Richmond, July 8.

The President has issued the following congratulatory address to our victorious army:

Richmond, July 5, 1862.—Soldiers! Yesterday, for the first time since the occupation and abandonment of the enemy, Mr. H. visited his premises. He found the house standing and the old negro on the stairs at his feet.

Every fruit tree, every shrub, every vestige of crops and fences, were utterly swept away, and hundreds of the finest oak and other trees, in mere wantonness belted and destroyed.

His house was as much altered within as his farm was without. It had been completely gutted. The only remnant of his furniture to be found, was the head-board of a bedstead.

The Yankees had first used his fences and then his furniture for firewood. But, though dismantled, the house was by no means empty.

It contained one hundred and eleven wounded Yankees clamoring for bread. Their friends had left them without a mouthful. He had left some cattle on the farm, which he, of course, did not expect to see again, and in this he was not disappointed, as not even the skins of one of them was to be seen.

CHATTAHOOGA.

We have just returned from a hasty visit to the above named place, which has been a point of considerable attraction for some weeks past, in consequence of the threatened attack upon it by the Yankees. On our arrival there, we found that little could be learned, either as to the position and intentions of the enemy, or the movements of the Confederate troops; and perhaps if we could have learned a great deal more than we did, it would not be prudent to give it publicity in a newspaper. It was generally believed that Buell was down about Bridgeport, massing his forces, some 20 or 30,000, and making preparations to cross and march upon Chattanooga. There was also said to be about the same number of Confederates camped in and around Chattanooga, and for miles down the railroad.

Chattanooga is certainly a most important point. It is the key to North-eastern Alabama and East Tennessee and the back-door to Georgia. It is admirably situated for defence, and we do not believe will be attacked, by any such force as Buell has; but we would not counsel the slightest relaxation of vigilance. The place still bears, and doubtless will for many long years, marks of the recent two days' bombardment; during which some 400 shells were thrown, making breaches in the roofs and walls of houses, and exploding in the streets. This bombardment was heroically replied to by the soldiers there, from the battery on the hill in the lower edge of the city, encouraged and sustained by the self-sacrificing firmness of the citizens and Mayor of the city, Dr. Milo Smith, who is fairly entitled to the honor of being the first Mayor in this war who refused to surrender a city on its being bombarded, and who declared his fixed and unalterable determination to suffer its destruction before it surrendered, and still to stand and fight them upon its ruins and its ashes. Dr. Smith will be remembered by the early settlers of Jacksonville, having removed from this place to Chattanooga. He built the first private residence in Chattanooga; and we are not sure but he built about the first one here. We can say to his old friends and acquaintances that he is still the same kind, courteous, affable and unselfish gentleman, always more anxious for the public good than his own private interest. If we mistake not, the city of Chattanooga, owes him a debt of gratitude it can never repay, for his uniform, unceasing, public-spirited zeal for all its material interests and prosperity.

Soon after our arrival in the city, we met with our friend and former townsman, James C. Francis, Jr., who is Commissary of the post, and is performing with integrity, energy and ability, far north as we have heard from, the arduous and complicated duties of his station, in a manner most satisfactory to all concerned, assisted by Mr. Dalton this way, there are covered moral I. L. Swan, also formerly of this place, and who has had much experience as an assistant commissary in the army in Virginia. We also met with another old acquaintance while there, Wm. H. Estill, formerly a resident of this place, but for the last fifteen or twenty years a resident of Texas. He is now acting as commissary of a Texas brigade, encamped near Chattanooga. Judging from personal appearance, time has dealt gently with him. He seems zealously affected in the good cause of Southern independence, and we doubt not makes an excellent commissary.

On the morning after our arrival, in company with Dr. J. C. Francis of this place, Dr. Smith and J. C. Francis, Jr., Commissary of the Post, we went to the summit of the Look Out Mountain, some 3 miles distant. There is an excellent but winding wagon road which enabled us to ride to the very summit, twenty-seven hundred feet above the level of the Tennessee river, the beautiful and romantic windings of which can be seen for many miles above and below, until it passes through the gap of Walker's Ridge, at what is known as the "suck." We have not space, and if we had we should not attempt what we know the pen of Washington Irving, the gifted author of the Sketchbook would fail to accomplish, that is, to give the reader anything like an adequate idea of the sublime scenery of this locality. We have visited various mountain scenery in ten or twelve different States, but never anything to compare in grandeur and sublimity with this. Looking to three of the four points of the compass, can be seen parts of the States of Kentucky, Tennessee, North and South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama. Mr. Jefferson said it was worth a voyage across the Atlantic ocean, to visit the sublime scenery at Harper's Ferry, where the Potomac and Shenandoah meet and pass through the Gap of the Blue Ridge. We would say that a visit to the summit of Look Out Mountain would well repay at least a voyage of five hundred miles. On the table land or top of the mountain, some fine buildings have been erected, capable of entertaining from five to seven hundred guests. These buildings were not at the time of our visit so occupied, in consequence of the destructive influence of the war on all such interests. We were pleased to see, however, on the day of our visit, that under the humane and energetic supervision of Dr. Hamilton, Surgeon of the hospital, some 1 or five hundred of the sick soldiers were being removed from the hospital in the city, to the comfortable and commodious buildings, salubrious atmosphere and pure water of the mountain. As we have incidentally mentioned the name of Dr. Hamilton, we will say something more in connection with it. As a stranger in a crowd of strangers, we heard his praises uttered by many. He was said to be exceedingly skillful and indefatigable in his attentions, treating each one of the hundreds of sick soldiers with all the sympathizing tenderness he would give of his own near relations. On the morning of the removal of the sick to the mountain, we saw him with his coat of arms, assisting the sick soldiers, giving them kind words of encouragement, and carrying their knapsacks and blankets, instead of, as some would have done, stopping about and giving orders with his gloves on. In short we came to the conclusion that he was the right man in the right place, with a heart in the right place. Would to God, that every regiment and hospital in the Confederate service were blessed with such surgeons.

On our return, we accepted the generous invitation of Col. George Foster, who lives at the first house on top of the mountain, to dine with him. The Colonel was an old friend and acquaintance of the two Doctors, and we, on account of being found in good company, were soon upon good terms with him. The pure mountain water, and excellent dinner, furnished by the kind and friendly lady of the Colonel, were very refreshing after the fatigues of our mountain ramble; and we take this occasion to return our sincere thanks, and those of the company, for that kindly manifestation of genuine Tennessee hospitality.

After leaving Chattanooga, we extended our visit by railway, through the counties of Bradley, McMinn and Monroe, to within 40 miles of Knoxville. From Dalton to Chattanooga, and from Chattanooga to where we went, and as far north as we have heard from, the crops of corn were excellent, not having suffered for rain a single day. But from Dalton this way, there are covered moral streaks where the drought has been more or less severe.

CAPT. RALPH SHELDON.—We had the pleasure of meeting with this gentleman while in Chattanooga the other day, and were pleased to learn that he had raised an independent company of cavalry, then nearly complete, made up of select and choice men. Few men have performed more important and efficient service for the Confederate States than Capt. Sheldon; and this too has all been done in a quiet and unassuming way. He was a Lieut. in Morgan's squadron—was with him in his first scout and skirmish, and nearly if not quite all his hard fought and perilous contests. Brave and generous to a fault, and beloved and confided in by his companions, we predict for him and his select band a brilliant future, and that they will make their indelible mark, whenever an opportunity offers, so long as their valuable lives are spared to their country.

STRICT J. M. REMOND, who was severely wounded in the battles near Richmond, arrived at his father's residence in this place, on Tuesday morning last. We are much gratified in being able to state, that although he bears the marks of extreme suffering from his severe and painful wound, that he is doing well, and his wound in a fair way to heal up.

Jacksonville Female Academy. In consequence of absence last week, we failed to call special attention to the notice of the commencement of the next session of the Female Academy in this place which is Monday next, the 4th day of August. With well qualified, experienced and accomplished teachers, with whom our community are well satisfied, we can but think that this institution will be more liberally patronized than even heretofore.

A lady of this place a few days since, sent us a beautiful specimen of mixed wool rolls from the factory of Mr. E. G. Morris, on One Creek. We do not think any one could fail to be pleased with these rolls.

We tender our thanks to Mrs. Neal for the large apples sent us. They are the finest we have seen of this season.

MR. WALLACE, Conscription Agent for this District, arrived in our place on Sunday morning last. We understand he will probably make Oxford his headquarters.

WE were compelled to postpone the publication of several pieces of original poetry and obituary notices until next week.

THE CAPTURED ARMS.—It is found, upon examination, that comparatively few of the muskets captured from the Yankees before Richmond, have sustained serious damage. The fact is they did not have time, on their famous retreat from the Chickahominy to make the destruction of property complete, and hence we find in a lot 20,000 not more than 1000 that cannot be speedily rendered as good as new. These arms are generally of superior quality, including many of recent invention and European manufacture.—Richmond Dispatch.

of the boys, and hear their hallooing, but positively do not know how far they are from us, if either gets into a fight, I guess the other would be there or thereabouts soon. I am necessitated to close this offhand letter.

Respectfully,
Gen. David E. Twiggs.

The "Augusta Constitutionalist" in referring to the death of this gallant old soldier, says that he was born in 1789, and entered the old United States Army in 1816 he was appointed a Brigadier General, and on the 23d September of the same year, he was brevetted a Major-General. When Georgia seceded from the Union he resigned his commission in the Federal army, and was placed by the Confederate Government in command of the military department of New Orleans but age and feeble health compelled him to resign. Before proceeding to Augusta, he spent some weeks in Atlanta, when we had the pleasure of seeing the old hero every day, and of being enlightened by his counsels and criticisms on the pending war. We regretted deeply to hear of his death so soon after he left us.

The "Constitutionalist" refers to an instance in the life of this hero, and pure Southern patriot, which goes to prove what a true man the South has lost, aside from the throwing up of his commission when Georgia seceded from the Union. That paper says:—"It is mentioned that during the difficulties between Georgia and the Federal Government, under the administration of President Adams, Gen. Twiggs, fearing that he might be called upon to act against his native State, tendered his resignation to the Government as an officer of the United States army. So high was the esteem in which he was held, however, his resignation was not accepted, but he was transferred to another department."

GENERAL CHURCHILL.

Atlanta, July 15 1862. Messrs. Editors—Buell's advance into East Tennessee naturally makes us inquire what commanders we have there of the number, we can justly say, that there is not one truer, braver, or more skillful than Brig. Gen. Churchill who now commands a Division of Arkansas and Texas at Chattanooga. He is one of the few who have risen by their own merit and military genius without the aid of West Point. The General saw much hard service in Mexico, and was one of the first to rally to the standard of his native South at the commencement of our difficulties. Raising the second regiment in his adopted State—Arkansas—he won for himself at Oak Hill, a reputation that will enroll his name in history as one of the bravest of the brave. He, with his gallant regiment, there held in check a largely superior force of the enemy led by the brave Gen. Lyons in person, and strove the celebrated ball-hill—where Gen. Lyons himself fell with heaps of the enemy's slain. In the engagement, he had two horses shot under him, and his regiment out of less than 400 men, lost over 200 in killed and wounded.

At the unfortunate and badly managed battle of Elk Horn he again distinguished himself. On his arrival at Van Buren, nearly worn out with incessant labor during the retreat, he found himself a General—Morris has at last received his reward. When the Army of the west was transferred to Corinth he was put in command of a brigade, and now as hard fighting is expected at Chattanooga he is transferred there. You may expect to hear ere long, of deeds performed by his veteran troops nearly all of whom have seen hard service in Arkansas and Missouri.

HINT TO FARMERS.—A practical and highly successful planter of this county, in a conversation yesterday requested us to say to his brother planters that corn planted up to the first of August will mature enough to make the best food for hogs and cattle. He is now cutting his young corn with reaping cars just hardening, and flooding it by his stock and animals, as soon as it rains to re-plant to be cut again before frost for the same purpose.

Stubble lands, or land where the corn is exhausted by the drought, if it rains before the 1st of August, will yield large profit. Take the hint.—Enterprise and Observer.

GEN. TOMBS.—We learn from parties just returned from Richmond, that Gen. Tombs has resigned his command with a view of retiring from the army.—Chattahoochee Times.
