dollars to do the deed. A vigilance committee was formed, and on Thursday the two men were taken into the woods and hung. The committee also resolved to hang the woman, and was to have executed the sentence yesterday. Altogether, the affair is one of the bloodiest records of crime and speedy retribution we ever heard of.—Memphis Avalanche.

CORN AT 50 CTS PER BUSHEL.—As the time for pitching craps" is at hand we would suggest to our planting friends in Mississippi and elsewhere the propriety of planting corn enough to supply them selves and have a little to spare at 50 cts. per bushel. Our best land will make from thirty to sixty bushels to the acre, which at fifty cents a bushel would bring at home fifteen to thirty dollars about as good as cotton at 10 cts. Our country is being settled rapidly and corn is and has been in great demand since our acquaintance with the country, at seventy-five cents to a dollar and a half per bushel. And with the present prospects of emigration the demand will fully keep pace with the amount grown. Our farmers should first plant plenty of grain for their own consumption (and to do this have a few hundred bushels to spare) then make all the cotton they can, but be sure to raise your own bread and meat and be independent.—Ent. News.

Terrible Conflagration in Bridgetown.

NEW YORK, March 7.—By an arrival from Barbadoes, we learn that a terrible conflagration occurred in the city of Bridgetown, by which a large portion of the city was destroyed. The loss is estimated at $2,500,000. [Bridgetown is the capital town of the Island of Barbadoes, and had a population in 1844 of 19,362.]

LIFE'S HAPPIEST PERIOD.—Kingsley, the author of "Alton Locke," &c., gives his evidence on this disputed point. He thus declares:—"There is no pleasure that I have ever experienced like a child's midsummer holliday. The times I mean, when two or three of us used to go away up the brook, and take our dinners with us, and come home at night tired, dirty happy, scratched beyond recognition, with a great nosegay, three little trout and one shoe the other one having been used for a boat, till it had gone down with all hands out of sounding. How poor our Derby days, our Greenwich dinners, our evening parties where there are plenty of nice girls, are after that! Depend upon it a man never experiences such pleasure or grief after fourteen as he does before, unless in some cases in his first love-making, when the sensation is new to him.

DR. CHURCHILL'S REMEDY

FOR THE PREVENTION AND CURE OF CONSUMPTION

WINCHESTER'S
GENUINE PREPARATION OF THE
HYPOPHOSPHITES
OF LIME AND OF SODA

The Specific Remedy for Consumption, Chronic Bronchitis, Asthma, Scrofula, Dyspepsia, General Debility, and all Nervous Diseases.

The success of this NEW REMEDY (discovered by Dr Churchill of P's) is obtaining for it the most UNBOUNDED POPULARITY throughout Europe and the United States.

It is a purely SCIENTIFIC PREPARATION, and acts with INVARIABLE EFFICACY in all stages of Pulmonary and nervous Diseases. The Hypophosphites increase the Principle which constitutes nervous force, and are the most powerful blood generating agents.

The Cure of Consumption,

In the SECOND and THIRD STAGES (at a period consequently, when there can be no uncertainty as to the nature of the disease,) can be obtained, IN ALL CASES by this treatment, except when the existing lesion of the lungs is of itself sufficient to produce death.

This REMEDY has not only a curative effect, but will, if used wherever there exists a suspicion of the disease, PREVENT ITS DEVELOPEMENT, & thus act AS A PRESERVATIVE WITH REGARD TO CONSUMPTION, JUST AS VACCINATION DOES WITH REGARD TO SMALL-POX.

Professional Correspondence

"COLUMBUS Ohio, Aug. 8, 1859.—I have been treating this disease for twenty-five years, and have derived more satisfaction from the use of the HYPOPHOSPHITES than from all other forms of medication combined."

"MANCHESTER, MICH., Aug. 3, 1856.—I have used the HYPOPHOSPHITES in my practice with very happy effects—so much so that I WOULD NOT BE SATISFIED TO REMAIN WITHOUT THEM.

"MIDDLEBURY, VT., Aug. 9, 1859.—I believe the HYPOPHOSPHITES used in the manner and way Dr. Churchill used them, WILL CURE CONSUMPTION."

SHEPHERDSTOW, VA., Aug 15, 1859.—I have prescribed the Hypophosphites in severl cases, and am delighted with its effects. IT ACCOMPLISHING WONDERS.

"LOWELL, O., July 5, 1859.—I have used in all about forty bottles, and in but one instance have they failed to benefit the patient, and that was a hopeless one before I was called—I have had several cases given up by attending physicians, WHO ARE NOW ENJOYING COMPARATIVELY GOOD HEALTH and EXEMPT FROM ALL THE SYMPTOMS of pulmonary disease. I have used the REMEDY in my own case, with decided success. It was regarded a s HOPELESS by physicians & friends and even by myself under the old treatment. I am now able to ride in attending on the sick as many miles perhaps in a day as any other physician in the county.

"CHATHAM, PA., July 26, 1859.—I received the twelve bottles of Churchill's Remedy for Consumption. * * * IT HAS WORKED WONDERS IN EVERY CASE."

CONSUMPTIVES, in any stage of the Disease, should (resort immediately to the use of the HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME AND SODA. "WINCHESTER'S GENUINE PREPARATION" (in simple syrup) in extra large bottles, is "chemically pure;" and is prepared according to his original Formula.

A BEAUTIFUL EXTRACT.—When the summer of youth is slowly wasting away on the nightfall of age, and the shadow of the past becomes deeper and deeper, and life wears to its close, it is pleasant to look through the vista of time upon the sorrows and felicities of our earliest years—If we have a home to shelter, and hearts to rejoice with us, & friends have been gathered together around our firesides then the rough places of way faring will have been worn and smoothed away in the twilight of life, while the many spots we have passed through will grow brighter and more beautiful. Happy, indeed, are they whose intercourse with the world has not changed the tone of their holier feeling, or broken those musical chords of the heart, whose vibrations are so melodious, so tender and so touching in the evening of their life.

TO THE PUBLIC.

Ever since my "Aromatic Schiedam Schnapps"—the purest and best Gin for medical purposes—became fully appreciated throughout this country, I have been constantly solicited by druggists, apothecaries, and large numbers of the most eminent physicians, in all parts of the Union, to add to my Gin importations pure Brandies and Wines, and to bottle them the same as I am and have been doing with the Schnapps; to seal with my seal and give my certificate guarantying their undoubted purity.

I should long ago have endeavored to comply with the flattering requests, but I found it impossible to do so, especially in regard to the important articles of Brandy, Port and Madeira Wines, owing to the high prices in Europe, occasioned by short grape crops for some years. Happily for the success of my new enterprise, the grape crops for the last and the previous years were abundant.

Another point in my favor is this the duty now on French Brandy is 70 per cent. less than it was when my medical friends began to solicit me to furnish pure Brandy and Wines. These favoring circumstances have enabled me to commence a new enterprise.—I have concluded to import Cognac Brandy and Wines, to bottle them for medical as well as for private use. I am well aware, from the bitter experience, the vile attacks, the misrepresentation of motives and enmity of dealers and mixers of bad articles which I met with & conquered in the case of my Schnapps before obtained its present proud pre-eminence over all other Gins, that the new enterprise will be attended with equal opposition more trouble, and involve an immense outly of capital. These difficulties and expenses will be much greater, because I shall have to encounter the malignity and enmity of countless thousands who are engaged in the liquor trade, and making fortunes by the manufacture of infamous imitations of "Brandy" made from poisonous compounds—their use being alike destructive to healthy human life, and of course speedy death to the feeble invalid or those in whose behalf eminent physicians have urged upon me the importation of a pure, invigorating article of Brandy. I shall do so, in spite of all opposition, even that of the dealers and sellers of the stuff in bottles called "Brandy," of which millions of bottles are anually sold, and which is no better than the worst of poisons.

I am perfectly willing and well satisfied to embark in this new enterprise, and have no fears, no doubts about the most ultimate success for myself and the druggists and apothecaries in the thirty-three states, if they will heartily co-operate with me in my efforts to drive out of use the vilest of compounds, called "Brandy," and replace it with the pure unadulterated article, which I will faithfully and truly supply.

The medical virtues of French Brandy need not to be told. The Brandy imported by me I will bottle, seal with my seal, my label, and add my certificate that it is of the first quality, and pure and unadulterated as when it left the distillery in France.

I will stake my reputation as a man, my standing as a merchant, and my tried commercial integrity, that what I pledge and certify to with my seal, my label, and my certificate is correct, and can be relied upon by purchasers in any section of the Union to which my Brandy may be sent. I have made arrangements with the best Brandy manufacturers in France, with those who have a world wide renown as the first Brandy exporters. I have selected four eminent firms who will ship me their Brandies. I shall not designate the article by any other name than Wolfe's Genuine Cognac Brandy. If I were to do otherwise it would be useless for then unprincipled persons, who are incessantly engaged in the nefarious traffic of imitating all valuable articles, would soon imitate and adopt my mark as a cloak under which to sell their compound of poisons to cover the vile imposition.

I am now prepared to receive and execute orders for Wolf's Genuine Cognac Brandy addressed to me, No. 22 Beaver Street. Prices will be given to personal application, or in reply to letters.

In this circular I have thus far written mainly about pure Cognac Brandy; I have now to call your attention to other liquors and wines.

I am prepared to supply orders for "Jamaica Rum" imported and bottled by me; also Irish and Scotch Whiskey. The purity and genuineness of the last-named articles, imported for "medical use." I will also guaranty with my seal, my label, and my certificate.

I shall also import the purest and best "Madeira," "Port," and "Sherry" Wines for Medical purposes. These I also guaranty with my seal, my label, and my certificate.

In conclusion permit me to add that I shall be happy to hear from those that this circular reaches, and whose personal or pecuniary interests it may effect, in the combination of articles that I engage to supply. Should any such person visit New York—especially a Druggists, Apothecary or Physician—I shall be most happy to receive a personal call.

There is no importer who possesses more actual experience and knowledge of the importing liquor and wine trade than I do. I have been engaged in it over thirty years.

I have narrated some facts connected with my new enterprise for the particular information of those connected with the practice of the sale of medicines. If I am favored with the visits of any such, or by friends to whom they give letters of introduction to me, they can see with their own eyes, and test my truthfulness by their own observation.

I respectfully crave, for this Circular and its contents a careful and attentive perusal. I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,

UDOLPHO WOLFE.

EDUCATIONAL NOTICE.

The undersigned, having for some time past, contemplated the establishment of an Educational Institute for young Ladies in some locality, affording the greatest facilities for speedy success and permanent usefulness; announces as the result, that, he has finally decided that Jacksonville is the best point for this object.

He will, in the execution of his design, present for patronage, an Institution as favorable as any in the country for acquiring all that is essential in a liberal and accomplished female education.

To accommodate patronage from abroad he will, for the present, procure board for any applying for the benefits of this institution, in good families in the village; hoping at an early day, to be able to provide it for them in his own.

In the instruction and discipline of the pupils, he will be assisted by his wife, who is well known in this community as having been for several years the successful disciplinarian and teacher of the Jacksonville Female Academy.

In offering ourselves to the people of Jacksonville and vicinity as Instructors of youth, we have the confidence that we throw ourselves upon a generous and appreciative public, who will not withhold from us the reward we merit, nor fail to acknowledge our ability for this undertaking, or honest endeavor to discharge our duty both to pupils and patrons.

The RATES OF TUITION in this Institution will be the same as in others of a similar grade, viz: for the

1st Class—Embracing primary studies,	$10
2d Class " the common English branches;	$12 50
3d Class " the higher English branches and the Natural sciences,	$16 00
4th Class " the higher branches of mathemetics and the ancient and modern Languages,	$20 00

The science of vocal music will be taught gratuitously to all the pupils, as a daily exercise.

Instruction in the department of Instrumental music, will be given by accomplished and successful Teachers.

A competent Teacher of the ornamental branches will be provided.

The first session of this School will open on the 9th of January next, at the house of the Principal, and a more commodious place will soon be provided.

While moral and religious instruction will be constantly and faithfully imparted, all sectarian and denominational influence will be conscientiously avoided.

Coming as we do with the best of motives, we are determined to merit, and trust we shall receive a worthy share of your patronage.

DR. M'LANE'S
FOR THE CURE OF
Hepatitis or Liver Complaint,
DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver.

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increase on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for a rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness, the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.

DR. M'LANE'S LIVER PILLS, IN CASES OF AGUE AND FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them A FAIR TRIAL.

Economy & Progression.

In this, the age of advancement, many things new and invaluable have been introduced—not the phantoms and chimeras of other ages, but new ones, of sound and practical utility. In no department is progression better marked or more visibly to be seen than in the medical, when originating with competent men, and confined to scientific limits. Precisely of that character are the following remedial agents; none will prove more efficient, or are so often needed.

DR. LITTLE'S ANODYNE COUGH DROPS.

A new and certain cure for Coughs, Asthma Pain in the Breast; also Croup, Whooping Cough, Colds etc., among children.

This is a pleasant medicine to take, and relieving immediate relief, and in nine out of ten cases a prompt cure. It exercises the most controlling influence over Coughs and Irritation of the Lungs of any remedy known, often stopping the most violent in a few hours, or at most in a day or two. Many cases thought to be decidedly consumptive have been promptly cured by using a few bottles, and wearing the Little's Strengthening Plasters on the chest. As an anodyne expectorant, without astringing the bowels, it stands paramount to all cough mixtures.

DR. LITTLE'S FRENCH MIXTURE.

This is prepared from a French Receipt (in the forms of No's 1 and 2, the first for the severe, and No. 2 for the chronic stage,) that has been much improved upon in this country; & from its unexampled success is likely to supercede every other remedy for the cure of the diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Gonorrhœal Blenorrhœal and Leuchorrhœal or Flour Albus Affections. This extensive compound combines properties totally different in taste and character from anything to be found in the United States in Pharmacopœa or in private practice; and in point of as easy and efficiency is not rivalled in America.

DOLLAR VERMIFUGE.

Prepared and put up in bottles and vials, only by C. W. Little. In using, nothing else is required to relieve children of worms; and besides being one of the best and cheapest ever offered to the public, its frequent use in families will save much trouble and expense, as well as the lives of many children; for eight out of every ten cases generally require it.

DR. LITTLE'S RINGWORM & TETTER OINTMENT.

Hundreds of cases of Chronic Tetters, Scald Heads, and diseases of the skin generally, have been cured by this remedy, and since the introduction of the No 2 preparation (being stronger) scarcely a case has been found that it will not effectually eradicate in a short time. For the cure of Cancerous Sores and Ulcers it is applied in the form of Plasters, and is almost infallible.

In addition, the Proprietor prepares, for the great convenience and certainty in prescribing, Strengthening Plasters, of the most superior quality, Improved Cook's Pills (an easy billious cathartic) Vegetable Pills (a mild cathartic to obviate costiveness) Antacid (for tightness and acidity of the stomach.) Tonic Bitters, etc., which will be sent on consignment if ordered.

Medicines, like everything else, are better and more economically supplied to the great mass of the people by merchandise than in any other way.

Physicians are referred to the 13th page of Dr. Little's pamphlet, to the catalogue of medicines of the Materia Medica, that he uses in compounding his different remedies, and asked to say if they are not the chief reliance of the profession, as he himself has practised medicine extensively for more than ten years, before retiring to the drug business.

In more than two hundred places in Georgia, and in all the Southern States they are to be had; and as there are scamps about who are counterfeiting his remedies, by palming off their own or something else, by using the same or similar names (for no patent is wanted or secured amid the absurd patents of the day.)

N. B.—All orders and letters on business are to send in future to LITTLE & BRO. Macon, Georgia, instead of Philadelphia.

This caution is rendered essentially necessary as large quantities of inferior and defective Linens are prepared; season after season and sealed with the name of RICHARDSON & by Irish Houses, who, regardless of the injury thus inflicted alike on the American consumer & the manufacturers of the genuine Goods, will not readily abandon a business so profitable, while purchasers can be imposed on with Goods of a worthless character.

Fever and Ague,

from which mankind suffer over a large part of the globe, is the consequence of a diseased action in the system, induced by the poisonous miasm or vegetable decay. This exhalation is evolved by the action of solar heat on moist soil, and rises with the watery vapor from it. While the sun is below the horizon this vapor lingers near the earth's surface, and the virus is taken with it through the lungs into the blood. There it acts as an irritating poison on the internal viscera and excreting organs of the body. The liver becomes torpid and fails to secrete not only this virus, but also the bile from the blood. Both the virus and the bile accumulate in the circulation, and produce violent constitutional disorder. The spleen, the kidneys, and the stomach sympathize with the liver, and become disordered also. Finally, the instinct of our nature, as if in an attempt to expel the noxious infusion, concentrates the whole blood of the body in the internal excretories to force them to cast it out. The blood leaves the surface, and rushes to the central organs with congestive violence. This is the CHILL. But in this effort it fails. Then the fevers follow, in which the blood leaves the central organs and rushes to the surface, as if in another effort to expel the irritating poison through that other great excretory—the skin. In this also it fails, and the system abandons the attempt exhausted, and waits for the recovery or strength to repeat the hopeless effort another day. These are the fits or paroxysms of FEVER AND AGUE such constitutional disorder will of course undermine the health if it is not removed.

We have labored to find, and have found, an antidote,

which neutralizes this malarious poison in the blood, and stimulates the liver to expel it from the body. As it should, so it does cure this affliction sooner with perfect certainty. And it does more; it rather does what is of more service to those subject to this infection. If taken in season it expels from the system as it is absorbed, and thus keeps those who use it free from its attacks; keeps the system in health although exposed to the disease. Consequently it not only cures, but protects from the great variety of affections which are induced by this malignant influence, such as Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb, or Masked Ague, Bilious Headache, or Bilious Headache, Bilious Fevers, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitation, Painful Affections of the Spleen, Hysterics, Colic, Paralysis, and Painful Affections of the Stomach and Bowels, all of which, when arising from this cause, will be found to assume more or less the intermittent type. This "AGUE CURE" removes the cause of these derangements, and cures the disease.

This is accomplished by stimulating the excretories to expel the virus from the system: the those organs by degrees become habituated to do this hereditary of their own accord. Henceforth what is even a predisposition. Time may accomplish the same end, but often life is not long enough, or is sacrificed in the attempt, while this "AGUE CURE" does it at once, and with safety. We have great reason to believe this is a surer as well as safer remedy for the whole class of diseases which are caused by the miasmatic infection, than any other which has been discovered; and it has still another important advantage to the public, which is, that is cheap as well as good.

LOOTH, GARRET & CAMAC,

Analytical Chemists.

New York, Sept. 3d. 1858.

I have analized a sample of Chestnut Grove Whiskey, received from Mr. Charles Wharton, Jr., of Philadelphia, and having carefully tested it, I am pleased to state that it is entirely free from poisonous or deleterious substances. It is an unusually pure and fine flavored quality of whiskey.

JAMES R. CLINTON.

Analytical Chemist.

Boston, March 7th, 1859.

I have made a chemical analysis of commercial samples of Chestnut Grove Whiskey, which proves to be free from the heavy Fusil Oils, and perfectly pure and unadulterated.—The fine flavor of this Whiskey is derived from the Grain used in manufacturing it.—

POETRY.

Deserted.

Thou hast pledged thee to another; a fairer, wealthier bride;
Had I loved thee as a brother, I could see thee by her side,
But I know with gold they iron thee from her who loved thee best;
And I feel my heart is breaking, for now it knows no rest.

Thou hast clasped her to thy bosom, and this heart is lonely now;
I droop in deepest sorrow, I shed the bitterest tears,
Thou hast severed in an hour the tenderness of years.

Farewell forever, false one! the world will smile on thee;
Farewell forever, false one! the world will frown on me.
Yet was it well to leave thee—how could'st thou so deceive,
Through years of bitter sorrow long and sorely shall I grieve.

KATE.

Miscellaneous.

"Married couples resemble a pair of shears," said Sydney Smith, "so joined together that they cannot be separated, often moving in opposite directions, yet always punishing any one who comes between them." This brings to our mind's eye a red-headed woman and a bobtail dog that once upon a time followed us out of a yard which we had entered in the capacity of a peace-maker.—Reporter.

Superstition.

It is something remarkable that superstition should take so strong a hold upon the human mind, the talented, the learned and the ignorant all yield to its influence. In the mind of the seaman it is perhaps stronger than in that of any other class of men. When we consider the isolated life they lead, how much they are thrown upon their own resources for mental food, and how often they are exposed to death, it is not surprising they are superstitious as evidence, we give the following:

The ship Raven, bound from New York to the East Indies, was crossing the Southeast trades, with all drawing sail set. It was the last dog watch, the time between six and eight o'clock, and several of the watch who ought to have been on deck, were below listening to a yarn which Tom Gray was spinning. "Avast that pigeon," said Bill Graves, interrupting the yarn, and springing from his seat, "catch that beautiful pigeon before it flies on deck again." "What pigeon?" demanded half a dozen voices, "we don't see anything."

In the meantime, before the sailors could make farther inquiry, an order was issued from the quarter deck, to haul the main topmast stay sail down. This brought the stragglers of the watch on deck, and those below requested Tom to continue his yarn; but Tom, apparently unconscious of their request, said, in a sorrowful tone: "Poor Bill, he is not long for this world." The white pigeon which he saw was the angel of death, who appeared to me as he has done before, like a young man with an hour glass in his hand the sands of which had nearly run out. He was rigged in white, fastened round the waist with a band like fire, and the name of Bill Graves on it."

Hardly had he finished his description, when the thrilling cry rang fore and aft, "A man overboard!" In an instant all hands were on deck, the ship hove to, and the lee quarter boat lowered. But all in vain, poor Bill Graves, who had been thrown overboard by the staysail sheet, sank to rise no more. By the time the boat was hoisted up and the sails trimmed, the dog watch was out. After the exchange of sorrowful regrets, the watches separated, but the fate of Graves was the theme of their conversation; even after the watch below had turned into their hammocks they spoke of him and his fine qualities as a seaman—for he was a general favorite.

The watch on deck formed a group around Tom Gray, who said he had frequently seen the Angel of Death before. "The first time, shipmates, I saw him, was when I belonged to the British ten gun pelter Vulture, lying in the harbor of Sierra Leone. We had a fever on board, and over thirty men were down with it. I was sick at the time myself. The angel of death came down the main hatchway, and walked deliberately forth among the hammocks. He was then dressed in a flowing robe of orange yellow, and in his right hand he held a scroll with the names of a dozen men on it, and in his left was the same hour-glass that I saw this evening. He was very beautiful, had long curly hair of raven black encircled by a band on which the words 'Angel of Death' seemed to blaze and burn. He looked at me as he passed. Our eyes met and I thought I knew him. He smiled, and said 'not yet.' Then passing from hammock to hammock, he retraced his steps toward the main hatchway, followed by the men whose names were on his scroll. A dozen men died that night. He paid us a visit almost every day, sometimes taking one or more from our number, until we had lost twenty five men.—The next time I saw him, was in a church at Bermuda. He entered the pulpit, and stood beside the minister full five minutes looking at the hour-glass. I could see the sand distinctly running, and when it was out, the parson staggered and fell. I was the first to rush to his assistance, and as I raised him in my arms, I saw his form follow the Angel of Death down the broad aisle, and disappear. The minister died in my arms. The last time I was in New York I saw him take a poor suffering child from its mother's arms into his own, and kiss it and disappear. The child died a few minutes afterwards, which makes me think that the soul leaves the body before life is extinct. The Angel was then robed in green."

Tom told many other strange stories of the Angel of Death and his doings, which left a deep impression upon the minds of his hearers, who believed his every word.

We would direct particular attention to the communication in to-day's paper entitled, "Who will be the Author?" We like the suggestion of our correspondent, and invite communications on the subject to be sent to us, or the names of old people who would, upon catechising, give us traditionary tales of the Cherokees, who once inhabited this romantic country. Will the papers in Cherokee Georgia copy the article referred to, and make such editorial remarks as they may see fit. If the material can be obtained upon which to operate, we doubt not some one can be found who will undertake the pleasing task of preparing a book of Cherokee & its primitive occupants. Who will send the first contribution?
Dalton Times.

From the Dalton Times.
Who Will be the Author?

The Poet has truly said, "much yet remains unsung," and it is equally true, that "many a flower has bloomed unseen, and wasted its fragrance on the desert air." Being of the number of those whom duty sometimes calls to trace the tortuous vallies and the mountain range, and often finding myself in some of the most romantic and picturesque places of the country, my mind reverts, and I ask to what scenes there very localities may have been the theatre in days gone by, when the Indian knew no superior, and was Monarch of all he surveyed!

There is another book to be written: The history of this Cherokee country and its primitive occupants. There are a thousand and one little incidents and reminiscences of intercourse with the Red men, fresh in the memory of many among us, which, if they were written in a book, would illustrate their true character, and carry down to the latest generation the history of those who were ancestral in this goodly clime which we now possess. This whole country is scattered over with relics and fragments of their sojourn here—with trenches, mounds and fortifications of their construction—all telling plainly that this has been their abode—that they not only lived here, but that they were no inferior race. Old fields will be pointed out to you in every direction which are said to have been "cleared by the Indians;" and they bear the vestige of age and of being "worn out."—Thus they were in a measure civilized and cultivated arts of industry and of peace, as well as fought battles and lived on the spontaneous productions and the natural resources of this then an unbroken wilderness. But the whirlwind of time is fast deliterating their foot prints, and soon will their memory have vanished as have their faces from among us, and tradition alone will give their history.

But the Indians cannot be altogether forgotten. They have named our creeks, rivers and mountains—towns, counties and States have been christened by them, and many of our household words are but the re-echo of their euphonious tongue. Their nomenclature is classical and rich and could we only recover the signification of half the Indian words we speak, we should have a book of Proverbs as well as of poetry. Every syllable a word, and every word a story. Alabama, "Here we rest." What a "pretty word," how sweet its accents, and how dear to realize its interpretation. With what delight must it have fallen upon the ear of the group around him, when that illustrious Chief, landing upon the bank of that noble river, after the tedious journey of the day, thrust his spear into the ground exclaiming, Alabama! How beautiful a motto for the glorious State, whose name it bears, where may rest the patriot and the saint, and where the pilgrim and the stranger will be greeted with a generous hospitality and a welcome home, does he only wear his heart in the right place. "The Evening Star," cognomen of a fair maiden, who dwelt in the valley that bears her name, upon the upper waters of the Chattahoochee, and who is the heroine of many a tale. A slight eminence, conspicuous in the valley, will be pointed you as her throne, and the tragical story of the rising and falling of "the Evening Star" will be rehearsed to you by many a resident of that vicinity. But the Indian has gone, he has passed from among us, and been chased by the pale face over the mountains, and into the Pacific we might almost say. The Indian should not be allowed to be forgotten in the history of our country, for in his primitive being we have pure nature and elements of character worthy of the emulation of more civilized races, instincts far more serviceable in the affairs of common life than the theorems and sophistry of many books.

"Truth is stranger than fiction," and if we gather the falling leaves, volumes will be collected that will be both interesting and instructive. There are many living among us, pioneers in the land, who were here before the Indians were taken to their western homes, and they would, if solicited, be glad to sit down and rehearse anecdotes and stories of olden times, which might be compiled by some adept at book making, and be illustrated with paint and pencil in such a manner as to be ornaments to libraries and an accession to the literature of the day. Every tribe had no doubt its "Hiawatha," and there only needs the pen of the historian to make the Hero stand forth.

And now, Mr. Editor, will you suggest to the press and to the intelligent people of the country generally, that they put upon record any and all of their reminiscences of the Indians, and that they make your office, or some other, the depository of such a collection. The "hatchet has been buried," and the "pipe of peace smoked" in every part of the land, and it is due the coming generation to know of the hallowed ground on which they dwell. Every community has its Peter Parley, who would be willing to communicate the traditions of his boyhood, as well the eye witnessing of his own time; and when sufficient matter shall have been collected, some one will prepare a book, which shall memorialize this beautiful land of the Cherokees. Who will be the author?

A correspondent of the Boston Post writing from Badagry, West Africa, under the date of September 27, gives the following characteristics of an influential gentleman of Africa:

"Dahomey is governed probably by the most tyrannical monarch in the whole world. His word is law, whoever thwarts him loses his head, without the least ceremony, but I must say it is by far the best governed country I have seen in Africa. He is king of the most powerful and warlike people on this continent, and is continually engaged in hostilities against the smaller and weaker tribes, to obtain prisoners, many of whom are sold as slaves, and large numbers are offered as sacrifices upon the death of any favorite of his majesty.

While I was at Whydah he offered up 350 victims at the funeral ceremonies of one of his chiefs. At the death of King Guzo, who died last November, 800 captives were killed, besides 200 of his favorite wives. Since then the number of victims killed by this blood thirsty wretch for his father, is 2,400. Previous to my going to Whydah, the King had sent his messenger with his cane, commanding all people, both white and black, who were trading in his country, to appear at Dahomey, to attend the grand custom in honor of the late King, his father. As I was not in Whydah at the time, the message was sent to me, saying that he had been successful in his expeditions, and had taken three thousand prisoners, whose blood would be used to wash the graves of his ancestors. Whenever the King's name is mentioned, all within hearing fall down and kiss the earth and cover themselves with dust.

They would not deliver the message to me until I st[illegible] and took off my hat. You have to take the cane in your hand during the delivery of the message, when you are supposed to be in direct communication with the King; the messengers all the time are prostrate on the ground. Three men are always sent one to watch the others, and see the message is given as received. This is always the case when any message is sent to the next world, to see that the way is not lost.

"The present King's title is Reernee Reernee, which means the lion at whose [illegible] both men and beast flee. About three months ago the fetish told the King that the people of a certain village were the means of the late King's death. He consequently attacked them, and killed every soul—six hundred in number—not sparing one. So much for this wholesale butcher."

THRILLING END OF A SENSATION ROMANCE.—Any number of our contemporaries all over the country, of big and little dimensions, and of big and little pretensions, too, have published as an advertisement, the first chapter of a new sensation story from the New York Ledger, which, of course, was to run in that paper alone, during certain weeks or months, and be voraciously swallowed by sundry millions of readers, whose literary stomachs hunger only for the blood-and thunder style of romance.

The editor of the Eau Claire (Mich) Free Press, after he had read the aforesaid first chapter, got his romantic ideas up to such a pitch of excitement, that he determined to put himself and his readers out of suspense by anticipating the final catastrophe of the tale. He has done it to the satisfaction of every body, we think.

Chapter 488.—Our readers may feel curious to know whatever became of Captain Lester, who was left in a cave bound with irons, while the rising water was threatening destruction to him and the pesky rats. It will be remembered that he had just discovered Carrie Thornton through a fissure in the rock, a circumstance which gave him great courage. He bribed an old rat to gnaw off his irons and killing the remainder, he tied their tails together, took himself to pieces, and Carrie drew him up through the crack, piece by piece, by the rat tail rope. Captain Lester, having with great presence of mind, marked each piece, had no difficulty in putting himself together again. Just at this moment Wolfgang came in, and Captain Lester stuffed a feather bed down his throat, causing instantaneous strangulation. Captain & Carrie were married, and are now keeping the Wolfgang House, on the rock of Gibraltar, at the mouth of Baffin's Bay. They are said to be in easy circumstances. The Captain never thinks of rats without shuddering.

"Sam, why am lawyers like de fishes?" "I don't meddle wid de subjec', Pomp." "Why, don't you see, nigga, because dey am so fond ob de bate."

Old men's lives are lengthened shadows; the evening sun falls coldly on the earth, but the shadows all point to the morning.

"What are you looking after, my dear?" said an affectionate mother to her daughter. The daughter looked around and replied, "Looking after a son in law for father."

It is reported in the papers that Gen. Houston is going to conquer Mexico—that thirty thousand men are ready to back him in the enterprize. Go ahead old Jacinta.

A couple of robbers fell upon John Bush, of Baton Rouge, and robbed him of a shinplaster of a Mississippi Railroad bank. That was fairly taking the rag from the Bush.

From the Diary of a Late Physician.
THE MERCHANT'S CLERK.
BY SAMUEL WARREN, F. R. S.

Elliott almost reeled out of the room, and did not fully recollect himself till the groom of his aristocratic competitor, Lord Scamp, whose cab was dashing up to the gates of Bullion House, shouted to him to get out of the way or be driven over!

Elliott returned to his desk at Mincing Lane too much agitated and confused, however, to be able to attend to business. He therefore obtained a reluctant permission to absent himself till the morrow. Even the interval thus afforded, however, he was quite incapable of spending in the reflection required by the very serious situation in which he had been so suddenly placed. He could not bring his mind to bear distinctly upon any point of his interview with Mr. Hillary and Mr. Jeffreys; and at length, [illegible] ed in a maze of indefinite conjecture, of painful hopes and fears, he retired early to bed. There, after tossing about for several hours, he at length dropped asleep, and awoke at an early hour considerably refreshed and calmed. Well, then, what was to be done?

He felt a conviction that Mr. Hillary would be an uncompromising, an inexorable opponent of their marriage, however long they might postpone it with the hope of wearing out or softening away his repugnance to it; and that, if they married in defiance of him, he would fulfil every threat he had uttered. Of these two points he felt as certain as of his existence.

He felt satisfied that Miss Hillary's attachment to him was ardent and unalterable; and that nothing short of main force would prevent her from adopting any suggestion he might offer. As for himself, he was passionately, and his heart loudly told him, disinterestedly attached to her; he could, therefore, as far as he himself was concerned, cheerfully bid adieu to all hopes of enjoying a shilling of her father's wealth, and be joyfully content to labour for their daily bread. But a fearful array of contingencies here presented themselves before him. Suppose they married, they would certainly have 600*l.* to commence with; but suppose his health failed him, or from any other cause he should become unable to support himself, a wife, and, it might be, a large family, how soon would 600*l.* disappear? And what would be then before them? His heart shrunk from exposing the generous and confiding creature whose love he had gained to such terrible dangers. He could, he would write to her, and entreat her to forget him; to obey the reasonable wishes of her father. He felt that Mr. Hillary had great and grievous cause for complaint against him; could make every allowance for his feelings, and forgive their coarse and extravagant manifestation; and yet, when he reflected upon some expressions he had let fall, upon the intense and withering scorn and contempt with which he had been treated, the more he looked at this view of the case, the more he felt the spirit of a man swelling within him. He never trod so firmly nor carried himself so erectly as he did on his way down to the city that morning.

But then, again, what misery was poor Miss Hillary enduring! What cruel and incessant persecution was being inflicted upon her; but SHE, too, had a high and bold spirit; he kindled as he pursued his meditation; he felt that the consciousness of kindred qualities endeared her to him tenfold more even than before.

Thus he communed with himself, but at length he determined on writing the letter he had proposed, and did so that night.

He was not dismissed, as he had expected, from the service of Mr. Hillary, who retained him at the suggestion of Mr Jeffreys; that shrewd person feeling that he could then keep Elliott's movements more distinctly under his own eye, and have more frequent opportunities of negotiating with him on behalf of Mr. Hillary. Elliott's position in the establishment was such as never brought him into personal contact with Mr. Hillary; and apparently no one but himself and Mr. Hillary were acquainted with the peculiar circumstances in which he was placed. As before hinted, Mr. Jeffreys was incessant in his efforts, both personally and by letter, to induce Elliott to break off the disastrous connexion; and, from an occasional note which Miss Hillary contrived—despite all the espionage to which she was subjected—to smuggle to him, he learned, with poignant sorrow, that his apprehensions of the treatment she would receive at the hands of her father were but too well founded. She repelled with an affectionate and indignant energy his offers and proposals to break off the affair. She told him that her spirit rose with the cruelty she suffered, and declared herself ready, if he thought fit, to fly from the scene of trouble, and be united to him for ever. Many and many a sleepless night did such communications as these ensure Elliott. He saw infinite danger in attempting a clandestine marriage with Miss Hillary, even should she be a readily consenting party. His upright and manly disposition revolted from measures so underhand, so unworthy; and yet, what other course lay open to them? His own position at the counting house was becoming very trying and painful. It soon became apparent that, on some account or another, he was an object of almost loathing disregard to the august personage at the head of the establishment; and the consequence was, an increasing infliction of petty annoyances and hardships by those connected with him in daily business. He was required to do more than he had ever before been called upon to do, and felt himself the subject of frequent and offensive remark as well as suspicion. The ill treatment of his superiors, however, and the impertinences of his equals and inferiors, he treated with the same patient and resolute contempt, conducting himself with the utmost vigilance and circumspection, and applying to business, however unjustly accumulated upon him, with an energy, preservance, and good-humour that only the more [illegible] tified his unworthy enemies. [illegible] liott! why did he continue [illegible] vice of Hillary, Hungate, and [illegible] ny? How utterly chimerical was poor, and hope he sometimes entertained of its being possible that his exemplary conduct could ever make any impression upon the hard heart of Mr. Hillary!

Miss Hillary did really, as has been just stated, suffer a martyrdom at Bullion House at the hands of her father. [illegible] Every day caresses and curses were alternated, and she felt that she was in fact a prisoner; her every movement watched, her every eye look scrutinized. Mr. Hillary frequently caused [illegible] conveyed to her report the most false and degrading concerning Elliott [illegible] they were such transparent fabrications as, of course to defeat the ends proposed. She found some comfort in the society of her mother, who, though for a long time feeling [illegible] strong disapprobation of her daughter's attachment to Elliott, at length relented, and even endeavoured to influence Mr. Hillary on their daughter's behalf. Her kind offices were, however, suddenly interrupted by a second attack of paralysis, which deprived her of the power of speech and motion. This dreadful shock, occurring at such a moment, was too much for Miss Hillary, who was removed from attending affectionately at the bedside of her unhappy mother to her own room, where she lay for nearly a fortnight in a violent fever. So far from these domestic trials tending however, to soften the heart of Mr. Hillary, they apparently contributed only to harden it; to aggravate his hatred of Elliott; of him who had so much to disturb, to destroy his domestic peace, his fondest wishes and expectations.

Lord Scamp continued his interested and flattering attentions to Mr. Hillary, with whom he was continually dining; and at length—a proof of the prodigious ascendency he had acquired over Mr. Hillary—succeeded in borrowing from him a very considrable sum of money. Hillary soon apprized his lordship of the real nature of the hinderance to his marriage with Miss Hillary; and his lordship, of couse, felt it his duty, not to speak of his interest, to fester and inflame the fury of his wished-for father-in-law against his obscure and presumptuous rival. Several schemes were proposed by this worthy couple for the purpose of putting an end to the pretensions and prospects of this "insolent parvenu of the outer counting house." An accidental circumstance at length suggested to them a plot so artful and atrocious, that poor Elliott fell a victim to it.

On returning to the counting house one day from the little chophouse at which he had been swallowing a hasty and frugal dinner, he observed indications of some unusual occurrence. No one spoke to him; all seemed to look at him as with suspicion and alarm. He had hardly hung up his hat and reseated himself at his desk, when a message was brought to him from Mr. Hillary, who required his immediate attendance in his private room. Thither, therefore, he repaired, with some surprise, and with more surprise, beheld all the partners assembled, together with the head clerk, the solicitor of the firm, and one or two strangers. He had hardly closed the door after himself when Mr. Hillary pointed to him, saying, "This is your prisoner; take him into custody."

"Surrender, sir; you're our prisoner, said one of the two strangers, both of whom now advanced to him, one laying hold of his collar, the other fumbling in his pocket, and taking out a pair of handcuffs. Elliott staggered several paces from them on hearing the astounding language of Mr. Hillary, and, but that he was held by the officer who had grasped his collar, seemed likely to have fallen. He turned deadly pale. For a second or two he spoke not.

"Fetch a glass of water," said Mr. Fleming, one of the partners, observing Elliott's lips losing their colour, and moving without uttering any sound. But he recovered himself from the momentary shock without the aid of the water, which seemed to have been placed in readiness beforehand, so soon was it produced. Pushing aside the officer's hand that raised the glass to his lips, he exclaimed, "What is the meaning of this, sir? How dare you deprive me of my liberty, sir?" addressing Mr. Hillary. "What am I charged with?"

"Embezzling the money of your employers," interposed the solicitor. As he spake, poor Elliott fixed upon him a stare of horror, and, after standing and gazing in silence for several moments, attempted to speak, but in vain; and fell in a kind of fit into the arms of the officers. When he had recovered he was conducted to a hackney-coach, which had been some time in readiness and conveyed to the police-office; where, an hour or two afterward, Mr. Hillary, accompanied by Mr. Fleming, the solicitor and two of Elliott's fellow clerks attended to prefer the charge. Elliott was immediately brought to the bar, where he stood very pale, but calm and self-possessed, his eyes fixed upon Mr. Hillary with a steadfast searching look that nothing could have sustained but his indignant consciousness of innocence. He heard the charge prefered against him without uttering a word. The firm had had reason for some time, it was said, to suspect that they were robbed by some member of their establishment; that suspicion fell at length upon the prisoner; that he was purposely directed that day to go unexpectedly to dinner, having been watched during the early part of the morning; that his desk was immediately opened and searched, and three five pound notes, previously marked [illegible] these produced so marked [illegible] found in his pocketbook, carefully [illegible] a heap of papers; that he had [illegible] times lately seen with bank notes in his hand which he seemed anxious of concealing; that he had been very intimate with one of his fellow clerks, who

...ELLOW HAUGATE on a charge simi... to the present: that the firm had been robbed to a considerable amount; that Elliott had only that morning been lent by one of the clerks, then present, a pound, him some money, when the prisoner replied that he had not got 5*l.* in the world. All this, and more, Elliott listened to without uttering a syllable.

"Well, sir," said one of the magistrates, "what have you to say to this very serious charge?"

"Say! why, can you believe it, sir?" replied Elliott, with a frank air of unaffected incredulity,

"Do you deny it, sir?" inquired the ...te, coldly.

"...o! Peremptorily, indignantly, ...ssured! I rob my employers! ...they know better; that it is impossible!"

"Can you prove that this charge is false?" said the magistrate, with a matter-of-fact air. "Can you explain or deny the facts that have just been sworn to?" Elliott looked at him as if in thought. "Do you hear me, ...?" repeated the magistrate, sternly: "you are not bound to say anything; and I would caution you against saying anything to criminate yourself." Still Elliott paused. "If you are not prepared, I will remand you for a week, before committing you to prison."

"Commit me to prison, sir!" repeated Elliott, with at once a perplexed and indignant air: "why, I am as innocent as yourself!"

"Then, sir, you will be able easily to account for the 15*l.* found in your desk this morning."

"Ah! yes, I had forgotten that. I deny the fact. They could not have been found in my desk, for I have not more than 4*l.* and a few shillings in the world till my next quarter's salary becomes due."

"But it is sworn here—you heard it sworn as well as I did—that the money was found there. Here are the witnesses; you may ask them any questions you think proper; but they swere to the fact most distinctly."

"Then, sir," said Elliott, with a start, as if electrified with some sudden thought, "I see it all! Oh God, I now see it all! It was placed there on purpose! It is a plot laid to ruin me!" He turned round abruptly towards Mr. Hillary, and fixing a piercing look upon him, he exclaimed, in a low voice, "Oh, monster!" He was on the eve of explaining Mr. Hillary's probable motives; but the thought of his daughter suddenly sealed his lips. "Sir," said he, presently, addressing the magistrate, "I take God to witness that I am innocent of this atrocious charge. I am the victim of a conspiracy; commit me, sir; commit me at once. I put my trust in God, the father of the fatherless!"

The magistrates seemed struck with what he had said, and much more with his manner of saying it. They leaned back, and conferred together for a few minutes. "Our minds are not quite satisfied," said the one who had already spoken, "as to the propriety of immediately committing the prisoner to Newgate. Perhaps stronger evidence may be brought forward in a few days. Prisoner you are remanded for a week."

"I hope, sir," said Mr. Hillary, "that he will by that time be able to clear his character; nothing I wish more. It's a painful thing to me and my partners to have to press such a charge as this; but we must protect ourselves from the robbery of servants." This was said by the speaker to the magistrates; but he did not dare to look at the prisoner, whose piercing indignant eye he felt to be fixed on him and to follow his every motion

That day week Elliott was fully committed to Newgate; and on the next morning the following paragraph appeared in the newspapers:

"——street. Henry Elliott, a clerk in the house of Hillary, Haugate, and Company, Mincing Lane (who was brought to this office a week ago, charged with embezzling the sum of 15*l.*, the money of his employers, and suspected of being an accomplice of the young man who was recently committed to Newgate from this office on a similar charge), was yesterday fully committed for trial. He is, we understand, a young man of respectable connexions and excellent education. From his appearance and demeanor he should have seemed incapable of committing the serious offence with which he stands charged. He seemed horror-struck on the charge's being first preferred, and asseverated his innocence firmly, and in a very impressive manner, declaring that he was the victim of a conspiracy. In answer to a question of the magistrate, one of his employers stated that, up to the time of preferring this charge, the prisoner had borne an excellent character in the house."

The newspaper containing this paragraph found its way, on the evening of the day on which it appeared, into Miss Hillary's room, through her maid, as she was preparing to undress, and conveyed to her the first intimation of poor Elliott's dreadful situation. The moment that she had read it she sprung to her feet, pushed aside her maid, who attempted to prevent her quitting her apartment, and, with the newspaper in her hand, flew wildly down the stairs and burst into the dining-room, where her father was sitting alone, in his easy-chair, drawn close to the fire—"Father!" she almost shrieked, springing to within a yard or two of where he was sitting, "Henry Elliott robbed you! Henry Elliott in prison! A common thief!" pointing to the newspaper with frantic vehemence. "Is it so? And you his accuser! Oh, no! no! never!" she exclaimed, a wild smile beaming on her pallid countenance, at the same time sweeping to and fro before her astonished father, with swift but stately steps, continuing, as she passed and repassed him, "No, sir! no! no! no! Oh, for shame! for shame, father! Shame on you! shame! His father dead! his mother dead! No one to feel for him! no one to protect him! no one to love him—but—ME!" And accompanying the last few words with a loud and thrilling laugh, she fell at full length inanimate upon the floor.

OUR RAIL ROAD.

This is a subject, in which we all feel a lively interest; and it is very important that every true friend of the road should be fully posted, as to the ways and means to finish the road from Talladega to Gadsden.

We have before us the last annual report made to the stock holders in July last.

From Talladega to Oxford, 20 16-000 miles, cost of graduation, masonry, bridging, Superstructure, Superintendence and contingencies, $178,672.

From Oxford to Jacksonville, 14 65-100 miles cost of same work materials, &c. 149,240 making entire cost of finished road from Talladega to Jacksonville, a distance of 34 81-100 miles, of $327,912.

From Jacksonville to Gadsden 22 84-100 miles cost of graduation, masonry, bridging, Superstructure Superintendence, and contingencies $277,529 making total cost of finished road from Talladega to Gadsden $605,-441.

For the purpose of progressing with this important enterprise, we are informed from a reliable source, that the Railroad company, has an appropriation made by the late Legislature, of the sum of $225,000, cash.

The company has on hand the sum of $225,000 of their first mortgage bonds, which are offered for sale to the friends of the road.

In addition to this the city of Selma proposes to take $100,000 of additional stock in the road, provided the company raise in the upper counties, and also when, a like sum of $100,000 by the sale of the first mortgage bonds.

These several sums—to wit: the State appropriation companies first mortgage bonds, and city of Selma subscription, makes the round sum of $550,000

Thus it will be seen only the sum of $55,441, will in addition have to be raised to finish the road to Gadsden

The liberal proposition of Selma should by all means, be secured, and we trust and hope, the friends of the road will take immediate steps—for the purpose of purchasing the companies bonds, availing themselves of the liberal offer of Selma—and thereby completing the road.

We desire to see a public demonstration made shortly, for the purpose of moving the road, and making a final finish of it.

We most sincerely invoke, a speedy concert of action of all the friends of the road.

Delay, & put off no longer this most important enterprise. Let every man help, there is no one, but what can help some.

NEW STEAM MILLS.—We are gratified to learn that our worthy and enterprising fellow citizen, W. C. McMahan, has got his new Steam Mills, between White Plains and Corn Grove, in successful operation under the superintendence of Mr. J. J. Railton, an experienced & competent engineer. The grist mill has been in successful operation some days, and the saw mill nearly ready.

There is perhaps as large an amount of water power, on the large creeks and rivers of our County, as any other in the State; and steam machinery is also being rapidly introduced. The enterprize of such men as Mr. McMahan, is rapidly developing our almost incalculable industrial resources, & we heartiably wish them all success.

W. B Wynne & Co.,—Successors to Kyle, Wynne & Co. of Gadsden, Ala inform their friends in this paper of the reception of their unusually large and elegant stock of Spring and Summer Goods. This very liberal, enterprising and accommodating firm, have heretofore received a liberal patronage, and richly merit its continuance.

We have seldom seen a larger or finer stock of Goods, than we did in their store, the last time we were in Gadsden, and we found the prices too very reasonable.

Those who do not visit Gadsden personally can order goods, and have them brought by the tri weekly hack running to this place.

We sincerely hope that the exertions of this liberal and enterprising firm, to build up a permanent extensive and properous trade will be rewarded with success.

☞We tender thanks of the Teacher, Trustees, patrons and friends of the Jacksonville Female Academy, to D. P. Forney, Esq for the very handsome useful and valuable present, of that Institution of Holbrook's Apparatus for Schools and Academies, consisting of Orrery, Tellurian, Globes, Mathematical and Astronomical figures, &c.

GRIFFIN & DECATUR RAILROAD. We have heard very favorable reports recently of the progress of this road & the amount of work done on the eastern end; and have expected to see some of the Engineers or officers in this place, but thus far have been disappointed. There has been some talk of its intersection with the Dalton road at Cross Plains, above here, & some of intersection below, either of which will throw them off the true line, and increase the distance at least 12 miles, besides subjecting the Griffin road to the tax of using one or the other of these roads for the distance of about 15 miles.

The suggestion of any other intersection, except at Jacksonville, has originated from a mistaken notion, that the mountain 14 miles east of this is a serious obstruction to reaching this point. We were informed day before yesterday, by a gentleman, who is competent to judge, and who has investigated the subject, that this place can be reached at a very moderate grade, over the Ben White Gap, without a tunnel.

We hope the officers of the Griffin road will forthwith investigate this matter.—And we have little doubt, that in addition to the advantage in distance and cost of a direct connection, at this point with the Road to Gadsden and Guntersville, that an addition of from 50,000 to $100,000 of stock can be obtained in Jacksonville, White Plains, and the eastern side of this County.

☞We insert this week an advertisement for the long established and widely known commercial house of P. J. Weaver, of Selma, Ala.

Perhaps there is no house this side of Mobile or New Orleans, which has been more noted for large stocks of the very best quality of goods, than that of Mr. Weaver, and none where goods have been more uniformly sold at moderate prices.

The communication between this section of country and Selma, is now so direct, as to render it very convenient to procure Goods and Groceries from that city. Besides many of our citizens visit Selma in person, several times during the year, and those who do not, can easily send orders.

The friends and acquaintances of Messrs. W. G. PRIVETT and ANDREW J. RICHEY, formerly of this County, will find these worthy, enterprising and accommodating young gentlemen in the above named house, always ready to attend to them in person, or fill their orders in the most correct and satisfactory manner.

CULTURE OF THE GRAPE.—Day before yesterday we visited for the first time, the Vinyard and Fruit Orchard recent planted by W. F. Bush, D. P. Forney and G. W. Tate.

These enterprising gentlemen have selected an admirable piece of ground for the purpose, in the mountain about 4 miles east of this place, and have already planted last year and this about 8000 grape roots and cuttings, of various kinds, but mostly Catawba, as best for wine making. They have also planted out an extensive variety of the apple, pear, peach, cherry, plumb and other fruit.

They have commenced on a very liberal scale—have chosen a location where fruit will mature every year—and although it will require a patient expenditure of capital and labor to mature their plans, we have no doubt, it will be very remunerative in the end.

We most heartily wish them success in this new and important branch of industry.

☞We invite attention to the advertisement of Mr. T. C. Cannon. There is no better evidence of a prosperous village or city, than liberal patronage bestowed upon worthy, sober and industrious Mechanics. The times too require that the people encourage domestic industry, particularly in the branch of business in which he is engaged. Call upon Mr. C. and see if he does not fulfil all his promises.

Steamship Line.—We invite attention to the new arrangement of the Philadelphia, New York and Savannah Steamship Line.

This regular, safe and speedy line has been for years well known to the traveling public, and proven to be, in every respect, worthy of their confidence and patronage.

Excitement at Napoleon—The Natural Destruction of the Town.—We learn that the citizens of Napoleon have lately been thrown into intense excitement by the discovery of a plot aimed at the ultimate destruction of the place from the action of the current of the Arkansas river. The town itself, as many of our readers are aware, is situated on a sort of peninsula at the junction of the Mississippi and Arkansas rivers. For a distance of several miles in its rear a narrow slip of land about four hundred yards in width separates the two rivers and connects the town with the main shore. It seems that within a few weeks past a train of powder has been placed across this neck or slip of land, and that on Monday night last a match was applied, causing a terrific explosion, which tore up the earth to such an extent as to permit the water from the Arkansas to pass entirely across and empty into the Mississippi. The result has already been the introduction of a strong current through the pass thus formed, which is rapidly widening and deepening, and threatening to isolate the town entirely from the main land, and at no very distant day sweep it entirely away. What evil disposed person perpetrated the act is unknown, but suspicion is said to attach to a planter residing in the vicinity, whose property would be greatly benefitted by the change. It is hoped that, should his guilt be clearly established, he will meet with summary punishment at the hands of the excited populace. Memphis Bulletin.

Three Cheers for Charleston.

A merchant of Rome in this State, who had gone on to lay in his Spring Stock of goods, writes from New York to the editor of the Rome Courier, that he "stopped in Charleston and bought some goods; found fine stocks & thought them low enough. Some things were a little up, but on trying Baltimore and Philadelphia, have since ordered from Charleston."

Such news as this is truly encouraging. This is but the beginning of a great result. Let the South stand firm and the North will tremble.

☞The weekly Chronicle, published in Columbianna, says, Mr. A. M. Elliott, a merchant of that town has just returned home, having been absent buying goods He informs us, says the Editor, that he has purchased his goods in Charleston on very, favorable terms, in fact, lower than has ever been purchased in New York. He speaks highly flattering of the Charleston trade, and thinks from the large and fine assortment there, they are determined to meet the demands of the Southern trade."

All Charleston asks, is a fair trial, and it is the duty of Southern merchants to give her that, and if she does not come up to the promises she has made, then throw her off. We hope the day is close at hand, when all goods lands in our own City, will be labeled, from Charleston. After writing the above we find the following in the Columbus Daily Sun (Georgia)

A merchant of Rome in this State, who had gone on to lay in his Spring Stock of goods, writes from New York to the editor of the Rome Courier, that he "stopped in Charleston and bought some goods; found fine stocks and thought them low enough. Some things were a little up, but on trying Baltimore and Philadelphia, have since ordered from Charleston."

Message of the President.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The President to day replied to the Senate's resolution calling for information in reference to the present condition of affairs on the Rio Grande.

Among the documents is a letter from Governor Houston, dated Austin, Feb. 15, addressed to the Secretary of War, in which he says he deplores the situation of Texas, with an empty Treasury, and Indian troubles, unexampled for the last ten years and forays from Mexico on the southern border. And he asks: In the name of humanity, shall not the Federal arm be speedily raised and extended in behalf of our suffering frontier? Should this not be done, the Governor says he will, in a short time, be compelled to resort to the indefeasible right of self defense, to protect the border, not only to defeat the enemy, but to prevent the recurrence of similar disorders on the frontier. Texas can and will, if applied to, in thirty days, be able to muster in the field ten thousand men, who are anxious, embarrassed as her finances are, to make reclamations upon Mexico for all her wrongs. Can she hope for aid from the Federal Government? She will, in addition to her manifest forbearance, venture yet to defer to the action of the Federal Government.

The Secretary of War, in his letter to the President, March 5th, gives a synopsis of all the recent transactions on the Rio Grande. Nothing, he says, can exceed the contrariety of opinion in relation to them among those having the best opportunity to inform themselves The call of Governor Houston is the first which has yet been made by the authorities of Texas for any assistance in these disturbances from the Government. No doubt because it was considered by them up to this time as a matter involving local laws and interests, rather than such as pertained to the honor and interests of the Confederacy. But, on the call of the Governor of Texas, and upon the undeniable proofs of gross outrages committed on our soil, the Secretary of War says he has not hesitated to order a concentration of all the force upon that frontier which the exigencies of the service elsewhere would allow.

Among the documents is a letter to Governor Houston from one of the Texas Commissioners, sent to Brownsville, dated February 2d, in which he says although many turbulent leaders exist among the Mexicans, the Mexican people, as a man, are hoping for deliverance from anarchy and would rejoice in the establishment of a stable form of government, which would protect their lives and property and give them peace.

Many of the intelligent people of the State of Tamaulipas regard a protectorate as the only means by which Mexico can be redeemed from the reign of anarchy and party tyrants. That there is a deep seated hostility, on the part of many, to everything American, there can be no doubt: but with the great mass of Mexicans they would yield to the same course of justice and humanity which has characterized the United States on its annexation and acquisition policy.

From the Talladega Watchtower.

Our Relations with Mexico

There is no disguising the fact that the relations subsisting between our government and the republic of Mexico, is of the most embarrassing character. What disposition is to be made of her!—what destiny awaits her? are problems of difficult solution, and will puzzle the brains of our profoundest statesmen. For thirty years Mexico has been in anarchy; she now exists in chaos. By whom, and how is order to be restored! It is easy to foresee, that she cannot longer remain as she is, and has been for more than a quarter of a century. Other governments, like our own, have been for years interested in the stability of her institutions, and have long waited for, and hoped for a capability on her part, to comply with on her part, to comply with her engagements. Other governments, in common with our own, have again and again submitted to insult and wrong, and have had scores of just causes for quarrel and war, on account of the imbecile and chaotic state of the country. Unprecedented forbearance and leniency have been exercised towards her, but all in vain. It is now evident that something must be done; it is equally obvious that other nations interested in the matter, are looking to the United States, as the proper power to interfere in the premises, and restore the land of the Aztecs to that responsibility and importance which the exigencies of the case, and the spirit of the age requires

Nor is this all. It is clear to the intelligence of every one, that our own government must take the necessary steps to control the destinies of Mexico or the nations will be sure to undertake the delicate and critical task. Two evils are here presented. Let the Monroe doctrine of non-intervention by European nations with the affairs of the American continent, be proclaimed at once, and the lesser of the two evils accepted, by affording such material relief to the liberal party of Mexico, as shall restore order, and a stable government in that unfortunate country. If this fail, another remedy is still left We refer to the system of colonial incorporation, which shall make her an integral part of our confederacy.

Let it not be said that such a proposition is in advance of the times. An irrepressible desire seems to exist among all civilized nations to expand their limits and increase their power It is an age of progress and expansion. Expansion is the prevailing law: From the days of Joshua, to the present period nations have ever been covetous of territory. Nations of to day differ from those of the past, only in the manner of acquiring it. The lust for territory and plunder which stimulated the heroes of antiquity, has long since given way to the modern system of colonial incorporation. It seems to be a wise ordinance of the Almighty, by which he makes the civilized nations of the earth instrumental in wresting the barbarians of the desert, and the savages of wilderness, from moral and intellecual blindness. It is by this means that the rude nations of the earth are improved and civilized. Indeed, it may be safely asserted that the more civilized nations become, the more intense and insatiable becomes their desire for expansion. It is equally true, that the most civilized nations of the world, are, at this moment the greatest conquerors. England is extending her conquests over the whole world, France seeks expansion in Algeria and on the Nile Russia in Northen Asia, and on the shores of the Adriatic, and the United States over this continent, Knowledge and a high order of civilization imparts a restless energy to to our people which will not allow them to be satisfied with their present limits They feel that they are to be the masters and spiritual pastors of the New World as their Caucasian progenitors are of the Old World. Mosaic history teaches us that the chosen people of God, were commanded by Him to exterpate all the heathen nations around them; in like manner, it seems to be the destiny of the weaker races of men to fall beneath the sway and tutelage of the superior race. It is evident that the people of our "Great Republic" possesses a clear and striking superiority over the mongrel and debased inhabitants of Mexico We need not add the duty of the former is plain to every comprehensive mind, while the destiny of the latter is impending and imminent.

It is idle for us to stand aloof longer. The policy of non-intervention with foreign governments ought, in the present instance, to be laid aside and prompt action taken. With the people of the Southern States, such an expansion of territory is especially desirable. The opening of Mexico to the enterprise of our people, without any unwise and blighting free soil restrictions, would be to unfold to mans necessities one of the richest portions of the earth. The combination of labor which exists in the South,—the Caucasian and the African,—is the only labor by which this rich and desirable portion of the world, can be successfully cultivated The lavish beauty and fertility of Mexico, have not, we think, been created as wastes, or the abodes of a debased and vagrant population. On the other hand, we believe that land of sun, wealth and beauty, was intended for beneficent subjection and cultivation Our people will not have fulfilled their measure of duty until they shall have occupied it. When shall it be done, & the destiny of our proud mission be fulfilled?

Ironing and Repairing

Rocky Mountains, Georgia Gulch, K. T., Aug. 8th, 1859.

It is only about forty miles from here to where the Utahs are; they are counted very savage. They and the Mormons are together—they do anything that old Brigham Young tells them, if they can; but they will have to move their lice and Buffalo skins, if they try to hurt any of us. They did kill 4 or five, but it was not much matter they had no business to venture out by themselves.

In my last letter I wrote about its raining here, but the rain stopped about the last of July. There were several died about Gregory Town, or mountain city.

I think it is because the water is so cold the air so thin the days tolerable warm and the nights very cool a man cannot work near as hard here as he can in the States or where he is 8 or 10,000 feet lower than he is here. Some may think this is not so but let them come and see if they do not travel up stream from the mouth of the Arkansas River and when you begin to near the mountains the streams run like a mill tail pitching rolling rocks that will weigh hundreds of pounds.

The Mines.—There is great excitement here now among the people about new mines, north of here and west. The greatest mines are said to be on the head of south Platte, the Arkansas, Rio Colorado, the Rio Grande. There are 5 large streams head all close up together the waters running every direction. The Colorado empties into the Gulf of California. It is said that there is good mines discovered on the head of the south Platte & the Colorado. Three fourths of the men that were here are now gone there. I do not know how it will prove, but I think it will be good. I shall start there in a few days. The Reports that come from there, and the gold with them, are very good evidences of something A great many men that are here that has anything like good sense think that this country will prove very near equal to California, if not better. But the people come here, or start, some get through; and because there are not chunks of gold lying about on top of the ground, or a pit ready for them to go into, they get out of heart.

Thats the way the thing runs here every one talking about home, when they will start, so they do not hunt for new mines. The place where I am at work is not very rich, but I have not been without something to eat yet. I have made my board and cleared ninety dollars in 6 weeks work: so if I had such a claim at home, I could make money. It costs me about $1,00 doller per day for board.

I have heard men say that they believed they had seen half a million in one day, while in their range. It is about 100 miles wide where they use mostly; but there are some scattered about nearly all over the Plains. The place where the new mines are said to be discovered are about 80 miles from where I am, about 140 or 150 from Denver & Auroria, and N. W. from Pikes Peak, right where the water runs in every direction. I shall write again as soon as I learn correct about it. But I think there are good mines there, & shall think so until I see. Most Horrible Tragedy--Murders in Gordon Co.

We learn that a Mr. Robert Thompson and wife were brutally butchered on the night of Tuesday the 21st ult. Mr. Thompson was a merchant and Post Master at Sugar Valley and was a deformed man. On Wednesday morning his remains were found near his store, his face much bruised and his skull split open Near by was a bloody axe, and an extinguished torch. His wife was found in bed and from all appearances was killed with a sledge hammer or perhaps with the head of the axe—[illegible] partment a room in the rear of the store and there were no other persons in the house. A lady living in a house a short distance off heard persons talking in the night but her suspicions not being excited she fell asleep again. There is an intense excitement in the neighborhood where this foul outrage was committed. The affair is all wrapt in mystery, and no clue discovered yet by which the murderers can be detected, Mr. Thompson was an industrious citizen and highly respected. It is supposed the scoundrels stole about seventy dollars to compensate them for their villainy. We hope they may be ferretted out and receive the severest punishment the law can inflict.—Rome Courier.

The Accident at Cincinnati—Further Particulars.—The Cincinnati papers give some further particulars of the falling of one of the walls of St. Xaver (Catholic) church, in that city, on the 1st ult., burying thirteen laborers beneath the ruins. The Gazette says:

The news of the sad calamity spread through the length and breadth of our city like wildfire, and scarce a half hour had elapsed before there was drawn to the spot fully fifteen thousand spectators. Hundreds of people with and spades lent their might, and quickly the bodies of the men were exhumed exhibiting in their mangled appearance a most horrible and revolting spectacle. Brains, pieces of skull, etc., were scattered about here and there, and the bodies generally were so mashed and disfigured as to preclude immediate identification. Fathers, mothers, wives sisters and brothers of those known to be employed at the church flocked to the ground, and by their piteous wailings, mingled cries and prayers, frantic ejaculations, and in some cases, the most terrible suspense, all formed a pageant of sorrow and desolation that we hope never again to witness.

The bodies were removed fast, as the work of disintering proceeded, to a subterranean apartment at the St. Xavier school, a building adjoining. The first one taken from out the crumbling mass of brick and morter was identified by a woman close at hand as being that of her husband. As it was borne away she threw herself upon the corpse and clung to it with the greatest tenacity, the whole time giving vent to the most unbounded grief, that must have touched the sympathies of those around. To disengage her from the body required force. She was led away, but heeded not the caressing kindness of friends; a ghastly smile was perceptible about her lip, and her eye was lusterless, and wandered in frenzy from object to object. She muttered incoherent sentences, and ever and anon would pause and fold her hands to Heaven as if in prayer. At dusk in the evening she was a maniac—the awful reality of the day was too much for her.

One of the killed, a young man from Brown county, Ohio, had just been employed—scarce an hour had elapsed from the time of his setting to work before his death. He came to this city for the purpose of studying book keeping and completed a course of instruction at one of the colleges last week; being without friends, and without money, he availed himself of an opportunity of going to work as a laborer.

FOR THE PREVENTION AND CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

WINCHESTER'S

GENUINE PREPARATION OF THE

HYPOPHOSPHITES

OF LIME AND OF SODA

The Specific Remedy for Consumption, Chronic Bronchitis, Asthma, Scrofula, Dyspepsia, General Debility, and all Nervous Diseases.

The success of this NEW REMEDY (discovered by Dr Churchill of P's) is obtaining for it the most UNBOUNDED POPULARITY throughout Europe and the United States.

It is a purely SCIENTIFIC PREPARATION, and acts with INVARIABLE EFFICACY in all stages of Pulmonary and nervous Diseases. The Hypophosphites increase the Principle which constitutes nervous force, and are the most powerful blood generating agents

The Cure of Consumption,

In the SECOND and THIRD STAGES (at a period consequently, when there can be no uncertainty as to the nature of the disease) can be obtianed, IN ALL CASES by this treatment, except when the existing lesion of the lungs is of itself sufficient to produce death.

this REMEDY has not only a curative effect, but will, it used wherever there exists a suspicion of the disease, PREVENT ITS DEVELOPEMENT, & thus act AS A PRESERVATIVE WITH REGARD TO CONSUMPTION, JUST AS VACCINATION DOES WITH REGARD TO SMALL-POX.

Professional Correspondence

"COLUMBUS OHIO, Aug. 8, 1859.—I have been treating this disease for twenty-five years, and have derived more satisfaction from the use of the HYPOPHOSPHITES than from all other forms of medication combined."

"MANCHESTER, MICH., Aug. 3, 1856.—I have used the HYPOPHOSPHITES in my practice with very happy effects—so much so that I WOULD NOT BE SATISFIED TO REMAIN WITHOUT THEM."

"MIDDLEBURY, VT., Aug. 9, 1859.—I believe the HYPOPHOSPHITES used in the manner and way Dr. Churchill used them, WILL CURE CONSUMPTION."

SHEPHERDSTOWN, VA., Aug 15, 1859.—I have prescribed the Hypophosphites in severl cases, and am delighted with its effects. IT ACCOMPLISHING WONDERS.

"LOWELL, O. July 5, 1859.—I have used in all about forty bottles, and in but one instance have they failed to benefit the patient, and that was a hopeless one before I was called—I have had several cases given up by attending physicians, who ARE NOW ENJOYING COMPARATIVELY GOOD HEALTH, and EXEMPT FROM ALL THE SYMPTOMS of pulmonary disease. I have used the REMEDY in my own case, with decided success. It was regarded a s HOPELESS by physicians & friends and even by myself under the old treatment. I am now able to ride in attending on the sick as many miles perhaps in a day as any other physician in the county."

"CHATHAM, PA., July 26, 1859.—I received the twelve bottles of Churchill's Remedy for Consumption. * * * IT HAS WORKED WONDERS IN EVERY CASE."

CONSUMPTIVES, in any stage of the Disease, should (resort immediately to the use of the HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME AND SODA. "WINCHESTER'S GENUINE PREPARATION" (in simple syrup) in extra large bottles, is "chemically pure;" and is prepared according to his original Formula.

A BEAUTIFUL EXTRACT.—When the summer of youth is slowly wasting away on the nightfall of age, and the shadow of the past becomes deeper and deeper, and life wears to its close, it is pleasant to look through the vista of time upon the sorrows and felicities of our earliest years—If we have a home to shelter, and hearts to rejoice with us, & friends have been gathered together around our firesides then the rough places of way faring will have been worn and smoothed away in the twilight of life, while the many spots we have passed through will grow brighter and more beautiful. Happy, indeed, are they whose intercourse with the world has not changed the tone of their holier feeling, or broken those musical chords of the heart, whose vibrations are so melodious, so tender and so touching in the evening of their life.

Ayer's Ague Cure.

TO THE PUBLIC.

Ever since my "Aromatic Schiedam Schnapps"—the purest and best Gin for medical purpores—became fully appeciated throughout this country, I have been constantly solicited by druggists, apothecaries, and large numbers of the most eminent physicians, in all parts of the Union, to add to my Gin importations pure Brandies and Wines, and to bottle them the same as I am and have been doing with the Schnapps; to seal with my seal and give my certificate guarantying their undoubted purity.

I should long ago have endeavored to comply with the flattering requests. but I found it impossible to do so, especially in regard to the important articles of Brandy, Port and Madeira Wines, owing to the high prices in Europe, occasioned by short grape crops for some years. Happily for the success of my new enterprise, the grape crops for the last and the previous years were abundant.

Another point in my favor is this the duty now on French Brandy is 70 per cent. less than it was when my medical friends began to solicit me to furnish pure Brandy and Wines. These favoring circumstances have enabled me to commence a new enterprise.—I have concluded to import Cognac Bandy and Wines, to bottle them for medical as well as for private use. I am well aware, from the bitter experience, the vile attacks, the misrepresentation of motives and enmity of dealers and mixers of bad articles which I met with & conquered in the case of my Schnapps before obtained its present proud pre-eminence over all other Gins, that the new enterprise will be attended with equal opposition more trouble, and involve an immense outly of capital These difficulties and expenses will be much greater, because I shall have to encounter the malignity and enmity of countless thousands who are engaged in the liquor trade, and making fortunes by the manufacture of infamous imitations of "Brandy" made from poisonous compounds—their use being alike destructive to healthy human life, and of course speedy death to the feeble invalid or those in whose behalf eminent physicians have urged upon me the importation of a pure, invigorating article of Brandy. I shall do so, in spite of all opposition, even that of the dealers and sellers of the stuff in bottles called "Brandy," of which millions of bottles are annually sold, and which is no better than the worst of poisons.

I am perfectly willing and well satisfied to embark in this new enterprise, and have no fears, no doubts about the most ultimate success for myself and the druggists and apothecaries in the thirty-three States, if they will heartily co-operate with me in my efforts to drive out of use the vilest of compounds, called "Brandy," and replace it with the pure unadulterated article, which I will faithfully and truly supply.

The medical virtues of French Brandy need not to be told. The Brandy imported by me I will bottle, seal with my seal, my label, and add my certificate that it is of the first quality, and pure and unadulterated as when it left the distillery in France.

I will stake my reputation as a man, my standing as a merchant, and my tried commercial integrity, that what I pledge and certify to with my seal, my label, and my certificate is correct, and can be relied upon by purchasers in any section of the Union to which my Brandy may be sent. I have made arrangements with the best Brandy manufacturers in France, with those who have a world wide renown as the first Brandy exporters. I have selected four eminent firms who will ship me their Brandies. I shall not designate the article by any other name than Wolfe's Genuine Cognac Brandy. If I were to do otherwise it would be useless for then unprincipled persons, who are incessantly engaged in the nefarious traffic of imitating all valuable articles, would soon imitate and adopt my mark as a cloak under which to sell their compound of poisons to cover the vile imposition.

I am now prepared to receive and execute orders for Wolfe's Genuine Cognac Brandy addressed to me, No. 22 Beaver Street Prices will be given to personal application, or in reply to letters.

In this circular I have thus far written mainly about pure Cognac Brandy; I have now to call your attention to other liquors and wines.

I am prepared to supply orders for "Jamaica Rum" imported and bottled by me; also Irish and Scotch Whiskey." The purity and genuineness of the last-named articles, imported for "medical use" I will also guaranty with my seal, my label, and my certificate.

I shall also import the purest and best "Madeira," "Port," and "Sherry" Wines for Medical purposes. These I also guaranty with my seal, my label, and my certificate

In conclusion permit me to add that I shall be happy to hear from those that this circular reaches, and whose personal or pecuniary interests it may effect, in the combination of articles that I engage to supply. Should any such person visit New York—especially a Druggists, Apothecary or Physician—I shall be most happy to receive a personal call.

There is no importer who possesses more actual experience and knowledge of the importing liquor and wine trade than I do, I have been engaged in it over thirty years.

I have narrated some facts connected with my new enterprize for the particular information of those connected with the practice or the sale of medicines. If I am favored with the visits of any such, or by friends to whom they give letters of introduction to me, they can see with their own eyes, and test my truthfulness by their own observation.

I respectfully crave, for this Circular and its contents a careful and attentive perusal. I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,

UDOLPHO WOLFE.

EDUCATIONAL NOTICE.

THE undersigned, having for some time past contemplated the establishment of an Educational Institute for young Ladies in some locality, affording the greatest facilities for speedy success and permanent usefulness, announces as the result, that, he has finally decided that Jacksonville is the best point for this object.

He will, in the execution of his design present for patronage, an Institution as favorable as any in the country for acquiring all that is essential in a liberal and accomplished female education.

To accommodate patronage from abroad he will for the present, procure board for any applying for the benefits of this institution, in good families in the village; hoping at an early day, to be able to provide it for them in his own.

In the instruction and discipline of the pupils, he will be assisted by his wife, who is well known in this community as having been for several years the successful disciplinarian and teacher of the Jacksonville Female Academy.

In offering ourselves to the people of Jacksonville and vicinity as instructors of youth we have the confidence that we throw ourselves upon a generous and appreciative public, who will not withhold from us the reward we merit, nor fail to acknowledge our ability for this undertaking, or honest endeavor to discharge our duty both to pupils and patrons.

The RATES OF TUITION in this Institution will be the same as in others of a similar grade, viz: for the

1st Class—Embracing primary studies,	$10
2d Class " the common English branches;	$12 50
4th Class " the higher branches of mathemetics and the ancient and modern Languages,	$20 00

The science of vocal music will be taught gratuitously to all the pupils, as a daily exercise.

Instruction in the department of Instrumental music, will be given by accomplished and successful Teachers.

A competent Teacher of the ornamental branches will be provided.

The first session of this School will open on the 9th of January next, at the house of the Principal, and a more commodious place will soon be provided.

While moral and religious instruction will be constantly and faithfully imparted, all sectarian and denominational influence will be conscientiously avoided.

Coming as we do with the best of motives we are determined to merit, and trust we shall receive a worthy share of your patronage. L. H. PARSONS, PRINCIPAL.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

FOR THE CURE OF
Hepatitis or Liver Complaint,
DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increase on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for a rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.

DR. M'LANE'S LIVER PILLS, IN CASES OF AGUE AND FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them A FAIR TRIAL.

Address all orders to

FLEMING BROS., PITTSBURGH, PA.

P. S. Economy & Progression.

In this, the age of advancement, many things new and invaluable have been introduced—not the phantoms and chimeras of other ages, but new ones, of sound and practical utility. In no department is progression better marked or more visibly to be seen than in medical, when originating with competent men, and confined to scientific limits. [illegible] of that character are the following [illegible] agents; none will prove more efficient [illegible] so often needed.

DR. LITTLE'S ANODYNE COUGH DROPS.

A new and certain cure for Coughs, Asthma, Pain in the Breast; also Croup, Whooping Cough, Colds etc., among children.

This is a pleasant medicine to take, reducing immediate relief, and in nine out of ten cases a prompt cure. It exercises the most controlling influence over Coughs and Irritation of the Lungs of any remedy known, often stopping the most violent in a few hours, or at most in a day, or two. Many cases thought to be decidedly consumptive have been promptly cured by using a few bottles, and wearing the Little's Strengthening Plasters on the chest. As an anodyne expectorant, without astringing the bowels, it stands paramount to all cough mixtures.

DR. LITTLE'S FRENCH MIXTURE.

This is prepared from a French Recipe (in the forms of No's. 1 and 2, the first for the acute, and No. 2 for the chronic stage) that has been much improved upon in this country; & from its unexampled success is likely to supercede every other remedy for the cure of the diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Gonorrhoeal, Blenorrhoeal and Leuchorrhoeal or Flour Albus Affections. This extensive compound combines properties totally different in taste and character from anything to be found in the United States in Pharmacopoea or in private practice; and in point of safety and efficiency is not rivalled in America.

DOLLAR VERMIFUGE.

Prepared and put up in bottles and vials, only by C. W. Little. In using, nothing else is required to relieve children of worms; and besides being one of the best and cheapest ever offered to the public, its frequent use in families will save much trouble and expense, as well as the lives of many children; for eight out of every ten cases generally require it.

DR. LITTLE'S RINGWORM & TETTER OINTMENT.

Hundreds of cases of Chronic Tetters, Scald Heads, and diseases of the skin generally, have been cured by this remedy, and since the introduction of the No 2 preparation (being stronger) scarcely a case has been found that it will not effectually eradicate in a short time. For the cure of Cancerous Sores and Ulcers it is applied in the form of Plasters, and is almost infallible.

In addition, the Proprietor prepares, for the great convenience and certainty in prescribing, Strengthening Plasters of the most superior quality, Improved Cook's Pills (in a bilious cathartic) Vegetable Pills (a mild cathartic to obviate costiveness) Antacid (for tightness and acidity of the stomach) Tonic Bitters, etc., which will be sent on consignment if ordered.

Medicines, like everything else, are better and more economically supplied to the great mass of the people by merchandise than in any other way.

Physicians are referred to the 13th page of Dr. Little's phamplet, to the catalogue of medicines of the Materia Medica, that he uses in compounding his different remedies, and asked to say if they are not the chief reliance of the profession, as he himself has practised medicine extensively for more than ten years, before retiring to the drug business.

In more than two hundred places in Georgia, and in all the Southern States they are to be had; and as there are scamps about who are counterfeiting his remedies, by palming off their own or something else, by using the same or similar names (for no patent is wanted or secured amid the absurd patents of the day.)

N. B.—All orders and letters on business are to be sent in future to LITTLE & BRO. Macon, Georgia, instead of Philadelphia.

Wholesale Agents, Dr. P. M. Cohen & Co., Charleston, S. C., McKesson & Robbins, New York, & T. M. Cunningham, Selma, Ala.

This caution is rendered essentially necessary as large quantities of inferior and defective Linens are prepared season after season and sealed with the name of RICHARDSON by Irish Houses, who, regardless of the injury thus inflicted alike on the American consumer & the manufacturers of the genuine Goods, will not readily abandon a business so profitable, while purchasers can be imposed on with Goods of a worthless character.

AYER'S

Ague Cure.

FOR THE SPEEDY CURE OF

Intermittent Fever, or Fever and Ague, Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical Headache, or Bilious Headache, and Bilious Fevers, indeed for the whole class of diseases originating in biliary derangement, caused by the Malaria of miasmatic countries.

[illegible]

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

FOR ALL THE PURPOSES OF A FAMILY PHYSIC

[illegible]

Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also many formidable and dangerous diseases. The agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing certificates of their cures and directions for their use in the following complaints: Costiveness, Heartburn, Headache arising from disordered Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Pain in and Morbid Inaction of the Bowels, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, Jaundice, and other kindred complaints, arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions. They are an excellent alterative for the renovation of the blood and the restoration of tone and strength to the system debilitated by disease.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced stages of the disease.

So wide is the field of its usefulness and so numerous are the cases of its cures, that almost every section of country abounds in persons publicly known, who have been restored from alarming and even desperate diseases of the lungs by its use. When once tried, its superiority over every other medicine of its kind is too apparent to escape observation, and where its virtues are known, the public no longer hesitate what antidote to employ for the distressing and dangerous affections of the pulmonary organs that are incident to our climate. While many inferior remedies thrust upon the community have failed and been discarded, this has gained friends by every trial, conferred benefits on the afflicted they can never forget, and produced cures too numerous and too remarkable to be forgotten.

CHESNUT GROVE WHISKEY C.W.

The enterprising proprietor of

CHESTNUT GROVE WHISKEY,

(The Purest Medicinal Agent ever known) has furnished the community a Stimulant, pure, healthful and invigorating, at the same time a mild delicious beverage. It is calculated to do away with the vile drugged stuff that is palmed off on the community, and which is injurious to body and mind. In addition to the certificates beneath, he has received a Diploma from the STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY, and additional testimony from DR. JACKSON, of Boston, who testifies under oath to its absolute purity.

CERTIFICATES.

Philadelphia, Sept. 9th, 1858.

We have carefully tested the sample of Chestnut Grove Whiskey which you sent us, and find that it contains none of the Poisonous substance known as Fusil Oil, which is the characteristic and injurious ingredient of the whiskeys in general use.

BOOTH, GARRET & CAMAC,

Analytical Chemists.

New York, Sept. 3d, 1858.

I have analized a sample of Chestnut Grove Whiskey, received from Mr. Charles Wharton, Jr. of Philadelphia; and having carefully tested it, I am pleased to state that it is entirely free from poisonous or deleterious substances. It is an unusually pure and fine flavored quality of whiskey.

JAMES R. CHILTON,

Analytical Chemist.

Boston, March 7th, 1859.

I have made a chemical analysis of commercial samples of Chestnut Grove Whiskey, which proves to be free from the heavy Fusil Oils, and perfectly pure and unadulterated.—The fine flavor of this Whiskey is derived from the Grain used in manufacturing it.—

Respectfully, A. A. HAYES, M. D.

MERCHANT MILLS,

Latest Improvement.

My merchant Mills, 2 miles west of Jacksonville, are now in full and complete operation, capable of grinding, from 3 to 400 bushels of grain per day, at any stage of water. And if a large outlay in cash, combining the best science, mechanical skill, and material in their construction, that the County afforded; with an accommodating Scientific Miller in charge of them, will entitle those mills to a share of public patronage, it is respectfully solicited.

For the accommodation of those who may remain over night, there is at hand, a comfortable house and fire place, and lots & sheds for their stock.

MILES W. ABERNATHY.

He further informs his friends and old customers, that he has no connection with the Stephenson Mills, advertised over the signature of Abraham Adiholt.

POETRY.

Heart Echos.

Like whispers from the far off spheres
And with their thrilling spell revive
The garnered love of by gone years.
What though beneath the sod they lie,
That pale array of honored dead;

Old songs! I never guessed how large
Till, one dull eve' by chance I found
A well worn book, whose every line
Came back to me as clear as though
But yesterday I'd laid it down,
And there I found the wished for clue

Oh, when amid the world of doubts,
Of light and shade in which we stray
We seek some charm by which to drive
Some temporary grief away.
Let they who love such pleasures court
The favorites who entrance the throng
For me, I'll find a homelier scene,
And lull me with some dear old song

BLINDNESS.

Oh! where is the place of our rest?
I have heard its low music afar:
From the place of our rest, and the land of the blest,

The bird-haunted trees, flowing back from the breeze,
'Twas the music I heard which they made.

But those wood leanings over their streams
Of late! have sought them in vain:
And the glorious streams that I saw in my dreams,
I never shall see them again!

For that was in times passed away,
When my heart it was younger than now:
In the times passed away, like a spring-weather day,
With a sun-set of gold on its brow.

There were hopes that have gone on before,
And loves that I thought would remain:
The hopes gone before, to that mystical shore,
And the loves that will come not a gain!

But my eyes they are blinded with sin,
And sorrow has lain on my breast;
And sorrow and sin, they cannot enter in,
To that beautiful land of our rest.

Oh! where is the place of our rest?
My sight shall I ever regain?
And the place of our rest, that Land of the Blest,
Shall I ever behold it again!

I Sigh for My Loved Old Home.

Spring breaths sweetly perfumed air,
Weaves just as lovely a wreath of flowers,
Brings singing birds as gay and rare,
Weeps in as gentle April showers,
In this fair land of azure sky
As under thy far-stretching dome
And yet I can but sadly sigh
For thee, for thee, my loved old home.

Thy harvest moons no softer shine;
Then showest no scene of wending stream,
Of meadow green, of deep-breathed kine,
Of grand oaks streaching broad and high,
Fairer than greet me as I roam
Through this bright land—and yet I sigh
For thee, for thee, my loved old home.

Ev'n as the absent lover sighs
For her who keeps his soul in chains,
Dreams of her soft love-lighted eyes,
His cheek with many a tear-drop stains;
So for thy cherished scenes I yearn,
Fain would I to thy bosom come,
And fondly doth my full heart turn
To thee, to thee, my loved old home.

Miscellaneous.

It is less panful to learn in youth than to be ignorant in age.

"That argument is sound," said a bystander, of a speech, which was being made by a noisy lawyer. "Yes, it's all sound," replied Mr. B.

A man named Oats was brought up recently for beating his wife and children. On being sentenced to imprisonment, the brute remarked that "it was very hard that a man was not allowed to thrash his own Oats."

"I live in Julia's eyes," said a dandy. "Very likely," was the reply, "for she has a sty in one of them."

A gentleman who has for two years refused to contribute anything towards the support of the "stated preaching of the Gospel," recently surprised his friends by contributing to the purchase of a bell for a new church edifice. On being asked the reason for this exercise of liberality, he replied that he never put his money where he could not hear it ring.

A loafer happened to be in one of the printing offices in Boston, a day or two ago, and asked, "What's the news?", "Two dollars a year in advance," was the answer. Loafer subscribed.

A BLUNDER-BUS—Kising the wrong woman.

A GREAT MAN.—George Lippard in his work called the Nazarine, thus speaks of Gen. Jackson, "He was a man! Well I remember the day I waited upon him. He sat there in his arm-chair—I can see him now. We told him of the public distress—the manufacturers ruined—the eagles shrouded in crape, which were carried at the head of 20,000 men into Independence square. He heard us all. We begged him to leave the deposits where they were to uphold the great bank at Philadelphia. Still he did not say a word. At last one of our members more fiery than the rest, intimated that if the bank was crushed, a rebellion might follow. Then the old man rose—I can see him yet.

"Come," he shouted, in a voice of thunder, as his clenched hand was raised high above his white hair. "Come with bayonets in your hands, instead of your petition—surround the white House with your legions—I am ready for you! With the people at my back whom your gold can neither awe nor buy, I will swing you up around the Capitol—each one of you on a gibbet as high as Haman's!"

"When I think," says the author, "of that one man standing there at Washington batteling against all powers of bank and panic combined; betrayed by those in whom he trusted—assailed by all that the snake of malice could hiss or the fiend of falsehood howl!—when I think of that one man placing his back against the rock, and folding his arms for the blow, while he uttered the vow, 'I will not swerve one inch from the course I have taken,' I must confess that the records of Rome—nay, the proudest day of Cromwell or Napoleon—cannot furnish an instance of a will like that of Andrew Jackson, when he placed life and soul and name on the hazard of a die for the people's welfare.

MURDER AND SUICIDE AT SYRACUSE, N. Y.—Syracuse, March 8.—This morning a man named Sinker died from the effects of poison, which he administered to himself. He first poisoned his two children, aged about eight and six years, and having laid them out and folded their hands upon their breasts, he left them in an unoccupied room where some of his furniture was stored and went to his hotel and took the poison himself.

On Tuesday he poisoned a horse belonging to Dr. Searles, and it is supposed he intended to shoot Dr. S., as a loaded pistol was found on him. The cause was estrangement of his wife, and her alleged intimacy with Dr Searles, under the influence of "free love" principles.

Great excitement exists in the community in consequence of this sad affair, and Dr. Searles has been locked up in the penitentiary to protect him from the indignation of our citizens.

☞At Louisville, Ga., last Tuesday, negroes brought higher prices than ever before known. Old men brought $1000, young men and boys $1500 to $1900, and young women without children $1900 to $2000 and upwards—all field hands.

Indian Massacres in Texas.

Great Excitement at Waco.

HOUSTON, March 10.—A letter to a mercantile house in this city, from Rob't Crudup, of Waco, under date of the 7th, has been handed to us, from which we make the following extract:

There is great excitement here today. The Indians yesterday killed six families on Hog Creek, twenty-five miles from Waco, in the upper part of this county and lower part of Bosque county. Capt. J. M. Smith leaves here at 2 o'clock, to-day, with a company for the scene of action.

The frontier is full of Indians, and there is great excitement through all the counties above there.

The Indians are indeed coming down almost into the lower country. The people will have to turn en masse to the frontier to repulse them.

VIOLENCE IN UTAH.—The editor of the Valley Tan, a paper published in Utah, which has been active in exposing the atrocities of the leaders of the Mormon Church, has received a warning from the city Mormon authorities that they will not be responsible for his personal safety, the English of which is that he is put out of the way. The editor meets these threats defiantly. He says:

In addition to that statement I will add that murder has been sanctioned from the pulpit of the Mormon tabernacle in this and there is incontestable proof on record that men have been murdered in this Territory whose death was deliberated about and decided on in a meeting or meetings over which a person holding a high position in the Mormon Church presided; and if any one sees proper to deny this statement, the records shall be forthcoming. It is on record, further, that atrocities have been committed against the person of a man in this Territory, compared with which murder would be a tender kindness, and that ecclesiastical authorities were also concerned in this transaction. If this be denied, the proof shall also be produced.

NEWSPAPER ARTICLES.

A schoolmaster who had been engaged a long time in his profession, and witnessed the influence of a newspaper on a family of children, writes as follows:—

I have found it to be the universal fact without exception that those scholars of both sexes, and of all ages, who have had access to newspapers at home, when compared with those who are not, are

1. Better readers, excelling in pronunciation and consequently read more understandingly.

2. They are better spellers, and define words with ease and acuracy

3. They obtain a practical knowledge of geography in almost half the time it requires others, as the newspapers have made them familiar with the location of the most important places, nations, their government, and doings, on the globe.

4. They are better grammarians, for having become familiar with every variety in the newspapers, from the common-place advertisements to the finished and classical oration of the Statesman, they more readily comprehend the meaning of the text and consequently analyze its construction with accuracy.

This is a good and competent witness The school teacher! Who more competent than he to determine the real value of the newspaper as an aid to education and the development of the struggling mind? We prize his testimony as every one else should, and would add in this connection, that the primary and absolute advantage of a newspaper in families consists in the familiar subjects to the minds of its youthful members—subjects of common life and every day incidents, in which the rising generation feel sufficient interest, if not to enable them to comprehend their purport and meaning, certainly to enquire and to desire explanation from their seniors. The habit of reading understandingly once acquired, leads, onward by rapid and progressive, steps until the whole field of newspaper intelligence becomes susceptible of interest and cultivation. The amount of information which can be accumulated by an early course of newspaper reading, extending through the years of minority, cannot easily be estimated.

From the Hayneville Chronicle.

Execution of Aiken—His Confession &c.

On Friday last, Aiken, the murderer of Micheal Hibbitts, was hung in public at Kingston, Autauga county. We learn there was a large crowd of people in attendance, some estimating the number at 1500 and others at 2000. Aiken made a few remarks upon the gallows, which our informant was unable to hear, but which are said to have been in relation to his future destiny. After the rope was cut he struggled some time before dying

It will be remembered by our readers that soon after the arrest of Aiken for Hibbitts' murder it was reported that he had confessed having murdered Mr. Clark Taylor, in Montgomery county a short time before. On making enquiry as to the truth or falsity of this rumor, we were informed that Aiken denied having made any such confession, and he could prove being at Newport on the night Taylor was murdered. This statement we publish at the time, having seen the gentleman by whom it was said Aiken could prove an alibi, and he being certain that Aiken was at Newport on the night the murder was committed. Since the execution of Aiken, however, his counsel, who during his life were bound by professional obligation to keep such matters secret, state that Aiken confessed having killed Clark Taylor, as well as Micheal Hibbitts He told his counsel that he went to the house of Hibbitts, and called him out of bed; that he owed Hibbitts some $20, which H. demanded of him before he would let him have any more liquor; that finally H consented to fill his bottle, and that while he was stooping down to do so, he struck him several severe blows, and afterwards finished him with the knife which he found in Hibbitts' bed. Hibbitts was known to have had several hundred dollars about him, as he had offered to loan, a short time before, some six or seven hundred dollars to a gentleman. —But Aiken positively denied having got more than ninety dollars from the murdered man. In the examination which was made of Hibbitts' papers and effects we understand but a few dollars in money were found and no notes or other papers showing that he lent his money. What could have become of it, unless Aiken got it and gave it to an accomplice for safe-keeping, is unknown.

He said in regard to the murder of Taylor, that an accomplice of his came to Newport on the evening of the night the deed was committed, and told him that he had seen Taylor in Montgomery the day before with a considerable amount of money, and proposed that they should both go and kill and rob him that night. Aiken consented; they went stealthily entered the apartment where Taylor was sleeping, and Aiken killed him with an axe. They examined the apartment for money, but found only five dollars, which they hastily left and returned to Newport Aiken being at his post next morning He was engaged at Newport making brick. If he gave the name of his accomplice in the brutal murder, his counsel do not remember it; but they are inclined to think he de did not. It is much to be regretted that they did not get his name and description, that justice might overtake the wretch. Aiken said his accomplice left for Mississippi a short time after Taylor's murder. A gentleman of this county, who has been at the place of Mr. Taylor frequently as also at Newport, says the distance between the two points is not more than 12 or 15 miles, and that the trip to Taylor's place and back to Newport could easily have been made in a night.

Our neighbor of the Watchman, Mr. Pruitt, was clerking at Newport at the time Aiken was working there, and thinks he ran a narrow risk himself on a certain occasion. They both boarded and perhaps slept in the same house, and Aiken had several times questioned the cook woman as to whether P. kept much money about him. One night Aiken asked P. to lend him his bowie as he was going off some where and and might need it He got the knife and late at night knocked at the door and called P. up. Our neighbor thinks now—and the supposition is at least a plausible one—that Aiken fully intended to murder him when the door was opened, but that his heart failed him Of course he thought nothing of the matter at the time; but when it was found what kind of a man Aiken was, he very naturally came to the conclusion that he had borrowed his knife to murder him with. We understand that Aiken says he has been in the Georgia penitentiary; that he has two children in Mississippi, a son and daughter besides several other relations there; that he has a brother in the Northern part of this State, and that his connexions though in humble circumstances, are respectable.

Strong efforts were made to induce him to enter into a full history of his past life, but he resolutely refused, on the ground that it would do him no good and injure his family. What he did confess was done last year—recently he has been very reserved It is doubtful if a more heartless villian ever disgraced God's green earth, or met a more richly merited doom.

A correspondent who signs herself "Sophia," says "that woman is twice as good as man, and proves it thus by the very orthography: W-o-m a-n—double-you, O, Man!"—Ex.

A Southern lady has abandoned the Shaker establishment near Hopkinsvile, to marry Mr. James Bean, aged seventy-five. She must be fond of dried beans.

From the Diary of a Late Physician.

Her father sat cowering in his chair, with his hands partially elevated, feeling as though an angry angel had suddenly flashed upon his guilty privacy; and when his daughter fell, he had not the power to quit his chair and go to her relief for several seconds. A horrible suspicion crossed his mind that she had lost her reason; and he spent the next hour and a half in a perfect ecstasy of terror. As soon, however, as the apothecary summoned to her assistance had assured him that there were, happily, no grounds for his fears; that she had had a very violent fit of hysterics, but was now recovered and fallen asleep, he ordered the horses to his carriage, and drove off at top speed to the chambers of his city solicitor, Mr. Newington, to instruct him to procure Elliott's instant discharge. That, of course, was utterly impossible; and Mr. Hillary, almost stupified with terror, heard Mr. Newington assure him that the King of England himself could not accomplish such an object? That Elliott must now remain in prison till the day of trial—about a month or six weeks hence—and then be brought to the bar as a felon; that there were but two courses to be pursued on that day, either not to appear against the prisoner and forfeit all the recognisances, or to appear in open court, and state that the charge was withdrawn, and that it had been founded entirely on a mistake. That even then, in either case, Elliott, if really innocent (Mr. Newington was no party whatever to the fraudulent concoction of the charge, which was confined to Mr. Hillary & Lord Scamp), would bring an action at law against Mr. Hillary, and obtian, doubtless, very large damages for the disgrace, and danger, and injury which Mr. Hillary's unfounded charge had occasioned him; or, more serious still, he might perhaps indict all the parties concerned for a conspiracy.

"But," said Mr. Hillary, almost sick with fright at this alarming statement of the liabilities he had incurred, "I would not wait for an action to be brought against me; I would pay him any sum you might recommend, and that, too, instantly on his quitting the prison walls"

"But, pardon me, Mr. Hillary; why all this?"

"Oh, something of very great importance has just happened at my house, which—which—gives me quite a different opinion. But I was saying I would pay him instantly—"

"But if the young man be spirited, and conscious of his innocence, and choose to set a high value upon his character, he will insist on clearing it in open court, and dare you to the proof of your charges before the whole world; at least I should do so in such a case."

"Why—a—" stammered Mr. Hillary, colouring violently, adding something that neither he himself nor Mr Newington could understand. The latter had his own surmises—somewhat vague, it is true—as to the meaning of Mr. Hillary's words; especially coupling them, as he did instantly, with certain expressions which he had heard poor Elliott utter at the police-office. He was a prudent man, however, and, seeing no particular necessity for pushing his inquiries further, he thought it best to let matters remain as Mr. Hillary chose to represent them.

Six weeks did poor Elliott lie immured in the dungeons of Newgate, awaiting his trial—as a felon. What pen shall describe his mental sufferings during that period? Conscious of the most exalted and scrupulous integrity; he who had never designedly wronged a human being, even in thought; whom dire necessity only had placed in circumstances which exposed him to the devilish malice of such a man as Hillary; who stood alone, and, with the exception of one fond heart friendless in the world; whose livelihood depended on his daily labour, and who had hitherto supported himself with decency, not to say dignity, amid many grievous discouragements and harships; this was the man pining amid the guilty gloom of the cells of Newgate, and looking forward each day with shuddering to the hour when he was to be dragged with indignity to the bar, and perhaps found guilty, on perjured evidence, of the shocking offence with which he was charged! And all this was the wicked contrivance of Mr. Hillary, the father of his Mary! And was he liable to be transported; to quit his country ignominiously and for ever; to be banished with disgust and horror from the memory of her who had once so passionately loved him, as an impostor, a villain, a felon! He resolved not to attempt any communication with Miss Hillary, if indeed it were practicable; but to await, with stern resolution the arrival of the hour that was either to crush him with unmerited but inevitable infamy and ruin, or expose and signally punish those whose malice and wickedness had sought to effect his destruction. What steps could he take to defend himself? Where were his witnesses? Who would detect and expose the perjury of those who would enter the witness box on behalf of his wealthy prosecutor! Poor soul! Heaven support the against thy hour of trouble, and then deliver thee!

Miss Hillary's fearful excitement, on the evening when she discovered Elliott's situation, led to a slow fever which confined her to her bed for nearly a fortnight; and when, at the end of that period, she again appeared in her father's presence, it was only to encounter, despite her wan looks, a repetition of the harsh and cruel treatment she had experienced ever since the day on which he had discovered her reluctance to receive the addresses of Lord Scamp. Day after day did her father bait her on behalf of his lordship, with alternate coaxing and coercing all was in vain; for, when Lord Scamp at length made her a formal proffer of his precious "hand and heart," she rejected him, with a quiet contempt, which sent him, full of the irritation of wounded conceit to pour his sorrows into the inflamed ear of her father.

The name that was written on her heart—that was constantly in her sleeping and waking thoughts, Elliott—she never suffered to escape her lips. Her father frequently mentioned it to her, but she listened in melancholy, oftener indignant silence. She felt convinced that there was foul play on the part of her father connected with Elliott's incarceration in Newgate, and could sometimes scarcely conceal, when in his presence, a shudder of apprehension.—And was it likely, was it possible, that such a measure towards the unhappy, persecuted Elliott could have any other effect on the daughter, believing him, as she did, to be pure and unspotted, than to increase and deepen her affection for him; to present his image before her mind's eye as that of one enduring martyrdom on her account and for her sake?

At length came on the day appointed for Elliott's trial, and it was with no little trepidation that Mr. Hillary, accompanied by Lord Scamp, stepped into his carriage and drove down to the Old Bailey, where they sat together on the bench till nearly seven o'clock, till which time the court was engaged upon the trial of a man for forgery. Amid the bustle consequent upon the close of this long trial, Hillary, after introducing his noble friend to one of the aldermen, happened to cast his eyes to the bar, which had just been quitted by the death doomed convict he had heard tried, when they fell upon the figure of Elliot, who seemed to have been placed there for some minutes, and was standing, with a mournful expression of countenace, apparently lost in thought. Even Mr. Hillary's hard heart was almost touched by the altered appearance of his victim, who was greatly emaciated, and seemed scarcely able to stand erect in his most humiliating position.

Mr. Hillary knew the perfect innocence of Elliott; and his own guilty soul thrilled within him as his eye encountered for an instant the steadfast but sorrowful eye of the prisoner. In vain did he attempt to be conversing carelessly with Lord Scamp, who was himself too much agitated to attend to him! The prisoner pleaded not guilty. No consel had been retained for the prosecution, nor did appear for the defence. The court, therefore, had to examine the witnesses; and suffice it to say, that after about half an hour's trial, in the course of which Hillary was called as a witness, and trembled so excessively as to call forth some encouraging expressions from the bench, the judge who tried the case decided that there was no evidence worth a straw against the prisoner, and consequently directed the jury to acquit him, which they did instantly, adding their unanimous opinion that the charge against him appeared both frivolous and malicious.

"Am I to understand, my lord, that I leave the court freed from all taint, from all dishonour!" inquired Elliott, after the foreman had expressed the opinion of the jury.

"Certainly, most undoubtedly you do," replied the judge.

"And if I think fit, I am at liberty hereafter to expose and punish those who have wickedly conspired to place me here on a false charge?"

"Of course you have your remedy against any one," replied the cautious judge, "whom you can prove to have acted illegally."

Elliott darted a glance at Mr. Hillary, which made his blood rush tumultuously towards his guilty heart; and bowing respectfully to the court, withdrew from the ignominious spot which he had been so infamously compelled to occupy. He left the prison a little after eight o'clock; and wretched indeed were his feelings as the turnkey, opening this outermost of the iron-bound and spiked doors, bade him farewell, gruffly adding, "Hope we mayn't meet again, my hearty!"

"I hope not, indeed!" replied Elliott, with a sigh; and, descending the steps, found himself in the street. He scarce knew, for a moment, whither to direct his steps, staggering, overpowered with the strange feeling of suddenly recovered liberty. The sad reality, however, soon forced itself upon him, What was to become of him? He felt wearied and faint, and almost wished he had begged the favour of sleeping for the night even in the dreary dungeons from which he had been but that moment released. Thus his thoughts were occupied as he moved slowly towards Fleet street, when a female figure approached him muffled in a large shawl.

"Henry, dearest Henry!" murmured the half-stifled voice of Miss Hillary, stretching towards him both her hands; "so you are free! You have escaped from the snare of the wicked! Thank God, thank God! Oh, what have we passed through since we last met! Why, Henry, will you not speak to me? Do you forsake the daughter for the sin of her father?"

"Miss Hillary?" he murmured incredulously.

"Yes, yes! I am Mary Hillary—I am your own Mary. But oh, Henry, how altered you are! How thin! ...

and ill you look! I cannot bear to see you!" And, covering her face with her hands, she burst into a flood of tears.

"I can hardly—believe—that it is Miss Hillary," muttered Elliott. "But your father! Mr. Hillary! What will he say if he sees you? Are you not ashamed of being seen talking to a wretch like me, just slipped out of Newgate?"

"Ashamed? My Henry, do not torture me! I am heart broken for your sake! It is my own flesh and blood that I am ashamed of, that it could ever be so base!"

She had obtained information that her father was gone to the Old Bailey with Lord Scamp, and soon contrived to follow them, unnoticed by domestics. She could not get into the court, as the gallery was already filled; and had been lingering about the door for upward of four hours, making eager inquires from those who left the court as to the name of the prisoner who was being tried.—She vehemently urged him to accompany her direct to Bullion House, confront her farther, and demand reparation for the wrongs he had inflicted. "I will stand beside you; I will never leave you; let him turn us both out of his house to e ter!" continued the excited girl, "I begin to loathe it; to feel indifferent about everything it contains, except my poor unoffending dying mother? Come, come, Henry, and play the man?" But Elliott's good sense led him to expostulate with her and he did so successfully, representing to her the useless peril attending such a proceeding. He forced her into the coach that was waiting for her, refused the purse she had tried nearly fifty times to thrust into his hand; promised to make a point of writing to her the next day in such a manner as should be sure of reaching her and, after mutually affectionate adieus, he ordered the coachman to drive off as quietly as possible towards Highbury.—She found Bullion House in a tumult on account of her absence.

"So your intended victim has escaped!" exclaimed Miss Hillary, suddenly presenting herself before her father, whom Lord Scamp had just left.

"Ah, Polly—my own Polly—and is it you, indeed?" said her father, evidently the worse of wine, approaching her unsteadily. "Come, kiss me, love! where—where have you been, you little puss—puss—puss—".

"To Newgate sir!" replied his daughter, in a quick, stern stone, and retreated a step or two from her advancing father.

"N—n—ewgate! New—new-gate!" he echoed, as if the word had suddenly sobered him. "Well, Mary, and—what of that!" he added, drawing his breath heavily.

"To think that your blood flows in these veins of mine!" continued Miss Hillary, with extraordinary energy, extending her arms towards him. "I call you father, and yet"—she shuddered—"you are a guilty man; you have laid a snare for the innocent; tremble, sir! tremble! Do you love your daughter? I till you, father, that if your design had succeeded, she would have lain dead in your house within an hour after it was told her! Oh, what—what am I saying? where have I been?" She pressed her hand to her forehead; her high excitement had passed away. Her father had recovered from the shock occasioned by her abrupt reappearance. He walked to the door and shut it.

"Sit down, Mary," said he, sternly, pointing to the sofa. She obeyed him in silence.

"Now, girl, tell me, are you drunk or sober? where have you been? what have you been doing?" he inquired, with a furious air. She hid her face in her hands and wept.

"You are driving me mad, father!" she murmured.

"Come, come! What! you're playing the coward now, miss! Where is all your bold spirit gone? What can't you bully me any more? Snivel on, then, and beg my forgiveness! What do you mean, miss," said he, extending towards her his clinched fist, "by talking about this fellow Elliott being—my VICTIM! Eh? Tell me, you audacious hussy! you ungrateful vixen! what d'ye mean? say, what the d—l has come to you?" She made no answer, but continued with her face concealed in her hands "Oh, I'm up to all this! I see what you're after! I know you, young dare-devil! You think you can bully me into letting you marry this brute, this beggar, this swindler? Ah-ha! you don't know me though! By ——, but I believe you and he are league to take my life!" He paused, gasping with rage. His daughter remained silent. "What has turned you so against me?" he continued, the same violent tone and manner. "Haven't I been a kind father to you all my——"

"Oh yes, yes, yes! dear father, I know you have!" sobbed Miss Hillary, rising and throwing herself at his feet.

"Then why are you behaving in this strange way to me?" he inquired, somewhat softening his tone. "Mary, isn't your poor mother up stairs dying? and if I loose her and you too, what's to become of me?" Miss Hillary wept bitterly. "You'd better kill your old father outright at once than kill him in this slow way! or send him to a madhouse, as you surely will! Come, Molly—my own little Molly—promise me to think no more of this wretched fellow! Depend on't he'll be revenged on me yet, and do me an injury if he can! Surely the devil himself sent the man across our family peace! I don't want you to marry Lord Scamp since you don't like him; not I! It's true, I have longed this many a year to marry you to some nobleman; to see you great and happy; but, if you can't fancy my Lord Scamp, why, I give him up. And if I give him up, won't you meet me half way, and make us all happy again by giving up this fellow so unworthy of you? He comes from a d—d bad stock, believe me! Remember, his father gambled, and cut his throat," added Hillary, in a low tone, instinctively trembling as he recollected the effect produced upon Elliott by his utterance of these words on a former occasion. "Only think, Molly—My daughter, with a vast fortune—scraped together during a long life by her father's hard labour—Molly—the only thing her father loves, excepting always your poor mother—to fling herself into the arms of a common thief, a jail bird, a felon, a fellow on his way to the gallows!"

"Father!" said Miss Hillary, solemnly, suddenly looking up into her father's face, "you KNOW that this is false! You know that he is acquitted, that he is innocent; you knew it from the first that the charge was false!"

Mr. Hillary, who had imagined he was succeeding in changing his daughter's determination, was immeasurably disappointed and shocked at this evidence of his failure. He bit his lips violently and looked at her fiercely, his countenance darkened upon her sensibly. Scarce suppressing a horrible execration—turning a deaf ear to all her passionate entreaties on behalf of Elliott—he rose, forcibly detached her arms, which were clinging to his knees, and rung the bell.

"Send Miss Hillary's maid here," said he, hoarsely. The woman with a frightened air soon made her appearance.

"Attend Miss Hillray to her room immediately," said he, sternly, and his disconsolate daughter was led out of his presence to spend a night of sleepless agony.

"On bed
Delirious flung, sleep from her pillow flies;
All night she tosses, nor the balmy power
In any posture finds; till the gray morn
Lifts her pale lustre on the paler wretch.
Exanimate by love; and then, perhaps,
Exhausted nature sinks a while to rest,
Still interrupted by distracted dreams,
That o'er the sick imagination rise,

Curious History of a Song.

Twenty years ago, three young men were walking together on the Boulevard. "Shall we go to breakfast?" said one.

"With all my heart," replied the second.

"But," chimed the third, "where are the funds? which of us has a purse?"

"I!" exclaimed the others, both at once; "but it is empty."

"Christ! and I am hungry as a lawyer's clerk. What's to be done?"

"I have an idea," said the first speaker: "come with me." The three entered a music shop, and asked the proprietor whether he would buy a song.

"A song? Diable! Whose is it?"

"Ours."

"Let me see it."

"I will sing it to you," said the shortest of the three. He sat down to the piano, and sung the piece offered for sale.

"Well," said the publisher, "it is not bad; I will give you 25f. for it."

"What! words, and music and all?"

"Oh, certainly, the times are hard."

"It is very little—never mind—shell out—it will be enough for breakfast." The publisher paid the 12f. and the three friends went to breakfast together.

Why this story? the reader will ask. Oh! nothing in the world but this—the song was "L'Andalouse!" The publisher made 100,000f. by his bargain. The author of the words was Alfred de Mussett; the author of the music was Monpou, and the singer Duprez. That's all.

The remarkable tidings from Callifornia is that from the new mining region in the Washoe Valley, the richness of the yield surpassing anything ever before known in Callifornia. The San Francisco correspondent of the New York Times writes: "The vein now being worked is situated just over the line of California in Utah Territory distant about 175 miles from Sacramento city—perfectly accessible by teams, over 400 of which are now hauling over that route to and from Salt Lake. One company, known as the Walsh Company, are getting out at the rate of two tons a day of the silver ore, besides several tons of the quartz stripped from the vein, which is yielding, by the Mexican "Arasta" process, over $100 per day; the gold is lessening as they go down, and gradually merging in silver. This ore produces from $2 500 to $5,000 per ton, containing both gold and silver, but principally silver."

Dreadful Calamity.—We regret to earn that on Saturday night last six valuable negros belong to Mr. Wiley Glover, of this District, were drowned in his mill-pond near his residence. It appears that seven of them were out on a fishing excursion, and were in a batteau endeavoring to cross the pond with a view of fishing on the opposite side, when suddenly the bateau sunk and six of them (four women, one man and one boy) went down to rise no more. This property was valued at near $8000. In common with Mr. Glover's numerous friends we heartly sympathise with him in his heavy misfortune.—Ex.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—We learn that a daughter of Mr Henry F Heritage, of this county, was burned to death a few days ago, under the following sad circumstances:

The other members of the family were absent from home, and a little son set fire to a field of broom sedge near the house and the daughter to prevent the fire from reaching the fence, attempted to extinguish it. In the effort her clothes caught fire, and no one being near to assist her, she was fatally burnt. She at last reached the spring, put out the fire of her burning clothes and succeeded in getting back to the house, but died soon after from the effects of the burns. We sincerely regret so melancholy an occurrence.—West Alabamian, Carrollton.

THE PURCHASE OF CUBA.—We learn from a satisfactory source in Paris that the French government were advised that Spain has agreed to sell Cuba to the United States. Everything was arranged except the price, about which there was some little difference of opinion.—N. Y. Courier.

AN IDLE RUMOR.—Several of our city contemporaries, and we believe some of the journals in other places, have given currency to a rumor that the Democratic National Convention would probably be changed to some other locality than Charleston. This, to those who are well informed on the subject, is simply ridiculous. The place was fixed, not by the Committee, but by vote of the Cincinnati Convention. The Committee was empowered to fix the time, but was entrusted with no authority whatever as to the place for holding the Convention.

We are authorized to state that this is the view taken of the subject by the Chairman of the Committee, and that no thought is, or has been, entertained of making a change.

War With Mexico.—The news from Mexico will be found exceedingly interesting. A naval battle has been fought, in which a number were killed and wounded, two vessels belonging to the Miramon, or old Spanish royal or Catholic party, with their commander and crews have been taken, and brought as prizes to the United States. These vessels were pronounced piratical by the Juarez or liberal government of Mexico; and are said to have been fited out from Havanna by secret service money of Spain, for which it is said complaint will be made and reparation demanded of the Court of Madrid. Altogether, a war with Mexico seems inevitable, with a pretty fair prospect of difficulties with Spain; in which case that country will find worse than a Morocco war on her hands, and perhaps, by the time she is done with it, will not be so highly insulted at the bare mention of the purchase of Cuba

Our Rail Road.

We hear good news for our Rail Road, but not in a form sufficiently definite to say much at present. Judge Walker, we learn has succeeded in purchasing iron sufficient to finish the road to Gadsden, and that the Directory were called together on yesterday to ratify the contract.

☞ The reader is referred to the advertisment of Messrs J. D. Hoke & Bro. who have just received and are opening an extensive stock of new goods, embracing a great variety of the newest and most fashionable styles. We were politely shown a quantity of goods in their Store yesterday, and we found them truly new and beautiful—new in fabric, color figure style and fashion. They cordially invite all to call and examine their splendid assortment confident that they can please them in quality and price.

The Lowell Journal, alluding to the Lawrence disaster, revives the history of a similar but greatly more destructive disaster which occurred in ancient times, at Fidena, near ancient Rome. An ampitheatre had been erected to exhibit the combats of Gladiators. It fell during the exhibition of these combats, while crowded within, and large numbers outside, many of whom were killed. The number crushed to death was estimated at over 20,000. The ancient historian in describing this catastrophe, ascribes it to the selfishness and avarice of the owner of the building, whose cupidity prevented him from expending sufficient capital and labor to make a safe building. The insecure erection of the Pemberton Mills at Lawrence is also ascribed to the greedy avarice of the manufacturing company who owned it. But what renders the Lawrence disaster infinitely more sorrowful than the one at Fidena, though the destruction of human life was not near so great is the fact, that the victims of the modern disaster were engaged in an innocent, industrious and useful occupation; while the others were engaged in a wicked, inhuman and cruel sport.

☞ Attention is invited to the advertisment of Messrs. Woodward & White, who have received their usually large, beautiful and well assorted stock of Spring & Summer Goods.

All are invited to call and examine, in the confident expectation that they can be suited both in quality and prices

We had it stated that the recent Legislature abolished the office of County Superintendent of Education. In future the Probate Judges license teachers, receiving $2 therefor, to be paid by the person obtaining such license. The township Trustees are to report to the State Superintendent at Montgomery and for their services are to be exempt from pole tax, working on roads, serving on juries, and in time of peace from military duty and patrol duty.

New Goods in Oxford.

☞The attention of the citizens of Oxford and vicinity, and of the County generally, is respectfully invited to the advertisement of the reception of New Goods, by Mr. A. Oberndorf.

His stock has been purchased exclusively in Southern cities, is very extensive and well assorted, and his prices are said to compare favorably with any other house.

We have had some orders filled by Mr. Oberndorf, and were well pleased both with the quality and price of his goods, and can therefore safely commend him to others whose convenience it may suit to trade at that point.

Griffin and Decatur Rail Road.—It will be seen by reference to the communication of "An Old Citizen," that he fully corroborates the statements made by us last week, in reference to the practicability and advantages of bringing the above named road to this place. And he does this too, by the most incontrovertible facts and figures. We thank our correspondent for the information given; and hope his suggestions will not be disregarded by the officers of the road: in fact all we desire is that they may make the survey, being fully persuaded that that will settle the question.

We hope too that such facts as referred to by "An old citizen," may have an influence to arouse the large number of people in this place, White Plains, and eastern part of the County to the importance of this great enterprize. We verily believe this road will enhance the value of real estate in our Town and County more than any other, pointing in this direction.

We invite attention to the card of Dr. J. M. Cogburn, resident Dentist, of Oxford, Ala. Dr. C. has had a number of years practical experience,—his work is all warranted, and he will doubtless be enabled to give the most entire satisfaction to all who may need his professional services.

Improvement.—Our public-spirited and energetic Town Council are now engaged in making a beautiful, useful and durable improvement upon the Town Spring. It consists in a wall of large hewn lime stone from the head of the Spring, down both sides of the branch for 60 feet. The walls are four feet apart, five feet wide, and have three steps on the inner side of each. These walls, in connection with the stone work erected at the head some years since, make a very handsome & useful improvement. This will afford room for near 100 persons to dip water at one and the same time, while several barrels may be filling below: and should our place become the city, anticipated by its most sanguine friends, they need never fear that any one will have to wait long for his turn to obtain water, with these conveniences, to a spring affording, by calculation, at least 1200 gallons of water per minute: a quantity more than sufficient to supply the whole city of New York, at a gallon per day for each inhabitant.

The work is being done by that throughgoing contractor G. W. Mathews, Esq. who knows no such word as fail, & whose name is a guarantee that the work will be faithfully and handsomely executed.

We have received a copy of the speech referred to in the following notice of the Charleston Mercury, and will publish it in the next and succeeding numbers of our paper.

Speech of Mr. Curry of Alabama.

We publish to-day a speech, which we trust will be read throughout the borders of the South. It is unlike the great majority of speeches delivered in the House at this session. It is no labored argument or superfluous declamation of commonplaces addressed in a general way and aimless, except to win easy praises in the Capitol or at home. It is an effort of practical statesmanship and positive policy. Elevated in its tone and vigorous in its reasoning, it is compact, logical and masterly in the treatment of the great topic of the territorial rights of the people of the Southern States. The exposure of Squatter Sovereignty is complete and crushing to its heretical advocates, while the lofty spirit of indignant patriotism by which its Southern feelings is inspired, will challenge the admiration and approval of the whole South.

R. S. NORTON & SON.

Rome, Ga.—This energetic business firm, with which our readers are already somewhat familiar, announce in to day's paper, the reception of their extensive stock of Spring Goods.

Their motto is a good one of "Short credit, short prices,"—and all who wish to purchase really cheap goods are invited to call upon them, and prove the truth of their assertion, that they can and will sell better bargains, by their system of semi-annual payments, than those who sell on 12 months time. This firm is also justly noted for the beautiful styles and fine quality of their goods.

Jacksonville, Ala., March 26, '60.

MR. GRANT:

Your editorial in last week's issue, calling attention to the fact, that there would be no great difficulty in the way of the Griffin and Decatur Railroad in passing through the Ben White Gap, was all right & proper, so far as you stated the facts; but I would beg leave to suggest and I think it can be easily demonstrated, that a connection at this place through that gap is the most eligible, of any one now in contemplation.

I understand the great desideratum, in building that road is to make a direct connexion between Savanah & Memphis, so as to complete successfully with the Charleston & Memphis road, that it can be easily done, by this route, there is no doubt; and that a connexion at this place instead of Oxford, will make the road at least 10 or 12 miles shorter, there is just as little doubt. And now for the proof. It is admitted by all persons that the road after crossing the Tallapoosa river will have to pass through a certain gap, immediately back of Teagues ✕ roads, let it make the connection with the Alabama & Tennessee River Railroad either at Oxford or this place, from that gap to Teagues ✕ Roads, down Choccolocco creek, by a direct air line to Oxford, is 12 miles, and from Oxford to this point 14 more, making 26 miles, from the gap east of Teagues, to this place up Choccoloco creek it is 14 miles, making the difference in favor of the connexions at this place just precisely the distance from Teague's gap to Oxford; that is supposing the road ran upon an air line; any person can see at a glance, by reference to a map of this County, that the above is true. Jacksonville is on the west 1-2 of section, 14, Township 14 Range 8, Oxford on a part of section 19 & 30 Township 16, Range 8, the Teague gap, at the half mile stake between section 12 Range 8 & section 7 Range 10, in Towship 16. Now as to the difficulty of passing through the Ben White gap, that is a small matter, in comparison to gaining 12 or 14 miles in distance, and that too upon a route which the company are intending to make as near as possible upon an air line from Savannah to Memphis. By taking the Oxford route, they are doing the very thing which they are attempting to avoid, the connexion between Charleston & Memphis. One thing is very certain it will cost very little to make the survey.

AN OLD CITIZEN.

THE GREAT FIRE IN MOBILE.

2000 Bales Cotton and the Theater Destroyed—Estimated Loss, $175,000.

The Mobile Mercury, of Tuesday evening, 13th inst, gives the following account of the great fire in that city, briefly announced by telegraph:

Between half past four and five o-clock this morning a fire broke out in the kitchen of Cullum's Exchange, or in Cummings's stable adjoining, situated on the east side of Royel street, between St. Michael and St. Louis streets, which spread on both sides, north and south, and soon got on the west side of Royal, enveloping the Theater and surrounding buildings in flames—resulting in their entire destruction.

Of course we can not pretend to be thoroghly accurate in all the information we have been able to gather in the prevailing excitement. But the following particulars are such as we obtained from those whom we believe to be reliable.

As stated, the fire commenced about the middle of the square. It is not certainly ascertained where it originated, but there is every reason to think that it might have proceeded from sponstaneous combustion in a lot of hay in the stable, between Cullum's Exchange and the Union Press Warehouse. A strong wind prevailing at the time, the flames spread on both sides. The horses and many of the carriges were got out safely from the stable. Nearly all the contents of the Exchange bar-room and billiard saloon above were destroyed; insurance $2,000.

The occupant of one of the sleeping rooms in the third story had barely time to save himself in his night clothes by leaping from a window to the veranda below, a distance of about twenty five feet, and thence into the crowd below Fortunately no one was hurt.

The fire coming south, soon enveloped the row of buildings corner of Royal and St. Francis, and proceeded down the latter until it destroyed all the buildings to the alley-way adjoining D. Wheeler & Co.'s, where it was checked. The offices were occupied by Messrs. Toulmin, Vorhees & Co., Z. Deas, George A. Tuttle, Barnewell, Sager & Co., H. Lowe, Dwight & Co, foreign and domestic cotton and commission merchants, and Sydney T. Douglass, notary and insurance agent. We are glad to learn that nearly all the papers of value were saved from each of the offices.

In the Union Werehouse there were between 2,000 and 2,500 bales cotton. Notwithstanding the strenuous exertions of our noble firemen, but a few hundred bales of this could be saved—perhaps 200—the balance is now in flame and ashes.

The most of the cotton, we learn, was under insurance; but, of course, nothing definite can yet be learned about it.

On the west side of Royal street, the buildings north of the theatre up to Cummings's stable on that side of the street, were soon destroyed, together with the theatre and adjoining buildings, to St Michael street, and back to the vacant lot adjoining Temperance Hall. We have heard that the theatre was insured for about $15,000.

All the property on this side of Royal street, we learn belonged to the Slatter estate, as well as Cullum's Exchange and the stable buildings on the east side. The Union Warehouse belonged to Mr. William Jones, Jr., and those south, on St. Michael street, below, to Mr. Jonathan Emanuel.

But for the efficient services of our steam fire engine it is impossible to conjecture where the fire could have been stopped. Certainly the Union Press and others of its surrounding warehouses, containing many thousand bales of cotton, would have been destroyed. The engine being planted on the wharf, threw a constant stream of water into other engines—which could get no water, as usual, from the hydrants—and thereby enabled them to fight off the flames from the surrounding roofs and cotton.

Everybody gives great credit to Mr. Fulton of the Lafayette house, and his servants for the labors in preventing the flames getting on the south side of St. Michael street, as, had the fire got fairly under way in his house, the whole block of buildings bounded by St. Michael, Royal, St Francis, and St Joseph would have been swept away.

In the absence of official information, we decline giving the rumored losses of our insurance companies. The total loss is estimated at from $150,000. We have not time for further particulars.

The Russian Government have to defray the cost of printing the manuscript Bible discovered by Prof. Tischendorf in the monastery on Mount Sinai. The Professor fixes its date in the early part of the fourth century. His views on the subject have already given rise to quite a lively controversy, in which, however, he has come off victorious, even to the convincing his opponents of the strength of his position. The manuscript is the oldest one of the Bible now existing, and as a means of determining the text of the sacred writings, especially of the Apostles, is far more important than even the manuscript of the Vatican—the latter lacking five books entire, and part of the sixth Professor Tischendorf has already published ten volumes of Bible documents, and his authority in such matters is of importance. The present edition will be profusely illustrated with facsimiles, and no pains will be spared to render it a worthy monument of Imperial munificence.

ALFRED'S BEAUTIFUL DREAM.—I had a strange and beautiful dream last night. A vision of some place, such as I never saw with waking eyes, came before me. There was a landscape of great extent and incomparable beauty. I have no words with which to describe it. There were hills and valleys covered with the most luxuriant vegetation. All descriptions of tropical abundance are barren compared with it. Every kind of delicious fruit hung in ripe and rich clusters. The surpassing beauty and endless variety of the flowers at once charmed and astonished me. In the center of the vast territory there was a magnificent river, whose water was perfectly transparent, and passed with peaceful majesty over a bed of golden sand which I saw distinctly. Along the banks of the river grew trees of extremely graceful form and rich foliage, many of them laden with fruit of extraordinary beauty. Over all these fell a mellow light which added inconceivably to the attractions of the whole; but whence the light came I knew not for there was no sun visible, and not a cloud in the atmosphere to conceal him. Far in the distance, up the river, I saw a city of surpassing splendor, as if built of gold and gems. While gazing on the brilliant spectacle, my attention was arrested by new sight: there passed along the base of one of the hills what appeared a procession of persons clothed in the richest possible robes. Suddenly one of them left the rest, and came to me. With a look of ineffable tenderness, sweetness and love, my mother stood before me. She spoke not. There was no need of speech. There was perfect happiness—there was perfect heaven in that look. I wept for joy. The emotion awoke me. All was a dream except the tears; with them my pillow was wet.

Leask's Two Lights.

ARREST OF MILES M. JACKSON.—Our efficient Town Marshal, Mr. W. Eller, returned last week from Florida having in charge as a fugitive from justice, Miles Jackson, charged with the murder of his daughter in March, 1851 and who had escaped. Gov. Gist was informed of his being at Welaca a town in Florida, and immediately despatched Mr. Eller to demand and arrest him, which he did, and lodged him safely in jail, at Barnwell C. H., where he is said to have committed the murder. His daughter was found under his bed, with her neck broken, and otherwise injured. Another of his children has been missing, and has never been found or heard of. His wife also died suddenly, and strong suspicions are entertained that he caused her death. Mr. Eller informs us that there were indications of an attempt to rescue by some rough fellows but their purpose was defeated by caution and despatch.—Unionville Times.

Execution of Stephns and Hazlett.

CHARLESTOWN, Va., March 16.—The third act in the great Virginia tragedy was performed to-day, in presence of a vast assemblage of spectators who flocked in from the surrounding country in vast numbers, there being no military law to prevent their free ingress and egress.

The scaffold was erected in the same spot where Captain Brown and his associates were previously suspended, and the throng of spectators was larger than at either of the preceding executions.

At noon the prisoners were brought out of the jail, where a large military escort, composed of all the companies of Jefferson county, the Berkly and Clarke Guards, and the Winchester companies, were drawn up in line around the jail.

Hazlett and Stephens both adanced with firm steps, and took their seats on their respective coffins, and the military procession and guard forming around them, they proceeded to the place of execution.

At 8 minutes past 12 o'clock, after bidding adieu to their jailors and friends on the gallows, the ropes were attached to their necks, and they swung off. Hazlett seemed to die very easy, but Stephens, who was a powerful and elegantly formed man, with strong muscular developement, struggled for a considerable time, and appeared to suffer very much.

Both Hazlett and Stephens exhibited great firmness and resignation, fully equal to that displayed by Captain Brown and their other companions in the Harper's Ferry insurrection.

EXTINGUISHING VESUVIUS.—Some of the German journals announce seriously that a company of English capitalists have made an application to the King of Naples for a concession for the extinction of Vesuvius. The principal seat of the fire of that volcano is situated several thousand feet below the level of the sea. By cutting a canal which would carry the water into the crater, the fire would be completely extinguished and the operation which would only cost 2,000,000f., would restore to cultivation land of ten times that value.

The above has been freely circulated by the American press. Perhaps the scheme is practicable; perhaps not. We would think it would be "pretty tight papers" with the canal cutters about the time they reached the close of their job; and besides, who knows what would be the effect of turning a sluice of the sea into such a furnace as the crater of Vesuvius? Perhaps it may be but the outer portion of the great central fires of the earth that some suppose impart heat and motion to the terrestial ball; and if so, what a terrible head of steam would be raised Would not "all creation", be "bursted up" by the explosions the safety valve of the crater being insuffisient for the escape the potent element? And then suppose the fires should be put out, who knows that the whole machinery of nature would not be brought to a stand still, or the whole human family be left to perish from cold, or the refusal of the earth to give forth its fruits for their sustenance. Upon the whole, as nobody can look into consequences, we had a little rather the "English capitalists" would give over the idea, and put their money into some more certain investment. We are decidedly in favor of allowing the old monster to burn and belch on!—Savannah Republican,

DEATH OF STEVENS' CHILD.—Isabella Jane Stevens, only daughter of James Stevens, recently executed in the New York City prison for the crime of wife poisoning, died on Saturday morning from fever, induced, it is believed, by the depressing effect that her father's execution had on her mind. The child was about nine years of age, and remarkably sensitive & intelligent. She was examined as a witnes on her father's trial, and after listening intently to the sentence of the Judge, exclaimed:

"Come along, father, it's all over now." A short time after her father's execution took place, she one night woke up in great fright, screaming. "They are hanging father." She was buried on Sunday in the same grave that contains the remains of her father and mother.

GENERAL LANE ON THE SLAVERY QUESTION.—Gen. Joseph Lane, of Oregon, in a brief speech in the Senate disposed of the whole teritorial question in an admirable way; for there is not a bit of circumlocution, or concealment, or dodging in his remarks from the beginning to the end. He denied there was any power given to Congress either to prohibit slavery or to abolish slavery and hence it could not confer such power on a territory; and hence there was not power in a Territerial Legislature either to establish slavery or to prohibit it. His words are—

"My proposition is, that Congress has no power over the question of slavery; that they cannot under the Constitution, establish it in a Teritory, deriving its power from Congress, cannot do what Congress itself cannot do."

The Post gives additional extracts, and adds:

"That's the spirit that will sweep the country in November for the Charleston nominee, be he who he may; and this only can save the country from the curse of the triumph of an anti-Constitutional party. The thanks of every Democrat are due to Gen. Lane for this truly patriotic speech

Charleston market.—We are pleased to see the imprint of Charleston merchants upon the boxes of goods which are daily passing through our street intended for our merchants, and merchants of other places above this. A merchant of Greenville, who has just returned from Charleston, assures us that he has purchased his entire stock in Charleston, and that he is as well pleased with the goods and the prices as he ever was in New York purchases He is of the opinion that it is better in all respects for the country merchants to trade in Charleston. We hope that those of our merchants who have not yet gone to market, will conclude to take the advice of those who have made their Spring purchases in Charleston.

WHAT AILED HIM.—The last number of the Knickerbocker has a good anecdote of a man who rarely failed to go to bed intoxicated and disturb his wife the whole night. Upon his being charged by a friend that he never went to bed sober, he indignantlp denied the charge, and gave the incident of one particular night in proof.

"Pretty soon after I got into bed, my wife said. "Why, husband, what is the matter with you? You act strangely."

"There's nothing the matter with me,' said I, nothing at all.'

"I'm sure there is,' said she, 'you don't act natural at all. Shan't I get up and get something for you?"

"And she got up, lighted a candle and come to the bedside to look at me shading the light with her hand.

"I knew there was something strange about you,' said she you are sober!'

"Now, this is a fact, and my wife will swear to it, so dont you slander me any more, by saying that I haven't been to bed sober in six months, 'cause I have.

BY TELEGRAPH.

War with Mexico.

The following dispatch received last night would seem to indicate that a war with Mexico is inevitable:

New Orleans, March 19.—The Mexican War Steamship Marquez has arrived below as a United States prize in charge of Lieut. Chapman of the Frigate Saratoga. The Saratoga's men also captured the Mexican War Steamship, Gen. Miramon which arrived below here, at noon. Both of those Steamers were captured off Anton Lizardo on the morning of the 6th inst., after a [illegible] with slight loss.

The Steamship Marquez has a portion of the prisoners and the frigate Preble has all the rest.

There was great excitement at Vera Cruz in consequence of the action of the American squadron. The French and Spanish are very bitter.

Lieut. Chapman is the bearer of dispatch to Washington.

Important from Mexico.

NEW ORLEANS, March 20.—Late advices from Mexico state that Miramon commenced the seige of Vera Cruz on the 5th inst. On the 6th, two steamers appeared before the city, showing no colors. The U. S. war vessel, Saratoga, with detachments from the Savannah and Preble in the steamers Indianola and Wave, were ordered to proceed to the anchorage of the above mentioned steamers, in order to ascertain their character. Upon nearing the anchorage, off Anton Lizardo, one of the strange steamers moved off, wherupon a shot wss fired to bring her to; and the Indianola sent to overhaul her.

The Indianola's hail was answered by a shot from the guns of the steamer Miramon together with a volley of musketry. Where upon the Saratoga fired a broadside, and the action became general. Commodore Marin and his men were taken prisoners, and are now on board of the Preble. Miramon had paid fifty five thousand dollars for the two vessels.

Commodore Marin's steamers passed by all the foreign squadrons, and by the castle of San Juan D'Ulloa, without hoisting a flag, although ordered to do so by a shot from the castle, as well as by other signals. The French, Spanish and English vessels seemed to take no notice of the strange steamers, or of the absence of a national flag on each of them.

The engagement took place by moonlight and the steamers endeavored to escape, but failed in the attempt. Three Americans were wounded one mortally. The Mexican loss is reported as fifteen killed, and thirty wounded.

The prisoners taken corroborate the report that the two steamers cleared from Havana as merchantmen, and that the Mexican flag was hoisted only after they left that port. At the same time they also mounted six guns each.

SECOND DISPATCH.

NEW ORLEANS, March 21.—Marin's steamer returned the fire of the Saratoga, and tried to escape. The Indianola pursued the Gen. Miramon, the latter fired upon her, which was returned, and boarded the Miramon at the point of the bayonet. A portion of the Indianola's deck was carried away by shot; the Miramon ran aground. the Saratoga brought the Marquez to.

The Picayune is informed by French prisoners on board the Prizes, that the fighting was done principally by officers who were obliged to charge and fire guns assisted only by Mexican officers from shore. The two steamers had two hundred and fifty men aboard; killed and wounded forty; the former were thrown overboard. The Wave and Indianola each had eighty men. The first engineer of the Marquez, an American, was killed.

Com. Turner asked Marin why he fired on American vessels without provocation. Marin replied that the men controlled; he knew the nationality of the Saratoga, and understood her signals, but the men fired contrary to his orders. Turner replied you are responsible for the outrage.

It is stated that the expedition cost $300 000, mostly furnished at Havana by Government, in accordance with a secret article of the Almonte Treaty.

Miramon notified foreign vessels, that he would commence the bombardment of Vera Cruz on the 13th, and would not be responsible for damage done to shipping. On the night of the 13th, the officers on deck of the steamer Miramon heard heavy cannonading in the direction of Vera Cruz

Six mortars, six twenty-four pounders and two thousand stand of small arms were captured; with the two steamers they were worth $60'000.

On the third day out, the steamer broke down and put into Sissal; the materials were stowed away below out of sight of the men who were forced into service, and ignorant of the destination of the expedition.

The New Orleans Delta publishes the details of negotiations between the British and Mexican Governments. Lord John Russell proposes an armistice, general amnesty, and religious toleration; if this proposition was declined, England must demand from both parties full indemnity due English subjects.

Miramon proposed terms of armistice, stipulates that England, France, Spain, Prussia and the United States shall be mediators in establishing peace; mercantile and custom duties to be divided between the two parties, &c. Juarez returned Miromon's communication on the 3d, with the declaration that the propositions were absurd and inadmissible.

Loss of The Steamer Hungarian

HALIFAX, March 2.—An official letter from Mr. Townsend, agent of the goverment, at the wreck says that it is now ascertained beyond a doubt that there are no survivors of the disaster of the Hungarian.

Only three bodies have been found one the of a man supposed to be a fireman, and one that of a man, and one that of a child two years old.

The cargo and materials of the steamer are scattered along the shore from Tiskat aroun I Cape Sable as far East as Ragged Island.

The country people generally are acting honestly. Three stores are hired at Burrington to collect the property in, which is of considerable value.

The ship's articles have been found and they show that the crew numbered seventy-four persons.

COFFEE COUNTY, March 13, 1860.

Dear Sirs:—I write this, to inform you that the boiler of the steamboat Manning exploded last night, about 8 o'clock, a few miles above Rocky Hammock, and the boat is a complete wreck.

All the boat's crew are missing, except Capt. Taylor, the engineers, Dick and Mansfield, four passengers, Mr. Joseph Williams, Mr. Harrell, and Mr. Parker, of Telfair county, a young man from McIntosh, name not known. Two passengers are saved, but badly injured.

Capt. Taylor is also wounded, but not seriously. Under directions of the Captain, I am removing the cargo, or at least all that can be saved.

Yours, respectfully,
WM. R. MANNING.

Messrs. Brigham, Baldwin & Co.

The Murder of Alfred Jones.

From the Montgomery Mail of the 4th, we learn that two of Mr. Jones' negroes confessed the day previous. He gave one of his negroes (Adam) a whipping, and that the negro then said "it would be the last one he would ever give him," and persuaded another boy to hold his master's horse, while he knocked him on the head with an axe. The two negroes we understand, will be burned to death on Friday, the 13th inst.

The Mail of the same date says this morning there is a crowd of men in front of Ware & Walker's Drug Store, looking at two pair of pants, both very bloody.—One of them is the pair in which Mr. Alfred Jones was murdered—the other pair is supposed to belong to his murderer.—The material of which the latter pair is made, is such as is often worn by plantation negroes.

BURNING OF STEAMBOAT JUDGE PORTER.—Serious Loss of Life.—The steamer Judge Porter, Capt. Shields, from Montgomery, Ala., bound to this port, took fire yesterday morning about 9 o'clock; when about one mile from the Lake end of the Carrolton and Jefferson Railroad. The Judge Porter had on board some fifteen passengers, (of whom two or three were females,) 800 bales of cotton and sundries.—The fire started in the engine room, and is supposed to have been caused by the friction of hog-chain. In a few minutes after the fire was first discovered, the entire boat was enveloped in flames, and all aboard had to take to the water.

The second engineer, the steward, the second cook, and Mr. Farrar, the second clerk, are missing. Of the passengers, but one is known to have been saved. He is a steerage passenger. He, together with the captain & crew, were picked up by boats from some vessels that were near by.

HOW THE VEXED QUESTON CAN BE DECIDED.—The present freesoil Legislature of Kansas has passed a law abolishing slavery in that Territory. The Governor, Sam Medary, has vetoed the law, and the telegraph informs us it is probable that the Legislature will pass the law over the veto. There are said to be about 500 slaves in Kansas. When Congress excluded slavery north of 36 deg. 30 min. the Supreme Court in the Dred Scot case decided that law to be unconstitutional, and the decision settled the vexed question as to the power of Congress over slavery in the territories. The power of the Territorial Legislatures over slavery is another vexed question. It seems the Legislature of Kansas has exercised, as we think, unwarranted power, and if that body overrides the Governor's veto, the question can be at once brought before the Supreme Court under the wise provisions of the Kansas act, framed by Judge Douglas, and that tribunal can soon decide the question whether the Territorial Legislature has power, under the constitution to abolish or prohibit slavery. There can be no difficulty in making up a case, if the law is passed by the Legislature, and the country can have a judicial settlement of this question, which now divides the Democratic party.

Huntsville Advocate.

The Murder of Dr. Keitt—Curious Fact.

It is stated that Palatka, Florida, near which is located the plantation and residence of Dr. Keitt, recently murdered by his negroes, was marked down upon John Brown's bloody map with a red cross, indicating that it embraced the elements of insurrection.

Why was Adam's wife called Eve? Because when she appeared, man's day of happiness was drawing to a close.

Economy & Progression.

In this, the age of advancement, many things new and invaluable have been introduced—not the phantoms and chimeras of other ages, but new ones of sound and practical utility. In no department is progression better marked or more visibly to be seen than in the medical, when originating with competent men, and confined to scientific limits. Precisely of that character are the following remedial agents; none will prove more efficient, or are so often needed.

DR. LITTLE'S ANODYNE COUGH DROPS.

A new and certain cure for Coughs, Asthma Pain in the Breast; also Croup, Whooping Cough, Colds &c., among children.

This is a pleasant medicine to take, producing immediate relief, and in nine out of ten cases a prompt cure. It exercises the most controlling influence over Coughs and Irritation of the Lungs of any remedy known, often stopping the most violent in a few hours, or at most in a day or two. Many cases thought to be decidedly consumptive have been promptly cured by using a few bottles, and wearing the Little's Strengthening Plasters on the chest. As an anodyne expectorant, without astringing the bowels, it stands paramount to all cough mixtures.

DR. LITTLE'S FRENCH MIXTURE.

This is prepared from a French Recipe (in the forms of No's. 1 and 2, the first for the acute, and No. 2 for the chronic stage) that has been much improved upon in this country; & from its unexampled success is likely to supercede every other remedy for the cure of the diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Gonorrhoeal Blenorrhoeal and Leuchorrhoeal or Flour Albus Affections. This extensive compound contains properties many different in taste and character from anything to be found in the United States in Pharmacopoea or in privete practice; and in point of safety and efficiency is not rivalled in America.

DOLLAR VERMIFUGE.

Prepared and put up in bottles and vials, only by C. W. Little. In using, nothing else is required to relieve children of worms: and besides being one of the best and cheapest ever offered to the public, its frequent use in families will save much trouble and expense, as well as the lives of many children; for eight out of every ten cases generally require it.

DR. LITTLE'S RINGWORM & TETTER OINTMENT.

Hundreds of cases of Chronic Tetters, Scald Heads, and diseases of the skin generally, have beed cured by this remedy, and since the introduction of the No 2 prepaaation (being stonger) scarcely a case has been found that it will noteffectually eradicate in a short time. For the cure of Cancerous Sores and Ulcers it is applied in the form of Plasters, and is almost infallible.

In addition, the Proprietor prepares, for the great convenience and certainty in prescribing, Strengthening Plasters, of the most superior quality, Improved Cook's Pills (an easy billious cathartic) Vegetable Pills (a mild cathartic to obviate costiveness) Antacid (for tightness and acidity of the stomach.) Tonic Bitters, etc., which will be sent on consignment if ordered.

Medicines, like everything else, are better and more economically supplied to the great mass of the people by merchandise than in any other way.

Physicians are referred to the 13th page of Dr. Little's phamplet, to the catalogue of medicines of the Materia Medica, that he uses in compounding his different remedies, and asked to say if they are not the chief reliance of the profession, as he himself has practised medicine extensively for more than ten years, before retiring to the drug business.

In more than two hundred places in Georgia, and in all the Southern States they are to be had; and as there are scamps about who are counterfeiting his remedies, by palming off their own or something else, by using the same or similar names (for no patent is wanted or secured amid the absurd patents of the day.)

N. B.—All orders and letters on business are to sent in future to LITTLE & BRO. Macon, Georgia, instead of Philadelphia.

This caution is rendered essentially necessary as large quantities of inferior and defective Linens are prepared; season after season and sealed with the name of RICHARDSON by Irish Houses, who, regardless of the injury thus inflicted alike on the American consumer & the manufacturers of the genuine Goods, will not readily abandon a business so profitable, while purchasers can be imposed on with Goods of a worthless character.

TO THE PUBLIC.

Ever since my "Aromantic Schiedam Schnapps"—the purest and best Gin for medical purposes—became fully appreciated throughout this country, I have been constantly solicited by druggists, apothecaries, and large numbers of the most eminent physicians, in all parts of the Union, to add to my Gin importations pure Brandies and Wines, and to bottle them the same as I am and have been doing with the Schnapps; to seal with my seal and give my certificate guarantying their undoubted purity.

I should long ago have endeavored to comply with the flattering requests, but I found it impossible to do so, especially in regard to the important articles of Brandy, Port and Madeira Wines, owing to the high prices in Europe, occasioned by short grape crops for some years. Happily for the success of my new enterprise, the grape crops for the last and the previous years were abundant.

Another point in my favor is this the duty now on French Brandy is 70 per cent. less than it was when my medical friends began to solicit me to furnish pure Brandy and Wines. These favoring circumstances have enabled me to commence a new enterprise.—I have concluded to import Cognac Bandy and Wines, to bottle them for medical as well as for private use. I am well aware, from the bitter experience, the vile attacks, the misrepresentation of motives and enmity of dealers and mixers of bad articles which I met with & conquered in the case of my Schnapps before obtained its present proud pre-eminence over all other Gins, that the new enterprise will be attended with equal opposition more trouble, and involve an immense outly of capital. These difficulties and expenses will be much greater, because I shall have to encounter the malignity and enmity of countless thousands who are engaged in the liquor trade, and making fortunes by the manufacture of infamous imitations of "Brandy" made from poisonous compounds—their use being alike destructive to healthy human life, and of course speedy death to the feeble invalid, or those in whose behalf eminent physicians have urged upon me the importation of a pure, invigorating article of Brandy. I shall do so, in spite of all opposition, even that of the dealers and sellers of the stuff in bottles called "Brandy," of which millions of bottles are annually sold, and which is no better than the worst of poisons.

I am perfectly willing and well satisfied to embark in this new enterprise, and have no fears, no doubts about the most ultimate success for myself and the druggists and apothecaries in the thirty-three States, if they will heartily co-operate with me in my efforts to drive out of use the vilest of compounds, called "Brandy," and replace it with the pure unadulterated article, which I will faithfully and truly supply.

The medical virtues of French Brandy need not to be told. The Brandy imported by me I will bottle, seal with my seal, my label, and add my certificate that it is of the first quality, and pure and unadulterated as when it left the distillery in France.

I will stake my reputation as a man, my standing as a merchant, and my tried commercial integrity, that what I pledge and certify to with my seal, my label, and my certificate is correct, and can be relied upon by purchasers in any section of the Union to which my Brandy may be sent. I have made arrangements with the best Brandy manufacturers in France, with those who have a world wide renown as the first Brandy exporters. I have selected four eminent firms who will ship me their Brandies. I shall not designate the article by any other name than Wolfe's Genuine Cognac Brandy. If I were to do otherwise it would be useless for them unprincipled persons, who are incessantly engaged in the nefarious traffic of imitating all valuable articles, would soon imitate and adopt my mark as a cloak under which to sell their compound of poisons to cover the vile imposition.

I am now prepared to receive and execute orders for Wolf's Genuine Cognac Brandy addressed to me, No 22 Beaver Street. Prices will be given to personal application, or in reply to letters.

In this circular I have thus far written mainly about pure Cognac Brandy; I have now to call your attention to other liquors and wines.

I am prepared to supply orders for "Jamaica Rum" imported and bottled by me; also Irish and Scotch Whiskey." The purity and genuineness of the last-named articles, imported for "medical use" I will also guaranty with my seal, my label, and my certificate.

I shall also import the purest and best "Madeira," "Port," and "Sherry" Wines for Medical purposes. These I also guaranty with my seal, my label, and my certificate.

In conclusion permit me to add that I shall be happy to hear from those that this circular reaches, and whose personal or pecuniary interests it may effect, in the combination of articles that I engage to supply. Should any such person visit New York—especially a Druggists, Apothecary or Physician—I shall be most happy to receive a personal call.

There is no importer who possesses more actual experience and knowledge of the importing liquor and wine trade than I do, I have been engaged in it over thirty years.

I have narrated some facts connected with my new enterprize for the particular information of those connected with the practice or the sale of medicines. If I am favored with the visits of any such, or by friends to whom they give letters of introduction to me, they can see with their own eyes, and test my truthfulness by their own observation.

I respectfully crave, for this Circular and its contents, a careful and attentive perusal. I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,

EDUCATIONAL NOTICE.

THE undersigned, having for some time past, contemplated the establishment of an Educational Institute for young Ladies in some locality, affording the greatest facilities for speedy success and permanent usefulness, announces as the result, that he has finally decided that Jacksonville is the best point for this object.

He will, in the execution of his design, present for patronage, an Institution as favorable as any in the country for acquiring all that is essential in a liberal and accomplished female education.

To accommodate patronage from abroad he will, for the present, procure board for applying for the benefits of this institution in good families in the village; hoping at an early day, to be able to provide it for them in his own.

In the instruction and discipline of the pupils, he will be assisted by his wife, who is well known in this community as having been for several years the successful disciplinarian and teacher of the Jacksonville Female Academy.

In offering ourselves to the people of Jacksonville and vicinity as Instructors of youth, we have the confidence that we throw ourselves upon a generous and appreciative public, who will not withhold from us the reward we merit, nor fail to acknowledge our ability for this undertaking, or honest endeavor to discharge our duty both to pupils and patrons.

The RATES OF TUITION in this Institution will be the same as in other Institutions of a similar grade, viz: for the

1st Class—Embracing primary studies,	$1[illegible]
2d Class " the common English branches,	$1[illegible]
3d Class " the higher English branches and the Natural sciences,	$16 [illegible]
4th Class " the higher branches of mathemetics and the ancient and modern Languages,	$20 [illegible]

The science of vocal music will be taught gratuitously to all the pupils, as a daily exercise.

Instruction in the department of Instrumental music, will be given by accomplished and successful Teachers.

A competent Teacher of the ornamental branches will be provided.

The first session of this School will open on the 9th of January next, at the house of the Principal, and a more commodious place will soon be provided.

While moral and religious instruction will be constantly and faithfully imparted, all sectarian and denominational influence will be conscientiously avoided.

Coming as we do, with the best of motives we are determined to merit, and trust we shall receive a worthy share of your patronage. L. H. PARSONS, PRINCIPAL.
