MORMONISM.

From all the testimony we could obtain by diligent enquiry, it appears that the Mormon women, both married and unmarried, are universally opposed to polygamy. Some are so bound to the faith that they esteem religious duty to submit to throw their bodies to the sacred crocodiles, or to mount the funeral pile of her husband. But ninety-nine out of every hundred of them are held to this enforced prostitution by the law of the strongest, or what is tantamount to it. I have heard tales, which I have every reason to believe are true, of the whole power of Church and State being brought to bear upon some reluctant girl, to compel her to become the fifth wife of some wealthy and lascivious saint. The nature of woman cannot be changed by bringing her to the sage-bush country and baptizing her into the faith of Joseph Smith. The young ladies of Utah, who have any education at all, are in a state of incipient rebellion against polygamy, and some of them have braved everything rather than be participants of it.

Ignorance is the corner-stone of the Mormon temple. To describe this ignorance would be a hopeless task. It can be illustrated, however, by a few examples. When we arrived in Salt Lake City, Brigham Young was making a tour of the provinces, and, as he went from one place to another, shoals of the rural population were seen wending their way to the Government land office, obtaining the titles to their farms, and passing them over to Brigham Young! An ignorance so dense that it looks like self-interest almost overcome by the force of example. We could not believe it was possible until we went to the land office and ascertained for ourselves that these deluded people who had conquered the desert, and wrested their farms from the sage brush, and who were entitled by law to the ownership of their homesteads, with the United States flag flying three miles away, the symbol of a power ample for their protection, were actually putting all their property out of their reach, in the form of a trust, but in fee simple. And it was not a few here and there who were thus blindly disposing themselves and disinheriting their children, but hundreds every day; in fact, all who were entitled, under the laws of the United States, to receive their certificates. And not merely the new-comers who had entered their lands under the Homestead act of 1862, but those who pre-empted their tracts ten and fifteen years ago, and who could not be supposed to owe anything to the Church for their original outfit and expenses of colonization.

All the Mormons pay to the Church (that is, to Brigham Young, for he never renders any account of his stewardship) one tenth of their annual gains. These are the only people recorded in history who never complain of taxes. The tithe system is equal to a ten per cent. income tax, without any deductions. They know no more about the distributions of these tithes than the horses they drive. They see the Mormon temple building, and they notice from time to time new companies of immigrants coming in from England, Scotland, Wales, Denmark and Germany. But how much the temple costs, or what sums are expended for colonization, they neither know nor care.

The colonization is, in fact, self-supporting; for each immigrant who is not able to pay his way into the country is not able to work out his expenses on his arrival in the Territory; and he always does it. The system works well. The missionaries in Europe go among the poorest and most ignorant people they can find, and partly by exciting their superstitions, but chiefly by holding out to them the prospect of more bread for less work, induce them to join the Church of Jesus Christ, of Latter Day Saints, and start for Utah.

Brigham Young's account in the Bank of England is said to be the fourth in the list in point of magnitude; and well it may be, for he has one hundred and twenty thousand people working for him with unquestioning zeal and unflagging energy. Thus there is always a fund available for the outfit of emigrants. No one need stay behind for lack of passage money, and no one need be hindered for lack of money to pay his way into the country. He reaches for him, his seed corn ready, and the place marked out where he shall dig the ditch to bring the snow-water of the mountains into his farm and garden. But the end of the missionary enterprise is not far distant. The arable land of Utah is nearly all occupied. A section of the Bear River Valley is still available, but it is rapidly filling up. The Mormons have already pushed into Idaho on the north and Arizona on the south. They cannot maintain their peculiar institutions outside of Utah. The time must soon come when there will be room for no more saints.

It is said that Brigham Young does many acts of kindness to his people—that he relieves the poor, provides work for those out of employment, &c. This I can readily believe. He restores to them a portion of what he takes from them.—Those who are out of employment he sets to work cutting or quarrying granite for the temple. The Utah granite, I may remark, is decidedly more beautiful than that of the Eastern States. The black specks glisten with a more brilliant lustre, while the body is like a tough gray marble.

Divorces are granted in Utah on any grounds deemed sufficient by Brigham Young. The first wife can be divorced only by the civil tribunals, but subsequent wives, of course have no standing in court. Brigham Young attends to these cases and declares them divorced when he chooses. Adultery is punishable by death under the Mormon code, and the punishment must be inflicted by the injured husband upon both the wife and her paramour. Lawyers do not thrive in Utah. Disputes are always settled by the nearest Bishop or Elder. Cases arising under the laws of the United States, and tried by a jury, are rarely settled the same way, for no jury will find a verdict contrary to the advice of the Bishop, and in nine cases out of ten they will manage to get his advice if it is not tendered voluntarily.

The Mormons point with awkward pride to the multitudes of children which throng their doorways. There are, indeed, too many children in Utah, but the process by which they are brought into the world is that of spawning, rather than of civilized birth; and judging from their appearance one would infer that they received as little

A Cheering Speech.

We present below an extract from a speech recently delivered by one of the most distinguished statesmen in the country—the Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks of Indiana. Last year he was the Democratic candidate for Governor of Indiana, and although Gen. Grant carried the State by twenty thousand votes, Hendricks lost his election by less than a thousand votes. His views are so pertinent and timely, and withal so entirely corroborative, both in letter and speech, of the "situation" so often expressed by the Times, and at the same time so hopeful for the country and prophetic of the approaching triumph of the National Democracy, that we publish them with unusual satisfaction. Selma Times.

The sentiments of the great statesman will find a response in the breast of those who were duped into supporting the holders of the candidate, the effects of which are only too apparent in the present stagnation of business all over the west. He tells the crowd.

WHEN THE GOOD TIME WILL COME.

That policy which encourages the investment of money in bonds of the United States, instead of encouraging investment in labor, industry, and in the common enterprise of the country, is hurtful to the country. I know when it will come, and that is when the Democratic party or the Conservative party made up of all men who wish to do justice and right—when that party comes into power, then there will be justice done to capital, and justice to labor. [Long and continued applause.] I would like at some grateful length to discuss this question. It is a question of interest to us all, to you in Nebraska as well as the people of Indiana.

THERE IS TO BE A CHANGE.

There is no doubt about that. I am not particular about the men. I want to see men come into power who administer this Government according to the requirements of the Constitution of the United States. I want to see the government once more fall into the hands of men who will not have favorites to encourage, to foster and set up at the expense of the masses of the people, but who will enact the laws, and so administer them that justice shall be done to all. So that the law shall rest upon the people alike the rain and dew and the sunshine for God's kindness rests upon the people alike. That time is to come, of course, it is to come. We can not always have it as we have it now. Every man knows it is not right that a very large part of the wealth of the country is exempt from the common burden which rests upon the rest of the country. We all know that that policy which taxes one class of labor at the expense of any other class of labor, that can not always last, but that the law will come time or other be restored to its equality toward all. When it comes it is not for me to prophesy.

THE NEXT GREAT NATIONAL ELECTION

Will come off in 1872. My opinion is that by that time the people of the United States will have made up their minds that there must be a change. That it can be no more, [applause] and that it will be better to have a change. A man can't make much of a mistake in making that guess. We may be disappointed, but we know that when the Democrats and Conservatives come into power they will respect the will of the people. Last year you were told that there was to be no legislation specially and peculiarly in favor of any particular class. After the election had passed away and there was no longer any responsibility to the people, the laws were so changed as to make a large part of the indebtedness of the country, which was before payable in currency of the country, only payable in gold. That was not for your benefit. It was not for the benefit of the man who plows the land out West. That was not to encourage the building of farm houses, or the building of school houses and churches in your country. It was to encourage another class of men who now, according to that law, get a hundred and sixteen dollars for a hundred dollars bond. If any man can say that was right, let him speak.

ASA PACKER.

Democratic Candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania.

From the Philadelphia Ledger.

Hon. Asa Packer was born in 1806, in Groton, New London county, Conn., and in 1822, with his outfit strapped in a knapsack on his back, removed to Springfield, Susquehanna county, Pa., and apprenticed himself to a carpenter of that village. On arriving at the age of 21, with his scanty savings he purchased a small lot of land upon the upper waters of the Susquehanna, and there he commenced a lumbering business. The cash capital of the firm was only $5,000, but in a short time their business became widely extended, and embraced not only the ordinary transactions of a country store but the erection of locks and dams for the canal, the working of coal veins leased from the Lehigh company, and at last working of the Hazleton mines, owned by the Packers. The firm shipped coal to New York and Philadelphia, not only by the Lehigh but also by the Schuylkill river. In 1850 Asa Packer entered on the work of building the Lehigh Valley railroad, having become the owner of controlling portion of the stock of a company chartered in 1845, but whose foot of the line of which had been built, in fact, only seventeen days of the limit for commencing the road yet remained. Packer, in October, 1851, submitted a proposition to build forty-six miles of the road from Mauch Chunk to Easton, and receive his pay in stock and bonds. This proposition was accepted, and the work, under pressing financial embarrassments, was vigorously pressed to completion, and the entire line was delivered in September, 1855. The success attending Packer's exertions to build the Lehigh Valley railroad laid the foundations of his fortunes as a coal and railroad operator, and he is now worth, it is estimated, between fifteen and twenty millions of dollars. In 1855 Packer founded at South Bethlehem a scientific school, called the Lehigh University, and endowed it with a tract of land fifty acres in extent and with $500,000 in money, and it is believed he intends giving an additional $500,000, making $1,000,000.

Asa Packer, through his entire career, has been widely known as an earnest, thorough-going consistent Democrat of the old school. He has been a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature, his term in that body ending in 1843, and a member of the House of Representatives in Congress for the Thirteenth District from 1853 to 1857. At the Democratic National Convention held in 1856 in New York, he received the entire vote of Pennsylvania as candidate for the Presidency for fourteen ballots, and was only withdrawn in favor of Gen. W. S. Hancock. The nomination of Judge Packer as candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania is a becoming compliment to a life spent in honest industry, and to a character of blameless purity and unspotted integrity.

HOW IT CAN BE DONE.—The Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Gazette hits upon a new scheme for the speedy reconstruction of Virginia, Mississippi and Texas. It is plausible to say the least of it, as it is "all in the family." Perhaps a "hound pup" or fast ung to Ulysses would help along the business. The correspondent says:

The difficulty in "reconstructing" Virginia, Mississippi and Texas can be settled in a jiffy if the people of those colonies are sharp enough. If they make a false step all is lost. I learn that their fate, however, is in their own hands as yet, but alertness is the word.

To counteract the design of the satrap of Virginia of modelling the Legislature of the "Mother of States" to suit the extremists instead of answering his inquisitorial political catechism recently addressed to each member, let them in a body assemble in caucus, and tender formally the two Senators to Dr. Sharpe and Mr. Corbin, the two favorite brothers-in-law of the President. And why not? Are they not quite as acceptable to the substantial men of Virginia as McKenzie, or Walker, or Kearns, or Wallace? After electing Dent Governor, let Mississippi forthwith choose him and Jesse Grant, the venerable father of Ulysses, to the same respectable legislative body. As for Texas she can pick and pick and choose, for there are "a few more left."

If this policy shall be pursued and fully carried out without "neutral reservation" (and I hear it has the approbation of Judge Sharkey, who has been cuttishly successful in patching up a number of compromises as "reconstruction,") the admission of the three outside States will be assured—if not, then assuredly not.

ANDY JOHNSON HAD A "POLICY,"

and it broken down under him.—N. Y. Herald.

Yes, his "policy" was to save the Constitution of his country, and his enemies were strong enough to overpower him. Why didn't he do that? As well might you ridicule a man who had been overpowered by highwaymen. The "policy" of the North seems to be to regard everything that is successful as a crime.—Sav. Repub.

HOW POOR BOYS REACH THE TOP

DOWN.—There are 17,919 names who pay an income tax in this city. Sixty-seven persons who pay tax on incomes of $1,000,000. Most of these solid gentlemen are self-made men, who have come from the lowest round of the ladder. The man who leads the list, A. T. Stewart, everybody knows is an Irish emigrant, who commenced life with a capital of less than twenty-five cents; indeed, with a few exceptions, most of the parties in the list were scarce as well off as Mr. Stewart. Take Henry Keep; he boasts that he graduated from the poor house of Jefferson county. Jay Gould drove a herd of cattle from Delhi, Delaware, to New York, for fifty cents a day, in order to get a money enough to reach the Hudson river. David Crockett, over thirty years ago, used to mend old shoes for his brother, who was a respectable shoemaker in Alabama.

We all know the history of James Gordon Bennett, Robert Boimer, poor boys full of talent and industry. Rufus Hatch, when a youngster, had an ambition to hold the reins of a peddler's wagon. H. D. Morgan commenced life with a cucumber measure of money. It is scarce a dozen years since Henry Clews was an errand boy in one of the banking houses down town. The brothers Seligman started out in life with a peddler's pack. David Dows, in his younger days, retailed pork by the half pound and molasses by the gill. H. T. Hembold was first cabin boy on the sloop Mary June that navigated the Delaware river. We might go on through the list, and show that nearly every one of these solid men were young men, who are struggling for place and position, should remember that the individuals in the list above had to battle for life just as hard as they are doing. Let them take heart and never say die.

Honor and shame from no condition rise. Act well your part—their all the honor lies.—New York Advertiser.

A Pig with a Human Head

The editor of the Holly Springs reporter has seen a white Chester pig with a human head. Its chin, jaws, mouth and nose are not at all of the pig kind, but looks exactly like the chin, jaws, mouth and nose of a human head. Although only ten hours old when seen by the editor of the Reporter—faded and fretted—having been handled by a great many people—it was active and as strong as a pig usually is, at the age of two weeks. This curious thing has no eyes, and its nostrils are inside the mouth, rendering respirations difficult. It has rows of teeth as regular and as perfect as the rows in the human mouth, and uses its tongue like a human being.—Vicksburg Herald.

KAYTON'S OIL OF LIFE CURES ALL PAINS AND ACHES, AND IS THE GREAT RHEUMATISM LINIMENT.

READ THESE LINES AND PAPER THEM WELL.—The best tests of the merits of any proprietary articles is to ascertain what is thought of it at home where it is manufactured; such a test Lippman's Pyraline can well stand, as to-day it is decidedly the favorite remedy for chills and fever, dumb ague and other diseases of a malarious origin, in the city of Savannah, where it is prepared. The principal druggists of the city would as much think of doing without castor oil in their stores as to be without this popular food deservingly so remedy. It is a vegetable preparation free from deleterious drugs, and acts as a tonic upon the entire system, thereby invigorating the system so much so as to enable it to throw off disease. Pyraline does not nauseate or sicken the patient, and can be taken by the most delicate person without fear. It should always be at hand, as chills and fever creep upon us so stealthily that we are not aware of its approach until it is upon us. A word to the wise is sufficient.

Unforgotten Words.

A STORY WITH AN EXCELLENT MORAL.
"Have you examined that bill, James?"
"Yes, sir."

"I find two errors."
"Ah, let me see."

"The bill handed his employer a long bill that had been placed on his desk for examination."

"Here is an error in the calculation of ten dollars, which they have made against themselves, and another of ten dollars in the footing."

"Also against themselves?"
"Yes, sir."

"The merchant smiled in a way that struck the clerk as peculiar."

"Twenty dollars against themselves," he remarked, in a kind of pleasant surprise.

"Truly clerks they must have."

"Shall I correct the figure?" asked the clerk.

"No; let them correct their own mistakes. We don't examine bills for other people's benefit," replied the merchant.

"It will be time to rectify those errors when they find them out. All so much gain as it now stands."

"The boy's delicate moral sense was shocked at so unexpected a remark. He was the son of a poor widow, who had given him to understand that to be just was the duty of man."

Mr. Carman, the merchant in whose employment he had been for only a few months, was an old friend of his father, and a person whom James had looked upon as a kind of model man; and when Mr. Carman proposed to take him into his store, he felt the great good fortune was in his way.

"Let them correct their own mistakes. These words made a strong impression on the mind of James Lewis. When first spoken by Mr. Carman, and with the meaning then involved, he felt, as we have said, shocked; but as he turned them over again in his thoughts, and considered their utterance with a person who stood so high in his estimation, he began to think that perhaps the thing was fair enough in business. Mr. Carman was hardly the man to do wrong. A few days after James had examined the bill, a check from the house by which it had been rendered, called for settlement. The bill, who was present, waited with interest to see whether Mr. Carman would speak of the error. But he made no remark. A check for the amount of the bill as rendered was filed, and a receipt given."

"Is that right?" James asked himself that question. His moral sense said no; but the fact that Mr. Carman had so acted bewildered his mind.

"I may be the way in business," so he thought to himself, "but it doesn't look honest. I wouldn't have believed it of him."

Mr. Carman had a kind of way with him which won the boy's heart, and naturally tended to make the boy judge whatever he might do in a most favorable manner.

"I wish he had corrected that error," he said to himself a great many times when thinking in a pleased way of Mr. Carman, and his own good fortune in having been received into his employment.

"It don't look right, but may be it's the way of business," he said to himself as he went to the bank and drew the money on a check. In running it over, he found that the teller had paid him fifty dollars too much, so he went back to the counter and told him of his mistake. The teller thanked him, and he returned to the store with the consciousness of having done right.

"The teller overpaid me fifty dollars," he said to Mr. Carman, as he handed him the money.

"Healed," replied the latter, a light breaking over his countenance, and he had counted the bank bill.

"The light faded as the last bill left his finger."

"There's no mistake, James." A tone of disappointment was in his voice.

"O, I gave him back the fifty dollars. Wasn't that right?"

"You simpleton!" exclaimed Mr. Carman, "don't you know that bank mistakes are never corrected? If the teller had paid you fifty dollars short he would not have made it right."

The warm blood mantled to the cheeks of James under his remark. It is often the case that more shame is felt for a blunder than a crime. In this instance the lad felt a sort of mortification at having done what Mr. Carman was pleased to call a silly thing, and he made up his mind that if they should ever over-pay him a thousand dollars at the bank he should bring the money to his employer, and let him do as he pleased with the money.

"Let people look after their own mistakes," said Mr. Carman.

James Lewis pondered these things in his heart. The impression they made was too strong ever to be forgotten. "It may be right," he said, but he did not feel altogether satisfied.

A month or two after the occurrence of that bank mistake, as James counted over his weekly wages just received from Mr. Carman, he discovered that he was paid half a dollar too much.

The first impulse of his mind was to return the half dollar to his employer, and it was on his lips to say, "You have given me half a dollar too much, sir."

When the unforgotten word, "Let people look after their own mistakes," flashed upon his thoughts, made him hesitate.

To hold a parcel with evil is to be overcome.

"I must think about this," said James, as he put the money into his pocket. "If it is true in one case it is true in another. Mr. Carman don't correct mistakes that people make in his favor, and he can't complain when the rule works against himself."

But the boy was very far from being in a comfortable state. He felt that to keep the half dollar would be a dishonest act. Still, he could not make up his mind to return it at least not then.

James did not return the half dollar, but spent it for his own gratification. After he had done this, it came suddenly into his head that Mr. Carman had only been trying him, and he was filled with anxiety and alarm.

Not long after, Mr. Carman repeated the same mistake. James kept the half dollar with less hesitation.

"Let him correct his own mistake," said he, resolutely; "that's the doctrine he acts on with other people, and he can't complain if he gets paid in the same coin he puts in circulation. I just wanted half a dollar."

From this time the fine moral sense of James Lewis was blunted. He had taken an evil lesson into his heart, stimulated a spirit of covetousness, latent in almost every mind, which caused him to desire the possession of things beyond his ability to obtain.

James had good business qualifications, and so pleased Mr. Carman by his intelligence, industry and tact with customers, that he advanced him rapidly, and gave him, before he was eighteen years of age, the most reliable position in the store. But James had learned something more from his employer than how to do business well. He had learned to be dishonest.

He had never forgotten the lesson he had received in the bank, and he had acted not only in two instances, but in a hundred, and almost always to the injury of Mr. Carman. He had long since given up waiting for mistakes to be made in his favor, but originated them in the varied and complicated transactions of a large business in which he was trusted implicitly; for it never occurred to Mr. Carman that his failure to be just to the letter might prove a snare to his young man.

James grew sharp, cunning and skillful; always on the alert; always bright, and ready to meet any approaches toward a discovery of his wrong doing by his employers, who held him in the highest regard.

Thus it went on until James was in his twentieth year, when the merchant had his suspicions aroused by a letter that spoke of the young man as not keeping the most respectable company, as spending money too freely for a clerk on a moderate salary.

Before this time James had moved his mother into a pleasant house, for which he had paid a rent of $100; his salary was $200, but he received his mother by telling her it was $1500. Every comfort that she needed was fully supplied, and she was beginning to feel that after a long and painful struggle with the world her happier days had come.

James was at his desk when this letter was received by Mr. Carman. He looked at his employer and saw him change countenance suddenly. He read it over twice, and James saw that the contents produced disturbance. Mr. Carman glanced toward the desk, and their eyes met; it was only for a moment, but the look that James received made his heart stop beating.

There was something about the movements of Mr. Carman for the rest of the day that troubled the young man. It was plain to him that suspicion had been aroused by that letter. O, how bitterly did he repent in dread of discovery and punishment, the sin of which he had been guilty! Exposure would disgrace and ruin him, and how the heart of his widowed mother even to the grave.

"You are not well this evening," said Mrs. Lewis, as she looked at her son's changed face across the tea table, and noticed that he did not eat.

"My head aches."

"Perhaps the tea will make you feel better."

"I'll lie down on the sofa in the parlor for a short time."

Mrs. Lewis followed him into the parlor in a little while, and, sitting down on the sofa on which he was lying, placed her hand upon his head. Ah, it would take more than the loving pressure of a mother's hand to cease the pain from which he was suffering. The touch of a pure hand increased the pain to agony.

"Do you feel better?" asked Mrs. Lewis. She had remained some time with her hand on his forehead.

"Not much," he replied, and rising as he spoke, he added, "I think a walk will do me good."

"Don't go out, James," said Mrs. Lewis, a troubled feeling coming into her heart.

But the boy was very far from being in a comfortable state. He felt that to keep the half dollar would be a dishonest act. Still, he could not make up his mind to return it at least not then.

James did not return the half dollar, but spent it for his own gratification. After he had done this, it came suddenly into his head that Mr. Carman had only been trying him, and he was filled with anxiety and alarm.

"Don't go out, James," said Mrs. Lewis, a troubled feeling coming into her heart.

"I'll only walk a few squares." And James went from the parlor and walked into the street.

There was something more than headache the matter with him, thought Mrs. Lewis.

For half an hour James walked without any purpose in his mind beyond the escape from the presence of his mother. At last his walk brought him near Mr. Carman's store and at passing he was surprised at seeing a light within.

"What can this mean?" he asked himself a new fear creeping with its shuddering impulse in his heart.

He listened at the doors and windows, but he could hear no sound within.

"There's something wrong here," said "what can it be? If this is discovered what will be the end of it? Ruin! ruin! My poor mother!"

The wretched young man hastened on, walked the streets for two hours, when he returned home. His mother met him when he entered, and with unconcealed anxiety asked if he was better. He said yes, but in a manner that only increased the trouble she felt, and passed hastily to his own room.

In the morning the strangely altered face of James, as he met his mother at the breakfast table, struck alarm into her heart. He was silent, and evaded all her questions. While they sat at the table the door-bell rung loudly. The sound startled James and he turned his head to listen in a nervous way.

"Who is it?" asked Mrs. Lewis.

"A gentleman who wishes to see Mr. Carman," replied the girl.

James rose instantly, and went out into the hall shutting the dining-room door as he did so. Mrs. Lewis sat watching her son's return. She heard him come back in a few moments; but he did not enter the dining room. Then he returned along the hall to the street door, and she heard it shut. All was silent. Starting up she ran into the passage, but James was not there. He had gone away with the person who called.

"The young villain shall lie in the bed he had made for himself," exclaimed Mr. Carman in his bitter indignation. And he made the exposure completely. On the trial he showed an eager desire to have brief incarceration, may it be with the resolution to die rather than commit crime.

And the curtain fell on that sad scene in the boy's life. When it was lifted again, and he came forth from prison a year afterward his mother was dead. From the day her pale face faded from his vision, as he passed from the court room, he never looked upon her face again.

Years afterward a man was reading a newspaper in a far western town. He had a calm serious face and looked like one who had known suffering and trial.

"Brought to justice at last!" he said to himself, as the blood came into his face, "convicted on the charge of open insolvency, and sent to the state prison. So much for the man who gave me the first lesson in evil doing. But thank God the other lessons have been remembered. When you come forth again," said the judge, "may it be with the resolution to die rather than commit a crime," and I have kept this injunction in my heart ever since, and God helping me I will keep it to the end."

Returned.

After an absence of three weeks, we are again at our post, considerably recruited in health and strength, notwithstanding we have, during that time, travelled about 400 miles by railroad, and at least 150 miles on horseback, through high ways and by-ways.

Since we left home elections have taken place in Alabama and Tennessee, the gratifying results of which are already known to our readers. We regretted the necessity which compelled us to leave previous to the election here, but we felt assured that all would be well in our own district, and had become so worn down by excessive labors in the printing office, and by attendance on Railroad Conventions, as to render that necessity imperative.

The anticipations of conservative victory in Tennessee, expressed in our letter from that State, have since been more than realized. Senter, the universal suffrage candidate for Governor, has been elected by a majority of 65 or 70,000 over Stokes, radical; and, as stated by the Knoxville Press and Herald, a democratic paper, not less than four-fifths of the members elected to the Legislature are pledged to the calling of a Convention to make the reforms demanded in the State Constitution. For all practical purposes, it amounts to a democratic victory, and a Waterloo defeat of radicalism. The right to vote will never again be taken from those who were lately enfranchised.

In Alabama, "since it is no better, we are glad it is no worse." In this, the 5th District, Judge Cox, the democratic candidate has been elected by a handsome majority, and in the 6th District, Sheriff, radical, has only been elected by the skin of his teeth; besides, in the other districts the democratic gains have been great.

We feel deeply gratified by the triumph thus far of the constitutional democratic principles we have ever advocated, and to which, we may say without egotism or boasting, we have adhered with ceaseless and unwavering devotion for more than thirty-three years. We again enter upon the discharge of our labors and duties with cheerful hope, and renewed energy and zeal; and we congratulate our patrons upon the bright future prospect of peace, prosperity and success. The assured, final and lasting triumph of constitutional democratic principles is but a question of time. Mississippi and Texas will doubtless follow the example of Virginia, Tennessee and Alabama. Patience, fortitude and persistent devotion to correct political principle will yet accomplish all that remains unfinished.

On account of the continued riotous demonstrations in Mobile, the Governor has consented to place that city for the present under military rule.

In our letter from Tennessee, published last week, a material error occurred in the 5th paragraph, which made it appear as though we were speaking ironically of the future prospects of that State. The sentence should have read—"Long afflicted Tennessee may now look forward with bright anticipations to the future, at least with the exception of the dark shadow and heavy incubus of her enormous State debt, for which radicalism is chiefly chargeable, now said to amount to over forty-two millions, of which she cannot now even pay the interest."

Special attention is invited to the advertisement of Messrs. Wadsworth & Co., dealers in Hardware, &c., Rome, Ga. This excellent house keeps full stocks of all articles in their line, prices uniformly low, and every facility and advantage offered to those who may wish to purchase while there, or to send their order.

SEED WHEAT—Capt. W. R. Hanna, of this county, has a very fine quality of wheat, of which he raised a considerable crop the present year. It is a white wheat known as Broughton or Broughton, now almost universally sown in East Tennessee, and said to produce from one third to one half more than other varieties. Specimens may be seen at the stores in this place. Capt. H. will dispose of a portion of his crop to his neighbors for seed.

Persons who may wish to purchase valuable lands, would do well to notice the Chancery sale of valuable land on Coosa river, by James A. Reeves, Register in Chancery. The lands are situated seven miles above Gadsden, and the sale takes place on Monday the 13th day of Sept. next.

THE UNIVERSITY OF NASHVILLE was founded in 1784, by the State of North Carolina and endowed with lands in the neighborhood of Nashville, now within the city, the rise in value of which has placed her among the wealthiest institutions of the nation and secured her permanent property. She was created independent of Church or State, but has in her long and successful career benefited both. Her avowed mission was to elevate the lowly, give strength to the feeble and to relieve the strong and vigorous. While her facilities have led to her mainly upon fees for support, none of them ever turned away from an indigent young man because he was poor, but on the contrary, always gave him the hand of kindness and encouragement, making the fame of his after years add lustre to her renown.

The graduates of her various departments are familiar with the high positions throughout the Southern country. Her medical department alone has had between four and five thousand young men in her classes, having enjoyed, to an unparalleled extent, the confidence of the profession in the former slave holding States. This department is in a better condition to discharge its duty than ever, having greatly increased the means of affiliation and also the facilities for studying clinical medicine and surgery.

A Big Thing

A gigantic swindle, involving no less than 150,000,000 acres of public lands, has just been brought to light. A company of speculators, styling themselves the "Southern Pacific Railroad of California," have, it seems, managed to smuggle into a law of Congress a provision that virtually grants them the domain, and ownership of 150,000,000 acres of the public lands. An attempt on their part to seize the land, without building the road designated in the law, has brought the matter to light, in the shape of remonstrance from the settlers, which was presented on their behalf to the Commissioner of the Interior, on the 6th ult., by Messrs. Britton & Gray.

The Missouri Insurance Law.

It is known, probably, to most of our readers, that an admirable system was introduced at the last session of the Missouri Legislature, which has for its object the further security of policy holders, by a special deposit of one hundred thousand dollars with the Insurance Commissioner of Missouri. By its strict adoption the assured are always safe, and, notwithstanding any mishaps which may occur to Life Insurance Companies, a sufficient amount is always retained by the insurance department to indemnify the assured. It is a most thorough and comprehensive law, and almost a counterpart of the insurance laws of New York and Massachusetts—those admirable systems under which the insurance interests of those States have moved so harmoniously. One or two companies have already complied with the new law, among which we notice the Atlas Mutual Life Insurance Company, of St. Louis Mo., as will be seen by the certificate of the Insurance Commissioner:

Certificate of Deposit of Securities for Policy Holders.

In conformity with section 24 of act of March 10, 1869. Certificate No. 4, issued July 1st, 1869.

Office of Sup't of Ins. Department, St. Louis, Mo.

I, W. L. King, undersigned, do hereby certify that I am Superintendent of the Insurance Department of the State of Missouri, and that the Atlas Mutual Life Insurance Company, of St. Louis Mo., has deposited with me the sum of one hundred thousand dollars, as required by the act of March 10, 1869, for the security of policy holders.

Witness my hand and the seal of the Insurance Department of the State of Missouri, at St. Louis, Mo., this 1st day of July, 1869.

of Missouri, and that the Atlas Mutual Life Insurance Company—a life insurance company organized and existing under the laws of the State of Missouri, whose principal office is located at St. Louis, in said State of Missouri—has deposited in this office, for the security of its policy holders, in pursuance of section 21 of an act of the General Assembly of the State of Missouri, entitled An act for the incorporation and regulation of life insurance companies, approved March 10th, 1869, the sum of One Hundred Thousand Dollars, in bonds or treasury notes of the United States, or in bonds secured by mortgages or deeds of trust on unincumbered real estate in the State of Missouri, worth at least double the amount loaned thereon, with several other descriptions particularly set forth in schedules signed by me, and which securities have not been received at a rate above their par value, nor above their current market value.

Said deposit was made in the office of the Superintendent, as aforesaid, on the 1st day of July, A. D. 1869, and has ever since, up to the date hereof, been held in pursuance of and subject to the provisions of said act of March 10th, A. D. 1869, for the security of the policy holders of said Company, and I do further certify that I am satisfied that the said securities are worth the sum of One Hundred Thousand Dollars.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of the office of the Superintendent of the Insurance Department, at St. Louis, in the city and county of St. Louis, State of Missouri, this 1st day of July, A. D. 1869.

THE BACCHER.

A TRUE STORY AND NO FICTION.

One cold, windy morning, the last Sunday in December, 1817, a tall, dark man, dressed in a blue frock coat, and a top hat, was walking in the city of Brooklyn. Though the weather was bitter cold, he was not dressed for the season, and had no clothing but a pair of ragged cloth pants and the remains of a flannel shirt, in many large rents, and which exposed his muscular chest. But, in spite of his tattered apparel and evident fatigue, as he leaned heavily upon the railing of the basement stairs, a critical observer could not fail to notice a conscious air of dignity, and the marked traces of cultivation and refinement in his pale and haggard countenance.

The door was speedily opened, and disclosed a comfortably furnished room with its glowing grate of anthracite, before which was placed a luxuriously furnished breakfast table. A fashionably attired young man, in a broadcloth dressing gown and velvet slippers, was reclining in a soft fauteuil, busily reading the morning papers. The beautiful young wife had lingered at the table, giving to the servant in waiting her orders for the household matters of the day, when the timid rap at the door attracted her attention. She commanded it to be opened, but the young master of the mansion replied that it was quite useless—being no one but a thieving beggar. But the door was already opened, and the sympathies of Mrs. Maywood enlisted at once.

"Come in to the fire," cried the young wife, impulsively, "before you perish!" The mendicant, without exhibiting any surprise at such unusual treatment of a street beggar, slowly entered the room, and manifesting a painful weakness at every step. On his entrance, Mrs. Maywood, with a disheveled air, gathered up his papers and left the apartment. The compassionate lady wisely placed the half-frozen man near the fire, while she prepared a bowl of fragrant coffee, which, with abundant food, was placed before him. But noticing the abrupt departure of her husband, Mrs. Maywood with a clouded countenance left the room, whispering to the servant to remain until the stranger should leave.

She then ran hastily up to the richly mounted staircase, and passed before the entrance of a small laboratory and medicinal library, occupied solely by her husband, who was a physician and practical chemist. She opened the door and entered the room. Mr. Maywood was sitting at a small table with his head resting on his hands, apparently in deep thought.

"Edward," said the young wife, gently touching his arm, "I fear I have distressed you, but the man looked so wretched I could not bear to drive him away, and his sweet voice trembled as he added—'You know that I take the sacrament to-day.'"

"Dear Mary," replied the really fond husband, "I appreciate your motives. I know it is pure goodness of heart which leads you to disrobe me, but still I must insist upon my former commands—that no beggar shall ever be permitted to enter the house. It is for your safety that I insist upon it. How deeply you might be imposed upon in my frequent absences from home, I shudder to think. The man who is below may be a burglar in disguise, and already in your absence taking impressions in wax of the different key-holes in the room, so as to enter some night at his leisure. Your limited experience of city life makes it difficult for you to credit so much depravity. It is no charity to give to street beggars, it only encourages vice, dearest."

"It may be so," responded Mrs. Maywood, "but it seems wicked not to relieve suffering and want, even if the person has behaved badly, and we know it. But I promise you not to ask another beggar in to the house."

At this moment the servant rapped violently at the door, crying out that the beggar was lying.

"Come Edward, your skill can save him, I know," said his wife, hastening from the room.

The doctor did not refuse this appeal to his professional vanity, for he immediately followed her flying footsteps as she descended to the basement. They found the mendicant lying pale and unconscious upon the carpet, where he had slipped in his weakness from the chair where Mrs. Maywood had seated him.

"It is a hand some fellow," muttered the doctor, as he bent over him to ascertain the state of his pulse.

And well might he say so. The glossy locks of raven hair had fallen away from a broad white forehead; his closed eyelids were bordered by long raven lashes, which lay like a silken fringe upon his pale, bronzed cheeks, while a delicate aquiline nose, and a square massive chin, displayed a model of manly beauty.

"Is he dead?" asked the young wife anxiously.

"Oh, no; it is only a fainting fit induced by the sudden change of temperature, and, perhaps, the first stage of starvation," replied the doctor sympathizingly. He had forgotten for the moment his cold maxims of prudence, and added, "he must be carried to a warm room without a fire, and placed in a comfortable bed."

The coachman was called in to assist in lifting the athletic stranger, who was soon carried to a room in the chambers, where the doctor administered with his own hands port wine sangaure. The young man soon became partly conscious, but all conversation was forbade him, and he sank quietly to sleep.

"He is doing well, let him rest as long as he can; should he awake in our absence, give him beef tea and toast ad libitum," said the doctor professionally, as he left the room.

In less than an hour afterward, Dr. Maywood and his lovely wife entered the common church of the Most Holy Trinity.

Avoid the hundreds of fair dames that entered its broad portals, dressed with all the taste and magnificence that abundant wealth could procure, not one rivaled in grace and beauty the orphan bride of the rich physician. Her tall, graceful figure was robed in a velvet silk that shimmered with the lustre of youthful happiness, and there was a touch of tender pity in their drooping lids that won the confidence of every beholder. The snowy ermine mantilla, which protected her from the piercing wind, rivaled, but could not surpass, the delicate purity of her complexion.

Many admiring eyes followed the featureless figure of Mrs. Maywood, as she moved with unconscious grace up the central aisle of the church, but none with devoted devotion than the young, warlike, but generous man, who had recently wed her in spite of her poverty and the sneers of his aristocratic acquaintance.

The stately organ had pealed its last rich notes, which were still faintly echoing in the distant arches when a stranger of venerable aspect, who had previously taken part in the services of the altar, rose and announced for his text the oft-quoted but seldom applied words of the Apostle: "Do not forgetful to entertain strangers, for thereby some have entertained angels unawares."

Dr. Maywood felt his forehead flash painfully; it appeared to him for the moment that the preacher must have known his want of charity toward strangers; and wished to give him a public lesson; but he soon saw from the tenor of his remarks, that his own guilty conscience had about made the application in this particular way.

I have not space, nor the power to give any synopsis of the sermon, but that it combined with the incident of the morning, effected a happy revolution in the mind of at least one of its hearers—so much so that on the return of Dr. Maywood from church he repaired at once to the room of the mendicant, to offer such attentions as he might stand in need of. But the young man seemed to be much refreshed by rest and nutritious food, and commenced gratefully thanking the host for the kind attentions he had received, which, without doubt had saved his life.

"I am not the beggar that I seem," said he. "I was shipwrecked on Friday night in the Ocean Wave, on my return from India. My name was doubtless among the list of the lost—for I escaped from the wreck by a miracle. I returned to my native way to New York, where I have ample funds in bank now awaiting my orders, but I must have perished from cold and hunger had it not been for you and your wife's provident charity. I was repaid of every dollar as an impostor, and could not rest. To be an exile from one's native land for years, and then after escaping from the perils of the ocean, to die of hunger in the streets of a Christian city, I felt was truly a bitter fate. My name is Arthur Willet, a titled stranger."

"Why, then, my wife's family name—she will be pleased at her agency in your recovery."

"O what State is she a native of?" asked Arthur Willet eagerly.

"I married her in the town of B——, where she was born."

At this moment, Mrs. Maywood entered the room, surprised at the long absence of her husband.

Arthur Willet looked at her with a look of wild surprise, murmuring— "It cannot be—it cannot be. I am delirious to think so."

Mrs. Maywood gazed with little less astonishment.

"What painful mystery is this?" cried Dr. Maywood excitedly, addressing his wife, who then became conscious of the singularity of her conduct.

"Oh, no mystery," she replied, sighing deeply, "only this stranger is the very image of my long lost brother, Arthur. And Mrs. Maywood, overcome with emotion, turned to leave the room.

"Stay one moment," pleaded the stranger, drawing a small mourning ring from his finger, and holding it up, asked, "Is this recognized that relic?"

She shrieked aloud. Merciful heaven! It is my father's gray hair and you are— "His son, Arthur Willet, and your long lost brother, Maywood!"

Mrs. Willet, Arthur Willet, fell upon the mendicant's breast, shedding tears of sweetest joy and thanksgiving.

Dr. Maywood joined in cordial congratulations and sympathy, and retiring from the sacred hour of reunion, saying to himself—

"Be not forgetful to entertain strangers, for hereby some have entertained angels unawares."

Special dispatch to the Republican Banner.

COURTLAND, ALA., August 2, 8 P. M.
About two o'clock this afternoon, while Dr. Haughey, Conservative Republican candidate for Congress, was on the stand delivering a speech he said all the Hands speakers were hirelings. His remarks excited the extreme Radical wing of the Republican party, and also a Congress-follower candidate. No sooner had the hireling expression escaped his lips than Dr. Collins, a friend, of Hinds called him a d——d liar, at the same time advancing toward him. Haughey returned the belittling epithet, when both clenched. During the struggle, which lasted only about half a minute, Haughey was shot in the left breast, just under the ninth rib. The wound was deep, and Haughey was shot in the same position that Stokes and Hinds occupy in the State of Tennessee. Hinds and Collins are both carpet-baggers. Collins is the man who killed Kornehan some time ago. He is a perfect desperado.

The Radical negro majority of Antioch Colored Church, Calhoun county, Va., expelled every member of the church who voted the Walker ticket in the late election. There have been many assaults by Radical negroes upon the Conservatives of their color, in various parts of the South, on account of their votes. But this instance of church proscription is more significant than other demonstrations in showing that the ballot has been committed to a class utterly unfit to exercise it.—Col. Sun.

EXTRAORDINARY SPECTACLE IN TENNESSEE.—The most curious phenomenon of which we have ever heard, occurred in Chattanooga county on Wednesday last.—The day, it will be remembered, was remarkably hot, so that most people in the county had to seek shade about noon. At this hour, on the farm of Ed. Sharpe, 3 miles from Ashland, a sort of whirlwind came along over the neighboring woods, taking up small branches and leaves of trees, and burning them in a sort of a flaming cylinder, that travelled at the rate of about 5 miles an hour, and developing in size as it travelled.

It passed directly over the spot where a team of horses were feeding, and singed their manes and tails up to the roots; it then swept toward the house, taking a stack of hay in its course, which it set on fire. It seemed to increase in heat as it went, and by the time it reached the house, it immediately fired the shingles from end to end of the building, so that in ten minutes the whole building was wrapped in flames. The tall column of travelling caloric then continued its course over a wheat field that had here recently been cut, setting fire to all the stalks that happened to be in its course. Passing from the field, its course lay over a stretch of woods which reached to the river. The green leaves on the trees were crisped to a cinder for a breadth of twenty yards, in a straight line to the Cumberland.

When the "pillar of fire" reached the water, it suddenly changed its course down the river, raising a column of steam which went up to the clouds for about half a mile, when it finally died out. Not less than two hundred people witnessed this strangest of strange phenomena, and all of them tell substantially the same story about it. The farmer, Sharpe, was left homeless by the devouring element, and his two horses were so affected that no goal is expected to

THE LAST TRIBUTE.

Lines written on the occasion of the funeral of Mrs. Anna H. Randall, at Cold Water, Ala., June 20th, 1869; Services by Rev. W. R. Kirk, Pastor.

I entered the aisle of the sacred Church
Forlorn and lonely in its rural shade
And from the aisle drapery hung o'er
The stand whereon the preacher stood, I saw Death had been there. Beside the holy desk
Were gorgeous flowers in evergreen set,
(1) white, of crimson and of varied hue—
All fresh and fragrant, as from native stem
By skillful hand and cultured taste were cul'd.
Soberly and so placidly they stood—
In language silent, yet in smiles so sweet,
That Saints and Seraphs might have mingled
there,
To blend in one, poor weeping Earth and Heaven.

I entered softly; for a mournful throng
Had gathered on that solemn Sabbath day,
To breathe a last, sad tribute to a saint in rest,
It was a season when the heart of man
Is touched with human sympathy and love—
Unbound to earth—its loneliness and woes—Streaks heavenly, climbs to dwell and dilate in How down, O Earth! and be exalted thence!
In language silent, yet in smiles so sweet,
That Saints and Seraphs might have mingled
there,
To blend in one, poor weeping Earth and Heaven.

Rejoice, proclaim, reverberate the praise
Of the redeemed, to him who rules forever.
Who does not sigh and hunger after thee?
Thy peaceful rest—unusually with a tear!
Thy hallowed course—Thy pure and great white throne—
And death releasing thee—Thy chosen flock
His lambs, all gathered round—He in their midst,
In power and majesty—Redeemer—God:
Glory! jubilate, his diadem.
Till thou art called poor, humble mortal, wait
Thy glorious entrance to that wondrous scene.

The well selected hymns—the pastor's prayer,
On cherub's pinions to the Merc-seat—
From dust and ashes to Almighty God
Were borne. Mortals seeking immortality—
Admittance craving to his crystal life—
And then the words of truth—the heart of man;
The Son of God, Incarnate, and his death—
His resurrection and omnipotence;
The vanquished crushed-triumph of the victor
And redeemed over death, the grave and hell,
Were truths most fully spoken on that day.
And this was all, 'twas all that man could do,
Both for the living and the dead—except
The sighing of the spirit—the voiceless utterance of the soul—the all prevailing Prayer to Mercy's throne, which none but God can Hear, and hearing, bid the suppliant live.

A last farewell to her whose worth we came
To celebrate, to our homes returned,
A careful hand entrusted with the flowers.
And now, I see them—drooping, withered, dead!
Sad emblems of heaven, which bloom and live forever.
Drooping, withered, dead—their fragrance gone—
Their beauties fled—lifeless they stand before me
Faint memories of departed splendor!
And such is life, and such its mournful story!
But drooping and withered into death, as now,
The sleeping Lost One, blooms in life eternal.
July, 1869.

*1st Hymn—No. 669; 2nd—No. 728, Methodist Collection.
The text selected for the occasion, was a part of the 25th and 26th verses of 11th chapter of the Gospel of St. John: Jesus said unto her, Martha, I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: And whosoever liveth in me, and believeth in me shall never die.

THE FLYING SHIP.—The San Francisco
Spectator says of Mr. Marriott, the inventor of the new balloon:
"He has enlisted the money and sympathy of some of the shrewdest men of this community, and they are now preparing an Aviator of large size by means of which a party of six gentlemen will make a trail trip to New York and back. This machine will be ready for trial in sixty or ninety days."

In Pittsburg the price of coal is less than two dollars a ton. Coal shipped to the west from the point sells at Cincinnati at two dollars and twenty-five cents a ton; at New Orleans at four dollars, and at St. Louis at three dollars and fifty cents to four dollars and fifty cents.

There is this difference between happiness and wisdom:—he who indulges himself in the happiest man really is so; but he who thinks himself the wisest is generally the greatest fool.

MILLIONS AT STAKE.
The United States vs the Chat-

Company.

In our report, says the Nashville Banner of the proceedings had yesterday at the meeting of the stockholders of the Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad, is given in full the formal demand made by the United States government for the delivery, to an agent appointed for that purpose, of the Nashville and Chattanooga road, its rolling stock, depots, shops, etc., to satisfy claims held by the government against that road. As the matter is likely to terminate in litigation of mammoth proportions, we give below a brief history of the facts of the case.

The Federal Government owes to the road $3,766,957, for its use during the war, when they held it by military possession. The road owes the government $1,466,551 for engines, etc., purchased since the war. The government ignores the claims of the road, attempts to enforce its own.

By virtue of one fit in my hands, I will offer for sale to the highest bidder before the court house door for cash an undivided interest in the following Town Lots as the property of F. C. Taylor, to-wit: A Town Lot in the Town of Jacksonville, Ala., formerly known as the Lowman Lot, lying west of Main Street, leading south from the court house, and being the lot purchased by H. J. Lowman from G. C. Whitley, and which is further known as the N 3 of Lot No. 3, as surveyed by John Lindsey for said whitley.
An adjoining lot No. 2, embracing one and 2-10 of an acre. Also a lot adjoining, lying due west of the Academy lot, an adjoining the west end of the Lowman lot on the south, embracing about 130 feet square 4 of an acre, more or less, which last lot was formerly occupied by Morit Nunies, and all of which property has been known as the Powell & Hutchinson

THE STATE OF ALABAMA,

Calhoun County.
Court of Probate for said County, July 27th, A. C. 1869.

This day came Berry Turner Adm'r. of the estate of Solomon Kilgo deceased and presented and filed in court an account current between his intestate (as the late rent between his intestate of Thomas Johnson deceased,) and the estate of the said Thos. Johnson deceased, for a final settlement of his intestate's executorship of of the estate of said Johnson deceased.
And therefore, It is ordered by the court, that the 23rd day of August 1869, be set for examining, auditing, stating, and allowing said account, and making said settlement, and that the same be published for three successive weeks in the Jacksonville Republican, a new paper published in said county, as a notice to all persons concerned to be and appear at a Special Term of said court, to be holden at the court house of said county on said 23rd day of August A. D. 1869, if they think proper.

A. Woods, Judge of Probate.

July 31, 1869. 3c.

THE STATE OF ALABAMA,

Calhoun County.
Court of Probate for said county,
July, 31st 1869.

This day came S. D. McClellan and Jonathan Phillips, Administrators de bonis non of the estate of Joseph Phillips deceased, and present to the court their petition in writing among other things, that said estate has owing to it, debts of a bad and doubtful character, and they allege that it would be beneficial to said estate to compromise with the parties owing the same, and they pray that an order of this court be made authorizing and empowering them as administrators as aforesaid to compromise said debts in a manner that will be most conducive to their interest of said estate, it is therefore ordered by the court that the 23rd day of August 1869 be set apart for the hearing of said petition, and that notice of them be given by publication in the Jackso-ville Republican a news paper published in said county for three successive weeks as a notice to all persons concerned to appear in court on said 23rd day of August 1869 and defend against said petition if they think proper.

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cause (without medicine) of Seminal or Sexual Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotence, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediment to Marriage, etc.;
also, Consumption, Emphysema, and First aid by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance.

Price, in sealed envelope, only 6 cents.

The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of debility may be readily cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine, or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effective, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply and speedily.
This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Sowing and Reaping.

Are we sowing seeds of kindness?
They shall blossom bright ere long,
Are we sowing seeds of discord,
They shall ripen into wrong?
Are we sowing seeds of honor?
They shall bring forth golden grain,
Are we sowing seeds of falsehood?
We shall yet reap bitter pain.
Whatso'er our sowing be,
Reaping, we its fruits must see.

We can never be too careful,
What the seed our hands shall sow:
Love from love is sure to ripen,
Hate from hate is sure to grow.
Seeds of good or ill we scatter
Heedlessly along our way;
But a glad or grievous fruitage
Waits us at the harvest day.
Whatso'er our sowing be,
Reaping, we its fruits must see.

Franklin Dyre, a highly respectable and intelligent farmer of Galena, Kent county, Maryland, gives the following as a sure cure for the bite of a mad dog. As will be seen, he has tested it with the most gratifying results:

Eucalyptus is a plant well known to most persons, and is to be found in many of our gardens. Immediately after being bitten, take one and a half ounces of the root of the plant—the green root is perhaps preferable, but the dried will answer, and may be found in our drug stores, and was used by me—slice or bruise, put into a pint of fresh milk, boil down to a half pint, strain, and when cold, drink it, fasting at least six hours afterward. The next morning repeat the dose fasting, using two ounces of the root. On the third morning take another dose, prepared as the last, and this will be sufficient.

It is recommended that after each dose nothing be eaten for at least six hours. I have a son who was bitten by a mad dog eighteen years ago, and four other children in the neighborhood were also bitten; they took the above dose, and are alive and well to this day. And I have known a number of others who were bitten and applied the same remedy. It is supposed that the root contains a principle which, being taken up by the blood in its circulation, counteracts or neutralizes the deadly effects of the virus of hydrophobia. I had so much confidence in this simple remedy that I am willing you should give my name in connection with the statement.

A gentleman in Millersville being anxious to know if the statement contained in the above were true, wrote to Mr. Dyre, and received the following reply:

Galena, Kent county, Md.,
July 28, 1899.

Dear Sir—Your letter of the 21st is at hand. In returning the slip of paper to take care of, I can say that every word is true. Numbers of instances have I known where men and beasts have been bitten, who took the dose and never went mad, some died a natural death, and some are living now. I knew an instance 40 years ago—My son was bitten nineteen years ago, and is now well, and is alive and well at this writing.

Truly yours,
FRANKLIN DYRE.

Life of a Printer.

The following strange, eventful record of a journeyman printer's life is taken from a paper which asserts its correctness. It develops what a man can do if he likes, and what queer, enterprising, and unselfish fellows, the majority of printers are:

"I left home at the age of nine, and was apprenticed to the printing business at thirteen. Since then I have visited England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, and France; have been in Canada, Nova Scotia, Labrador, South America, West Indies, and all the Atlantic States of the Union, from Maine to Louisiana; and have lived in twenty-seven cities and towns of the United States. Besides, I have traveled through all the New England States, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Virginia, as a journeyman, generally with little else than a brass rule in my pocket. I have been a sailor in the merchant service, have sailed in all manner of craft, was in the regular army as a private soldier, deserted it, and got shot in the leg. I have studied two years for the ministry, one year for a doctor, and have been publisher of three papers: one in Boston, one in Roxbury, Mass., and one in Maine. At one time I had $7,500 of my own in pocket. I have been married twice, and am now nearly twenty-six years old. I have been a temperance lecturer, and proprietor of a temperance hotel."

Asides for Wheat.

A correspondent of the Rural Gentleman, who writes very strongly in favor of ashes to prevent rust in wheat, supports his arguments by facts adduced from his own experience. He has in numerous instances found them to possess a marked value, exerting a three-fold for good. We extract from the article the following paragraphs:

1. The ashes operate as a manure upon the wheat, even in the limited quantity of eight bushels per acre.
2. They push the wheat forward several days, and in time, to escape the hot sultry days, which often prevail about the time of the heading out of the wheat, and
3. They strengthen the stem, giving it substance and solidity.

I may here add one or two more properties to the ashes: they afford just that kind of papulum or food which is best for the development and perfection of the grain, and will, in my opinion, also prevent the ravages of thrips in wheat. I would here venture the remark, that whoever tries this experiment will be greatly repaid, as the wood ashes upon his wheat, as above indicated, and in so doing he will effectually guard against and prevent the rust in his wheat.

IN FROM ONE TO TWENTY MINUTES.
No matter how violent or how long the pain, the Rad-riden Indian, Grippled, Rheumatic, Nervous, Neuritic, or prostrated with disease may suffer.
RADWAY'S READY RELIEF will, in from one to twenty minutes, afford ease and comfort, and this medicine, so rapid in stopping pain, can be purchased for 50 cents per bottle at almost every druggist's and country merchant's store on this continent, and within one hour's distance of almost every habitation in the United States.

Millions who have used Radway's Ready Relief for 25 years know that ONE 50 cent bottle, diluted in one gallon of proof spirits, will make a better Liniment, Pain Paint, Kink, Pannace, King of Pains; equal in quantity to 144 Bottles of the Sizes of those Locations that are sold at 25 cents.

And the public should also know that all these locations are but four instances of RADWAY'S READY RELIEF. If those who are now suffering Pain—no matter what the cause may be, or by what name it is called—if external, apply Radway's Ready Relief to the part of the body where the pain is present. By 15 minutes, 20 minutes, or 30 minutes, in water, as in a drink, whether Croup, Sprains, Inflammation, Congestion, Asiatic Cholera, Chills and Fever, the most violent, excruciating, and torturing pains, will be stopped in from ONE TO TWENTY MINUTES.

One fifty cent Bottle of RADWAY'S READY RELIEF will do more service, and cure more complaints than are daily occurring in every family than $25 expended in prescriptions for drugs.

25 Passengers taken to and from the Depot free of charge. Dec. 5, '98.

WHEREAS, by an act of the General Assembly of the State of Alabama, approved the 10th day of October, 1895, it is provided as follows: "It shall be the duty of the Probate Judge of each county in this State to designate a newspaper in which all legal advertisements, notices or publications, of any and every character required by law to be made in his County, shall be published, which papers so designated shall be the official organ in and for said County," and in obedience to the requirements of said act, I, as Judge of Probate for Calhoun County, Alabama, did heretofore designate the "St. Clair County Eagle," as the official organ in and for said County of Calhoun, in which all legal advertisements, notices or publications of any and every character, required by law to be made in and for said County of Calhoun should be published, said designation to remain until recalled or changed by me.

And the "Jacksonville Republican" being a county paper published in the Town of Jacksonville, Alabama, and in my opinion, clearly within the provisions of said act: I therefore recall and change my order designating the St. Clair County Eagle, as the official organ for said County of Calhoun, and designate the said Jacksonville Republican, in which all legal advertisements, notices or publications of any and every character required by law to be made in and for said County of Calhoun shall be published. This designation to remain so long as in my opinion, the Editor of said Jacksonville Republican conducts said paper so as to be within the provisions of said act.

A. WOODS, Judge of Probate.
