IONS Bear Testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.
Vinegar Bitters are not a vile Fancy
Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey,
Spirits and Refuse Liquors, doc-spiced and sweetened to please the taste,
"Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin,
are a true Medicine, made from the Native
Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A
LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect
Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed mineral poison or other means, and the vital wasted beyond the point of repair.
They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing, also, the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Conges-
Inflammation of the Liver, and of all the Organs.
FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, whether or old, married or single, at the dawn of ood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bit-no equal.
Inflammatory and Chronic Rheu-

GOTTLIEB FISCH'S BITTERS.

Shape of the Bottle.

This preparation of the great Scientist, Dr. Gottlieb Fisch, of Germany, is based on the fact that, as all materials of the body are derived from Food, so all Vital Force, or Health, is derived from the Force stored up in Food. Dr. Fisch's Bitters enables the System to liberate and appropriate these Forces, creates Appetite, cures Dyspepsia, with its resulting Debility and lack of Nervous Energy; so tones the Stomach and Liver as to make Constipation and Biliousness impossible; reinforces the System so it can tide over bad results of changing climate, water &c., and better endure the demands often unexpectedly made on its Force and Energy. Ladies in delicate health, aged persons and all emaciated and weak after sickness, will rapidly strengthen by g this great preparation.

A STERLING OLD POEM!

Who shall judge man by his manners?
Who shall know him by his dress?
Paupers may be fit for princes,
Princes fit for something less.
Crumpled shirt and dirty jacket
May beclothe the golden ore
Of the deepest thoughts and feelings—
Satin vest can do no more.

There are streams of crystal nectar
Ever flowing out of stone:
There are purple beds and golden,
Hidden, crushed, and overthrown.
God, who counts by souls, not dresses,
Loves and prospers you and me,
While He values thrones the highest
But as pebbles in the sea.

Man upraised above his fellows,
Oft forgets his fellows then;
Masters—rulers—lords, remember
That your meanest hinds are men!
Men of labor, men of feeling,
Men of thought and men of fame,
Claiming equal rights to sunshine
In a man's ennobling name.

There are foam-embroidered oceans,
There are little wood-clad rills;
There are feeble, inch-high saplings,
There are cedars on the hills.
God, who counts by souls, not stations,
Loves and prospers you and me,
For to Him all vain distinctions
Are as pebbles in the sea.

Toiling hands alone are builders
Of a nation's wealth and fame;
Titled laziness is pensioned,
Fed and fattened on the same;
By the sweat of other's foreheads,
Living only to rejoice,
While the poor man's outraged freedom
Yainly lifts its feeble voice.

Truth and Justice are eternal,
Born with loveliness and light;
Secret wrongs shall never prosper
While there is a sunny right,
God whose world-wide voice is singing
Boundless love to you and me,
Links oppression with its titles
But as pebbles in the sea.

From the Fortnightly Review.

THE CLOUD CONFINES.

The day is dark and the night
To him that would search their heart;
No lips of clouds that will part,
Nor morning song in the light:
Only gazing alone,
To him wild shadows are shown,
Deep under deep unknown
And height above unknown height
Still we say as we go,—
"Strange to think by the way,
Whatever there is to know
That shall we know one day."

The Past is over and fled;
Named new, we name it the old;
Thereof some tale hath been told,
But no word comes from the dead;
Whether at all they be,
Or whether as bond or free,
Or whether they too were we,
Or by what spell they have sped.
Still we say as we go,—
"Strange to think by the way,
Whatever there is to know,
That shall we know one day."

What of the heart of hate
That beats in thy breast, O Time?—
Red strife from the farthest prime,
And anguish of fierce debate;
War that shatters her slain,
And peace that grinds them as grain,
And eyes fixed ever in vain
On the pitiless eyes of Fate.
Still we say as we go,—
"Strange to think by the way,
Whatever there is to know,
That shall we know one day."

What of the heart of love
That pleads in thy breast, O Man?—
Thy kisses snatched 'neath the ban
Of fangs that mock them above;
Thy bells prolonged unto knells,
Thy hope that a breath dispels,
Thy bitter, forlorn farewells,
And the empty echoes thereof?
Still we say as we go,—
"Strange to think by the way,
Whatever there is to know,
That shall we know one day."

The sky leans dumb on the sea,
Aweary with all its wings;
And oh! the song the sea sings
Is dark everlastingly.
Our past is clean forgot,
Our present is and is not,
Our future's a sealed seedplot,
And what betwixt them are we?
What words to say as we go?
What thoughts to think by the way?
What truth may there be to know,
And shall we know it one day?

AMATA.

FROM THE GERMAN OF HANS THARAU.

BY A YOUNG LADY OF JACKSONVILLE.

CHAPTER V.

Yes, Walter Volkmar was the hero of the day.

Visits and invitations were poured in upon him from all sides. Everybody wished to know him—everybody wished to have him at their house. Whoever gave an entertainment sought beforehand to assure the acceptance of the celebrated violin player, whoever accepted an invitation, ascertained previously whether the much spoken of artist would be present.

The University town was large enough for its social intercourse to be dispensed in several circles and at the same time provincial enough for each circle to envy so distinguished a guest as Volkmar.

But it seldom happened that any one got possession of the artist, and only a few happy ones had the pleasure of entertaining him. To these fortunate ones belonged Professor Gregorius.

In that long sleepless night which followed the concert, Amata had resolved to tell her husband all and beseech him to leave the town with her until Walter Volkmar had departed, or at least, so arrange it that she should not meet him again. She felt convinced that Eberhard would not be angry with her; but would receive her confession with his accustomed kindness and mildness and would overcome, through his great love, the pang this confession would give him.

But in the morning she was both mentally and physically so miserable and weak that she felt herself incapable of any conversation, much less of so painful an explanation.

With tender fear on her account and after all imaginable arrangements for her comfort, Eberhard took leave of her. A sitting in reference to the library affair would take place and his presence was particularly required at the college to-day, to his indignation.

Amata hoped before he returned to gain enough strength to begin the dreaded conversation.

Scarcely half an hour had elapsed, after the Professor's departure before Frau Wedel was announced. Amata would have willingly excused herself, but the excellent lady immediately followed her announcement, and gliding in with her accustomed noiseless step, already stood by the sofa on which Amata lay.

"My dear, my sweet young friend," began the widow, and she enfolded Amata in her arms and silently seated herself by her side, with her handkerchief at her eyes.

Amata was annoyed by the searching eyes of the widow and turned her head away.

"Thank you," she said embarrassed, "I am much better. The heat, the large crowd, I believe——"

"Yes, yes, I understand. How could any one wish to ascribe your sudden indisposition to any other ground? Certainly not. Be assured, my dear friend, my motherly eyes alone have discerned the true cause.

Amata's womanly pride was aroused. "What have you discerned?" she asked with unaccustomed violence for her, and dark red spots came on her cheeks.

"Quietly, quietly, my sweet love," the Professorin kissed her brow and gently pushed her back on her cushions, "now you are agitated and hysterical; once you would not have so received the warm sympathy of your friend, and I believe it is better I should leave you; you would rather be alone—that is plain; you must pardon my entering your room without permission, but I was obliged to see after you. I could not sleep the whole night for thinking of you."

"No, no, remain" begged Amata.—"Forgive my rudeness," and she added, "I am still so weak, so——" and she passed her hand over her forehead.

"I know, I know," interrupted the Professorin, again taking her old place, "I can imagine how you have suffered. Music is so enchanting, so overpowering to those who have weak nerves," (the newly made experience advised her to go more cautiously to work,) "especially such music as we heard last evening! I myself was quite overcome by it," and again the handkerchief was conveyed to her eyes.

"You have not heard Herr Volkmar for the first time?" began the lady after a short pause, "at least it appeared to me he greeted you as an old acquaintance."

Amata had closed her eyes.

"He formerly visited my younger brother very often," she answered scarcely audibly and with averted face.

"Herr Berthold? I thought so. He is as musical as you Professorin. Your husband was not aware of this," she asked further, "for he presented the concert-master to you as a stranger."

Had she no mercy, this woman?

"No," murmured Amata burying her head deeper in the cushions.

"You have acted very prudently, dear child, to be silent in this case!" said the Professorin. "Men are peculiar beings; nothing pleases their self vanity more than to see their wives admired and surrounded with attention, but they themselves must choose the admirers from their own circle of friends and acquaintances, so that at the same time a certain reflection of this admiration falls on them and it is the wife of the husband to whom men pay homage, but if they discover that any admiration of this kind no matter how innocent, existed before their marriage, perhaps before they themselves knew the chosen one of their heart—that admiration immediately becomes suspicious to them, they suspect everything when there is nothing to suspect, and the most harmless deed becomes a stumbling block by means of which until now uninterrupted married happiness falls to the ground."

Amata listened attentively, her eyes fixed on the speaker.

"Then you would advise me not to speak to my husband of my former acquaintance with Walter—with Herr Volkmar?—" she corrected herself blushing.

"Certainly not, by no means," said the Professorin.

"You of all others! You see my dear friend—I may speak quite openly with you—may I not?—you see—in your case my experience tells me, the most sad consequences might arise from such a confession on your part. That you are young and beautiful, you certainly know—well and good, what then is more natural than that your dear husband should regard with jealousy, every one who approaches you. Now this unequalled artist appears, of whom he has heard nothing until now—it will be an unhappy chance that you fainted just after your first meeting with him—he afterwards learns that you have known, nay, have had much intercourse with that stranger in years gone by—what, I ask you, are the consequences? A husband and such a one as your's, who is so thoroughly convinced of his wife's love———"

"Oh stop!" cried Amata covering her face with her hands. "I would so willingly believe you are wrong—but———"

"But you cannot, is it not so, my dear love? But why these tears? What distresses you so painfully in this affair?"

"It is so hard for me not to tell my husband the whole truth!" sobbed Amata.. He is himself so noble and candid—he tells me everything———"

"Are you very sure of that, my dear Professorin?" laughed the widow.

"Yes, quite sure," said Amata more quietly, "I would take an oath on it!"

"There again is youthful confidence and inexperience which speaks in you!" said Frau Wedel shaking her head. "You may be glad I do not take you at your word for I have the proof with me that Professor Gregorius has also his little secrets—and why not?—which he does not speak of to his beautiful wife!"

"Scorn like that of a spoiled child, lay around Amata's lips.

"I must see the proof before I believe it!" she exclaimed.

"That you shall, you certainly shall," said the widow, "but not to-day, my child, when you are so weak—another time!"

"No, no, to-day—this very moment!" cried Amata rising from her sofa and holding the frightened lady by her dress. "I will not be quiet, I will not rest till you explain it all—till you tell me what you mean!"

Frau Wedel saw she had gone too far and now there was no drawing back.

"Well then," she began, drawing a triangled billet from her dress pocket, "when you have read this little note, you will say that your husband has also his lady friends, of whom you know nothing: and where is the harm? How I came by this letter you must not ask for that I cannot betray, neither can I give it to you out of my hands; but you see it is addressed to your husband and the contents are:

Dear friend

"In vain I wait for the fulfilment of your promise. Thusnelda's sentence remains on your lips and you still delay?"

"Cruel! How can you leave a woman—a young and beautiful woman needing sadly your assistance to pine in doubt and uncertainty? Ah! I see how it is. Hyman's bands have you so firmly bound that through the intoxication of your joy, you forget the tears of an unhappy one!

But let your heart be softened once again! Come—come soon—to-day—to-morrow, if you will. My door is always open to you."

Your Friend,

Amata listened to every word with attention, but she evinced neither pain nor anger at the conclusion; she only smiled and said:

"I charge my husband with no falseness; but I now see that there are subjects of which married people had best not speak."

The Professorin was greatly deceived in the result of her coup d é tat She had imagined to herself that she would awaken the young wife's jealousy, thro' her wise plans, and thereby create love for her husband—for that the same did not exist, the experienced lady had long since suspected—and then she thought the former lover would retire, leaving the happiness of Amata and Eberhard newly strengthened, and she, the Professorin, would be recognized as the author of this new happiness by the grateful pair, and would be rewarded by them with filial affection.

Now, alas! the beautifully planned drama came to a stand-still in the very first act and nothing remained to the prudent lady but to put the important billet in her pocket, somewhat dejected, and to play her own part further.

The prudent lady had forgotten, notwithstanding all her talent of arranging affairs and her much celebrated "experiences," that where no fire of love is burning, one seeks in vain to kindle the smouldering brands with jealousy.

The Professorin had scarcely taken leave of Amata, when Albert entered.

He was quite provoked about the "scene" of last evening, as he termed Amata's fainting fit.

"Another such demonstration, and your husband will see through the whole affair," he added, "and then you will see how things will go."

"I can scarcely be more unhappy than I am already," answered Amata with a languid voice; "I sometimes think it would be better to tell Eberhard all."

"What!" cried her brother, "are you deranged, Amata? Is there anything more unreasonable than a woman's brain! You wish to tell Eberhard of your former intimacy with Walter Volkmar?"

She nodded affirmatively.

"And have you ever thought," he continued, "what the consequences of such a confession would be? You only think of your own happiness and unhappiness; but do not consider that you hazard the well-being, nay, perhaps the life of another. As I judge Eberhard, he is a proud, jealous nature, a man who will take nothing from another, especially when it concerns his wife; and Walter Volkmar—cursed be the day he first entered our house!—arrogance seems to have completely turned his head. I tell you if the two men come together——"

Amata shuddered. She had half risen and sat with both hands on her forehead.

"Oh, enough, enough!" she sobbed, "I will indeed be silent. No word shall ever pass my lips, if only—only that will be prevented."

"Yes, be silent! continued her brother, "and you think all is done! Yesterday, also, you were silent; but you sat there with such a countenance that all which passed through your mind was to be read on it. You may think yourself fortunate that your husband, in some most unaccountable manner for him, was so occupied by the music that he did not observe your striking behavior. That is not to be expected a second time."

"Perhaps he, perhaps Walter will leave here soon;" said Amata timidly, "perhaps we will not meet again."

"Quite the contrary!" answered Albert. "I hear it is his intention to remain here several weeks, in order to divert himself among his old acquaintances, as he says, but in reality to spite us And your husband, whom I met as he came from the college, and whom the man has bewitched with his accursed playing, told me he would call on Volkmar this morning and invite him to visit your house."

"He will surely not accept!" said Amata, with a trembling voice.

"Do not give yourself up to that vain hope, Amata. I tell you he will come. Volkmar believes himself terribly injured by you. I saw that yesterday from his whole manner and he is sharp enough to see that he is not quite indifferent to you, and he knows he can take no better revenge on you than by forcing his presence on you as often as possible."

Amata wrung her hands.

"What shall I do?" she cried, full of doubt.

"What shall you do?" asked her brother coldly. "Above all, do not fall into any more swoons, and do not become hysterical. Be an amiable hostess to all who visit your husband's house, and let your behavior toward Walter Volkmar be exactly like your behaviour towards your other guests. Then the threatened danger will be removed and your husband will remain in happy ignorance and Volkmar will resolve so much the sooner to depart, when he sees he can accomplish nothing by remaining."

"Amata had sunk back on the sofa.

"You ask much, Albert," she said. "I do not know whether I will have strength enough to go through it all."

"As you please," he answered, raising his eyebrows. "You know what the consequences will be if you act differently."

"I will try," she whispered, pressing her hands together.

When Professor Gregorius returned home, he found his wife in such a condition of feverish emotion, that he was filled with fears on her account, yet she daily improved under his tender care, and when, after several days, Eberhard proposed to invite to his house a small circle of acquaintances and among these the Concert-master, she could not do otherwise than consent—her health no longer serving her as an excuse.

SHOT DOWN AT SIGHT.

A Man Travels Five Hundred Miles to Kill the Alleged Betrayer of His Wife.

[From the Nashville Banner, Feb. 14]

William Singleton, who was employed in a saw-mill at Shellmound, on the Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad, was shot at that place Monday afternoon by a man named T. T. Johnson who hails from Geneva, Illinois.

Johnson tells the following story in vindication of his conduct:

About a year and a half ago Singleton lived in Geneva. While there he became too intimate with Johnson's wife, but soon after left the place. Since that time he has been corresponding with Mrs. Johnson. The husband intercepted their letters, and found them such as ought not to be written to another man's wife, nor answered by her. He therefore determined to hunt Singleton up and kill him.

He arrived at Chattanooga Monday morning, and learning that Singleton was at Shellmound, announced publicly that he intended to kill him, and left for that place in the afternoon. On arriving at Shellmound he found Singleton at work. Advancing upon him, he cried: 'I've come five hundred miles to kill you:" took deliberate aim with his revolver, and fired five times at him, two of the balls taking effect in Singleton's breast, on the right side, probably entering his lungs, and one in the upper portion of the thigh.

Johnson was arrested, taken to Chattanooga and lodged in jail.

He said that Singleton had ruined his happiness for life, had brought disgrace and shame upon him, and that if he had not killed Singleton he had only half accomplished his purpose.

Singleton was conveyed to Chattanooga also, where he received proper attention at the residence of Perry Ransom. Inflamation had set in at 3 yesterday morning, and it was believed that he would not live tweny-four hours. Singleton said that he did not recognize Johnson until he commenced firing upon him. He was highly respected at Chattanooga, and his being so deliberately shot down by Johnson, without any chance whatever to defend himself, aroused a good deal of feeling among his friends.

The preliminary examination of Johnson was to have taken place yesterday.

The Court of Claims, acting under a recent decision of the Supreme Court, have decided that President Johnson's amnesty proclamation of Dec. 25, 1868, relieves claimants in that Court of any proof of loyalty. This will let in many claims of Southern men.

THE CLARKE CO' TRAGEDY.

Mrs. Files Killed by a Negro—Shocking Murder.

The most shocking and unprovked murder ever committed in any community was perpetrated last week at Gosport, in Clarke county, by a mulatto boy named Jim, about fifteen years old; the victims being Mrs. Files, wife of Dr. Files of that place, and their little daughter, aged about 11 years.

It appears that Mrs. Files, accompanied by several small negro children and the boy Jim, was engaged in laying a row of bricks to form a walk in the garden, and requiring the use of an axe, sent the boy to get one. He staid away longer than was necessary and returned bringing an old axe with one corner broken off, when the lady told him to make haste and bring along some more bricks, and as she stooped to proceed with the work the boy struck her on the head with the axe, breaking her skull in a shocking manner and driving large pieces of the bone into the brain. The screams of the children brought the little girl to the spot, when the demon beat her down also, and struck her head with the axe while she lay on the ground, inflicting dreadful wounds upon her. Two little negro girls then seized Jim, compelling him to drop the axe in order to rid himself of them, when he ran off to a short distance. The little white girl had by this time recovered and with the little negroes was attemping to raise her dying mother, when Jim ran up behind her struck her another blow with the axe which fractured her skull and laid her apparently lifeless on the ground. Some of the grown negroes having arrived, Jim was secured and lodged in the jail of Clark county. Mrs. Files lingered in an unconscious condition until Wednesday last, when death ended her suffering. Notwithstanding the severe injuries sustained by the little girl, some hopes are entertained of her recovery. Much sympathy is expressed for the Doctor, as the affair occurred during his absence on business in Mobile.

Fruits of Radical Reconstruction.

W. W. Holden, late Governor of North Carolina, impeached and deposed from office, now a fugitive from his native State.

Scott, Governor of S. Carolina, openly accused of theft, and presented for impeachment by a convicted felon and ex-Congressman of his own party. Harrison Reed, Governor of Florida, now impeached by a Radical Legislature for high crimes and misdemeanors.

Rufus B. Bullock, ex-Gov. of Georgia, fled from his Capital, and is a fugitive from justive for theft.

Warmoth, Governor of Louisiana, accused by his own party of high crimes and misdemeanors, now before Congressional investigating committee.

Davis, Governor of Texas, impeached for high crimes and misdemeanors by a Radical Legislature.

Powell Clayton, U. S. Senator and ex-Governor of Arkansas, on trial at Washington for illegal practices in securing his election to the Senate.

W. B. Stokes, late candidate for Governor of Tennessee, on trial before the U. S. Court at Washington, for defrauding the Goverment of bounty money.

The list would be longer but there are no more extremely loyal men holding Gubernatorial positions, except two accidentals in North Carolina and Mississippi.

LITTLE THINGS.—The perspicuousness of little things was never more beautifully expressed than in the following morceau from Mr. B. F. Taylor:

Little martin-boxes of homes are generally the most happy and cozy; little villages are nearer to being atoms of a shattered paradise than anything we know of; little fortunes bring the most content, and little hopes the least disappointment.

Little words are the sweetest; little charities fly the furthest, and remain the longest on the wing; little lakes are the stillest; little hearts the fullest, and little farms the best tilled.

Little books are the most read, and little songs the most loved.

JACKSONVILLE REPUBLICAN

JACKSONVILLE, ALABAMA.

SATURDAY, MARCH 2nd, 1872.

New Volume.

The last number of our paper closed the 35th, and the present commences the 36th volume of the REPUBLICAN. It is natural for us all, at the close of important, specific periods, to take a retrospective glance; but we have no taste or inclination at present to write a long homily on the irrevocable past. The best use that can be made of such remembrance is to correct its errors and mistakes, and improve upon the experience it has furnished: and this it is our purpose to do.

Few papers, compared with the whole number, have reached the age of thirty-five years, and fewer still have remained in the hands and under the control of the same individual. We claim no exemption from errors, imperfections and mistakes, the common lot of humanity; but can claim for the Republican, without egotism or vanity, uniform political integrity and consistency, and freedom from known advocacy of principles or practices, inimical to the religious, moral, political or social well being of the people among whom it has circulated; and its past history precludes the necessity of renewed promises as to its future course.

The last thirty-five years have been important and eventful in the history of our country—remarkable for the number and magnitude of discoveries, inventions and improvements, and rapid increase of population, general developement and prosperity. In reflecting on the events of these years, we remember many, the approach of which we regarded with anxiety and solicitude, but which, after all, proved to be of little consequence; whilst others, regarded at the time with indifference, were fraught with momentous and far-reaching consequences—another proof of how much there is in the reflections of every man upon his past life, which makes it appear to be strewn with dead leaves and ashes.

It is true that the last ten years have been disastrous, both in war and peace to our beloved South; but we would not now bring sadness to any heart by dwelling on that theme. The future, although much beclouded by uncertainty, is still enlivened with some gleams of hope; and acting on the advice we give to others, let us all make the best of our advantages and opportunities, without depressing sorrows for the past or gloomy forebodings of the future. We ask of our patrons a generous confidence and support, which we will strive to merit and hope to receive.

The genius of the Gadsden Times thinks that if the good people of that lively village do not subscribe $25,000 to a certain wildcat railroad, they "will deserve to be classed with the old fogies of a certain town not twenty-five miles distant," or words to that effect.

Well, the people of Gadsden are clever people and deserve to be so classed anyhow, whether the town alluded to be Centre, Ashville or Jacksonville. The mere fact that they have so far disregarded both the advice and entreaties of the "Unfathomable Mind" of the TIMES, entitles them to the honor.

As an evidence of the old-fogyism of Jacksonville, for instance, we would point the bard of the Gadsden Times to our recent water-works project, which will cost some nine or ten thousand dollars and which is now an assured fact; as well as to our College building, which cost about the same amount and to which we contemplate making additions. These improvements are destined to be of greater advantage to our town, eventually, than the mere passage of another railroad through this point.

The old-fogyism of Jacksonville consists only in her want of brass and gas and an inclination on her part to do no larger business than her capital warrants. Mr. Pennington offered us the East Ala & Cincinati Road for a consideration, and we could have subscribed very largely, but as we knew we were actually able to pay but little, comparatively, and as we had no desire to deceive or trifle with the company, we gave the matter no further thought. What little our people have to spare they prefer to invest directly in home improvements, and in this they are wise, as time will prove; and Gadsden has the blessed privilege of a similar future experience with us, if she will only continue to disregard the wishes of the Intellectual Colossus of the TIMES and devote her spare capital to the erection of a cotton factory or some such enterprise as that. When the A. & C. Road is straightened out, she will have sufficient outlet, both by water and rail, to answer her for some years to come.

We are beginning to have a faint suspicion that the imaginative individual who presides over the columns of the TIMES is not practical enough for a safe guide. No man is who sits astraddle his Pegasus half his time.

The Selma Times has announced an intention to bow in submission to the judgment of the people as expressed through their delegates to the next State Convention. The Times has simultaneously with this announcement also changed its line of battle from a triangular to a straight line. There is no longer a dangerous salient point along it. The reserves will please conform themselves to the new line.

THE ELECTION LAW.

The election law that has passed both houses of the General Assembly and that will govern future elections in this State, provides for a general election for Governor, Lieut. Governor, Secretary of State, Treasurer, Attorney General, Members of Congress, Representatives of the General Assembly, and Superintendent of Public Instruction, the Tuesday after the first Monday in November next and every two years thereafter; and for Auditor, County Solicitors, Commissioner of Industrial Resources, Members of the Board of Education and Electors for President and Vice President of the United States, at the same time and every four years thereafter; and for Sheriffs, County Commissioners, County Treasurers, Tax Collectors, Tax Assessors, Justices of the Peace and Constables on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1874, and every three years thereafter; and for Judges of the Supreme Court, Chancellors, Judges of the Circuit, City and Probate Courts and Clerks of the Circuit and City Courts, the same time and every six years thereafter.

Section 33 provides that the proper officers when appointing inspectors of any election, shall also appoint a board of Challengers for each ballot box of the several precincts, which shall consist of two intelligent and discreet electors from each political party in the State, whose duty it shall be to challenge any person offering to vote whom they or either of them may suspect or know not to be lawfully entitled and qualified as an elector.

Sections 35, 36, 37, 38, 39 and 40, further relating to challenges and illegal voting, read as follows:

SEC. 35. Be it further enacted, That any person offering to vote, not known to be a qualified elector, may be challenged by the board of challengers or any member thereof, or by the returning officer, or by either of the inspectors, and it shall be the duty of each or any of them to challenge any person offering to vote whom such challenger knows or suspects not to be qualified as an elector. Provided that such election shall not be delayed by such challenge, but that the inspectors shall proceed to receive other votes while the oath is being administered by the challengers or one of them as hereafter provided.

SEC. 36. Be it further enacted, That when any person offering to vote is challenged, if his ballot is not withdrawn, one of the board of challengers shall tender him the following oath: "You do solemnly swear that you are twenty-one years old or upwards, that you are a duly qualified elector under the constitution and laws of the United States, and the constitution and laws of the State of Alabama, that you have resided in this State six months, and in this county three months next preceding this election, and that you have not voted at this or any other precinct on this day," and upon such oath aforesaid the ballot of such person may be received by the board of inspectors and deposited as in other cases.

SEC. 37. Be it further enacted, That any person wilfully and corruptly taking this oath, the same being false, shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and on conviction shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary for not less than two nor more than five years, at the discretion of the jury trying the same.

SEC. 38. Be it further enacted, That if any person offering to vote, refuses to take the oath prescribed in section 36 of this act, his vote shall be rejected and the ballot, marked with the name of the person offering it, shall be laid aside by the inspectors, and if such person take such oath, then his vote may be accepted as in other cases.

SEC. 39. Be it further enacted, That any person voting more than once at any election held in this State, or depositing more than one ballot for the same office as his vote at such election, or is guilty of any other kind of illegal or fraudulent voting, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and on conviction thereof, shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than two or more than five years, at the discretion of the jury trying the same.

SEC. 40. Be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the judge of the circuit, criminal and city courts in this State to give the preceding section of this act in special charge to their respective grand juries, to specially enquire into all illegal voting and also into any all illegal acts committed by inspectors, returning officers, challengers, or other officers of electons within their respective counties or districts.

Sections 92 and 93 read as follows:

SEC. 92. Be it further enacted, That if any person, by bribery or offering to bribe, menace, threatens, discharges, or threatens to discharge from employment, or by any other corrupt means, attempts to influence any elector in giving his voice or deter him from giving the same, or disturb or hinder him in the free exercise of the right of suffrage at any election within this State, he is guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction must be fined not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, and sentenced to any work house or jail, of any county in this State, for not less than thirty days nor more than six months, at the discretion of the jury trying the same.

SEC. 93. Be it further enacted, That any person who fraudulently alters or changes the vote of any elector, by which such is prevented from voting as he intended, is guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction must be fined not less than five hundred dollars.

Section 95 provides that no person shall be allowed within less than thirty feet of the ballot box, except when casting his ballot.

Section 99 prohibits the selling or giving away of spirituous liquors during the day on which any election may be held in the State.

Section 100 provides for the arrest and indictment of any person found drunk or intoxicated about any polling place during any election day.

Other sections of the act, which is a very long one, defines who may vote, and prescribes the duties of officers and the mode and manner of contesting elections.

As in duty bound, we exclaim: "Oh! the snow, the beautiful snow!"

The Adjournment of the Legislature.

The Legislature adjourned sine die last night. We are happy to be able to state that it has done much during the past ten days covering what is known as the extension of the session, to retrieve its character for usefulness and a proper appreciation of its grave responsibilities to the people. If the extension from the 15th had not been happily agreed on the present session of the General Assembly would have been a lamentable failure, and more sterile of practical results than the proceedings of any since the foundation of the State. As it is we are able to publish a Funding Bill as one measure calculated to help the Finances of the State, and to do no little good in the prospective restoration of our impaired credit; an Election Bill containing a provision for challenging voters at the Polls, a measure of first rate importance; and a Bill enabling Alabama to elect an additional member of Congress. We shall have more to say, hereafter, in regard to these three measures of prime value to the State. If in addition to these, the evil spirit of a profitless and point-no-point agitation could have been so far exercised as to have permitted the Assembly to pass the Railroad Relief Bill we could assuredly have complimented the Legislature with enthusiastic sentiments on the extent of its good works.

As it is we cannot be too thankful that the extension has saved the Legislature from universal popular reprobation! Another measure of importance is the location of the Agricultural College by means of which the valuable donation of lands has been secured to the State, worth when reduced to money an annual income of nearly twenty thousand dollars. We were personally in favor of the University of Alabama; but did not deem it advisable or altogether proper to use the columns of the ADVERTISER in the enforcement of our personal wishes.—Our columns were opened freely to all parties. The grant has been, however, worthily bestowed after a fair contest, and we trust its disposition will result in the State's benefit. The Educational Bill, looking to the settlement of Teachers claims, is also another measure that has been passed by the House within the past ten days. An excellent Bill conferring on the Governor all proper and necessary powers in the matter of the A. & C, R. R., has also become a law.

We tender our respectful farewell to all the members of the General Assembly, and especially to the Democratic and Conservative members, without exception. We have differed on some measures, or rather some points of policy with some of our Democratic brethren; but the best men cannot always hope to agree. We are sure that the spirit prevailing in our Party Caucus shows an undivided sentiment against "hopeless schisms" and "triangular fights" and Stanton tricks, or the making of false and improvident tests or issues on the Bond, or any other question. On the contrary all true men agree to disagree on all matters of internal difference; and we will rule the Railroad issues in all of its phases out of our Convention. Those who may venture to suggest or to champion dangerous and disharmonizing issues, will be regarded as guilty of party treason.—This is, we believe, the nearly unanimous feeling of our people.

Montgomery Advertiser.

Mr. Speaker Hubbard.

By the resolution of thanks unanimously adopted by the House in honor of Mr. Speaker Hubbard, his associates in the Legislature expressed their kind and respectful regard for this able young Democrat. Entertaining as we do a very high appreciation of the talents and personal worth of the late Speaker we trust that it may be agreeable, both to the people of his county or district and himself, to continue in the Public service.—His talents and business qualifications, and patriotism will always command for him great respect in any public position.

Montgomery Advertiser.

Hon. W. P. Howell.

One of the most quiet, but at the same time most efficient representatives of the people in the House of Representatives during the late session of the Legislature was Hon. W. P. Howell, the member from the new county of Cleburne. He was always in his seat, always vigilant, always attentive to the interests of his constituents, and never prone to put himself forward for mere love of display.—When he spoke at all it was on some measure of importance and when he had said what he rose to say he spent no time in idle gas. Plain, practical and to the point, his words like his votes flew straight to the mark without ostentation or circumlocution. He was in short one of the model legislators of the session; and if the Legislature had been composed of 132 other such men it would have adjourned at the termination of the limit allowed by the Constitution and with twice the work done that now is, notwithstanding the various extensions.

A Terrible Family Feud Results in Two Brothers being Killed.

One of those tragic rencounters has occurred at Monticello, Georgia, that calls to mind the dark and bloody days of wild frontier life, where human passions rage unregulated by law and personal difficulties find more ready settlement by the fierce arbitration of arms than before the slow and circuitous tribunals of justice.

We have an account of the affair, received from private sources, that is by no means as circumstantial and certain as we should like to give, but it is undoubtedly a close approximation to the truth.

The dispute had previously originated about the hire of a negro. The parties were Clinton Digby and brother on the one side, and Seaborn Kelley and two brothers on the other—all farmers. They met in Monticello on the 7th inst., at the election of Ordinary. The dispute revived between Clinton Digby's brother and the three Kelleys. Young Digby drew his pistol, but before he could use it, one of the Kelleys seized his arm and held it up while the two other Kelleys pounded away in sledge hammer fashion on Digby. At this juncture Clinton Digby came up to the assistance of his overpowered brother. As he approached, one of the Kelleys shot him in the leg. Nothing daunted, he fired, killing the Kelley who held his brother; then wheeling quickly, he shot down another of the Kelleys, who died in about an hour. Then mounting a horse he rode furiously over fences and through the woods, and made his escape.

It was a quick, sudden, desperate rencounter, as tragic in its results as fierce in its character.—Atlanta Constitution.

Why We Cannot go to War—The Skeleton in the Closet.

A northen paper, the New York Telegram, gives the following reasons why we cannot go to war with England:

"The Elijah Progams are blowing hard just at present on the question of a possible war with England. It would be a most unfortunate thing for England, say these asses, to go to war with America. "We could lick her so bad," say they, "in three months that she wouldn't know she ever was a nation." While all this talk is going on nobody seems to bestow a single thought upon the attitude of the South—the Ireland, the Poland, the Hungary of America. The precious set of radical statesmen we have at Washington have done this for us—they have created and consolidated in ten States of this Union a feeling of hostillity to the stars and stripes, the type of our nationality, that will never die while radicalism rules. So deep-seated and bitter is this, that if England landed twenty thousand men to-morrow in the neighborhood of Charleston a hundred thousand Southern men would rise again in insurrection. It would have the same effect as if France, at war with England, landed a force upon the shores of Ireland. Are we quite sure we could lick England, with the South pressing us at one side & the Canadians at the other? Yet, patent as this truth is, here are those Senatorial wiseacres at Washington defeating a qualified measure of amnesty to the "Southern rebels." Statesmanship would have long since remedied the frightful state of affairs at the South. Had a man like Chief Justice Chase been elected in 1868, in place of the military stick who now occupies the White House, we should not be compelled to express the fears to which we have just given utterance. The Union would now be a true Union in place of the sham it is. Think of it for a moment. Here was a so-called rebellion, which, intrinsically, had as much right and justice in it as our own war of independence, and yet the canting spirit of Radicalism goes on forever proclaiming about the magnanimity shown to the Rebels, and hands over to something worse than the gallows these people of the South, to be governed by the very spawn of hell. Is it natural they should love a flag that symbolizes persecution? Is it natural they should fight for it? Enthroned in power in half a dozen Southern States are strangers from the North, who in no civilized country under heaven could escape the penitentiary or the hangman. Society there has been violently wrenched from its normal condition.

The tree has been plucked up from the roots, and the branches and blossoms have been buried in the ground. Ignorance, vice and infamy flourish over virtue and intelligence. Now we want this people to love the magnanimous government which has consigned to living death the best and purest of their kindred. The patience and fortitude they have shown under their humiliations make the grandest chapter of human self-control and stoicism that ancient or modern history can produce. We cannot go to war with England while this state of things exists. There is a skeleton in the closet that reminds us of our weakness. The whole South would rally to arms once more if England lent her her direct aid. Where is the difference? Might they not just as well try the terible issue of war as live and die under such an infamous rule as that to which they are at present subject. Draw in your horns Jonathan. When your household is at peace it will be time enough to think of a quarrel with England.

STARTLING DISCOVERY.—During the sitting of court in Connecticut, not long ago, on a very cold evening, a crowd of lawyers had collected around the fire that blazed cheerfully on the hearth in the bar-room, when a traveler entered, benumbed with cold, but no one moved to give him room to warm his shins, so he leand back against the wall in the back part of the room.

Presently a smart young limb of the law adressed him, when the following dialogue took place:

"You look like a traveler?"

"Wall, I suppose I am; I come all the way from Wisconsin a-foot at any rate!"

"From Wisconsin! What a distance to come on one pair legs."

"Wall, I done it, anyhow."

"Did you ever pass through hell in any or your travels?"

"Yes, sir; I've passed through the out-skirts."

"I thought likely. Well, what are the manners and customs there? Some of us would like to know."

"Oh you'll find them much the same as in this place—the lawyers sit nearest the fire."

Chicot County, Ark.

A Northern man, and a member of the dominant party, traveling through the South, in the course of his peregrinations, reached Chicot county, Ark., the theatre recently of tragic events. In a letter to Hon. Joseph Medill, Mayor of Chicago, the traveler describes the aspect of affairs in that historic region, as follows:

Homes are desolated, buildings are going to decay, stock all gone, white men afraid of their lives and getting away as fast as possible, every plantation for sale at a fraction of its former worth, a large portion of the little crop of cotton grown still in the fields wasting in the wind, negroes riding in the streets and roads with their guns, white men all gloomy and dejected, and not a smiling face seen.

E. L. WOODWARD'S SON.

It will never do not to mention the magnificent sweet potatoes brought into us in response to an urgent call for something to eat, by E. A. Hall, known better among the boys of the 10th Ala., as "Zeke." They were as large as a man's double fist, on an average, and as sweet as sugar cane. Zeke is one of the model farmers of the country lying east of the mountain.

It has been suggested by an intelligent gentleman living on Depot street, that if every gentleman in town would give one day's work either in person or by a hired substitute on the water-works trench, over one hundred dollars worth of work could be done in that one day, and that amount be saved to the treasury of the town to be otherwise applied. The suggestion is a good one and will, we trust, be responded to by our citizens in that liberal spirit that has ever characterized them. Gen. Forney will have the line for the ditch marked off all the way from the spring to the reservior by next Wednesday, and on that day it is proposed we all go out or send a hand to work. Let us all do so, taking the necessary spades, mattocks &c. with us, as on general road working days, and the result will be surprising. Let everybody wishing to see the quick completion of the work go or send a hand to the trenches on next Wednesday.

ECLECTIC MAGAZINE.—The March number of this sterling old monthly is on hand, and is embellished with an excellent portrait, on steel, of Herbert Spencer, the celebrated English philosopher. In this number is begun "The Strange Adventures of a Phaeton," which will run through the year. and which promises to be one of the most brilliant and powerful stories recently published. It is by William Black, whose previous novels have earned for him an enviable reputation in America as well as England. There is a singular fascination about these opening chapters which is not usually found at the portals of a story.

The leading article of the number is the essay on "Mahomet," giving the results of the latest researches into his history, and written in a more popular style than has usually been employed on this theme; next comes, "The Early Days of Charles Dickens;" and among other articles are "Strange News about the Solar Prominences;" "National Debts and National Prosperity;" "A Talking Animal," a very curious essay; "Quaint Customs in Kwei-Chow; George McDonald; Spain; Her Manners and Amusements; The Haunted Engineer; and Matrimonial Curiosities. The department of Literary Notices, Art and Varieties, are very full and interesting; and there is a fine poem by Dante Gabriel Rosetti.

Published by E. R. PELTON, 108 Fulton street, New York. Terms $5 00 a year; two copies, $9 00. Single numbers 45 cents.

☞By reference to the advertisement of Mr. W. C. LAND, it will be seen that he is prepared to make any part of a watch new.

He is a faithful and ingenious workman, and will do good work on good watches.

ALEXANDRIA LOCALS.

EAST ALABAMA AND CINCINNATI R. R.—It seems that we are to have a railroad sure enough. The gentlemanly surveyors Messrs Wells, Pope and Anderson have been stopping in the valley for some days; they have progressed thus far in looking out the best and cheapest route from Davis' gap to Oxford. On last Friday they surveyed the route leading out of the valley through a gap known as the Mt. Zion church gap, and on Monday the gap further up, known as the Alexandria gap. Should the company consider the Mt. Zion route best for them it will throw the nearest point of the road about one fourth of a mile from the centre of Alexandria, and should they choose the upper route, the road will run almost directly through the town. It is believed by all parties concerned that this road will be completed and perhaps in operation from Oxford to Gadsden within a year. We would be proud to see it so, for then one of the largest and richest valleys in the State, will be open to the world ready to offer her large rich cotton and corn growing fields, with railroad facilities for shipping off her produce. To any who may desire a good home among good people who are even ready to encourage and assist all earnest working good citizens. We say come.

Our farmers are taking advantage of all sunshining days, putting in oats and preparing for corn and cotton.

COTTON.—We have but little on hand now and being out of debt, we don't propose to sell.

MONEY.—Well where the actual cash is, we will not presume to say, gone we suppose. where the woodbine &c., or else our generous hearted people are holding on to it with a hope of another opportunity to assist a suffering multitude as was the case last fall when the holy Chicago was burned.

Green & Ledbetter have and will continue to have at the Jacksonville depot a large lot of BACON, CORN and SALT, all of which they are offering cheap for cash in quantities to suit purchasers.

[The following items were sent to this office some time ago, but were misplaced and only found this week.]

HOME ENTERPRISE.—No more Boston boots! No more patronage to Northern shoe houses! We have in our town a splendid shoe maker, Gus. McGinnis, colored. He has four hands at work, and will, during the year, use nearly three thousand dollars worth of leather.

Dr Harrison has recently moved into ovr valley from near Huntsville, Ala.

Monday was the day for Justice Court here. Notwithstanding the bad weather, there were many present and it was one of the stirring, busy days; also a heavy trade in "peach" and "apple" was carried on.

Money, where is it? Mr. Editor. You say you see but little. Other people are complaining; and we feel very lean indeed in our pockets. We see people occasionally, coming from a distance, and they seem to be looking for money, or at least they present the appearance of the need of money. Call in people of capital, or some to make capital. Offer inducements.

Lon, Green & Ledbetter got off such a good thing the other day, I am obligd to tell it. They said they were selling goods cheap for cash now.

A Paris letter of Jan. 12th, to the Boston Evening Journal says:

"Much surprise was manifested among the Americans on Friday last, when it became known that the celebrated Dr. Helmbold of Buchu fame had been conveyed to the Insane Asylum at Charenaon, and it is said at the instigation of his wife. Two French physicians pronounce him insane, while one of our celebrated American doctors is of an opposite opinion. During a short conversation with the doctor a few days ago, he expressed himself as being weary, and thought he should go to some retired place, and endeavor to recruit. Excepting a peculiar expression of the eye, he showed no symptoms of insanity. Various rumors are, of course, being circulated.

WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—The Ways and Means Committee agreed to report a bill repealing the stamp tax on canned fruits, jellies, &c.

SENATE—A bill was introduced continuing the mail service between the United States and Cuba.

The sale of arms was resumed and discussed till adjournment.

HOUSE—The civil rights bill introduced last Monday came up in order, but was fillibustered through the morning hour; it comes up again next Monday.

A large number of bills removing political disabilities were introduced, which at the suggestion of the Speaker, al was included in one bill and was passed without reading the names. The vote stood 1.5 to 13.

On motion of Gen. Young, of Georgia, the Senate bill, removing disabilities from three thousand six hundred and twenty-four was taken up and passed, without reading the bill or calling for yeas and nays.

It is estimated that a million of people will be added, temporarily, to the population of London in view of the thanksgiving for the Prince of Wales' recovery.

Large hostile crowds promenaded Antwerp last night. No serious collisions occurred.

A large field of ice sunk the steamer Lockwood and Silver Bow at the mouth of Red river. The wharf boats and steamer Minnie were injured. The ice was from a Missouri river gorge.

The rumor comes from Cincinnati that the steamer "U. S." of the Cincinnati and Louisville line had exploded.

The river rose four feet in 3 hours at St. Joseph, Missouri. The temporary bridge was swept away.

A desperado called Kentucky Jack killed two men at Fairburg Kansas. The people had tied Jack to a stake and were burning him alive when the authorities rescued him.

MEXICO.

A Matamoras special says Guerrago writes from Camargo, on the 23rd, that Trevino was marching on San Louis Potosi with one thousand men, Rocha with fifteen hundred men was at San Phillipi, two days march from San Louis Potosi. Four thousand government troops are at San Miguel, marching on San Louis Potosi. The fate of the city depends upon the celerity of the respective forces and the result of the battle, which will inevitably decide the fate of Mexico.

The Pacific Railroad is again blockaded beyond Salt Lake.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—The procession is moving. The line of march is seven miles, and decorated throughout: Fourteen thousand are admitted within the Cathedral upon tickets, while thousands upon thousands are outside, listening to the Cathedral music. The attendance is numbered by the millions.

Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP.—It relieves the little sufferer from pain, cures Wind, Colic, Regulates the Stomach and Bowels, Corrects Acidity, and during the process of teething it is invaluable. Perfectly safe in all cases, as millions of mothers can testify.

The Philosophy of Tonic Stimulants.

Some substances have the power of influencing the changes which go forward in the human tissues, without themselves taking any integral part in those changes. Salt, for instance, hastens transformation and waste, and consequently creates the necessity for a more liberal diet; while, on the other hand alcohol retards change and waste. On this principle, Dr. Fisch, in his Bitters has furnished a preparation having among other properties that of preserving both the materials and the forces of the system, and in this, as in other things, "A penny saved is a penny gained." But it is not only in this negative way that Dr. Fisch's remedy works for the building up of the physical man. While it holds back the wasting processes it spurs forward the preparing processes. It promotes the flow of the alimentative juices in the mouth, the stomach, and the liver; and thus enables the system to utilize more food—to make more blood. The scriptural assertion that "The blood thereof is the life thereof," is the expression of a physiological fact; and the amount of food which a man can eat with relish, and digest, affords the exact measure and index of the man's strength. And when once Dr. Fisch's remedy has given the start to an improvment in this direction, the unaided energies of nature take up the work and carry it forward; and thus render the amelioration permanent.

Womans' Rights.—One who has long studied this absorbing subject now presents to the women of our country the result of his investigations. He is happy to say that he has at last discovered "Woman's Best Friend." It is adapted, especially, to those cases where the womb is disordered, and will cure any irregularity of the "menses." Dr J. Bradfield's Female Regulator acts like a charm in "whites," or in a sudden check of the "monthly courses" from cold trouble of mind, or like causes, by restoring the discharge in every instance, So also in chronic cases its action is prompt and decisive, and saves the constitution from countless evils and premature decay. This valuable preparation is for sale at $1.50 per bottle by all respectable Druggist in the land. Prepared and sold by L. H. Bradfield, Druggist, Atlanta, Ga. A thousand women testify to its merits.

October 7 3m.

A Living Furnace.

The living body is a regulated furnace. The human organism is all more or less combustible, but not equally so. The blood, that is to say the food in its transformed state, may be compared to the fuel, and the more stable tissues formed from the blood, to the iron stove which contains the fuel. Just in proportion to the energy and celerity with which life is carried on, does this combustion proceed; and just in proportion as the combustion preceeds; is fresh fuel, that is to say fresh blood, required. But in order to obtain a supply of fresh blood, food must be present and not only food, but the power of converting the food into blood, that is, digestive energy. Where there is a failure in this digestive energy, or in the appetite which accompanies it, stimulants of various descriptions are frequently had recourse to; but their effect is transient, and if leaned upon too long and too exclusively, they tend to derange the digestive functions and to take away the natural desire for food, which is the only true life supporter. But let Dr. Fisch's Bitters be used perseveringly and in the prescribed quantities, in conjunction with the daily meals, and their tonic qualities will rapidly strengthen the digestive organs and create at the same time a sufficient and healthy appetite. And when an abundance of wholesome food, (which we are thus enabled to take,) is duly digested and assimilated, it will give a fullness of vitality which will take away any desire for the improper use of alchoholic stimulants.

TRUST SALE.

Under and by virtue of one Deed of Trust, made to me as Trustee, by B. H. Pratt, on the 18th day of April, 1870, for the benefit of Wm. F. JACKSONVILLE, ALA.
Nov. 22, 1871.

It is our pleasure to inform our customers and the trading people generally, that our stock of WINTER GOODS is fully adequate to the demand and have been selected from the best stock at the shortest CASH TERMS. Our Grocery department, is also full, comprising all articles necessary for family supplies.

With a view of giving and continuing to give satisfaction to our customers in point of quality, we have purchased the best brands of Goods and choice articles of Groceries. We offer both goods and groceries at small profits for cash only, or its equivalent in country produce &c., at market price.

We especially want Eggs, Butter, Chickens, Beeswax, Peas, Corn, Potatoes and Wheat. Hoping to receive your early and oft repeated calls. We are, yours truly,

DRAPER & JOHNSON.

P. S.—We mean by our "CASH SYSTEM" that the goods must be paid for at the time of purchase or when the goods are taken out, and not to-morrow, next week, next year, nor when the next generation will have grown up, but today.

AND

NEW GOODS just received.

I have associated with me in business Mr. John B. McCain, the name and style of the firm being,

CARROLL & McCAIN

since the 18th inst.—

I take this occasion to return many thanks to the citizens of Calhoun County and the public generally, for their liberal patronage in the past, and solicit a continuation of the same for the New firm, who intend keeping a stock not to be surpassed in this section of country, and will sell as cheap for cash as any other house.

I want to close up the business of J. M. Carroll & Co., and my individual books, and earnestly request all parties indebted to me or J. M. Carroll & Co., to come in at once, and pay all the cash they can and close their balance by note.

J. M. Carroll.

Wanted!

Beef Hides, Dry or Green, and also Tallow—for which we will pay the highest market price, in Dry Goods, Groceries, Bacon, Lard or any thing in our line.

To the People of Alabama.

No man can estimate the importance of the issues of 1872 to the people of the Southern States. Their political destiny for good or evil, depends on the result of the approaching Presidential election. If the Democratic party succeeds, they will have peace and quiet, if the Radical, degradation and ruin. In such a crisis it is of the very first importance that Democratic newspapers shall be well sustained and as widely circulated as circumstances will permit. With a view, therefore, to contributing their share to the noble and glorious cause, the proprietors of the MONTGOMERY ADVERTISER will furnish their Daily & Weekly paper to subscribers at the following liberal rates:

Radway's Ready Relief

CURES THE WORST PAINS
In from One to Twenty Minutes.
NOT ONE HOUR

after reading this advertisement need any one SUFFER WITH PAIN.

RADWAY'S READY RELIEF IS A CURE FOR EVERY PAIN.

It was the first and is

The Only Pain Remedy

that instantly stops the most excruciating pains, allays Inflammations, and cures Congestions, whether of the Lungs, Stomach or other glands or organs, by one application. IN FROM ONE TO TWENTY MINUTES, no matter how violent or excruciating the pain the RHEUMATIC, Bed-ridden, Infirm, Drippled, Nervous, Neuralgic, or prostrated with disease may suffer,

RADWAY'S READY RELIEF

Will afford instant Ease.

Inflamation of the Kidneys.
Inflamation of the Bladder.
Inflamation of the Bowels
Congestion of the Lungs.
Sore Throat, Difficult Breathing.
Palpitation of the Heart.
Hysterics, Croup, Diphtheria
Catarrh, Influenza.
Headache Toothache
Neuralgia, Rheumatism.
Cold Chills, Ague Chills

The application of the READY RELIEF to the part or parts where the difficulty exists will afford ease and comfort.

Twenty drops in half a tumbler of water will in a few moments cure Cramps, Spasms, Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Diarrhea, Dysentery, Colic, Wind in the Bowels, and all Internal Pains.

Travelers should always carry a bottle of RADWAY'S READY RELIEF with them. A few drops in water will prevent sickness or pains from change of water. It is better than French Brandy or Bitters as a stimulant.

FEVER AND AGUE.

Fever and Ague cured for fifty cents. There is not a remedial agent in this world that will cure Fever and Ague, and all other Malarious, Bilious, Scarlet, Typhoid, Yellow, and other Fevers (aided by RADWAY'S PILLS) so quick as RADWAY'S READY RELIEF. Fifty cents per bottle.

HEALTH! BEAUTY!!

Strong and pure rich Blood—Increase of Flesh and Weight—Clear Skin and beautiful Complexion secured to all,

DR. RADWAY'S
Sarsaparillian Resolvent

Has made the most astonishing cures; so quick, so rapid are the changes the body undergoes, under the influence of this truly wonderful Medicine, that

Every day an increase in Weight and Flesh is Felt.

THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER.

Every drop of the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT communicates through the Blood, Sweat, Urine, and other fluids and juices of the system the vigor of life, for it repairs the wastes of the body with new and sound material. Scrofula, Syphilis, Consumption, Glandular disease, Ulcers in the throat, Mouth, Tumors, Nodes in the Glands and other parts of the system, Sore Eyes, Strumorous discharges from the Ears, and the worst forms of Skin diseases, Eruptions, Fever Sores, Scald Head, Ring Worm, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Acne, Black Spots, Worms in the Flesh, Tumors, Cancers in the Womb, and all weakening and painful discharges, Night Sweats, Loss of Sperm and all wastes of the life principle, are within the curative range of this wonder of Modern Chemistry, and a few days' use will prove to any person using it for either of these forms of disease its potent power to cure them.

If the patient, daily becoming reduced by the wastes and decomposition that is continuly progressing, succeeds in arresting these wasts, and repairs the same with new material made from healthy blood—and this the SARSAPARILIAN will and does secure —a cure is certain; for when once this remedy commences its work of purification, and succeeds in diminishing the loss of w hti its repairs will be rapid, and every day the patient will feel himself growing better and stronger, the food digesting better, appetite improving, and weight increasing.

Not only does the Sarsaparilian Resolvent excels all known remedial agents in the curt of Chronic, Scrofulous, Constitutional, and Skin diseases; but it is the only positive curd for Kidney and Bladder Complaints, Urinary, and Womb diseases, Gravel, Diabetes, Dropsy, Stoppage of Water, Incontinence of Urine, Bright's Diseas, Albuminuria, and in all cases where there are brick-dust deposits, or the water is thick, cloudy, mixed with substances like the white of an egg, or threrds like white silk, there is a morbid, dark, billious appearance, and white bone-dnst deposits, and when there is a pricking, burning sensation when passing water, and pain in the Small of hte Back and along the Loins.

PERFECT PURGATIVE PILLS,

perfectly tasteless, elegantly coated with sweet gum, purge, regulate, purify, cleanse, and strengthen. Radway's Pills, for the cure of all disorders of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, Bladder, Nervous Diseases, Headache, Constipation, Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Billiousness, Billious Fever, Inflamation of the Bowels, Piles, and all Derangements of the Internal Viscera. Warranted to effect a positive cure. Purely Vegetable, containing no mercury, minerals, or deleterious drugs.

A few doses of RADWLY'S PILLS will free tthe system from all the above named disorders. Price, 25 cents per Box. Sold by Druggists.

Read "False and True." Send one letter-stamp to RADWAY & CO., No. 87 Maiden Lane, New York. Information worth thousands will be sent you.

MESSRS. J. & S. BONES, Dear Sir:

I have given the 16 inch Mill (Clemans) bought of you, a thorough test, and can but express myself perfectly satisfied. The power was the running gear fo my gin, which although in very bad order, was sufficient to grind one bushel (by the watch) in eleven minutes, I find no trouble to do my grinding before breakfast. Several of my neighbors were present at the time, and all were satisfied with the result, and were astonished at the quantity and fine quality of the meal produced in so short a time, I prefer the meal to any steam mill meal. The 16 inch mill I bought of you for the Foster Farm, and used since the above was written proves equally satisfactory. It is a complete mill.

Yours Truly,
H. H. MILLER.

An Irish Exile to his Wife.

Come to me! I am lonely without thee,
Day time and night time I'm dreaming about thee,
Night time and day time in dreams I behold thee,
Unwelcome the waking that ceases to fold thee;
Come to me darling, my sorrows to lighten,
Come in thy beauty, to bless and to brighten,
Come in thy womanhood, meekly & lowly,
Come in thy loveliness, queenly and holy!

Swallows shall flit round the desolate ruin,
Telling of spring and its joyous renewing;
And thoughts of my love and its manifold treasure
Are circling my heart with the promise of pleasure.
Oh! Spring of my spirit! Oh! May of my bosom,
Shine out on my soul till it burgeon and blossom!
The waste of my life has a rose-root within it
And the fondness alone is the sunlight within it.

Figure which moves like a song through the even,
Features lit up with a reflex of heaven,
Eyes like the skies of poor Erin, our mother,
Where sunshine and shadows are chasing each other,
Smiles coming seldom, but childlike and simple,
And opening their eyes from the heart of a dimple.
Oh! thanks to the Savior, that even the seeming
Is left to the exile to brighten his dreaming.

You have been glad when you knew I was gladdened—
Dear, are you sad to hear I am saddened?
Our hearts ever answer in tune and in time, love,
As octave to octave, and rhyme unto rhyme, love,
I cannot smile, but your cheeks will be glowing,
You cannot weep, but my tears will be flowing.
You will not linger when I shall have died, love,
And I could not live without you at my side, love.

Come to me, darling, ere I die of sorrow,
Rise on my gloom like the sun of to-morrow;
Come swift and strong as the words which I speak, love,
With a song on your lips, and a smile on your cheek, love.
Come, for heart in your absence is weary;
Come to the arms which alone shall caress thee!
Come to the heart which is throbbing to to press thee.

From the Rural Carolinian.

MAY.

I.

We sat down on this passage way,
Just twenty years ago to-night,
My husband and our daughter May,
Who gambol'd with a step so light
About her father's chair, she seemed
As flitting as a little bird;
One moment on the sight she gleamed;
The next, she was not seen but heard.

II.

The silver laughter ringing clear
About the echo-haunted wold,
Comes back to-night upon my ear,
With kindred memories manifold.
The field where many an autumn day,
We rambled by the upper hedge;
Around the margin of the bay,
And even to the forest's edge.

III.

And at the blessed fountain there,
Beyond the lower range of hills,
We've pic-nic'd in the summer air,
Melodious with the flow of rills;
Until the languors of the noon,
Enwound us in a subtle spell;
And brought the rosy troops of June,
To guard us by the charmed well.

IV.

Those years swift rolling like a stream
Suddenly swollen with heavy showers,
Have faded, leaving but a gleam
Connected with the present hours.
And May, no more a little maid,
Though still her curls are rich with gold,
Wears first to-night an orange braid,
The votive symbol from of old.

V.

But she will go away, and then,—
I pity all that loved her so;
Even to the thrushes in the glen,
And flowers her young hands set to grow.
And me, alas! who loved her well,
Through all those silver years of bliss,—
Give me, O, God! the power to dwell
Back there in life's parenthesis.

P. J. MALONE.

Disappearance of a School-Girl.

On the 12th inst. a young lady about fifteen years of age, daughter of one of the most respectable citizens of Schenectady, left for school as usual with her books in her arms, and has not since been heard from. She was last seen making her way across the river to Glenville, and it is feared she has perished in some way. She was noticed a day or two before she disappeared to act somewhat strangely, and great anxiety is felt by her people fearing that her mind may have been in a disordered state, and that she may have wandered into some by-place and perished by exposure and cold. A similar case occurred not long since, when a school girl of the same city disappeared. She was at length traced to Cohoes, and was returned to her home. Her mind was affected, and she has not yet recovered.

The people of Will's Valley will tamper with starvation by planting large crops of cotton this year.

AMATA.

BY A YOUNG LADY OF JACKSONVILLE.

CHAPTER V.—CONTINUED.

She had heard that Volkmar had returned her husband's visit while she was confined to her room and had met him several times elsewhere.

"I never felt myself more drawn to a man before," Eberhard declared to his wife, "at first I was naturally attracted by his wonderful playing for I never heard anything that so charmed me; but afterwards it was the man himself who attracted me to a high degree. I have seldom met with so noble and at the same time so simple and unassuming a nature. All little trivial things seem to have no power over him and it seems as if his richly endowed mind seeks after the highest and noblest things as alone worthy of it. Yet Lendiger insists I have met his friend at an unfavorable time; he says his friend is inconceivably changed, and he grieves over a roughness, an irritability in his friend's nature which he never knew before. At their first meeting Lendiger had not observed this, he arrived in the morning, and it was after the evening of the concert that he first observed this change in his friend. Of course I am not able to judge of this, not having known him before; but I only know that he is highly congenial to me and I am willing to overlook these little caprices, so natural with such a man, who is daily led by the executor of his art on the flood of sublime passion—"

Amata had listened in silence to all this and a strange mixture of joy and pain, of pride and unspeakable woe, pervaded her heart. That just these two men should be brought together and be attracted by each other—how strange and yet how natural!

And they were in all individual traits of character kindred spirits and seemed created to be friends, and yet they should never be so—never!—she saw herself stand between and she bore the blame that they could never stretch forth to each other a brotherly hand; but rather midst wish they never had crossed each other's paths, and with this feeling she gave herself up to the preparations for receiving her husband's guests worthily.

It even appears to her that there was at her side—the pale grave little Professorin, who, as Albert said, must be an equally amiable hostess towards all—the form of a sorry joyous maiden who had once been so happy—almost too happy—but could never be so again because she was no longer the same being. Only once did she rouse herself from these apathetic dreams which had taken possession of her. It was shortly before the hour the guests were expected when her husband called her into the dining room.

"Look here, Ama," said he, "you have certainly made some mistake in the distributions of places, the place of honor at your side belongs to Herr Volkmar but you have placed him between Frau Born and Frau Wienemann and have put Lendiger on your right, this will not do!"

"Please, Eberhard," answered Amata "let it remain so for this time. I know," she added with hesitation, "that Frau Wienemann desires to converse Herr Volkmar on music and Frau Born would be pleased to secure better acquainted with him, besides I do all the ladies a favor by placing Dr. Lendiger at my side, they are somewhat afraid of him as a neighbor, you know, he does so much harm to their dresses through his extreme awkwardness———"

"Well then," answered Eberhard laughing, "if you desire it so much we will overlook for once this little breach of etiquette. Lendiger will of course be rejoiced, and I hope he will to-day for an exception, as a reward for your voluntary sacrifice—put his sauce in his plate instead of spilling it in your lap!"

And again it seemed to Amata that it was not herself who with polite words and forced smiles received her guests and they seemed imaginary forms who laughing, chatting and jesting surrounded her, and also a visionary form that which now bowed low before her and then entered into a spirited conversation with her husband.

Amata had so arranged it that Walter sat on the same side with her so their glances could not meet, but she was obliged to listen to his well-known, alas too well known! voice.

Yes, Frau Gregorius was too timid a hostess and was only remarkable on account of her eighteen years—a very distraite neighbor was she also—but the deaf old Curator Trabe on her left was quite absorbed by the lady who sat on his other side and it was enough for the too-happy botanist to be permitted to sit by her side. He was very proud of this distinction and with the single exception of breaking his champagne glass—his behavior might have been termed exemplary.

Professor Gregorius had seen the necessity of inviting Frau Wedel, it was understood as a matter of course, that she was invited everywhere with Frau Wienemann as whose shadow she might now be considered, and as often as Amata looked up she saw the sympathetic glances of the widow resting on her. Did that lady know how much she was suffering? Amata almost believed she did from her expression and she knew not whether to rejoice or be sorry thereat.

At times she strove with her whole nature against permitting any one to know her secret, then again she felt so weak and needy of help that she thought she must find some one to support and advise her.

And another pair of eyes, those of her brother, often threw hasty glances on her.

These glances frightened her, they reminded her of his hard threatening words and anguish filled her heart—when she thought of the consequences that might follow a single expression on her part—she would certainly sustain her feelings, cost what it may!

Coffee was taken in Amata's sitting room—Frau Wienemann as usual led the conversation and tried to collect all the gentlemen around her in a learned discourse.

Counselor Born belonged to the few who would not bend before her sceptre. He saw Amata standing out of the circle so quiet and abstracted and approached her.

"We two do not belong to that circle, is it not so, my dear Frau Professorin?" he said.

"You wear no blue stockings, I am sure—and I have "play day" as my children say and do not wish to be instructed. I wish so much you would give us some music."

"Oh, no pray not to day!" begged Amata with an imploring glance. "It is impossible for me to-day.

The good natured Counselor smiled at her unfeigned fright. "Welll then, just as you please, my dear young Frau Professorin. It does not please me to press you against your will. Perhaps another time you will grant my request when we are more private."

"Yes, another time!" repeated Amata.

But the rest of the company were not so kind and the demand for music was on all sides.

Frau Wienemann besought Herr Volkmar to have his violin sent for, and the artist with unusual amiability gave his consent under the condition that the lady of the house would accompany him on the piano in a sonata of Beethoven.

"That will be delightful! Do you think you can undertake it at first sight, dear child?" asking the learned Frau Wienemann turning to Amata, towards whom she was accustomed to take an extremely patronizing tone.

"To place herself by the side of such an enchanter as Herr Volkmar is too much to ask of our timid little hostess!" said Frau Wedel.

"If I am an enchanter, said Volkmar repeating her words. I will undertake to tell you what pieces exactly Frau Gregorius can perform best if she pleases!"

Amata whose eyes until now had rested on the ground, looked up at Walter's last remark and saw the wondering smiles on the ladies' countenance and her brother's looks fixed on her.

Then it seemed that another's voice not her own, spoke—"I will play!"

She turned to the piano which Lendiger joyfully opened.

Whether hours or minutes passed she did not know—she heard words of satisfaction around her.

"I feel very much hurt, Frau Professorin," said Counselor Born. "I will get myself an enchanter's rod if that is the only way to move your hard heart!"

"How brave you are, my love!" whispered Frau Wedel in her ear.

Her husband nodded to her encouragingly.

Then Walter Volkmar stepped up to her side.

He opened her music portfolio at Bethoven's "Spring," then he grasped his bow.

Scarcely a word passed between them, and Amata thought her strength, so painfully acquired, would desert her at the first tone.

Yet scarcely had she touched the keys, scarcely had she heard the sweet notes of the violin, when the present time seemed to be taken from her. She saw no more the forms which surrounded—she sat alone at the piano, in her father's house—yet not alone for near her stood one, whom she had unconsciously learned to love, whose soul was borne over to hers on the pinions of sweetest melody. Soft zephers kissed her forehead and surrounded her in a golden spring dream, from which there must be no awakening, no awakening!———

"Dear Ama, you have excelled yourself to-day! So have I never heard you play before!"

Those were the first words which called her back to reality, as her husband bent lovingly over her.

She collected herself.

The guests surrounded her congratulating, only Frau Wienemann stood aloof—she watched Eberhard sharply.

"Professor Gregorius appears to wish to give us a little tender scene!" she said to her neighbor.

"He is certainly very proud of his wife and justly so," remarked her husband who had heard his wife's words; that sinister smile played around his mouth.

Lendiger, in the meantime has rushed up to his friend, who, violin still in hand looked before him, apparently in a deep reverie totally unconscious of the expressions of admiration which were lavished on him—

"Well, did I not tell you you must play with the Frau Professorin?" cried the delighted botanist shaking his friend's shoulder.

"Yes, you are right," he said slowly, "I must have done it.".

Yet Frau Wienemann's eloquence and the repeated requests of the rest of the company could not prevail on him to play another tone.

It was impossible for him, he answered in that short decisive manner, which at times came over him, and Professor Gregorius would not suffer him to be further pressed.

The first beginning of music in private houses now being given, it was from that time forth understood as a matter of course that one should invite the Concert-master and Frau Gregorius to every entertainment in order to enjoy so rare and exquisite a pleasure as that of hearing Volkmar play with Amata.

Amata had resolved never to play with Walter again, but when pressed on all sides, when her husband himself begged her to do so, she could not refuse, unless she withdrew herself from all entertainments, which became more frequent than ever to honor the presence of the artist; but she did not dare do that, not being allowed to tell her husband her sole reason for so doing.

It was a frightful twofold life the young wife led. Outwardly the happy one, ever surrounded by her husband with the tenderest love and care—inwardly her soul torn and overflowed with unspeakable woe.

She knew that she could not stand much longer this dissimulation, her nature must succumb at last, and she longed for this succumbing as the only escape from her woe.

Yet mercilessly the days lagged, life seemed so endlessly long.

Often, how often! did she think that she must go to her husband and tell him all, and let him despise her and heap her with reproaches, that would be more easily borne than the misery of her present existence!

Yet, her brother's warning ever held her back from this confession. She would have borne anything herself, but to ruin Walter!———oh rather give up her heart's blood!

Then once or twice she resolved to turn to Walter and beg and beseech him, for the sake of their past love, to go away and never, never return!—but an indescribable feeling held her back from that. Perhaps it was in part womanly pride which provented her from making a confession of her weakness and now criminal affection, and then she never saw him alone and when they met they scarcely exchanged a couple of indifferent words. Walter had never visited her when her husband was not at home and he always seemed to avoid sitting near her. She thanked him in her heart for his delicate reserve. But why did he remain? She asked herself that again and again, and in her restlessness and doubt she turned to her music as the drunkard to his flask—momentary oblivion, though at the price of double misery, was all she asked and that she received, in an unaccountable manner even to herself, from music. Once at the piano and near her the old familiar enchanting sound and she was again the little Amata of days gone by, the light hearted child, and Walter, her brother's friend played to her, in the old child-dream, when she arose and he left her side with a grave bow, then she passed her hand over her eyes and asked herself whether death was not preferable to such an awakening?

Eberhard was struck by the peculiar condition in which he generally found his wife—and he ascribed it partly to the frequent music and to the parties and entertainments to which she had not been accustomed in her early life.

But he almost rejoiced at the change, was perhaps the transition from that reversed apathetic condition which through the winter had taken possession of her in spite of all his attempts to prevent it.

Who could tell, perhaps the god-like power of that sublime art which had so much influence over her would cause the closed buds to unfold their leaves and it would be spring in her and his heart!

That he never for a moment suspected Walter's own influence instead of that of his art, on Amata was because they both seemed to take no interest in the other.

He considered, such great reserve on the artist's part with so lonely and beautiful a lady whom he met daily, almost inconceivable. With Amata it was comprehensible to him, knowing her timid reserved nature.

And Walter? Why did he delay from day to day to fix the hour of his departure?

What held him back when he ought long to have fled?

At first a feeling of deepest imbitterment against her, who, as he thought had broken faith with him.

He had never spoken to her of love in those never-to-be-forgotten days when he visited her parent's house, as Berthold's friend, when she became to him what she would continue to be throughout all life and eternity, the beloved one of his heart; but he knew that their hearts understood each other.

And it was because his honor was so dear to him, that he never attempted to fasten her to his lot by a promise, for he possessed neither riches nor position, therefore he had silently gone away from her with unalterable truth in his heart and the oath on his lips to return worthy of her, or never again appear before her eyes.

And when fortune and favor and rich well-merited honors followed his footsteps—he rejoiced for all only for her sake, at whose feet he wished to lay all the honors and riches of this world.

How often had he pictured to himself his return, the surprise, the joy, the pride on the beloved countenance, which had accompanied him everywhere—in his lonely wanderings—in laborious, nights, amid the strange gaping crowds, whose applause was only pleasing to him because it brought him one step nearer her.

A short time before his return he had written to Berthold von Kathen telling him of his approaching return and begging him to keep it a secret from his sister—he would himself be the announcer of his own coming to her.

That letter reached him for whom it was intended long after Walter had seen the stately bough of his hopes fall to the ground.

Amata had forgotten him, Amata had become the wife of another, that was the dreadful blow which in the first moment almost drove him to frenzy, and his faith in humanity especially in women was shaken to its depths.

In the full consciousness of the strength of his own love and faith he had forgotten had he had to deal with a weak, timid maiden, who though she guessed his unspoken feelings, yet, in her humbleness and modesty, had never understood his departure.

He considered her false, when she had only forgotten herself and in the despair of her heart had given her hand to the unloved husband.

Had Walter known of the qualms he had caused her by his lingering—by his strange behavior—he would have rather fled to the remotest corner of the earth—he only believed he awakened by his presence shame and remorse for past injuries and faithlessness and considering himself the suffering party; and the resolve to depart and to give up forever the great pain of being near her became more hard.

And the bond of the old love also held him back.

Only when standing near her at the piano could he forget his deep woe—why not enjoy the few days? Before him life lay so deserted, so joyless!

THE LOCAL PAPER.—A local newspaper is a traveling agent, taking its weekly rounds to the families of all its customers. No matter whether times are good or dull, no matter whether trade is brisk or otherwise, no business man can afford to take down his sign, nor withdraw the pleaseing influence of a weekly chat through the newspapers. For a business man to stop advertising would be equivalent to saying, "I have stopped business and ask no favors of the people."

JACKSONVILLE REPUBLICAN

JACKSONVILLE, ALABAMA.

SATURDAY, MARCH 9th, 1872.

"Jane," said Mr. Pott to the servant who brought in the candles, "go down into the office and bring me up the file of the Gazette for eighteen hundred and twenty-eight. I'll just read you—" added the editor, turning to Mr. Pickwick. "I'll just read you a few of the leaders I wrote at that time, upon the Buff job of appointing a new tollman to the turnpike here; I rather think they'll amuse you."

"I should like to hear them very much indeed," said Mr. Pickwick.

Pickwick Papers.

We shall, as soon as we can obtain our files (which are now in the hands of a binder), show to our esteemed contemporary that we never "justified the Legislature for failing to make an investigation."

Selma Times.

We shall look for the reproduction of those leaders with great anxiety indeed.

Things look now as if Judge Davis, the nominee of the recent labor reform party, would be the next President of the United States. It is not unlikely that the liberal republicans and democrats will take him up to beat Grant with him.

That set of carpet-baggers and home made scoundrels, with a few exceptions, called the Senate of Alabama will afflict us no more, thank Providence. The next Legislature will be able to do something for the people.

Capt. James Crook.

Capt James Crook, our Representive has returned from his legislative labors to the more quiet, desirable and remunerative pursuit of his profession. And while he labored zealously for the best interests of his constituents, endeavoring at all times to honor and not abuse the trust reposed in him, we think we can safely assert, that the office of Representative to which he was elected by such a large majority, was unsolicited by, and has been an unprofitable one to him, detracting both from his individual and professional interests. He has supported earnestly and energetically every measure which he believed would operate to the weal and promote the prosperity of the people of Alabama, and has met with uncompromising opposition, any and every bill which bore the impress of oppression, or tended to increase the political or pecuniary embarrassments of the country. He has ever been anxious to see the resources of the country developed, but at the expense of those who are to be the immediate beneficiaries, giving his hearty and cordial support to every measure looking to this end, save those seeking to make present State appropriations in view of future contingent benefits, perhaps never to be realized. Making this his rule of action he has regarded with just suspicion, and honestly and conscientiously combatted, those measures proceeding from and dictated by railroad rings and moneyed combinations, who would grow fat to the empoverishment of the people and wealthy by their increased taxation. The local legislation of last year which reflected a discredit upon the General Assembly & only excused by the irreconcilable antagonism between the House and Senate, he has been active and efficient, in the last session, in checking and defeating—planting himself upon the sound and healthful principle of special privileges to none; equal rights to all. Appreciating the wrong and hardships done to our honest and faithful teachers of public schools by the misrepresentations and defaults of corrupt radical officials, he has endeavored to legislate their relief, by making appropriations to pay off the amounts due them under contracts based upon the good faith of the State. A Bill adequate to this relief passed the House, but was defeated by a Senate, which would decline to pay our own people but vote away millions of their money as subsidy to railroads. The election law which will contribute immeasurably to a fair, proper and legal exercise of the elective franchise, is similar in its provisions to, and the same in effect with the substitute introduced by Mr. Crook in the House before Christmas. We might give more in detail of the acts of our Representative, but unable to collect all that has been done by the Legislature without reference to our files, we content ourself with this brief synopsis of his action on the most important general measures. In conclusion we will say that he has always strenuously opposed an extension of the session of the Legislature, and whether the long session has redounded to the weal or injury of the commonwealth, he has been no party to it.

Ebenezer Cole, of Lachine, Canada, is no longer a live Cole. He betted $10 that he could drink two tumblers full of alcohol, but, dear me! the money didn't more than pay for the coffin.

It is impossible to choke off poets. We say disagreeable things about them every week, and yet they continue to send in their effusions with the same calm confidence as of old that we have a silver mine somewhere which is kept in perpetual operation for the solitary purpose of purchasing rhymes at stupendous prices. This week we have one from a being who has chosen for his theme "The Watching Mother." The vigilant parent, if we understand the thing, is sitting by her infant child in the middle of the night ready to respond when it inquires for paregoric. The poet says: "Beside the couch she sat, whereon her infant slept; and as she looked upon his face, she bowed her head and wept. He was her only one, into her heart he had stept; and as her mother's love welled up she bowed her head and wept. He was but one year old, and hardly yet he crept. Perhaps he'd die! Ah! dreadful thought! She bowed her head and wept. Thus far an angel form her boy from harm had kept; with thankful, grateful heart, she bowed her head and wept." Perhaps this will be enough for once. There are sixty-two verses, and in every one of them that singular parent bowed her head and wept. It made no difference to her whether her offspring crept or walked, or accepted its food regularly, or screamed, or took notice, or had guardian angels, or measles, or anything, that infatuated mother bowed her head and wept all the same. It is extremely affecting, but unquestionably monotonous. We shall give the rest of the poem at intervals, one verse at a time, during the year. Perhaps it may run over into next year. Persons who tire of it can have the address of the poet by applying at this office. If he must be shot, let the murderous deed be committed by some other frenzied sufferer than us.

BABIES.

We love babies, and love every body who does love babies. No man has music in his soul who don't love babies. Babies were made to love—especially girl babies when they grow up. A man isn't worth a shuck who hasn't a baby, and the same rule applies to woman. A baby is spring day in winter—a ray of sunshine in frigid winter—and if it is healthy and good natured and if it's yours, it is a bushel of sunshine, no matter how cold the weather. A man cannot be a hopeless case as long as he loves babies one at a time. We love babies all over, no matter how dirty they are. Babies were born to be dirty. We love babies because they are babies, and because their mothers were loveable and lovely women. Our love for babies is bounded by the number of babies in the world. We always look for babies—we do—with anxiety and paternal affection. We do!—indeed we do! We always have sorrowful feelings for women that have no babies, and don't expect any. Women always look down-hearted who have no babies; and men who have no babies always gamble, and drink whisky, and stay out at nights trying to get music in their souls; but they can't come it. Babies are babies, and nothing can take their places.

Pianos play out, and good living plays out, and sweet tempers play out, and beauty plays out, unless there's a baby in the house. We've tried it! We know, and we say there's nothing like a baby!

From the Montgomery Advance.

The Senate on the School Bill.

The proceedings of the Senate on the School Bill will elicit considerable discussion in the next campaign and we propose giving as near as possible the proceedings of that body during the time it was under consideration.

Glass moved that the rules be suspended in order that he might call up the bill known as the $600,000 school bill.

Foster moved to lay the motion of Glass on the table.

Whitney seconded the motion of Foster.

Coon favored suspension of the rules in order that Senators might put them selves on the record.

Sanford opposed suspension and renewed the motion to table which had been withdrawn.

Barr joined in the opposition to suspension and seconded the motion of Sanford to table.

Pennington requested the withdrawal of the motion to table which was agreed to. He appealed to Senators to pay the School teachers of this State who had worked hard for the pitiable sum they receive. (Here the President of the Senate interrupted Mr. Pennington and notified the Senate that he would not sign $1,000,000 bill, as it had not received the constitutional two-thirds majority.) Mr. P. proceeded with his remarks and called the attention of Senators to the fact that the School Bill was the only relief bill that could pass both Houses during this session of the Legislature, now on the eve of adjourning. He referred to the fact that the two Democratic members in the Senate were opposed to the passage of the law and called on Republican Senators to refute the cry against republicans opposing the educational system—the creature of their own generation.

Farden offered to amend by striking out $600,000 and inserting $1,000,000.

(There were only 12 Senators on the floor when this proposition was made to amend. Lobbyists and others had cornered them in different parts of the Lobby and rotunda.)

Barr, when Farden offered his amendment indulged in one of his tragic efforts for a few minutes and wound up with a motion to table the whole matter.

Whitney persuaded him to withdraw, and offered another amendment, provided that $1900 be appropriated to pay the Senate committee (of which he was a member) and the witnesses summoned before it. He would go against it, if this provision was not put in the bill.

The President ruled the amendment out of order.

Farden offered other amendments all of which failed.

Oliver said he wanted leave for the rest of the Session. Leave was cheerfully granted; but for some cause he concluded to stay. Barr again took the floor and having duly prepared himself for the occasion by "going to see a man" very frequently, threw himself into an attitude and gave us extracts from speeches to be found in the American School Reader, delivered by Rienzi and others.

Farden who will not allow himself out done on this line, replied to Barr, and closed by saying, "In the language of McBeth, "Shake not thy gory locks at me, thou canst not say I did it."

Oliver wanted to know if the Schools could not be left out anyhow.

Barr, who was almost too full for utterance again renewed his motion to lay the whole matter on the table, which motion prevailed; ayes 12, nays 7.

NOTHING illustrates the wonderful transfer of political power from the East to the West in the United States as well as the following figures showing the representation in Congress of two great Western in connection with the greatest Eastern State, in 1840, contrasted with 1872: Illinois and Missouri had, in 1840, together, five Congressmen; New York had forty Congressmen. In 1872 Illinois and Missouri have thirty-two Congressmen; New York has thirty-two Congressmen. Thus thirty years ago N. York had eight times the number of Congressmen of these two Western States. Now she has precisely the same number! "Westward," says Bishop BERKLEY, "the star of empire takes its way."

WHY HE LEFT THE PARTY.—George B. Weber, Esq., editor of the Political Crisis, published at Springfield, Illinois, in the issue of his paper of Oct. 4th has the following:

HAVE YOU TURNED TO BE A DEMOCRAT.—Every few days we are asked, by old friends, the above question. When we left the Republican party we walked out of the front door—having resigned the honorable position of chairman of the county committee, publicly giving our reasons for so doing. We might have remained and joined in the quarrel about the doctrines inside the party organization; but we believed it to be more honorable to withdraw when the party was "in its glory," than when rent and torn by internal feuds; had we remained until now, we might be kicked out of the back-door with a "black eye," as we fear many of our friends will be, for daring to denounce corruption in the party.

Is it because we are opposed to a protective tariff, all kinds of class legislation and political corruption, we are a Democrat? Then we have always been democratic on these subjects, and expect always to be. We were opposed to slavery simply because slavery as an institution, was anti-Democratic—crushing out the true principles of Democracy by degrading labor and the laborer, and building up an aristocracy in the country. It was this Democratic element in the Republican party that gave its organization a living soul. The spirit that enslaved the black laborer to cheapen labor is immortal, and now animates the large body of the Republican party, by partial legislation, favoring capital at the expense of labor and the laboring millions. The fruits of the laboring masses are now to be appropriated indirectly, like the protective tariff tax, to the lords of the land, and not directly, as under the old system of slavery. That's the only difference.

"NIGGER LAST."—One of the Choctas, who have sojurned near Hayneville for a fortnight past, was in conversation with a group of negroes on the street a day or two since.—Our informant passed in time to catch a sentence of Pushmataha's views.

Said he:—"White man first, Indian next, Indian's dog next, d—n nigger last!" The negroes got mad, but the 'stoic of the woods' quietly blinked his eyes, and let them talk.

The negroes said they would't have minded it had he left out the dog.

WANTED TO HIRE—About fifteen able-bodied men to work on the water-works. Apply to
S. M. PRUITT,
Marshal.

FLOUR, MEAL, CORN & KROUT
at
E. L. WOODWARD'S SON'S.

If you desire a handsome lot of Crockery, go to the DOLLAR STORE.

What is the matter with our Oxford Correspondent? Taken up too much with Rail Road matters to drop us a line?

The boys can, now take their sweethearts out to look at the Water-Works. Dick Weaver will furnish buggies and horses.

John Hughes, of the excellent firm of Hughes & Christian, of Oxford, paid us a visit this week. He reports Oxford flourishing.

We were pleased to receive a call from Dr. T. L. Rodertson, late of Springville, but now of Oxford. He has been a long and good paying subscriber to the REPUBLICAN. We wish we had a thousand like him.

We were pleased to receive a call yesterday from Mr. A. L. Ormsby, Attorney at Law, now traveling in the interest of the law department of the great Southern Publishing house of John P. Morton & Co., of Louisville, Ky.

Will Col. Parr permit us to return thanks for that dozen of fine segars. They are the best we have found in the market. We recommend them to our friends who love a good segar.

Will each one of our subscribers send us at least one cash subscriber this week. Think of some neighber who don't take it; but ought to. We want to largely increase our list before the Fall campaign opens.

Our readers will find reading matter on the fourth page as well as the other three pages of the REPUBLICAN this week. We mention it because for some time that page has been occupied by advertisements and from this cause might not be examined.

If you would like to get the worth of your dollar, go to the DOLLAR STORE.

Gadsden is about to fall in with our suggestion to drop railroads and go in for home industries. They now talk of building an iron foundry. The people of that town know a sensible suggestion when they read it Hence they discard the advice of the Times and fall in with that of the REPUBLICAN.

The Council return thanks to Mr. Pepper, President of the Rainbow Fire Company, of Rome, Ga., Mr. Billy Towers and other members of the company, for courteous attention paid Mayor Turnley who inspected the Rome works some days ago.

Judge Walker has returned from Philadelphia and New York, where he made all necessary purchases, for the Water-Works on good terms. The freight will be shipped the first of next week.

The Post Master General wants parties who direct letters, papers, &c., to put the name of the county as well as that of the State and Post office on the address.

Good Hats, Underwear and Cutlery of all kinds at the DOLLAR STORE.

Mr. Wm. Scott, a citizen of this county, living near Teague's Cross Roads, was kicked or pawed by his horse some days ago and killed instantly.

A crowd of Gypsies passed through here Monday. They had ambulances, good teams, and were fixed up pretty comfortably. As they are a tribe of people who go where they list, we know not whence they came nor wh ither they went.

Our people responded most generously to the call made last week on them to give one day's work to the Water-works trench. Some went out Wednesday in person and others who could not go themselves sent hands as substitutes—nearly every man in town responded in one way or the other.

Gen. Forney is going to run two fine freestone springs together and bring water from them. Together they will furnish an ample supply of water. He is having the work done most thoroughly and handsomely. A better superintendent of the work could not have been found had the Council hunted the State over.

WANTED—A man with a sharp stick to punch up some of our local correspondents, who have not favored us with a line for over a month. Come gentlemen this won't do. Many papers throughout the State have done you and the REPUBLICAN the compliment to follow the example we have set in this matter of local correspondence. They must think it a good feature or they would not adopt it. We are anxious to continue it, and to make it as full as possible we invite correspondence from all parts of the county.

We greatly regret to have to announce the death of J. G. J. Whitesides, Esq., one of the early settlers of this county. For a long time he had been sick, and he suffered greatly with a very large carbuncle on the back of his head until he was released from pain by death. Fearing instant death if he should lie down, he stood on his feet, supported by attendants, for a considerable time, and death found him in that position. He had many friends in the county who will sincerely mourn his loss.

The Selma Times of a late date contained eight columns and a half of tax sales. Other papers in the State contain as lengthy ones, while a majority contain from two to four columns. We point with pride to the very small number of tax sales that will be made in this county—only eleven. Besides this our present Democratic efficient Tax Collector has assessed and collected already over two thousand dollars in State and County taxes, that had not been assessed by the predecessor of the present worthy incumbent. If any county in the State can show any less than eleven tax defaulters we would like for it to trot them out. Last year Calhoun was the first county that paid in full and promptly the last farthing of State taxes assessed against it.

Our Municipal Election.

The municipal election last Saturday resulted in the almost unanimous elec- of Geo. I Turnley. for Intendant; Wm. H. Dean, J. D. Privett, Ed. L. Woodward, R. P. Weaver and L. W. Grant, for Councilors. A larger vote was polled than before in years. This we take as an evidence that the people of Jacksonville are now a unit on the water-works question, and that they endorse fully the action of the "young council" in relation thereto.

At night, after the result became known, a number of our young progressives gave vent to their feelings in the shape of a parade with transparencies &c. The ground being muddy, wagons and buggies were brought into requisition, and mounted upon these, they visited every part of town.

On one transparency was drawn the new well, another recent water venture of the town, and over it was written the words, 'Dry as a bone—Water-works don't go dry." On another was a water cart, mule and negro, with the words, "The Old Dispensation;" and on the reverse side was the representation of pretty fountains, with the words, "The New Dispensation." Another bore a scene descriptive of work on the water-works trench; another a terribly scared old fogy, with the words, "Boo! Git out old fogy;" another an intelligent XVth Amendment traveling to the polls, with ballot in hand, to "wote for de water-works." On another the town mule and cart was brought out in lampblack, with the words, "$800 of old debts paid off by the young Council, and the mule and cart our's," above and below.—There were many other very funny and cleverly executed caricatures we cannot just now call to mind. Among the inscriptions on the transparencies, we remember, among others the following:

"Our motto is spirit and enterprise!"
"National debts are national blessings?"
"The wash-tub no longer a terror!"
"Long live Young America!"
"Death to Old-Fogyism!"
"Lives there a man with soul so dead,
Who to himself hath never said——
We'll welcome our Summer visitors."
"No excuse now for dirty feet!"
"Long live Frog Level!"

On some were inscribed the names of some of our citizens who have taken a lively interest in the enterprise, and the names of the Intendant and Councilors with the number of votes received by each.

The gay and glittering procession first moved through the square and directly to the residence of Alderman Privett, one of the recently honored ones, and there met a most generous reception at the hands of the Alderman. After partaking freely of the good things spread before them, the procession moved off down Depot street and halted near Cart Hill and Dave Turner who had engaged to do the laughing for that end of town. That it was well done, everybody living within half a mile of the place can attest. They first laughed against each other, but it soon became evident neither could gain an advantage in that way, and they laughed against time. On the last heat Cart did'nt draw his breath for half an hour, by the watch. He "laft and laft and laft" until the procession had moved out of ear-shot and until the train came in and all that night, and Sunday he was too much tickled to risk himself in church, and Wednesday, when he went out with the volunteers to work on the water-works, his friends noticed now and then a nervous twitching of the corners of his mouth, but it developed into nothing broader. It is supposed that there was a laugh there, but this is mere speculation. Dave is too much troubled with a pain in his side to be about yet.

Returning by way of Alderman Woodward's, that dignitary was loudly called upon for a speech. In vain he protested that he was not a 'speakist'—that he never had made but one speech in his life and that was to the female who now presides at his cottage home—that the call was sudden—unexpected—that his English had retired to quarters in the dictionary for the night—that he had not thought over what he should say—that if he had have thought it over, he could not say it in his then confused state of mind; but a speech the crowd had come for and a speech they were determined to have, and their calls became so loud and peremptory that the Alderman at last, in sheer desperation, mounted his gatepost, pitched off and gave them a real neat, lively, sparkling one, brim full and running over with enthusiastic predictions of the happy destiny in store for our beautiful town. He surprised himself.

With a rousing cheer, the boys moved on until they came to the residence of Capt. James Crook, our Representative, the gentleman to whom we are indebted for the prompt passage of the water-works bill. Of course he was called out, and he responded at some length in an earnest, eloquent speech that would have done credit to a greater occasion and a larger audience. He, too, was sanguine of the future of Jacksonville under the inspiration of the public spirit that has seized her people, one and all, and that is rapidly making her one of the most convenient and desirable places of residence in the State.

Alderman Weaver was the next man to hear from after Capt. Crook, but that pensive youth was silent to all the entreaties of his elated callers. He agreed with them that the Water Works was a great undertaking—that "we have gained a victory—a glorious victory'—that as we mosey along, we will "stamp improvement on the wings of time" &c. &c., but in all that he could see no particular reason why he should make a a speech. They gave him up as a bad customer.

Returning to the square, the crowd drove around to his place of business to tackle Alderman Dean and hear what that usually reticent gentleman had to say of the situation. The door was closed! The game had fled! No, a window opens! A voice woderfully like that of Alderman Dean floats out on the air of the night. It said: Mr. Dean tenders his excuses—he has retired—he is sick—in fact, he is out—at any rate, he cannot speak for you to-night gentlemen—some other time—any time—but not to-night gentlemen." The dodge was too transparent, but there was no help for it; the door was locked and his room was in an upper story. The Alderman held a stocked hand on them; and so with a sigh they "processioned" on down to Alderman Grant's—but here our modesty seizes our pencil; and the speech must go unreported, no matter how much the world loses by it. It would'nt be proper for us to sound the praises of that speech here, and besides we do not want our readers transported—thrilled just at this point in this article and therefore we shall not report it, but this much we will say: whatever deficiencies there may have been in it was amply compensated for by the senior of the Republican, who in response to a call, indulged, as did Joe Poets on one occasion, in "a few extemporaneous remarks."

The best is always saved to the last; and now as a finale of the evening's programme, the wagons were abandoned, and on foot the party moved toward the water-works hill to pay respects to Mayor Turnley, to whom more than any other member of the Council the people owe thanks for the persistent stirring of the water-works subject until men of means and public spirit were induced to take hold of the enterprise and put it through to its present stage. As Mungie Renfro would say, (and he ought to have been here) his Honor, in his "usual happy style" got off a great many good things, but none so good, as the by that time wearied processionists then agreed, as when he remarked in a casual way: "Gentlemen will you walk in and drink a cup of hot coffee with me?" The coffee finished, congratulations exchanged, the crowd broke up and Jacksonville slept.

Saturday night the children attended at Mrs. Martha Key's, a masquerade party given in honor of Master Ur Peck. The costumes of all were becoming, the characters represented well personated and the evening altogether a happy one to them.

MARRIED—on the evening of the 29th ult. at the residence of the bride's Father in this village by E. T. Read, Mr. A. M. Landers & Miss Sallie T. Phillips.

LADIGA LOCALS.

Business dull, cotton nearly all sold in this vicinity, and the farmers are as busy preparing for another crop as the weather will admit.

Mr. Barnard, from Cherokee county, has commenced a school at this place. We hope to find him the right man for the place; he wears the right kind of a face, and is a genuine old Reb dyed in the wool.

Len, we hear it whispered around, up this way that some person or persons in Jacksonville should have said the fifty-five bales of cotton that J. R. Graham bought in one day was all that was made in this vicinity, and that he bought all in one day. Those fifty-five bales were only a portion made on Mr. Craven Wilson & son's farms. I supposed it to be some man who has never been to Ladiga, that circulated the rumor. I am satisfied it was not Ball Play Local from the fact that he went into winter quarters very early and died out the first cold spell that come and as for my friend Supernumerary it was not him for he has been foraging for some time; let them be who they may, they are invited to come up and see the books and proceeds of sales and shipments from this place.

Mr. C. J. Sharp, an old citizen of Cross Plains, his lady and daughter paid our town a visit on Friday night last, staying all night for the first time at Ladiga. It also snowed the same night.

Jeff complains of his eyesight failing in his young days.

ROCK.

CROSS PLAINS LOCALS

The advent of Spring is usually considered a very gay thing, but when ushered in with snow, it is another thing, you know. For instead of the melody of birds, and the fragrance of the blue violets, we are condemned to endure the slosh under foot, and the drippings over head of seven inches of snow melting, thawing, evaporating.

Our town is still growing and improving. Old buildings repaired, and new houses with neat enclosures, adorn many of the recently vacant lots. Saw mills do a good business in this vicinity.

Dr. Hughes, an accomplished and well informed gentleman of the Medical profession, who has been practicing in our town and vicinity for the past year, has moved his office from Ladiga to this place. May his success be equivalent to his deserts.

Our one hotel is a credit to our town. The gentlemanly proprietor understands his business. Many regular boarders and a goodly amount of transient custom.

Wheat is not looking well; but our farmers hope for the best. The question of planting clover is being discussed. Our clever friend, Mr. J. K. Daily, who is farming as well as merchandizing, intends planting, and we are sure the thorough trial he makes, will decide whether clover may be grown in this section.

Educational facilities are not being neglected. Our citizens believe that "the more schools we have, the fewer jails" will be needed in our country.

One church (the Methodist) is all our town can boast; but we hope before long to record the erection of a handsome Baptist church at this place. We understand Capt E. G. Barney has made a very liberal donation towards the building, besides having presented the church with a beatiful lot.

By a "continual dropping" even a rock (!) may be worn away. So for fear of losing that intellectual treat we frequently enjoy, we will not disturb that mutilated stock of rice straw at Ladiga.

Rock wake up your "people" or they may be "sleeping and slumbering" until all your houses are moved off to the City.

The Philosophy of Tonic Stimulants.

Some substances have the power of influencing the changes which go forward in the human tissues, without themselves taking any integral part in those changes. Salt, for instance, hastens transformation and waste, and consequently creates the necessity for a more liberal diet; while, on the other hand; alcohol retards change and waste. On this principle, Dr. Fisch, in his Bitters has furnished a preparation having among other properties that of preserving both the materials and the forces of the system. and in this, as in other things, "A penny saved is a penny gained." But it is not only in this negative way that Dr. Fisch's remedy works for the building up of the physical man. While it holds back the wasting processes it spurs forward the preparing processes. It promotes the flow of the alimentative juices in the mouth, the stomach, and the liver; and thus enables the system to utilize more food—to make more blood. The scriptural assertion that "The blood thereof is the life thereof," is the expression of a physiological fact; and the amount of food which a man can eat with relish, and digest, affords the exact measure and index of the man's strength. And when once Dr. Fisch's remedy has given the start to an improvment in this direction, the unaided energies of nature take up the work and carry it forward; and thus render the amelioration permanent.

Womans' Rights.—One who has long studied this absorbing subject now presents to the women of our country the result of his investigations. He is happy to say that he has at last discovered "Woman's Best Friend." It is adapted, especially, to those cases where the womb is disordered, and will cure any irregularity of the "menses.' Dr J. Bradfield's Female Regulator acts like a charm in "whites," or in a sudden check of the "monthly courses" from cold trouble of mind, or like causes, by restoring the discharge in every instance, So also in chronic cases its action is prompt and decisive, and saves the constitution from countless evils and premature decay. This valuable preparation is for sale at $1.50 per bottle by all respectable Druggist in the land. Prepared and sold by L. H. Bradfield, Druggist, Atlanta, Ga. A thousand women testify to its merits.
October 7 3m.

A Living Furnace.

The living body is a regulated furnace. The human organism is all more or less combustible, but not equally so. The blood, that is to say the food in its tansformed state, may be compared to the fuel, and the more stable tissues formed from the blood, to the iron stove which contains the fuel. Just in proportion to the energy and celerity with which life is carried on, does this combustion proceed; and just in proportion as the combustion preceeds; is fresh fuel, that is to say fresh blood, required. But in order to obtain a supply of fresh blood, food must be present and not only food, but the power of converting the food into blood, that is, digestive energy. Where there is a failure in this digestive energy, or in the appetite which accompanies it, stimulants of various descriptions are frequently had recourse to; but their effect is transient, and if leaned upon too long and too exclusively, they tend to derange the digestive functions and to take away the natural desire for food, which is the only true life supporter. But let Dr. Fisch's Bitters be used perseveringly and in the prescribed quantities, in conjunction with the daily meals, and their tonic qualities will rapidly strengthen the digestive organs and create at the same time a sufficient and healthy appetite. And when an abundance of wholesome food, (which we are thus enabled to take.) is duly digested and assimilated, it will give a fullness of vitality which will take away any desire for the improper use of alchoholic stimulants.

Repairing the Damage—The Burnt District of Wisconsin.

The reconstruction of the burned village in Wiscosin is proceeding with an energy which is characteristic of the adventurous pioneers of that region, and which exceeds even the marvelous enterprise by which Chicago is rising from its ashes. The village of Peshtigo, which will be famous in all time in the records of devastations, is already rebuilt and re-occupied, although four months only have expired since it was totally destroyed. With timely aid, in which their benefactors have thus occasion to congratulate themselves, unquenched courage and almost marvelous activity, the people have surmounted obstacles which seemed insuperable and overcame difficulties which might have discouraged the stoutest hearts. It will afford some idea of the terrible extent of the recent conflagration in those lumber districts to state that for long distances the streams, in some instances, deep and more than a hundred feet wide, were so impregnated with lye from the ashes of the burnt woods, that the water could not be used for drinking or cooking purposes, and for miles and miles the whole country exhibits scarcely a mark of vegetable life, so completely did the "devouring element" verify its title.

A Massachusetts woman, lately deceased, before her death, in order to keep her memory green in the mind of her husband, wrote a number of letters which she postdated and confided them on her death-bed to a friend, with directions to post one to him on the last day of every month. In the spring-time of his mourning the husband was rather glad to receive these pseudo communications from the spirit world, but when time had cooled the heart-burnings of his grief and another woman presided at his table the postman's arrival with a posthumous letter at the end of each lunar revolution became very malapropos and quite destroyed, with its dismal memories, the pleasures of his new honeymoon. His freshly-chosen bride, too, became jealous of these mysterious missives, and threatened to tear out the eyes of their author, but on being told who the author was contented herself with burning the epistolatory production of her predecessors as often as they came.

It is rumored that the Emperor of Germany is not satisfied with the conduct of affairs in France, and threatens the re-occupation of that country. This movement is based upon the principle that Prussia reserves to herself the right to judge of and pronounce on any new government which may succeed that of President Thiers in France on the following important point: Whether the Emperor William's Ministry deem that government unlikely, by inclination or incapacity, to execute the treaty of peace, and to discharge the obligations incurred under it to Germany.

Should Prussia decide either point in the affirmative against France, a new German invasien of the French territory will follow.

Philadelphia Water-Works.—Philadelphia is old foggy in some respects, but in the matter of her water works old fogyism returns a handsome profit. The report of the Chief Engineer for the last year shows a surplus over expenses of half a million dollars. Last year the city laid down over thirty miles of pipe, constructed a four-acre reservoir, built a new engine-house, made a saving of $26,000 by doing its own repairing, in its own shops, and pumped 13,498,899,481 gallons of water. The cost of maintaining the works last year was nearly $446,000.

James Parton, in a recent lecture, said he remembered when he was young and innocent—a long time ago—he was a paragraphist on a weekly paper in New York.

In recording the happenings of the world, he conceived that it would be a good idea to start a new department, to be devoted exclusively to virtue. He attempted to get a column of good deeds, but in all the world, the first week, he could find but four brief paragraphs. The second week he could find absolutely nothing—not a good deed in a whole week.—The department died in its second week.

The National Standard—whilom the anti-slavery organ par excellence—advocates a grand crusade in favor of temperance by making it, like anti-slavery, a national movement, with a common purpose—the utter extirpation of the traffic in all intoxicating liquors to be used as a beverage—to be kept steadily in view as the objective point ultimately to be gained.

The Legislature of Wisconsin has enacted a law, making all days of election legal holidays. It is thought this measure will induce business men to take a more general interest in politics, or at least record their votes, and thus act as a preventive of the tendency to caucus "Ring" rule.

The little discrepancy of some three or four millions of dollars between the amount paid our government by France for arms, and the amount received into the Treasury on that account, excites attention; but administration papers say it is a trifle.

HEALTH! BEAUTY!!

Strong and pure rich Blood—Increase of Flesh and Weight—Clear Skin and beautiful Complexion secured to all,

DR. RADWAY'S
Sarsaparillian Resolvent

Has made the most astonishing cures; so quick, so rapid are the changes the body undergoes, under the influence of this truly wonderful Medicine, that

Every day an increase in Weight and Flesh is Felt.

THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER.

Every drop of the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT communicates through the Blood, Sweat, Urine, and other fluids and juices of the system the vigor of life, for it repairs the wastes of the body with new and sound material. Scrofula, Syphilis, Consumption, Glandular disease, Ulcers in the throat, Mouth, Tumors, Nodes in the Glands and other parts of the system, Sore Eyes, Strumorous discharges from the Ears, and the worst forms of Skin diseases, Eruptions, Fever Sores, Scald Head, Ring Worm, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Acne, Black Spots, Worms in the Flesh, Tumors, Cancers in the Womb, and all weakening and painful discharges, Night Sweats, Loss of Sperm and all wastes of the life principle, are within the curative range of this wonder of Modern Chemistry, and a few days' use will prove to any person using it for either of these forms of disease its potent power to cure them.

If the patient, daily becoming reduced by the wastes and decomposition that is continuly progressing, succeeds in arresting these wasts, and repairs the same with new material made from healthy blood—and this the SARSAPARILIAN will and does secure—a cure is certain; for when once this remedy commences its work of purification, and succeeds in diminishing the loss of w hts its repairs will be rapid, and every day ces patient will feel himself growing better and stronger, the food digesting better, appetite improving, and weight increasing.

Not only does the Sarsaparilian Resolvent axcels all known remedial agents in the curt of Chronic, Scrofulous, Constitutional, and Skin diseases; but it is the only positive curd for

Kidney and Bladder Complaints,

Uriuary, and Womb diseases, Gravel, Diabetes, Dropsy, Stoppage of Water, Incontinence of Urine, Bright's Diseas, Albuminuria, and in all cases where there are brick-dust deposits, or the water is thick, cloudy, mixed with substances like the white of an egg, or threrds like white silk, there is a morbid, dark, billious appearance, and white bone-dust deposits, and when there is a pricking, burning sensation when passing water, and pain in the Small of hte Back and along the Loins.

MILLIONS Bear Testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.

Vinegar Bitters are not a vile Fancy Drink, Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors, doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing, also, the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and of all the Visceral Organs.

FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, whether in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Billious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Billious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.

They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid Liver and Bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effect.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

PIN, TAPE, and other WORMS, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed.

Dr. GOTTLIEB FISCH'S BITTERS.

(Shape of the Bottle.)

This preparation of the great Scientist, Dr. Gottlieb Fisch, of Germany, is based on the fact that, as all materials of the body are derived from Food, so all Vital Force, or Health, is derived from the Force stored up in Food. Dr. Fisch's Bitters enables the System to liberate and appropriate these Forces creates Appetite, cures Dyspepsia, with its resulting Debility and lack of Nervous Energy; so tones the Stomach and Liver as to make Constipation and Billousness impossible; reinforces the System so it can tide over bad results of changing climate, water &c., and better endure the demands often unexpectedly made on its Force and Energy. Ladies in delicate health, aged persons and all emaciated and weak after sickness, will rapidly strengthen by using this great preparation.

Messrs. J. & S. Bones, Dear Sir:

I have given the 16 inch Mill (Clemans) bought of you, a thorough test, and can but express myself perfectly satisfied. The power was the running gear fo my gin, which although in very bad order, was sufficient to grind one bushel (by the watch) in eleven minutes, I find no trouble to do my grinding before breakfast. Several of my neighbors were present at the time, and all were satisfied with the result, and were astonished at the quantity and fine quality of the meal produced in so short a time, I prefer the meal to any steam mill meal. The 16 inch mill I bought of you for the Foster Farm, and used since the above was written proves equally satisfactory. It is a complete mill.

Yours Truly,

THE NEW CHURCH ORGAN.

BY WILL M. CARLETON.

They've got a bran new organ, Sue,
For all their fuss and search;
They've done just as they said they'd do,
And fetched it into church.
They're bound the critter shall be seen,
And on the preacher's right
They've hoisted up their new machine,
In everybody's sight.
They've got a chorister and choir,
Ag'n MY voice and vote;
For it was never MY desire
To praise the Lord by note.

I've been a sister good an' true
For five an' thirty year;
I've done what seemed my part to do,
An' prayed my duty clear;
I've sung the hymns both slow and quick,
Just as the preacher read,
And twice, when Deacon Tubbs was sick,
I took the fork an' led!
And now, their bold, new-fangled ways
Is comin' all about;
And I, right in my latter days,
Am fairly crowded out.

To-day the preacher, good old dear,
With tears all in his eyes,
Read—"I can read my title clear
To mansions in the skies,"—
I a'lays liked that blessed hymn—
I s'pose I a'lays will;
It somehow gratifies MY whim,
In good old Ortonville;
But when that choir got up to sing,
I couldn't catch a word;
They sung the most dog-gondest thing
A body ever heard!

Some worldly chaps was standin' near,
An' when I seed them grin,
I bid farewell to every fear,
And boldly waded in.
I thought I'd chase their tune along,
An' tried with all my might;
But though my voice is good an' strong,
I couldn't steer it right;
When they was high, then I was low,
An' also contrawise;
And I too fast, or they too slow,
To "mansions in the skies."

An' after every verse, you know
They played a little tune;
I didn't understand, an' so
I started in too soon.
I pitched it pr'tty middlin' high,
I fetched a lusty tone,
But oh, alas! I found that I
Was singin' there alone!
They laughed a little, I am told;
But I had done my best;
And not a wave of trouble rolled
Across my peaceful breast.

And sister Brown—I could but look—
She sits right front of me;
She never was no singin' book,
An' never went to be;
But there she al'ays tried to do
The best she could, she said;
She understood the time right through,
An' kept it with her head;
But when she tried this mornin', oh,
I had to laugh, or cough!
It kep' her head a bobbin' so,
It e'en a'most came off!

An' Deacon Tubbs—he all broke down,
As one might well suppose;
He took one look at Sister Brown,
An' meekly scratched his nose,
He looked his hymn right thro' and thro'
And laid it on the seat,
An' then a pensive sigh he drew,
An' looked completely beat.
An' when they took another bout,
He didn't even rise,
But drawed his red bandanner out,
An' wiped his weepin' eyes.

I've been a sister good an' true,
For five and thirty year;
I've done what seemed my part to do,
An' prayed my duty clear;
But death will stop my voice, I know,
For he is on my track;
An' some day I to church will go,
An' never more come back;
An' when the folks get up to sing—
Whene'er that time shall be—
I do not want no patent thing
A squealin over me.

HORRIBLE ACCIDENT YESTERDAY.

An Old Gentleman Crushed to Death—Shameful Negligence!—Who's to Blame?

Yesterday the three o'clock Selma train (No. 6) was backing out from the depot with about a dozen passengers aboard, at a very fast rate, when, the switch being misplaced the passenger caboose and four or five cars were shoved off the track and overturned. Dr. Joseph Ford, of Cave Springs, was sitting in the centre of the car talking to Mr. King when the accident happened, and as the car turned, was thrown through the door under the car, and crushed to death instantly. Mr. King, who was himself thrown against the side of the car, says that he Dr. Ford screamed as he fell out, and that after the car had settled on him he heard him gasp painfully once; when he reached him he was dead. A crowd rapidly assembled, the car was pushed up, and the body was pulled from under it. It was found that he was cut almost in two across the stomach, and fearfully gashed about the head; a terribly mangled wreck. News of the accident was quickly conveyed to his son, Mr. I. D. Ford, one of our very first citizens, who hurried to the scene and had the body carried to his residence. Dr. Ford is known to about every man in this and the surrounding counties, and is universally beloved and esteemed. He leaves a wife and family to mourn his untimely death. His loss will be felt severely, and many a heart will sadden when the sad tidings are brought.

AMATA.

BY A YOUNG LADY OF JACKSONVILLE.

CHAPTER VI.

March came to an end.

Blowing young storms passed over the country and took away with them the last snow.

Slowly the first snow-drops lifted their heads,

It was the day before Easter.

A small and choice circle had assembled at Counselor Weineman's. His learned wife had found, during the winter a literary circle, which was much frequented by the gentlemen, indeed, the founders had wished to limit it to the stronger sex. "The young ladies of the present day take an interest only in their knitting and domestic affairs!" thought she, but her intention was changed by Professor Gregorius declaring he would not go to any entertainment without his wife, and, though she owed Eberhard a grudge—oh the Frau Geheimrathin owed him several grudges!—too much depended on his coming.

So the other wives had also been invited though many would willingly have refused the doubtful honer; the Counselor's wife was not particularly beloved by her own sex.

To-day the circle was smaller than usual through the absence of several of its members.

A promised discussion from Dr. Hanchling on Natural Sciences was done away with through his absence; but, on the other hand, Dr. Lendiger brought with him his friend Volkmar, and every one hoped for the richest recompensation for all delinquencies on hearing the artist perform.

A short delivery on the recently discovered important papers in the Spanish archives from Eberhard, opened the evening.

His attractive delivery, his noble and expressive language, his great gift of recital, which had made him so celebrated on the lecturer's chair were much admired here in the private circle.

His personal appearance also increased the riveted attention from every auditor during his discourse.

Walter, above all, could not turn his gaze from him, and, for the first time, a mild reconciliatory feeling towards Amata crept into his heart.

He was himself so attached by the outward and inward traits of this rare man, why reproach a woman's heart for being conquered by them?

Was he blind, that he had never perceived this before? What unpardonable arrogance on his part to wish to place himself by the side of Eberhard Gregorius!—he would have liked to step before Amata then and there, and ask her pardon for the wrong he had done her; yes, he could almost rejoice that such rich happiness had fallen to her before all others.

Happiness? he looked on the young wife who sat there so silent in the corner near Frau Wedel; was that happiness which had drawn those dark lines around the violet-eyes?

Happiness, that drew her lips together with so painful an expression?

A frightful suspicion came to him, but he cast it aside. No, he was entirely mistaken!

Eberhard had ceased. The gentlemen stood around chatting.

"And now, Herr Concert-master, our prayers turn to you," said the lady of the house, your playing alone, is worthy to follow our friend's words. Let yourself be persuaded—one single piece! Your friend Dr. Lendiger, has, unknown to you, brought your precious instrument!"

Then Professor Gregorius shall himself say what piece he would prefer to hear," said Walter.

"Well then," "answered Eberhard warmly, "let it be that Gavotte of Bach's, which we heard from you that first evening and which it has long been my desire to enjoy once again!"

A shadow passed over Walter's face.

"Rather any other!" he said half aloud but grasped his bow.

The enchanted hearers thought he excelled himself this time, his playing was more expressive than ever. But the eyes of the player rested on one form which leaned against the glass-door leading into the garden.

She had her head averted and gazed out into the darkness.

But as he looked on her half averted features he knew all, her great unhappiness and his greater fault; and the self reproaches of his heart, the burning remorse of a suddenly awakened conscience, expressed itself in his playing, and, it was, at the same time his farewell song—for he would remain not a day longer, where he alas! had already lingered too long.

Now it is Dr. Lendiger's turn to give in something pleasing and interesting, said Frau Weineman, after the music had been duly praised.

It was late, and tea had already been taken. The guests stood around chatting, yet Frau Weineman hoped to detain them a while longer.

Or perhaps your are not prepared, Herr Doctor? she added, "and the Herr Concert-master will grant our silently cherished hope of hearing him play with Frau Gregorius."

"I play no more this evening!" said Walter in his abrupt manner.

"And I will not give up my privilege of speaking to any one!" said the botanist laughing and drawing a book from his pocket.

"Oh, a poem! that is delightful!" cried Frau Wedel.

"Make it short, William!" growled Volkmar.

The botanist turned to him smiling—"You, of all others, should not complain, Walter!" said he, and stepping under the light which hung from the ceiling, he opened the book.

The company surrounded him with suspense.

He had much poetical feeling and his selections whenever he delivered a poem, was generally excellent.

"I have lately found in a collection of old German ballads, a poem by Victor Scheffels, which may, perhaps ladies and gentlemen, be as new to you as to me; and I am sure you will agree with me in declaring it to be worthy of a place among "the pearls of our German lyrics."

Dr. Lendiger generally lost his embarrassment when he spoke of these things.

Then he began to read in his pleasant though somewhat monotonous, voice:—

DANCE SONG.

To her mate in the woods the nightingale sings:
Sweet music is heard from the violin strings.
You chirpers and criers be silent and stand.
For Heins von Stein is again in the land!

The cobbler in joy casts aside all regret
Exclaiming! Sweet Heaven forgets us not yet,
Sole leather is dearer, shoes are in demand,
Our Heins von Stein is again in the land!

Beneath the broad lindens appears each sweet maiden,
With rapture enchanted, with garlands all laden,
Why loves delay? when each heart's as a brand,
Our Heins von Steins is again in the land!

The maids with their dresses looped up for the dance,
See their aged grandmothers, when looking askance,
Young for the nonce, with the fair girls they stand,
For Heins von Steins is again in the land!
The herdsmen leave flocks, the landlord comes now,
The boy leaves his horses, the peasant his plow,
The mayor and bailiff approach hand in hand,
For Heins von Steins is again in the land!
His violin lifts ne to his thrilling breast,
Half brooding, half playing, he touches with zeal,
And soft trembling strains now fall from his hand,
Our Heins von Stein is again in the land!

In the garden of nuns stands one on the height,
And weeps by the fountain, at noonday and night—
"Oh gridle and veil—oh black robe and band!
My Heins von Steins is again in the land!"

Perfect silence reigned in the room and the rising emotion of the reader was evinced in every new verse, and when he had finished, there was a momentary pause.

Frau Wedel wiped her eyes, and a low sob was heard—ladies are so easily moved by such things!

Then the botanist turned to Walter.

His honest face was beaming with joy for the success of his surprise. Well. have I made myself short enough, Hein von Stein?" cried he.

And long live Heins von Stein!" cried the gentlemen, grasping again the glasses, which still stood on the table: With his head bowed, Walter waved his hand towards them as though he wished to dispense with the sudden ovation, but it was of no avail. Laughing and jesting, they crowded around him. Only Frau Wedel wore a thoughtful countenance.

"But my dear Doctor," said she softly stepping up to Lendiger's side, "that was very thoughtless of you! Have you never thought how ominously and tragically the poem ends? You may have made the saddest of impressions thereby, on the easily excited nature of your friend!"

The botanist looked on her with astonishment.

"I had never thought of that!" he said earnestly. The whole poem appeared to me so suitable, so — —,"

"Yes, yes!" nodded the lady. it is mostly thus in youth, my dear Herr Doctor, one never reflects, but is carried away by a momentary impulse, never thinking of the consequences till it is too late! But do not take it too much to heart, "she added kindly, seeing the botanist's sorrowful face, "no one doubts your good intention, your friend least of all! But I see the company is dispersing, it is really late. Frau Professor Gregorius has stepped out into the veranda, she had a headache, she said, and would not let me accompany her; nevertheless I hastily snatched a shawl to follow her—it was very imprudent of her to go out into the cold night air just as she was—but Prof. Gregorius hastily came up—he is such an attentive husband—took the shawl from me and started after her.

"My sister and my brother-in-law bid you good evening, Frau Weineman," said Albert von Kathen at this moment, bowing before the lady of the house, "my sister's headache became so severe that her husband took her immediately home; both beg you to excuse their unceremonius departure."

The lady said a few short words of regrets and hopes for a speedy reco very, yet her displeasure was obvious to all.

It was always this increasing love for his wife that made Eberhard disagreeable to her, and she felt the bitterest hatred towards the young wife.

But she—the object of this undeserved hatred—where was she?

Not Volkmar's eyes alone had rested observingly on Amata, her husband also struck by her unusually sad manner, her pale cheeks, and her embarrassment, had often looked on her with an anxious expression, yet she had avoided his glance.

When the botanist read his poem, Eberhard saw his wife standing by the glass door, her cheeks colored a posiest-red, her hands clasped together, as though she exerted all her strength to conceal her deep emotion.

He would have stepped up to her, but Frau Wedel stood between them, and he did not wish to interrupt the reading. Almost audily his heart beat—he himself knew not why—yet in his soul a dark foreboding rose,—a presentiment of coming sorrow, and when the last words of the poem were read, and he saw Amata aviling herself of the moment of universal enthusaism, open the glass door softly and disappear. then the scales fell from his eyes and he understood all.

If there are moments in a man's life in which the greatest possible anguish is compressed, this was such a one to Eberhard.

Like the last cry of a noble stag when he receives the death-wound and every hope of escape is taken from him, was the cry which rose in Eberhard's in the deepest sorrow, in hopeless woe.

Outwardly the strong man showed not the death-blow, a few quiet explanatory words to his brother-in-law, a short explanation to the watchful Frau Wedel, then he hastened into the garden.

Neither moon, nor stars shone, heavy clouds hung in the heavens, and large single drops of rain fell on his forehead.

"Ama!" he called in the darkness.

He saw a form flitting before him and heard the rustling of a dress, again he called her name. She stood before him; he stretched out his arms to her, but before, he could reach her, she fainted at his feet.

"Forgive, forgive!" she sobbed.

Tenderly he lifted her up, though he touched not her lips.

A moment he stood so, holding her in his arms, then he looked up to heaven, and said softly and earnestly, "Father, forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us!"

David Davis as a Candidate for President.

[From the New Albany Ledger.]

A friend at Terre Haute, who knows Judge Davis well, speaks of him as follows:

"The nomination of Judge Davis of Illinois by the Labor Convention at Columbus. Ohio, has set people to thinking in this vicinity. The Republicans of the milder type seem to regard it with favor, while the Democrats are anxiously inquiring what manner of man he is, and especially if the Judge is a Radical of the Morton stamp. The fact is Judge Davis has not been much of a politician, and except as the chosen friend and confidential adviser of Mr. Lincoln, both before and after his elevation to the Presidency, the world has known nothing of him in the field of politics. He was a Whig in the days of Clay and Webster, but since their death and retirement, and the breaking down of that grand old party, he has figured but little in the partisan questions of the hour. On all the elemental principles of government—those which both Whigs and Democrats have cherished as the foundation stones of the Republic—David Davis is as sound as was Henry Clay and Thomas Jefferson. He was an ardent friend of the Sage of Ashland, devoted to the Federal Union as it was made and fashioned by George Washington and his compeers of 1787."

Judge Davis is about fifty six years old, and in the prime of life—hale, healthy, and full of rugged manhood. I should think he would weigh 250 pounds. He resides on a farm near Bloomington, Illinois, and, except when absent attending to his duties as one of the Supreme Judges of the United States Court, can be found at his quiet home near that city. He is as fine a specimen of the cultivated Western citizen as you would find in a week's travel. If he should ever reach the White House the American people will not be annoyed by the flunkyism, bowing, congeing, and fashionable follies which have made that house the laughing stock of all sensible visitors to Washington. It might relieve you of anxiety, perhaps, to be informed that Judge Davis has but one brother-in-law, and his cousins are all able to take care of themselves.

THE TICHBORNE CASE.

This case has ended in the confusion of the claimant, who is now seen to be an imposter, which we have believed him to be from a very early stage of the testimony.

There was much in it that was singular and contradictory. Yet there was one witness whose evidence seemed to us conclusive. That witness was the claimant himself. When the real Tichborne disappeared, he was a man educated in the usual studies of the English schools, and he had added the acquisition of the French language so as to speak it perfectly. The claimant being examined, proved to be in utter ignorance of what the real man knew. The disproof of identity from this was very strong, for neither old age nor mental weakness could be pleaded; for the period of absence was about seventeen years, and this brought the party only to middle life. It was impossible to believe that this could change an educated man into a boor. He might forget a great deal, as everybody does, but he would not betray an ignorance that proved the entire absence of early instruction. Much reliance was placed on a recognition of her supposed son by Lady Tichborne. But she had long been the prey of a morbid belief that her son would return, and was a most credulous and easy victim to the deceit practised upon her. There is little reason to doubt that her advertisements for news of her lost son, started the plot to personate him. An old family servant was a party to it, and furnished all the facts and recollections that were to accredit the imposter. He, of course, did not look much like the young man who had been lost at sea in 1854, but this was accounted for by changes wrought by time. Some general resemblance, of course, was provided in order to lend the plot a probability; and several innocent persons were found to give their opinion that the claimant looked like the missing Tichborne, and must be he. Of course the imagination had full play in such a case, and each witness made his own allowance for the changes wrought by time. But such conclusions are always liable to error. The law books are full of strange cases of mistaken identity, and in this case an immense estate was the stake that prompted every art to win it. But all arts seem to have failed to deceive, in a Court of Justice, which is a very satisfactory conclusion. In some stages of the case, American journals were disposed to espouse the cause of the claimant as an injured man, but there seems no reason to doubt that he is an arrant imposter.

JACKSONVILLE REPUBLICAN

JACKSONVILLE, ALABAMA.

SATURDAY, MARCH 16th, 1872.

"Once for all we now propose to settle this matter by asking separately and collectively, the Montgomery Advertiser, Jacksonville Republican and Birmingham Sun, do each and all of you pledge yourselves to abide by the decision of the next State Democratic-Conservative Convention, even though Gov. Lindsay should be renominated? Come now, gentlemen, answer fairly and squarely, or let the Guide pursue its own course, with no more misrepresentation or advice from you."—Shelby County Guide.

To this we offer the following from the REPUBLICAN of February 10th, (before the above question was asked,) which we think meets the query of the Guide fully.

In the latter event (triangular fight) we think we can predict an easy Radical victory and the total ruin of the State. We shall sink and every consideration in a hearty and zealous support of the nominee [for Governor] of the next Convention, be he who he may; and shall yield whatever views we may entertain to the superior wisdom and judgment of the next Democratic State Convention.

As to letting the Guide "pursue its own course," we are agreeable—don't remember that we have ever proposed to check it in its mad career, know we have never misrepresented it, and we certainly have tendered it no advice.

Col. Joseph Hodgson, Superintendent of Public Instruction has addressed a communication to Superintendents of Education and township trustees, detailing the difficulties in the way of prompt payment of outstanding claims of teachers of public schools, and his untiring efforts to have the matter satisfactorily remedied and in which he would have succeeded but for the Senate, which put itself upon the record as intensely hostile to any measure looking to the relief of teachers. He addressed a communication to the Speaker of the House in which he detailed the grievance and suggested a remedy. The House promptly met his views; but the Senate stood like a wall, a complete barrier to every relief. Nearly if not all the money accruing from the sale of the one million of dollars of State bonds authorized to be issued before the recess of the Legislature, will have to go to meet the payment of interest on bonds of the A. & C. R. R. He fears that the Treasury after the first of April will be able to pay out very little money, and that the depletion will continue until the collection of the Fall taxes. In view of these facts he would not encourage trustees to open the public schools until late in the Summer, unless teachers are willing to take chances of waiting for their money until the Treasury or Tax Collectors can take up the warrants, or unless patrons are willing to advance the entire pay of teachers and wait for reimbursement in the Fall, or so much thereof as may be due from the public fund. Nearly all the school claims of 1871 have been paid he says, and a part of the claims of 1872, and he has perfect confidence that every dollar of them will be paid during the year. He says:

"Let us be patient with our impoverished State—impoverished through no agency of our own, and struggling to rise with the load of debt which has been fastened upon her against our wishes and protest! Let patrons and teachers be patient, and aid each other in continuing the public schools, reposing confidence in the good faith of a State which, whenever speaking through the voice of her true representatives, has never yet repudiated the obligations she owes to her people!"

After ascertaining from the fiscal agent of the State that none of the one million to be raised by the sale of bonds could be made available to meet school claims, he asked the Legislature to provide other means by the sale of additional bonds. The following extract tells how the Senate met this just proposition:

"To carry out the views of this communication, Mr. Boyd of Marshall introduced a bill into the House, providing for the issuance of bonds to the amount of SIX HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS, and that this sum should be set aside inviolable for the payment of public school claims. This bill would have insured the prompt payment during the present fiscal year of every teacher. It passed the House by an almost unanimous vote, but was defeated in the Senate.

And the following tells how that body met every effort of reform in our educational system, emanating either from our able Superintendent of Instruction or the lower branch of the Legislature. We quote:

"In my report to the General Assembly in January, 1871 I recommended that the Constitution be so amended as to place the Department of Education in the hands of the Legislature exclusively, as it was before the war. This advice was repeated in my annual report for 1871. The House of Representatives passed a bill prepared by Mr. Hewitt, of Jefferson, submitting the proposed amendment to the people. It was defeated in the Senate."

"At the outset of the late session of the General Assembly a resolution was proposed by Mr. Lewis, of Shelby, raising a joint committee of the House and Senate to meet a committee of the Board of Education, to confer as to wants of the Department of Education and to propose measures of relief. The House appointed a committee under that resolution. The Board of Education appointed a committee to act with them. But the resolution was defeated in the Senate."

"In my last report I recommended that (as the Constitution commands) the school fund should be kept inviolably separate in the Treasury. A bill to that effect proposed by Mr. Speake of Lawrence, passed the House. It was defeated in the Senate."

"I recommended that the school fund should be a distinct fund, and for better protection should be kept in the counties and paid over as formerly by the Tax Collector to the County Superintendent. An excellent bill to that effect was offered by Mr. Taylor, of Lauderdale, and passed the House. It was defeated in the Senate."

"I finally recommended that means be provided to pay up all accrued school claims [illegible]. Mr. Boyd's bill to that effect passed the House. It is defeated in the Senate."

"One branch of the General Assembly has done all in its power to relieve this Department. Upon the other branch must rest the responsibility of defeating every effort for reform."

THE attention of our cotton growers is invited to an article in another column headed "Refunding the Cotton Tax." We do not know whether Congress will consent to do such a manifest act of justice or not—are rather inclined to think it will not, but still it would be well for those interested to get up all the proofs of payment of the tax on their part, that they can. If not at this session, the bill may pass at some future session, and the longer the matter of getting up these proofs is put off by cotton growers, the more difficult it will become to make them.

It is to be hoped, if the bill passes, that it will be so framed as to benefit the producers of the staple, the real men who paid the tax, rather than the Commission Merchants, Factors, &c., who bought the great mass of it, less the tax, they paying the same to the Government. It is said a "ring," has been formed, and now holds millions of dollars worth of tax receipts, and that it is this ring that is pushing the matter at Washington. If the bill passes through the influence of such ring, we may expect to find it so framed as to be most beneficial to the holders of the receipts, and not the producers. If Congress, however, passes the bill in obedience to the expressed wish of several Governors and Legislatures of the Southern States, and as a simple act of justice, and as an atonement for hitherto unconstitutional legislation, and not under pressure of the "ring," we may hope to see a way provided in it by which the planter will get his rights.

SOME time ago we changed our terms from three dollars a year to two dollars in advance, or three dollars at the end of the year, which terms ever since we have kept at the head of the REPUBLICAN. This reduction we made to induce our subscribers to pay in advance; but it had not the effect we expected. A great many of our patrons, it seems would as soon pay fifty per cent. interest as not, or are laboring under the delusion that we will not enforce our terms on settlement. Such however is our firm determination; but in this we wish to take no man by surprise, and to avoid this we will agree to take two dollars a year in settlement of back subscriptions to the REPUBLICAN, until after the adjournment of our next Circuit Court. After that time we shall collect three dollars a year from subscribers whose papers have gone over three months on the year. This is fair notice and no one must grumble if after Court they have to pay back subscriptions at the rate of three dollars a year. We would much prefer that all would settle promptly in advance, at our advance price than to have to wait one year even and collect one third more. Our expenses are constant and heavy, and those of our subscribers who will have us to advance the money to print them a paper for a whole year, must not grumble at the charge of one third additional. The choice is theirs, two dollars now, or three dollars at the expiration of their year. If they choose our three dollar proposition they have nobody to blame but themselves. If they desire to pay fifty per cent. interest it is nobody's business but their own.

[From the Montgomery Advertiser.]

A Plea for Judge Davis' Nomination.

We are told by the Philadelphia Age that Judge Davis, formerly entertained as his vote indicates the sentiments contained in the following resolutions:

Resolved, That in the adoption of the Federal Constitution, the States adopting the same, acted, severally, as free, independent, and sovereign States, and that each for itself, by its own voluntary assent, entered the Union with the view to its increased security against all dangers, domestic as well as foreign, and the more perfect and secure enjoyment of its advantages, natural, political and social.

Resolved, That in delegating a portion of their powers to be exercised by the Federal Government, the States retained severally, the exclusive and sole right over their own domestic institutions and police, to the full extent to which these powers were not thus delegated, and are alone responsible for them; and that any intermeddling of any one or more States, or a combination of their citizens, with the domestic institutions and police of the others, on any ground—political, moral or religious—or under any pretext or subversion, is not warranted by the Constitution, tending to endanger the domestic peace and tranquility of the States interfered with, subversive of the objects for which the Constitution was formed, and, by necessary consequences, tending to weaken and destroy the Union itself.

This is sound doctrine if Judge Davis will now endorse his former convictions! It was Judge Davis who delivered the judgment of the Supreme Court in 1866 in the celebrated case of Milligan, Bowles & Horsey who had been condemned to death in Indiana by a military Commission held in the very presence of the Civil Courts. By this opinion the Supreme Court saved the lives of three citizens from radical vengeance and trampled down these military tribunals through which the radical usurpers were seeking to subject the people of the United States to a fate similar to that of the people of France during Robespierre's Reign of Terror.

While Gen. Burnside was Military Dictator in the West an order was issued by him to suppress a Democratic paper in Chicago, (five hundred miles from the seat of war,) and it was Judge Davis who granted a judicial remedy in the case, and who informed President Lincoln that the order must be withdrawn, or that he himself would lead in organizing popular resistance to the act.

The Bill for Refunding Cotton Tax.

The bill introduced into the National House of Representative to refund the cotton tax paid in the years 1865, 1866, 1867 and 1868, provides for the appointment of three commissioners by the President, whose duty it shall be to determine the sum paid by and due to each claimant. The amounts determined to be due the several claimants are to be paid in four and a half per cent. forty-year bonds, or certificates for small sums commutable into such bonds, which are to be used as banking capital for additional national banks in the Southern States. The bill also contains numerous provisions designed as safeguards against the presentation or prosecution of fraudulent claims. Resolutions and memorials to Congress, praying the refunding of the cotton tax, have been presented from the Legislatures of all the Southern States and Missouri, and also from the National Board of Trade, which met in Baltimore last fall and from the Chamber of Commerce of St. Louis and all the principal Southern cities. The Washington correspondent of the New York Herald says: Eminent and influential law firms in New Orleans, St Louis and Atlanta, Ga., are engaged in buying claims and transacting the business in the cotton States, while a full and well drilled corps d'armee of lobbyists is stationed here at Washington to push through the necessary legislation. It is currently reported that Herschel V. Johnson, candidate for Vice-President on the Democratic ticket with Stephen A. Douglas, is one of the leading spirits in this new cotton combination. Certain it is that able and influential men are in the movement, and it is just as certain that they are backed up by millions and millions of dollars of internal tax receipts that will be as good as greenbacks the day the bill in question becomes a law. Altogether the scheme has more strength than was at first believed. It is calculated that the Southern Congressional delegation will go for it nearly solid, which, with the aid that can be obtained from the North, will make a success.

Almost a Tragedy in the Louisiana Legislature.

[From the N. O. National Republican, Feb 29]

At the night session of His Excellency's Representatives last evening, Mr. Huston, while endeavoring to advocate the passage of a measure relative to some local matter of the parish he represents, was violently interrupted by the bellicose Carr, so-called member from DeSoto.

Huston, becoming galled by the impertinent interruptions of Carr, suddenly turned upon his tormentor and very audibly denounced him as the son of a lady whose virtue was not beyond purchase, coupling that interesting announcement with the further assertion that he (Huston) did represent a real live constituency, and that unlike Carr, he did not fraudulently represent himself as a member from a parish in which, according to his (Carr's) own sworn testimony, he never had had a shirt washed; and, that further, while Carr might boast of his ill-acquired wealth, he (Huston) knew that the first money that ever jingled in his (Carr's) pocket he (Carr) stole from the till of a Canal-street dry goods merchant.

After the interchange of a few more such legislative compliments, Carr made a demonstration toward the drawing of a pistol, whereon Huston loudly shouted, "That's my game, you thief, come on—I'm ready for you," &c., accompanying the words with the action of putting his hand in his pistol-pocket. Upon which [illegible] grew livid with fear, and hastily took refuge behind a knot of interested and amused spectators.

Chief of Police Warmoth being on hand, lobbying as usual, at once made a rush upon the sanguinarily-inclined Huston, and calling to his aid a half-dozen of his Metropolitan janissaries the amiable Huston was persuaded to put up his pistol and accompany Warmoth down stairs for the purpose of indulging in a pleasant little chat, where, after the lapse of a few seconds, the persuasive powers of His Excellency prevailed, and the indignant and irate Huston became as tame and docile as my lady's sucking dove.

The present Business Status of the Alabama and Chattanooga Railroad

The entire road within the limits of the State of Alabama (more than two hundred miles) is now in the hands of Mr. Walsh the Receiver appointed by Chancellor Dillard at the application of the State. The portion of the road between Attalla and Chattanooga, in the State of Georgia, is in the hands of Gen. Wofford appointed by a Georgia Court. The parts of the road in Tennessee and Mississippi are in the hands of Col. Gindrat appointed by the Courts of Mississippi and Tennessee. Col. Gindrat could not turn the road over to Mr. Walsh, except the main portion of the line lying in Alabama, because he had no authority, of course, to make Mr. Walsh Receiver for Mississippi or Tennessee in the place of himself. No doubt however, the Courts of Mississippi and Tennessee will as soon as practicable substitute Mr. Walsh for Col. Gindrat. Mr. Walsh has put Mr. Fleming, the Superintendent of the Mobile and Ohio Road, in charge of the Alabama part of the A. & C. Road. We presume there is a cordial understanding in the matter of running and managing the road between Mr. Walsh and General Wofford. In all this business we only care for two things, first, that Alabama shall be held harmless and without injury, and secondly, that the road shall perform its office of a great thoroughfare of travel and trade for our people. For this it is that we have been contending so desperately for the recognition of the rights and dominion of the State over this road. We have been solicitous that the State of Alabama should shape and direct the settlement of the A. & C. imbroglio primarily in her own interests.

In the meantime we await the proceedings of the Bankrupt Court, Judge Busteed presiding. It is expected that he will make an order of sale to-day. At any rate we are anxious to see some solution of this muddle to which the people of Alabama are indebted to a corrupt Radical Legislature.—Montgomery Advertiser.

Radical Swindling.

The Pittsburg Post says that it is convinced, from the testimony in the McClure-Gray case, that the Democracy of Pennsylvania have been swindled out of State elections by frauds in Philadelphia. It adds:

"We believe that Asa Packer was honestly elected Governor by a larger majority than that accorded to Governor Geary. We believe that Philadelphia is to-day, and has been for years, Democratic by from eight to ten thousand majority, and we believe still further that Grant's friends in that city, the thieves, rounders, and repeaters, have so controlled elections there as to give just what majority was needed to carry the city and State."

Farmers are interested in knowing that Col. L. J. Parr, is now prepared to furnish corn, for cash, by the car load or 100 sacks.

Messrs. Green & Ledbetter give notice that they are now ready to deliver corn at the depot in Jacksonville. Let those interested take notice.

Fine lot of new style Japanese suited cloth, for Spring dresses, just received by J. Rosenberg.

The store house and stock of goods of J. D. Stocks, at Griffiths Station on the S. R. & D. Railroad, was burned Tuesday night, between twelve and one o'clock—loss about $4,000. Insurance $3,000. we understand. The general impression is that it was set on fire.

Fine lot of Prints and Ginghams for Spring, just received and for sale cheap by J. Rosenberg.

E. L. Woodward, Jr, will give you five plugs of good chewing tobacco for $1 00. 1½ pounds good smoking tobacco for $1 00.

We invite attention to the card of Dr. W. W. Harrison, of Alexandria. He is spoken of by those who know him as a most estimable gentleman and excellent physician.

Just received on consignment several car loads of nice Timothy Hay. Apply to C. G. Samuel, Rome, Ga.

Ed. L. Woodward has just received a fine lot of the largest and finest White Fish and Mackeral ever brought to this market.

Some have thought from the immense sacrifices Jacob Rosenberg has been making, and still is making in the sale of his stock of Dry Goods, that it was his intention to close out entirely, preparatory to a removal from Jacksonville. Such, we have the pleasure to announce is not the case. He will still cleave to old Jacksonville, and this Summer exhibit a larger and more attractive stock than ever before.

ALEXANDRIA LOCALS.

More Railroad—on Tuesday evening we saw a number of negroes, mules and carts pass through our town on their way to Oxford, to commence work on the East Alabama and Cincinnati Railroad. We understand that Col. Colt of Gadsden, the energetic, go-ahead contractor from Oxford to Gadsden, has at present a good force with which to commence work, and he intends to push it through. Let us have the railroad. We can do without the Water Works at present, as it is but a short distance from the outside limits of our town to the spring, and we have no "Court House at either end of which to place a fountain, and have the sparkling spray in sunbeams playing our 'vierces."

"Sharp Stick."—We notice Mr. Editor that you have threatened some of your local correspondents, and since we failed to come up to time last week, we of course must bear our part of this "punching," but now how do you expect us to write locals, when our people won't say nor act locals. They won't fight of Saturday's, they won't die, they won't get sick and recover that we may say how thankful we are, and there won't any body give us a "dozen cigars" so we can furnish you a personal notice of what is to be done.

Well here it is, pay us a pretty good price, and we will do like the man swearing in Court, or the negro "Woten in the Legislature." We'll send you anything you want.

A few days ago we were passing by the plantation of Capt. Floyd Bush, on Cane Creek, and as we neared the Captain's residence, we saw him setting on the fence of his clover field, I'll tell you he was mad—he was good mad. With some reluctance we enquired why he was so out of humor. We were surprised Mr. Editor, for it is not a common thing with the Captain; he replied that the East Alabama & Cincinnati Railroad was going to run right through his clover patch, and he could'nt stop the thing.

We think Capt. B. ought to be willing to surrender the clover patch, for the Railroad will be a two-fold advantage to him, it will build up the town at which he trades, it will place a depot near him, so he can ship his leather. Captain, "Let us have peace."

Lon, did you read that Cotton tale, under the head of Eastaboga locals in the Talladega Mountain Home of recent date. Was'nt that heavy. Certainly the Local of that city has something to back him, or he would not talk so large.

SUCCESSOR.

OXFORD LOCALS.

Dear Lon.—your are mistaken when you think that I am too much engaged in Railroad matters, to have time to write. The excitement about the Railroad has for the most part subsided, as it is now a fixed fact that we are to have the benefit of the crossing of the East Alabama and Cincinnati road at this point. They (the Engineers and Contractors) are here and will go to work grading to-day, (Wednesday) within the incorporate limits of Oxford. They have quite a number of carts, mules and hands; and they say they expect to have the road finished from here to Gadsden, and in running order in 12 months.

My reasons for not writing last week, were, because I was too busily engaged in finishing up my new building, and fixing up generally; and more especially and particularly engaged in getting my garden under fence; and I am quite sure if you were to see it you would wonder that it did not take longer to accomplish such an undertaking. But for fear of trespassing on your time too much I would give you a description of it, but my space in your columns will not permit. The patent is applied for.

Don't forget that NORTH, MOTES & CO., keep constantly on hand a large lot of FAMILY GROCERIES.

The probabilities are that the company owning those beds of iron ore near this place, will commence operation here again this Spring. You remember before the war, they had very extensive works at this place, which were burned during the war by the Federals. With the facilities which they will soon have for shipping their manufactured material, and the abundance of this ore, and its superior quality, and its close proximity to inexhaustible beds of very superior coal, which they will most assuredly have access to by the Georgia Western road, ere long, there is certainly very strong inducements offered to capitalists to take hold of it and operate extensively, as they can do so as profitably as at any other point on the Continent of America. We do not except Pennsylvania even. Their best beds of ore, sink into insignificance in richness and extent when compared to these, so said by those who profess to know, and who are interested in those in Pennsylvania. Then if those will yield a handsome profit—and no doubt they do—then why not these yeild a better profit? We think they will, and before another twelve months shall have rolled around we expect to see extensive machinery fitted up, ready for manufacturing this raw material right at home.

Well Lon, we are to have another weekly newspaper here. Now you know that Oxford is rising—going—gone up yonder. The Messrs. Mesely are to be proprietors we believe. Mr. Oliver of the Gadsden Times (!) takes charge of the Editorial department we believe. Success to them, may their "Star" never go down again, but shine brighter and brighter.

If you want the very best article of Western flour cheap, call on NORTH, MOTES & CO., when you come to Oxford.

The prospect for a good crop of wheat through this section, so far as we have seen, is very flattering; though it is very small at this time, and in some places the cold weather has killed out some of it; but we think there is still enough left to make a full crop, and there has been an unusually large amount sown.

Remember that NORTH, MOTES & CO., keep constantly on hand a large lot of furniture which they sell cheap.

Improvement is still going on in every direction, and we hope to see more improvements this year than in any two years previous to this. We feel assured that when we say this, it does not tell more than half of what it will be reasonable to expect under the existing circumstances, if it were not for the stringency in money matters.

And now we must bid you good-bye with our locals; inasmuch as we are to have a paper in our midst, we give with pleasure all the local matter to them. In taking our leave of you we do so with feelings of regret. Our journey with you though short, has been a very pleasant one indeed, and we have but one thing to regret, and that is that we were not able to furnish you more material, and that which was more interesting. Once more we wipe the tears from our eyes, and bid you farewell. Long life and prosperity to you.

BRICK.

Later.—The work of grading commenced this evening in the corporate limits of Oxford, and will go right ahead to completion from here to Gadsden. They received a new lot of hands this evening.

B.

PINEY WOODS LOCALS

After having been in winter quarters now about three months, we thought it about time to crawl out and plant some corn, as we might need some "dodgers" next Winter. We find everything looking well except cows and sheep.

We began gardening about the 20th of February, and now have peas knee high, if you kneel low enough.

We have two nice little schools going on in our neighborhood—one male teacher and one of the other kind.

We will have preaching at our Church four times a month, provided dear old brother Warrick is able to preach once a week.

Our neighborhood intend to plant as much Cotton as they can cultivate, and send their children to school while public money holds out so well.

Our ladies are expecting to sell a great deal of butter this Summer, if the straw keeps old Muley alive until the grass comes in. They did intend to sell some few eggs before setting time; but as yet the hens seem very unconcerned.

Dear Lon, I close with the request that you see to it that Mr. Hill don't die with the tickles.

MISS JANE.

RABBIT TOWN LOCALS

Farming goes on beautifully. All the energetic tillers of the ground these fair and pretty days are "stirring stumps." Mules and horses move lively from daylight until dark, and then the farmers wish the days two or three hours louger. Some of my neighbors are talking of planting corn this week. Is it possible? Yes, I've heard several use such expressions as this. "I wanted to plant such and such field last week, but the weather was unfavorable and did not get quite ready, but this week I will plant that field sure, if the weather stays this way."

Wheat is scarcely discoverable in the fields, very backward indeed; but still some of us are hopeful of a good crop of wheat yet, from the one fact that we have had such quantities of snow this Winter and Spring. Folks over here believe powerfully in signs.

Last Year's Cotton.—This article is all gone: likewise the greenbacks received for it. There may be one or two in this settlement who have not been so tight up for money and who are waiting to get the top of the Spring market.

Joano, (as the negroes call it) is becoming very popular with the Choccoloccoans. They are determined to make a spoon or spoil a horn. Every man, to a man, has purchased more or less of it, and some are buying material and making we hear, (one man we know of—the Model farmer) tons after Mr. Turner's receipt, and still there is a huge cry after Guano. The manufacturers will make the spoon.

Personal.—Mr. E. Manning has been back from Texas for some time. He speaks highly of that country.

Turkey Catching.—Lon, we have neighbors over here (Wm. J. Whitesides and E. A. Hall,) who are very successful in catching turkeys. They have caught and feasted on them until they have gone to gobbling. It will be dangerous for them to go out into the mountains, since little Dad and others too are bad gobbler hunters. Can't you see Cap't Crook and get him to have the Legislature convened for their especial benefit. A very limited turkey law would suffice. The mountain known by us all as Rock-house mountain would be territory enough.

Please tell Col. Parr, that if he has any more Irish potatoes grown by Robt. Grubbs, to save them for James Manning: or if he should get any more, to keep them and oblige.

Can't you send the cow doctors over to Rabbit Town. James Manning and B. O. Raney will pay for one year.

[Communicated.]

Editor Republican.—That the Southern States have suffered greivous wrongs at the hands of the Government of the United States, since the surrender of the Army of Virginia, by the lamented General Lee, in 1865; and that the government has violated her plighted faith in every conceivable manner towards the people of the South, is notoriously true. To particularize is useless, we all know and feel the unparalleled oppression.

What remedy have we? And how is it to be obtained?

The great remedy is to be sought and found at the ballot-box.

In a few instances of late, success has crowned the united efforts of the Democratic and Conservative parties. in Alabama for instance, we have acheived a great success; have taken one regular upright step in the right direction; let us continue our united efforts in the same direction. And, to that end let us discard, and refuse to give aid and comfort, politically, to such persons and papers, as persist wittingly or unwittingly, in a course calculated to divide our ranks, thereby directly, or indirectly giving aid to our political adversaries. If they know better, they are unworthy, and if they do not know better, they are unsafe; and in neither case should they be followed.

That man or paper, giving publicity to slanderous statements, and cowardly insinuations, against the character, private or official, of others, and especially if against a personal or political friend or partisan, upon no better evidence than the statements, oral or written, of those who are not only bankrupt in property and reputation, and whom he knows to be sworn personal and political enemies of those concerning whom they speak, and also, having large pecuniary interests at stake; that man or paper, circulating statements emenating from such source, will not do to follow. Should not be listened to, nor read; nay, if a hearing be given, the effect may be similar to that upon our Mother Eve, when she gave audience to the Serpent, and enemy of God in the garden—it will tend to seduce and corrupt, and afford the enemy an easy victory. What should we think of all who circulate such stuff, coming from those who are wholly irresponsible, thus making themselves the second-hand retailers of base slanderers. Let him alone, give him no aid nor comfort in his unhallowed work of inellible meanness. Though he prated never so eloquently of his devotion to the interests of the State, and the party, let him alone; he is unclean still.

"He who steals my purse, steals trash, &c."

In conclusion, we propose that the people of Calhoun county hold a mass meeting at the Court House in Jacksonville, on the 1st day of our next Circuit Court, commencing on the 1st Monday of April next, to consult and advise as to what can be done in furtherance of this great remedy.

Ey vs. Aular.

The old adage of never too old to learn is verified by our cotemporary, the Watchtower, following the Home in the matter of "local items" from different portions of the county. We are glad to see our journalistic ideas adopted by our confrere.—Talladega News.

Yes your "journalistic idea" has been adopted by many of your "old confreres." The Jacksonville Republican adopted it just about six months before the publication of the Home was resumed under its present management, or the News was born. Your "idea" is a good one, and we know our friend Grant is much obliged to you for it. The most marvellous thing connected with your revelation is, that our Jacksonville friend should have foreseen and adopted your "idea" so long before you put it into execution yourself. Verily, this is the age of wonders!—Talladega Watchtower.

North Carolina.

A correspondent from the State of N. C. writes to the New York World and gives a most painful account of the present condition of things in that once proud and opulent old State. The World says:

A correspondent writing to us on other matters gives incidentally a harrowing insight into the condition of affairs in North Carolina. "The country," he says, "has been in a state of uproar and excitement during the last nine months. Hundreds have been arrested and bound over for trial before the United States Court at Raleigh next June. Many have already attended court there last September and December. Some poor men will have to sell their last cow from a gang of little children to attend court 300 miles from home, and many have fled from the country." It is revolting to think that while the daily closing in upon him Grant should yet be mercilessly harassing these poor, conquered people. Were he unstained and unspotted himself his cruelty might pass as misdirected zeal, but with what face can an almost enmeshed and proven jobber justify the villanous terrorism of which our correspondent writes?

The Longest Speech ever Made in the World.

The opening argument of the Attorney General of England, Sir John D. Coleridge, who appears for the defence in the celebrated Tickborne case, has proved perhaps the very longest speech ever heard of. It was begun on the 14th of January, and at our last accounts it had not been concluded. However, ten days after he began, neither Judge nor jury showed any wish to have the distinguished advocate stop speaking. Before proceeding on that day, he remarked that certain ingenuus persons who were ignorant of the facts had critcised him for not restricting himself to a day and a half. But it was necessary, inasmuch as the jury were now to hear for the first time a connected account of the case from its outset, that he should still detain them. This, however, he would not do one moment longer than was absolutely necessary. Both the Lord Chief Justice and the jury at once expressed the opinion that the Attorney General had not wasted a single moment since he began to speak.

Order of Sale in the Matter of the Alabama and Chattanooga Railroad.

In another column our readers will find the order of sale decreed by the Hon. Richard Busteed, Judge of the United States District Court in Bankruptcy. The liens and rights of the State are all fully protected, and, if these proceedings are not interrupted, our confident hope is that we are, more speedily than many have suspected reaching a settlement of this most troublesome question.

Montgomery Advertiser.

An economical Iowan, who had a toothache, determined to remove his tooth in the Indian fashion. Accordingly he bent down a sapling in the woods, lay down himself, and attached a stout cord to his tooth and the sapling. Then he touched the spring, and the next he knew he had jumped over a grove of about forty small trees, and was trying to get out of a small pond that he happened to alight in.

In 1871 a man in Yates City, Illinois, named Alpaugh, was called on to give a day's road-labor. He refused, saying he had already paid his tax at Ipava. Yates City sued for the tax and was beaten before the Justice. The City then appealed to the Circuit Court, where last week one Judge, five lawyers, and twelve jurymen were kept busy three days. Then the jury disagreed, so a new trial is to take place. Costs now amount to $400, and the case will not stop short of the Supreme Court Conkling dresses in the flashiest manner, and walks with a gingerly step, as if his shoes pinched him. Summer's face is inclined to be puffy, and his well-dyed hair is very abundant. He wears a much-cultivated top-knot, which falls becomingly over his forehead. Schurz has the sallow complexion of a scholar and the energy of a patent-right man. Carpenter fills up the ideal of a good liver. In old times he would have spent his time in a bar-room. Trumbull looks more like an old-fashioned deacon than any thing else. Morton has the faculty of expressing as much with his eye as in his words. They have a peculiar lancinating effect which gives emphasis to his statements. Nye has as fine a head as there is in the Senate. It is well shaped and large, and his face is very intellectual, which proves that the face is not always an index of character.

Ind. Eve. Journal.

S. J. Bestor, an eccentric gentleman of Hartford, regularly stamps all letters held for postage in that city, attaching to the envelope a printed statement of the fact. The responses he has received would fill a large volume. A resident of Elizabeth, New Jersey, writes that Marcus L. Ward, became Governor of that State through that course. A Boston burglar says: "Bester, you're a gentleman; I am—no matter what; but I got a letter you stamped just in time to dodge the beaks and be off. Here is a stamp, and if I ever happen in Hartford in a professional way, I shan't crack your bin if I knows myself.

Mr. Story, of the Chicago Times. says that his paper has made more money in three months since the fire then in any one year previous. He expects to cover his losses in two years, and have a better building than he lost.

A facetious individual, not many miles from Danbury, sought to "draw his wife out" by pretending to be found dead with an empy laudanum vial by his side. And that lady was a good deal shocked at first, but having read that a needle introduced into the human flesh would indicate on its surface whether that flesh was dead, and being a woman of eminent practicability, she at once armed herself with a polished instrument of nearly two inches growth, and, with throbbing heart and bated breath, introduced a good share of its length into the deceased. What the surface of the needle really indicated was not learned, as he took it with him as he passed through the sash.—Ex

Telegraphic.

Charleston, S. C., March 9.—The Unionville Times reports that arrests for Ku-kluxism were commenced in Union county last week, by Deputy U. S. Marshal Williams, and that much excitement exists throughout the country where complete harmony and quiet had prevailed for many months. Business of all kinds was suddenly suspended, and on many plantations work was abandoned, and laborers discharged, owners being unwilling to risk planting a crop, owing to the prevailling uncertainty.

Versailles, March 11.

In the National Assembly to-day a motion was introduced amid great excitement, to censure and prosecute two Deputies for libel on the Chamber. A counter motion was made to pass to order of the day, this, which is equivalent to laying original motion on the table was followed by a tumult unprecedented even in these Halls, but it was finally declared adopted, whereon the storm broke out afresh. Members of the right shouted the passage to order of the day is not an amnesty of impunity, but of disdain. House became furious. Violent exclamations were exchanged by right and left and scene of confusion was painfully protracted Accused deputies rose in their seats and refused to accept such pardon as action of the assembly implied. They were received with a storm of groans.

Jules Favre tried to speak but his voice was inaudible in the uproar.

The Prince of Wales happened to visit the Assembly during the sitting and witnessed the entire proceeding.

Washington, March 11.

Chief Engineer Lamden has been ordered to Pensacola Navy Yard.

The House Election Committee has unanimously resolved to report in favor of Handly in the case of Norris vs. Handly from Alabama.

Votes in the House to-day indicate that Hooper's civil rights bill would pass could a vote be reached.

Appropriation for $50,000 for civil reform passed, through sixteen Republicans voted nay.

House.—Large number of bills introduced and referred.

The Select Committee was ordered to investigate Secretary Robeson and Naval affairs generally.

Brooks moved to suspend the rules and adopt his Resolutions regarding Mexico offered last Friday; rejected ayes 72, nays 90.

Farnsworth from Post office Committee reported a bill to suppress the system of straw bids for carrying the mails, providing that any person who has been accepted and who then fails to enter into a contract and perform the service shall be deemed guilty of misdemeanor and be liable to a penalty of five thousand dollars fine, and one years imprisonment.

Potter offered an amendment authorizing Post Master General to accept new sureties from contractors in place of existing sureties. Agreed to. The bill as amended was then passed. Bill making one-third of customs receiveable in legal tenders failed—89 to 68.

Hereford moved to suspend the rules and adopt a Resolution declaring it to be unconstitutional and tyranical usurpation of power for Congress to attempt to force mixed schools on the States or pass any law interfering with churches, public carriers or Inn keepers. Rejected by yeas 50 nays 87. The speaker announced as the select Committee on the charges against the Secretary of the Navy, Messrs. Blair of Michigan, Sargent, Peters, Voorhees, and Warren.

Getz offered Resolution instructing the Committee of Ways and Means to report on the propriety of abolishing all Internal Revenue laws and imposing taxes on the State in proportion to population agreed to.

A number of amnesty bills were presented and passed by unanimous consent and without being read.

Boston, March 12—Straw, Republican, is undoubtedly elected Governor of New Hampshire. The Republicans probably have a majority in the Legislature.

A private telegraph from Concord says the State Senate stands nine Republicans and three Democrats. The Council three Republicans and two Democrats.

"GO-MORROW."

Lot and His Wife: A New Version.

[From Lippincott for March.]

A correspondent in Virginia sends the following:

As I approached a pond a few days ago where some negroes were cutting some ice, I chanced to hear the conclusion of a conversation between two of the hands on the subject of religion.

"What you know 'bout 'ligion? You don't know nuthin' 'tall 'bout 'ligion."

"I know heap 'bout 'ligion; ain't I bin done read de Bible?"

"What you read in de Bible? I lay you can't toll me nuthin' what you read in de Bible?"

"But I kin, dough (though). I read 'bout 'Morro."

"What sort o' 'Morro–to-morro?"

"No, Go-Morrow."

"Well, whar he go, and what he go fur?"

"Shoh, man! he didn' go nowhar. 'coz he was a town."

"Dar! didn' I tell you didn' know nuthin' 'bout nuthin'? You read de Bible! Hoccum (how come) de town name 'Morro, and how de town gwine go anywhar? Town ain't got no legs."

"Man, you's a born foo'. De town named Go-Morro, but dey call it 'Morr, coz dey didn' have no time to stay dar talkin' long talk."

"Debbil dey didn'! Ef dey stay dar to-day, why can't they stay dar to-morrow? 'Splain me dat."

"But dey all gone, and de town too. All done bu'n up."

"Ef dere ain't no pepul, and dere ain't no town' how de town name 'Morrow? G'long' nigger! Didn't I know you didn't know nuthin' 'tall 'bout 'ligion? But (sarcastically) "tole me some mo' what you reab in de Bible."

"Well, 'Morrow was a big town, —'bout mighty nigh's big as Washington City—and de pepul wat live dar was de meannes' pepul in de whole worl'. Dey was dat mean dat de Lord he couldn't abear 'em, and he make up his min' dat he gwine bu'n de town clear up. But dar was one good man dar—member uv de church, a p'sidin elder—name Lot."

"Yaas, I know'd him."

"Whar you know'd him?"

"On de cannell (canal). He owned a batto, and dror' it hisse'f"

"Heist, man! I talkin' sense, now. Den de Lord he came to Lot, and he say, 'Lot, I gwive bu'n dis town. You and you' wife git up and gether you' little alls, and put out 'fo' de crack o' day, coz I cert'n'y gwine bu'n dis town and de pepul to-morrow.' Den Lot he and his wife riz and snatched up their little alls and traveled soon in de mornin'. And the Lord he tuk two light'ud (lightwood) knots and some shavin's, and he set fire to dat ar town uv 'Morro, and he bu'n it spang up clear down to de groun'."

"What 'come o' Lot?"

"He and he wife, dey went, and dey went and dey went, twell pres'n'ly he wife say, 'Lor! ef I ain't gone and lef' de meal sifter and the rollin' pin, I wisht I may die!' and she turn roun' to go fetch 'em, and she turn roun', and—and —she dar now!"

"What she doin' dar?"

"Nuthin'."

"Must be mons'us lazy 'ooman."

"No, she ain't. De Lord he tu'n her to pillow uv salt, 'coz she too 'quisitive.'

"Dar! ev'rybody know 'bout sack o' salt; who ever hear 'bout pillow of salt? But what 'come of Lot?'

"Lot, he weren't keerin' tall 'bout no rollinpin and no meal sifter, so he kep' straight 'long, 'thout turnin' uv he head neither to the right, neither to the lef.'

"And lef de ole' 'oman dar?'

"Yaas.'

"In the middle of de road?'

"Yaas.'

"Must keer'd mighty little fur her —want to git maried to ceck'n wife, I spec-' But de fus' man comi 'long and want to git some salt to bake asheake, he gwine to bust a piece out'n Lot's wife and 'stroy her; and what you think o' dat? Call dat 'ligion? And de ole man lef' her? and you read dat—'

Here a peremptory order from the foreman to "go to work" broke short the conversation.

Our readers will remember a cold-blooded murder committed in Bullock county, the past summer, by W. J. GILMORE. He had seduced his niece, and her sister, coming into possession of the fact, divulged the affair before a church meeting—GILMORE, we understand, as also the unfortunate young woman upon whom the outrage was perpetrated, being members of the same church. A committee was appointed to investigate the affair, with a view of proceeding against GILMORE before the church and the courts. To prevent this GILMORE armed himself with a double barreled shot gun, waylaid the informant—the young lady—as she was leaving the church, and shot her, causing almost instant death. GILMORE then fled the country; the governor offered a reward for his apprehension, but all efforts to arrest him failed. Some two weeks ago a gentleman at Fort Smith, Arkansas, having been posted of the affair, recognized the man GILMORE and arrested him. In company with other friends this gentleman brought Gilmore from Fort Smith, and conveyed him to Bullock county jail.

Rev. STUART ROBINSON, of Louisville, a Southern clergyman, has just entered suit for libel against the proprietors of the Chicago Evening Post, in which he lays his damages at one hundred thousand dollars. The Post not long since stated that the plaintiff, while addressing his congregation, advised them to ship clothing infected with yellow fever to prominent Northern cities, and the reverend gentleman declares that he never said anything of the sort, and now sues for the moderate sum named.

Sarsaparillian Resolvent

Has made the most astonishing cures; so quick, so rapid are the changes the body undergoes, under the influence of this truly wonderful Medicine, that

Every day an increase in Weight and Flesh is Felt.

THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER.

Every drop of the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT communicates through the Blood, Sweat, Urine, and other fluids and juices of the system the vigor of life, for it repairs the wastes of the body with new and sound material. Scrofula, Syphilis, Consumption, Glandular disease. Ulcers in the throat, Mouth, Tumors, Nodes in the Glands and other parts of the system, Sore Eyes. Strumorous dischaarges from the Ears, and the worst forms of Skin diseases, Eruptions, Fever Sores, Scald Head, Ring Worm, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Acne, Black Spots, Worms in the Flesh, Tumors, Cancers in the Womb, and all weakening and painful discharges, Night Sweats, Loss of Sperm and all wastes of the life principle, are within the curative range of this wonder of Modern Chemistry, and a few days' use will prove to any person using it for either of these forms of disease its potent power to cure them.

If the patient, daily becoming reduced by the wastes and decomposition that is continuly progressing, succeeds in arresting these wasts, and repairs the same with new material made from healthy blood—and this the SARSAPARILLIAN will and does secure —a cure is certain; for when once this remedy commences its work of purification, and succeeds in diminishing the loss of w hu its repairs will be rapid, and every day ees patient will feel himself growing better and stronger, the food digesting better, appetite improving, and weight increasing.

Not only does the Sarsaparillian Resolvent excels all known remedial agents in the curt of Chronic, Scrofulous, Constitutional, and Skin diseases; but it is the only positive curd for

Kidney and Bladder Complaints,

Urinary, and Womb diseases, Gravel, Diabetes, Dropsy, Stoppage of Water, Incontinence of Urine, Bright's Diseas, Albuminuria, and in all cases where there are brickdust deposits, or the water is thick, cloudy, mixed with substances like the white of an egg, or threrds like white silk, there is a morbid, dark, billious appearance, and white bone dust deposits, and when there is a pricking, burning sensation when passing water, and pain in the Small of hte Back and along the Loins.

A LECTURE TO YOUNG MEN.

Just Published, in a Sealed Envelope.

PRICE SIX CENTS.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment and Radical Cure of Spermatorrhœa, or Seminal weakness, Involuntary emissions, Sexual Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally; Nervousness, Consumption, Epilepsy, and Fits: Menta and Physical Incapacity, resulting from Self-Abuse, &c.—By ROBERT J. CULVERWELL, M. D., Author of the "Green Book" &c.

The world-renowned author in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self-Abuse may be effectually removed without medicines, and without dangerous surgical operations, bouies, instruments, rings, or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. THIS LECTURE WILL PROVE A BOON TO THOUSANDS AND THOUSANDS.

Sent under seal, to any address, in a plain sealed envelope, on the receipt of six cents, or two postage stamps. Also, Dr. Culverwell's "Marriage Guide," price 25 cents. Address the Publishers,

VINEGAR BITTERS

PURELY VEGETABLE FREE FROM ALCOHOL

DR. J. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA VINEGAR BITTERS

J. WALKER, Proprietor. R. H. McDONALD & Co., Druggists & Gen. Agents, San Francisco, Cal., and 34 Commerce St., N.Y.

MILLIONS Bear Testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.

Vinegar Bitters are not a vile Fancy Drink, Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors, doctered, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing, also, the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and of all the Visceral Organs.

FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, whether in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.

They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid Liver and Bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effect.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

PIN, TAPE, and other WORMS, urking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS AND DEALERS.

Dr. GOTTLIEB FISCH'S BITTERS.

(Shape of the Bottle)

This preparation of the great Scientist, Dr. Gottlieb Fisch, of Germany, is based on the fact that, as all materials of the body are derived from Food, so all Vital Force, or Health, is derived from the Force stored up in Food. Dr. Fisch's Bitters enables the System to liberate and appropriate these Forces, creates Appetite, cures Dyspepsia, with its resulting Debility and lack of Nervous Energy; so tones the Stomach and Liver as to make Constipation and Billousness impossible; reinforces the System so it can tide over bad results of changing climate, water &c., and better endure the demands often unexpectedly made on its Force and Energy. Ladies in delicate health, aged persons and all emaciated and weak after sickness, will rapidly strengthen by using this great preparation.

MESSRS. J. & S. BONES, Dear Sir:

I have given the 16 inch Mill (Clemans) bought of you, a thorough test, a but express myself perfectly satisfied. The power was the running gear fo which although in very bad order, was sufficient to grind one bushel (by the in eleven minutes, I find no trouble to do my grinding before breakfast. Seve my neighbors were present at the time, and all were satisfied with the resu were astonished at the quantity and fine quality of the meal produced in so time. I prefer the meal to any steam mill meal. The 16 inch mill I bought for the Foster Farm, and used since the above was written proves equally tory. It is a complete mill.

A BRILLIANT LYRIC.

The following lyric is from the brilliant pen of Dr. Frank O. Ticknor, of Columbus. It is vivid with the flash of sabres and the clang of arms:

"OUR LEFT"—MANASSAS.

TO JOSEPH E. JOHNSTON.

From dawn to dark, they stood
That long Midsummer's day!
While fierce and fast the battle-blast
Swept rank on rank away!

From dawn to day they fought—
With legions swept and cleft,
And still the wide, black battle-tide
Poured deadlier on our Left!

They closed each ghastly gap!—
They dressed each shattered rank!—
They knew how well—that Freedom fell
With that exhausted flank!

"Oh! for a thousand men!
Like those who melt away!"
And down they came, with steel and flame,
Four thousand to the fray!

They leapt the laggard train—
The panting stream might stay!
And down they came, with steel and flame,
Four thousand to the fray!

Right through the blackest cloud
Their lightning path they cleft,
And triumph came with deathless fame
To our conquered Left!

Ye, of your sons secure!
Ye, of your dead bereft!
Honor the Brave! who died to save
Your all upon our LEFT!

TO-MORROW.

To-day can sing of yesterday,
Songs tender, tinct with sorrow;
But mute she comes along the way—
All beautiful to-morrow!

Her face is full of prophecies
Her lips have still withholden,
And gazing in her radiant eyes
Song turns to silence golden.

Hope rapt beside her pathway stands,
Asks nothing but the vision,
And turns at night with empty hands,
Still dreaming of fruition.

Ah! beauty! soon as present, gone,
Most fleet and most beguiling;
Why are our hearts forever drawn
By that strange, far off smiling?

Why is it that from new delays
New faith they still can borrow?
Oh, is it that among the days
Comes Heaven's first good to-morrow?

She will come in with no alarms,
Under this same low portal,
And clasp us as in mortal arms,
And we shall turn immortal!
[Harper's for March.

The World's Death Rate.

An examination of the life statistics of the census of this country and of Europe reveals many interesting particulars. The number of deaths in Europe every year is 1 out of every 42 inhabitants, or 2 38-100 per cent., nearly double the average death-rate in the United States which is only 1 for every 81 inhabitants, or 1 23-100 per cent. The leading countries of Europe present the following annual bills of mortality:

England, 1 death to every 46 inhabitants; Denmark 1 death to every [illegible]; Belgium, 1 death to every 44; Norway and Sweden, 1 death to every 41; Austria, 1 death to every [illegible]; Prussia 1 death to every 39; France, 1 death to every [illegible].

The life tables of the United States show a much wider range; from the highest, Arkansas, where the annual deaths are 1 to every 40 inhabitants—a little over two per cent. of the population—to the lowest, Oregon, whose death-rate is less than one-half of one per cent, or 1 to every 200 inhabitants.

The following classification, or grounding, of the States and Territories, will be found interesting, and valuable, also, as a directory. It exhibits the average yearly number of deaths to population.

New England States, 1 in 68; Middle States, 1 in 88; Southern States, 1 in 70; Western States, 1 in 81; Northwestern States, 1 in 120; Pacific States, 1 in 115; Atlantic States, 1 in 80; Gulf States, 1 in 63; Mississippi Valley States, 1 in 80.

These tables, which will be new to most persons, are another evidence how highly we, in this new country of ours, are favored It is a general idea that longevity of the Old World exceeds that of the New, but, if it is so it applies to only special classes—those raised by wealth and rank and social privilege above the many.

POLIGNAC.—Prince Camille de Polignac, sent by President Thiers as military attache to the French Embassy at Berlin, is a son of the persecuted Minister of Charles X, and served during the late war in the Confederate army, about two years on the staff of General Dick Taylor, to which he was appointed by President Davis.

OH HO!—A report in Washington has it that Longstreet will lose his position for siding with the Warmouth faction.

AMATA.

BY A YOUNG LADY OF JACKSONVILLE.

CHAPTER VI.—CONTINUED.

Then he silently bore her through the garden to the entrance door, and a carriage being soon procured, in a few minutes they were home. Without was a hurricane like spring storm and the rain drops dashed against the panes, within, Amata in perplexed fever phantasies.

She raved much of a sweet violin-voice and of old Bach, who she imagined was looking on her asking why she wished never to hear his gavotte again, never again? Then she broke out in long sobs and ever repeated wringing her hands the same words."

When morning dawned she became more quiet, and without Nature's storm had ceased.

Eberhard stepped to the open window, A rosy streak in the east announced the approach of the new day and the Easter bells rang in the Festival.

The Resurection Feast!

It rejoiced all, even the lonely--doubly lonely man, who leaned there at the window: but the old, yet always new, song of true love had been sung in his wife's heart—yet not by him!

With true brotherly sympathy, and yet at the same time with the quiet easy composure of an experienced physician had Counsellor Born during the long night stood by his friend's side.

He did not belong to the literary circle at Frau Weinemann's and, of course, knew nothing of the relation Amata's broken words bore to the events of the past evening, but his quick eye told him that more than the present anxiety for his wife, was to be read on his friend's pale features, though the true cause of that painful expression lay from his thoughts.

When he visited his patient in the morning he declared her illness to be brain-fever and though he believed there was no danger of life, yet her case was critical.

The first thing, which he demanded. was a faithful nurse, and the hastily despatched messenger brought, after a few hours, the faithful Martha to the bedside of her former nursling.

Martha had been to Amata's house but seldom—she came but rarely to town, she was much needed on the estate during her mastsr's absence. And then she felt a certain reserve towards Amata, and avoided being alone with her, for her experienced eye soon told that that happiness, which she had prayed for "her child," had not fallen to her share, and in the timid young wife she sought in vain for any trace of the once light-hearted, happy, maiden.

And the simple uneducated Martha differed from the shrewd Professorin Wedel; she did not wish the confidence of the married pair, her honest open nature told her that all interference of a third person, no matter how good the intention, should be avoided in such cases

Formerly she had often talked with Amata, who told her every thing, of Walter Volkmar and his love, but never in Amata's presence, after her marriage, had that name passed her lips. With anxiety had she received the news of the sudden return of the Artist, and the message which called her to Amata's bed-side, was a death-blow to her heart.

Her presence seemed to have an unaccountable beneficial effect on Amata—At first she did not recognize Martha, but in her more quiet moments a shimmer of joy passed over her features and she fell into the first short slumber since her illness.

When she awoke, she was more quiet; and like a tired child that rejoices again to see, after wandering about, a well-known face, Amata looked on the homely, though so familiar, features of her nurse. With longing, observing eyes she followed her movements as she moved through the room with noiseless steps, in her bright cotton frock and snow-white apron and cap. No words had been interchanged between the two but they took again their old position-nurse and nursling, as though they had never been separated.

A hundred-weight had fallen from Professor Gregorius' heart on Martha's arrival.

He had until now filled the office of a sick-nurse with a care and tenderness touching to behold with such a great powerful man, but he failed through excessive love and anxiety, and Counselor Born rejoiced for his sake when the experienced Martha arrived.

Martha looked on the demeanor of the Professor with painful astonishment. During the day when Amata became more quiet and peaceful, and lay on the sofa, languid and weak, he stayed mostly in the next room or crept noiselessly behind her bed whence he could, unseen by her look on her—and oh such looks!

Every sad expression in his dark eyes, every deeply melancholy expression on his noble countenance cut Martha to the heart.

But at night when the fever rose and delirium troubled the brain of the patient then he held her in his arms, like a mother holds her sick child, and covering her hands with kisses, whispered soft sweet words of love to her.

Then would Martha step behind the curtain and wipe her honest eyes. "Oh my God!" she sighed, "can it be Thy will that such love should not awaken like-love in her heart?" Then when morning dawned, and the patient fell into a light slumber, he would creep softly out, that her eye on awakening might not rest on him.

No merciful sleep would take the present time from him—With slow steps, his arms folded on his breast, he strode up and down his room.

The learned man, whose clear farseeing mind could conjure up new worlds of science, what did it all avail him now?—

He had set his whole life's happiness on the winning of a woman's heart—his wife's heart—and he had failed!—

Where was now his self confidence—his bold self reliance;—floated away—floated away, like the boat without a steering hand; and he, who had steered it so boldly—he stood alone on the deserted banks.

And without, before the house, stood another watcher all through the long, cold spring-night.

Walter had not been able to resolve to depart, as long as he knew Amata's life was in danger; by day he never approached her house,—he imagined the soles of his feet would burn on crossing that threshold—and he had learned that her condition was most critical during the night, then he gave himself the melancholy satisfaction of standing before those walls which hid his dearest, and of looking up to the window through which shone a dim light from the sick-room.—

Full of sorrow to him were also those hours of dreadful suspense, and his greif was more bitter than Eberhard's, augmented as it was, by remorse of conscience.

No excuse, no evasion did the strict judge grant himself for his unaccountable blindness. And yet amid the tortures of self-reproach which he heaped upon himself, a wild exultation passed through his heart, an exultation like that experienced by the warrior, wounded to the heart, who sees the banner saved, for which he shed his life's blood.

He had not been deceived in Amata! Her heart had remained true to him. And whatever had been the motives, which induced her to give her hand to another, her first love belonged to him alone. He knew that he would never again see her lovely face—he would henceforth make it his duty to put land and sea between himself and her—and the daily sin-offering of his life would be the prayer that she might learn to love her husband, her noble, high-minded husband, and esteem him, as he deserved;—and yet he bore with him on his lonely life's jorney the unspeakable comfort that she had loved him!———

Then when the hoarfrost hung on his long hair and he repaired to his dwelling chilled to the heart he brought forth his beloved violin and poured forth all his woe and sorrow, his repentance and his joy, at the same time in wonderful music; and the neighbors listening in halfdreams wondered how early the stranger practiced his art and were charmed and saddened by the peculiar melodies, unlike any they had ever before heard.

"You will consider me a barbarian, dear friend," said Counselor Born, when after many days and nights the fever still continued, "but I am of the opinion that these magnificent locks must fall under the shears, the heavy load torments the poor head, and we must do all to diminish the disease. I did not dare tell my wife I should make such a proposal, but I think you will love your dear wife even without curls, and she herself will be satisfied hereafter when you tell her it was necessary."

"Every thing must be done to aid her recovery," Eberhard answered.

"That is right!" said the Counselor, "and you will see the hair of your little wife again admired by the whole town after a few years!"

Born called Martha, who with heavy hand and not without tears, cut off the splendid hair, once her joy and pride.

But to the patient it was a visible benefit, and from that day a slow but progressive improvement took place

"Now we have won!" rejoiced the Counselor.

But Eberhard asked himself whether life was not the saddest gift for a poor lacerated heart.

As the illness of the young wife had awakened universal sympathy, so the tidings of her convalescence gave joy to all.

Enquiries poured in from all sides. No one had been more distressed, no one had been more frequent in enquiries than Dr. Lendiger.

Daily one saw his sorrowful face, appear before the Professor's house, and when Amata was somewhat better and the Professor asked him occasionally into his study, it was touching to see the pains he took to ascend the stairs softly.

When he stumbled against any piece of furniture with his broad feet or knocked anything over which had escaped his short sighted eyes, and it was heard over the whole house like a wheel-barrow of stones being unloaded, Eberhard could not do otherwise than comfort his friend assuring him that no one had heard the fall.

And within the sick-room a sad smile passed over Amata's pale face, as Martha remarked shaking her head:

"There is the Herr Botanist again with his long red neck and long legs!"

But day after day the most splendid bouquets appeared, for which the Botanist had plundered the green houses of the botanical garden, wounding his hands severely with the thorns.

They were not allowed, on Born's strictest commands, to remain long in the sick-room, but their arrival formed the brightest moment in the monotonous life of the patient, and the only expression of visible joy which lightened up Amata's features during the day was owing to these bouquets.

And as her improvement progressed, other and less modest visits took place.

One day Martha having left the room for a quarter of an hour, found on her return, to her great astonishment, a lady in black sitting by Amata's bed-side—she would take no denial from the servent who opened the door for her.

"My dear good woman!" whispered Frau Wedel as she observed the not wholly delighted expression of Martha's countenance, "how can we all thank you enough for having taken such good care of our dear young Frau Professorin! Truly the appearance of the dear patient does all honor to your nursing!"

Martha bowed silently, as became her condition, but she would have liked to break forth against the lady who took it upon herself to thank her for that which she had done as her most sacred duty, her greatest pleasure for "her child." What right had the stranger to come between these old established relations? And besides, how came it that she forced her way into the sick-room without the permission of the physician?

The excellent Professorin little suspected the inimicable feelings of the attendant, so sharply watched by her, while she tenderly conversed with, or rather talked to Amata, for Amata appeared neither to have the strength or the desire to interrupt the smooth flow of talk of the clever lady.

"Well we will soon see you again among us, my dear young friend, and what a joy it will be to us all! But let me tell you, you know my motherly interest for you—you must not exact too much of your delicate constitution in future, and if I were your husband I would forbid you to practice music for a whole year!"

Impatiently the patient turned on her bed, a feverish red colored her cheeks.

"The lady will not certainly take it amiss of me," said Martha, politely, but with decision, "but I do not think Counselor Born would allow the Frau Professorin to sit up longer to-day—moreover it is just the hour, she is accustomed to take a little nap."

The Professorin rose——

"Well then, my love, I must leave you, though it is very hard for me! But I hope you will allow me from time to time to visit you and relieve this good woman sometimes of your care?"

Amata thanked her feebly and Martha silently accompanied the guest to the door.

As the Professorin glided out with her accustomed serpent-like movements, both women interchanged a look and both understood the other.

In the afternoon of that same day Frau Wienemann drove up. She asked if the Professor would receive her, Eberhard could not refuse her, and she was conducted into Amata's deserted sitting-room, where he met her with his usual quiet politeness. But the learned lady was not yet content, and rested not, until, under pretence of wishing to borrow a book she obtained entrance into Eberhard's study, where his patience was put to a severe test by her long stay and her demonstrations of friendship.

At last after every favorite topic of the lady had been talked over and she had expressed for the tenth time her sorrow at the altered appearance of her monosyllabic host, she asked to be permitted to see Amata. Eberhard answered with embarrassment that he must obtain permission of the physician before permitting strangers to see the patient; but the lady replied with a vexed expression: "Of cource, if you regard me as a stranger, my dear Professor, that alters the case! I had hoped to be received as a friend by your wife!"—so Eberhard gave over and himself conducted her to his wife's room.

He had heard from Martha of Frau Wedel's visit, and as displeased as he was thereby, he held it for prudent not to seem to give the excellent widow more preference than any other—Frau Wienemann did not remain long in Amata's room. Her aim was only to gratify her curiosity by seeing with her own eyes how much "Professor Gregorius' doll" had lost of her charms by the loss of her hair, for she was sure that the influence of the young wife on her husband rested chiefly on her personal appearance, and, that under different circumstances, would be diminished.

Yet Amata looked so indescribably lovely with the short locks combed smoothly back under a cap, that the good lady left the house less quiet than she entered it—and a feeling, which almost bordered on hatred, even towards Eberhard, rose in her breast as she compared the cold bow with which he took leave of her to the longing glance he had cast back—as he left his wife's room.

But when, in the evening Counselor Born declared his patient's pulse to have quickened and the fever-symptoms to have returned, he learned from Martha, the events of the day, which burned on her lips—his anger was high.

"Henceforth you must be a true Cerberus, do you understand me, Frau Martha?" he cried his dark eyes flashing. "No one shall be admitted, who do not please you and me; above all no deceitful W.!"

And Frau Martha smoothed her apron contentedly.

She need not be told that twice.

CHAPTER VII.

The queen of Spring, rosy May, had come and trees and shrubs strewed their blossoms before her in homage.

She brought with her the many blessings of newly awakening nature, brought gentle breezes and bright sunshine, early showers and refreshing dew.

But she brought not with her all that was so longingly desired.

She brought not Berthold again to his friends. He slept now many weeks, that last slumber in the far South, his beautiful motherland which had once been his cradle, was now his grave place.

Herr Von Kathen had returned alone, but only to arrange his affairs, and bring about if possible, the sale of his estate. There was no longer any reason for the family to retain it, since Berthold, who was to have taken possession of it, was no more. Frau Von Kathen had declared her intention never again to return to the North, always so disagreeable to her, and her husband yeilded to her will, however hard it was for him.

With a heavy heart had he returned home for the tidings of the illness of his beloved daughter, after his recent loss, filled him with double care—and though he knew of her improvement, yet he could only rest when he was satisfied of the truth with his own eyes.

Amata had indeed so far recovered that the faithful Martha at the end of May could leave her, if unwillingly, yet without fear, in order to assist her master in arranging and packing.

And yet more had the Spring not brought, it brought not again to Eberhard his lost dream of happiness, neither his old hope which had seen before it such a beautiful, rich future; on the contrary it but increased his deep sorrow and reminded him, as only Spring breezes can, of new qualms.

When autumn storms whirl around old dwellings, and dark clouds cover the heavens, the sorrow stricken soul is benefitted by the power of nature, harmonizing with its own feelings. But alas for him in whose face the May-sun laughs when his heart is yet bleeding from fresh wounds! It seems to him bitterest agony, and the despairing cry of Esau comes to him. "Hast thou but one blessing, my Father? Bless me, even me also, O my Father!" — —

Though Eberhard had emptied the cup of worm-wood to the dregs, and though his own deep sorrow lay heavier on him in the midst of exulting nature, he held fast to his God and to his Faith. That which no human science had been able to sully, could not be taken from him by any unhappiness.

He now saw the too bold self-reliance and confidence of his actions, and acknowledged to himself the justness of the punishment, which had fallen upon him. And was there no means by which he could atone for that mistake so he pondered from day to day.

Walter Volkmar was gone. He had on his departure left a letter for Eberhard which deeply moved him, but at the same time awakened in him that great joy, which a noble man feels, when he finds that he has not been deceived in his fellow-man, though all appearances have been against him,—whether or not such a discovery heightens his own sorrow. Eberhard knew that he could place the fullest confidence in the honorable confession of the artist, and the few words with which he replied to the artists' letter, did honor to the writer as well as the recipient.

As both felt themselves not entirely free from fault and both acknowledged in the other the unconsciousness of the past wrong—so they stretched forth to each other the brotherly hand in mutual forgiveness. It was at the same time, and both felt that deeply, a farewell for life.

That beloved being, who had cost them both their life's happiness, stood between them; on earth there was for them no meeting again

Slowly Amata recovered. They had long concealed from her, her brother's death fearing a relapse. But when at last they imparted it to her, she received the news with strange composure;—she could only esteem him too happy—he was at rest—and in her heart she asked; "Oh, why was it not I instead of him?" But the meeting with her father deeply moved her and her tears flowed profusely when he told her of the last days of her beloved brother and delivered to her his last messages for her.

On the whole, Herr Von Kathen's visits were beneficial to his daughter, he knew nothing of the sorrows of the past Winter and would ask no uncalled for questions of her, besides this his prescence prevented her being alone with her husband which was as oppressing as a night-mare to her now, and she looked forward to his approaching departure with double sorrow.

Since that fatal night no words had passed between Amata and her husband in reference to what had then taken place of which, nevertheless both their hearts were full.

Her illness had first made it impossible—and then—what had they to say to each other? She had learned through Frau Wedel of Volkmar's departure. She had listened in silence to that excellent lady's lively expressions of regret and had borne her searching glances as the criminal on the scaffold bears the gazes of the gaping crowd—that death-wound in her heart, she was no longer moved by petty curiosity.

In the mean time Summer was come, Amata appeared not to recover above a certain point, and Counselor Born told her she ought to be ashamed to do him so little credit—he had expected something quite different of her.

At home, however, he shook his head gravely and said one day to his wife with clouded brow, "I am worried about little Frau Gregorius, I confess openly to you Adele it is a case where physicians' art is of no avail. The disease has taken its normal course, and is, to all appearances vanquished, but the strength remains wanting—and I can do nothing!"

The Counselor's wife knew such despondent moments, with her generally so hopeful husband. She laid her hand on his shoulder with a kind smile.

"We humans are only the tools of a higher hand Harold, you are accustomed to say. And what have you yourself written long ago as a household motto and blessing in our family? "I am the Lord, thy physician!"

Is not that also the same with your patients?"

The Counselor's countenance brightened up. "You are right as usual, Adele," he responded, what would such a poor scholar of Esculapius do without you?"

But to return to the poor young Frau Gregorius, continued his wife, "why do you not send her into the country? That would certainly restore her strength."

"That is impossible—just now, my dearest, it is a simple impossibility. Of course I too have thought of it, but Gregorius cannot possibly leave before the holidays, it would create discontent if he should suspend his lectures again during the Summer season, already short enough without that. Last year it could not be otherwise on account of his marriage."

But could not his wife go now and he follow her later, asked the Counselor's wife.

This also has been proposed, but it will not do, answered Born. She is yet too weak, but cheifly too young and inexperienced to take care of herself. Her intention of staying with her father, until Eberhard could travel has been thwarted because just to-day, quite unexpectedly, a purchaser for her father's estate has been found, with whom Herr von Kathen has already come to terms, and Herr von Kathen will soon return to Italy. The old faithful Martha has her hands full—that person is worth her weight in gold Adele, and I long for the time when she can again be with my patient."

Professor Gregorius grieves me from my heart, said the Counselor's wife, I was quite shocked at his altered appearance when I lately met him on the street, he seemed so miserable that he could scarcely answer my question concerning his wife. I cannot forget the sorrowful expression of his countenance.

So every one, who meets him, remarks, said Born, "the collegians all speak of his altered appearance, and Weinemann said yesterday that he looked like one who had a horrible secret or who has something weighing heavily on his conscience—ah—the Counselor interrogated himself suddenly—I would rather have Eberhard Gregorius' conscience to-day than old oily Weinemans' I believe, I told him something to that effect."

You were not violent, Harold? said his wife hesitatingly.

I?—take care!—why should you think that? asked the Counselor with an expression of vexed innocence, of course I only allowed myself a little, highly polite remarks, which might be read in a different manner if the Counselor so pleased,—but to return to our friends. I would give something Adele to find out where the shoe pinches, on both man and wife. But I will wager my head that something is wrong, as often as I go there the English proverb comes into my mind. "There is a skeleton in every house," but what it is the devil only knows!

JACKSONVILLE REPUBLICAN

JACKSONVILLE, ALABAMA.

SATURDAY, MARCH 23rd, 1872.

We neglected last week to accompany communication of "Ely vs. Aular" with editorial disclaimer of certain portisns of the article, as we intended.

We yield to every newspaper and public member of the Democratic party in Alabama as much honesty of intention as we claim, until convinced of the perfidy of the one or the other, and do not desire to play the role of censor either expressed or by implication. So far we have no reason to suppose that a single newspaper or any advisor of our party in the State, is any thing but sincere in expressed opinions concerning the expediency of certain party measures; and we entiraly disapprove of the bandying of harsh epithets among those members of the party who may chance to differ on such measures. Without professing to know (for we really do not know beyond a guess made from the non de plume of our correspondent) for whom his shafts were intended, we think he applied in his communication terms harsher than the occasion called for, and so intended to say last week. We are for no quarrel in our ranks. As frequently remarked by some of our esteemed esteemed cotemporaries, the people will set all things right in November—if they are not confused and demoralized by newspaper strife and crimination. The entire Legislature will be fresh from the people, and will doubtless, early in the session, reveal their will touching our bond difficulties—the only disturbing question in the party. In the next Legislature will lie our remedy for all the ills we suffer under in the State, and to that body we think our party should remit all vexed and disturbing questions, meanwhile moving solidly against the common enemy—Radicalism.

The sentiments of Calhoun County on the disturbing question has been oft expressed through this paper and will doubtless be again expressed through her representative in the Legislature. Like honest people we stand ready to pay our honest debts.—Like men just to ourselves as others we propose to pay none but our honest debts.

The "Intellectual Collossus" of the Gadsden Times with one foot in Oxford and the other in Gadsden (over thirty miles in the crotch), "goes for" our "wildcat town" and her "wildcat editor" in style as classic as the collossus itself and in soft, dreamy and mellifluous sentences peculiar to minds poetical. Aside from the vulgarisms "wildcat" and "bacon," there is not a word in the whole article that Tennyson might not have employed in his Idyls of the King. He leaves us to "poppies and forgetfulness." We are compared to the dreamy, somnolent inhabitants of "ancient Sybaris," "Rip Van Winkle" and other gentlemen fond of a little more folding of the hands together. We rest "like Marius among the ruins of Carthage, amid the antiquated" &c, and do divers and sundry other things not very energetic; but we can't sell corn at a dollar a bushel and bacon at 8 cents per lb, and there he got us. The withering and biting epithet of "wildcat editor" we can manage to worry along under; the torrent of classical allusions we have survived; but the corn and bacon we succumb ot. Of course, we retire vanquished, before a gentleman armed with such potent weapons as corn and bacon.

"Marble playing is the order of the day just now in Gadsden. It looks like dull times to see the clerks at such business."—Gadsden Times.

On entering Gadsden from the river side, a busy scene greets the eye. Her mills are literally ripping up logs by the hundred, men fly backward and forward like weavers shuttles; and the din and whirl of business is deafening and bewildering. Ascending the hill, the business portion of the town lies before the vision of the stranger; but a different scene presents itself. "It looks like dull times to see the clerks" and the oldest inhabitants leisurely loafing up to "taw" and, with the ball of their right fore finger on their white alleys, shooting across the "dead line" at the men in the ring. But whatever feeling the "stranger" may experience in the contrast presented, is soon lost in his admiration of the wonderful proficiency the business men of Gadsden have attained in this rural sport. They are realy splendid on the game in all its variations, whether you take them on "hand-span," "rolly hole" or "seven up." We dare say that the editor of the Times himself, so poor at everything else, can by a little fudging, knock the middle man out nine times in ten. With lumber for a currency and such a sport for recreation, any town is bound to thrive.

THE Montgomery (Alabama) Advertiser and Mail says:

"It was Judge Davis who delivered the judgment of the Supreme Court in 1866 in the celebrated case of Milligan, Bowles and Horsey, who had been condemned to death in Indiana by a military commission held in the very presence of the Civil Courts. By this opinion the Supreme Court saved the lives of three citizens from Radical vengeance, and trampled down these military tribunals."

There is a mistake here, which it is well for the truth of history to correct. The men aforesaid were indeed condemned to death, but their sentence was commuted to imprisonment for life in the Ohio Penitentiary by President Andrew Johnson. The decision of the Court restored them their liberty; but their lives would have been lost, but for the interposition of Andy Johnson about eighteen months before.

Cincinnati Enquirer.

From the Montgomery Ad.

The Portents in the Skies.

The experienced Editor of the Springfield Republican, Mr. Samuel Bowles, who has been a Republican since the party so nominated was established, and who has been a disinterested eye witness of the disastrous effects of what he no doubt conceived in its origin to be a patriotic movement, thus writes to his influential Journal from Washington:

Everything and anything is possible to the political history of the next ninety days. If the Mortons, the Forneys, the chairmen of State Committees, and the other masters of the mere machinery of Republican party decide on renominating General Grant, they may or may not find themselves vigorously opposed in the Philadelphia Convention; but it is a thing certain that when their nomination is made, they will be confronted by such an opposition, arising from their own ranks, and represented by names so Republican in services and history, so powerful in characters, and so powerful in their representation of public opinion, as will carry away from Gen. Grant all the power of the Republican party.

This significant paragraph having been read by the Editor of the New York Nation, another Republican paper of large circulation and powerful editorial character, he thus comments:

Mr. Samuel Bowles, a political observer, writes home from Washington to his paper, the Springfield Republican, a long and interesting letter about the immediate future of politics which will displease federal officeholders, but which is nevertheless, worth their close attention. Mr. Bowles is an avowed opponent of the nomination of General Grant, and it may be as well to recollect that fact in examining his statements and predictions, but it must be recollected, too, that he is a shrewd man, as good a politician as the managers of conventions, as powerful in virtue of his editorship as half a dozen wire pullers of the first magnitude, and possessed of excellent means of getting information.

Neither the Republican nor the Democratic party, whatever the politicians may think of the people's intentions and wishes, could rally one-half of its followers against a movement of the honest men of the country intent upon reform, and headed by such candidates as Trumbull and Greeley, or Sumner and Trumbull, or Trumbull and Sumner. Some such ticket will be framed at Cincinnati, in the Convention which is to be held there in May, and which will be it is probable, "one of the largest assemblages of the purest and most independent Republicans of all the States that ever has been known." Such a ticket would have the support of a vast number of Democrats, for "the present tendency of opinion among the wisest of Democratic leaders, North and South, is, in the event of Grant's nomination, to the abandonment of the Presidential campaign to the Reform Republicans." In respect of this whole matter of the next nomination, "the country is ahead of Congress, the press is in advance of the people, and the people in advance of the politicians, as a rule."

Mr. Bowles says that he finds Congressmen anxiously non-committal but if the Republican members were to-morrow compelled to sign one of two papers, "declaring their belief that the interests of the country and the party require the renomination of Gen'l Grant, or the reverse, such renomination would be no longer possible.' As we say, Mr. Bowles is long since committed to opposing Gen'l Grant's renomination, though he worked hard, too, in defending his official acts and omissions, and it may be necessary to make some abatement of the expectations which his letter is calculated to excite. A very great deal depends upon the firmness of the Cincinnati men and their friends. Meantime, Republicans of their way of thinking are with very rare exceptions, allowing the officeholders to manipulate the primary meetings and pick the delegates for Philadelphia, while, for the moment, the reform cause goes by default.

Certainly the Nation is right in declaring "that a great deal depends on the firmness of the Cincinnati men and their friends." So far as a Reform Republican movement is concerned everything depends on the character of that Convention. The Democratic party will back the movement if properly made and so will the Labor Reformers; and this combined action of an aroused people struggling to hold successfully their liberties from the grasp of their would-be Tyrants, ought to be, and we believe, will be overwhelmingly successful Let all patriots so hope at least, for otherwise the last chance to avert a near future of internal disorders of the most frightful nature will have disappeared. The cry will otherwise be delenda est Carthago!

THE Cleveland Leader says Mr. Kinzua, a gentleman of leisure who resides on the West Side, and who prides himself on his personal appearance, lately sought to remove a grease spot from his coattail by the free use of benzine, and then stood close to the stove that the odor might evaporate the more quickly. He was quite correct in his theory, but unfortunate in practice, for before you could say Jack Robinson he was turning cart wheels through the window, and there was not enough coat tail left to make a "weskit" for a doll baby. He has left off, for awhile, his usual horseback exercise. He also, for the present, sleeps with his face to the pillow.

THE Louisville Evening Sun has set for ever. Its principal editor, Mr. Summers, left it last winter and accepted a responsible position as demonstrator of intestinal anotomy in a pork house—since which the Sun has steadily declined.

SAMUEL FORGUE, a shiftless citizen of Greenbush, New York, became discouraged the other day, and emptied his revolver into the body of his wife, with exception of one charge, which he fired at a retreating daughter. As soon as Mrs. F. had ceased kicking Samuel drew his clasp knife, and calmly sawed across his carotid artery.

A PHILADELPHIA woman who broke her leg was so modest that she would not permit the surgeon to set it, and, there being no female doctor around, mortification ensued which resulted in death!

IN Philadelphia, John Ambruster, heartless landlord, met W. Penn Repsher, impecunious tenant, and inaugurated a discussion on the familiar subject of rent. On learning that Repsher was in hard luck, Ambruster poised his umbrella and harpooned him in the eye, penetrating the brain, and causing death.

A "JOKE" is credited to an American visitor in England. "Wall stranger," he is reported to have said, "I guess you English juries ain't smart no how. If an American jury had tried the Tichborne case, I'll tell you what they'd have done. They'd just bought up all the Tichborne bonds, and then found a verdict for the plaintiff."

ALEX. H. STEPHENS calls a column and a half of solid matter in the Atlanta Sun "a word to our patrons and correspondents."

SAYS the Indianapolis Evening Journal: "We have private advices from Louisville to the effect that Colonel Kelley, of the Commercial, has challenged Lucien Matthews, of the Ledger. Colonel Kelley is a member in good standing of the Episcopal Church, but he is also a fighting man.

THE LOWERYS.—These desperadoes have captured the New York Herald correspondent, who was sent out to report concering them. They say that they will not hurt him, but will retain him one week. They telegraph to the New York Herald that "Boss" Strong is not dead. the correspondent can hear not a word of Henry Berry Lowery, and thinks it probable that he is either dead or has left the country.

TERRIBLE RUMOR.—It was rumored yesterday evening that Mrs. Floyd, living near Cave Spring, was killed yesterday by a young man named Allen. It was said that in an altercation the young man struck her on the neck and killed her instantly. We give the rumor as we heard it, though it seemed to be credited by the public generally.—Rome Commercial.

A TERRIBLE accident overtook Mr. James H. Gilrath, a highly esteemed citizen of Chatooga. He was burning a brush heap, and jumped upon it to stamp it down, when his foot slipped and threw him into the fire. The brush catching in his pantaloons, held him down, while his legs were absolutely charred. It is feared that he will not recover. His legs are sloughing off terribly.

STATE OF ALABAMA,
AUDITOR'S OFFICE,
MONTGOMERY, March 16, 1872.

To Tax Collectors:—The attention of the tax collectors for the several counties in the State is called to the requirements of section 52 revenue laws. The final settlement mentioned therein must be made on or before the first day of April' and tax collectors who fail to comply with its provisions will be proceeded against for default, on their official bonds. The necessities of the State Treasury at this time require that this step should be taken by the Auditor, and it is hoped that tax collectors will save the trouble and expense of a suit by complying strictly with the law.

Very Respectfully'
R. M. REYNOLDS.
AUDITOR.

A FANCY farmer of Scott County, Kentucky, is said (Georgetown Times) to have built a $2,000 hogpen which is painted and grained, furnished with hot and cold water, warmed with steam and lighted with gas. There is a fine library, where can be found Cobb's Elementary Works. The Works of Bacon, Inquiry Regarding the Descendants of Ham, Hogg's Poems, Cobden on the Corn Laws, and the popular litle poem, "Root, Hog, or Die." The troughs are of mahogany, inlaid with ivory and furnished with Phelan cushions. Whenever a hog is led out to execution, chloroform is administered.

The Democratic Convention nomiated Olney Arnold for Governor. After some debate upon the propriety of sending delegates to the National Convention, not yet called, delegates were chosen to the Democratic National Convention, if one is held. No resolutions were adopted. A State Central Committee was appointed, and the Convention then adjourned.

A NEW CURE FOR RHEUMATISM.—An exchange prescribes the following cure for rheumatism:

"Boil a small pot full of Irish potatoes, and bathe the part affected with the water in which the potatoes were boiled, as hot as can be applied, immediately before going to bed. The pain will be removed, or at least relieved, by the next morning. Some of the most obstinate rheumatic pains have lately been cured by one application of this novel and simple remedy."

GENERAL SICKLES has found something better than the Spanish Mission. He has prepared his resignation, and proposes to open a law office in New York City in conjunction with the Erie Railway. We can't divest our mind of the idea that SICKLES came home by request, and that his resignation is only the execution of a programme marked out for him. There's a fine opportunity now for the promotion of a worthy brother-in-law.—Cincinnatti Enquirer.

THE Japanese Embassey advertises for lady teachers to instruct its members in the mysteries of the French and English languages. The compliment to the sex is as discerning as chivalric. A pretty, accomplished young school-marm can plow over more acres of ignorance in one month than a male pedagogue could in twelve. We want to hear no more sardonic laughter from Senator Casserly and other Pacific slopers at these simple children of the Orient.

Why not get well!

It is an established fact, convincingly proved by the highest testimony, and by the practical test of long successful experience, that Dr. Crook's Wine of Tar has been administered with the most extraordinary success in all diseases of Throat and Lungs, performing many very remarkable cures of cases pronounced incurable. Such a remedy merits a trial from all who are afflicted and vainly seek relief. Will you let prejudice prevent you from trying it?

The Druggists write that all who try it recommend it—many buying several bottles at the same time, and stating they would not be without it in their house. It speedily cures Coughs, Colds and Chronic Coughs, and it has made cures of Asthma and Bronchitis of long standing when other remedies have failed, [illegible] to be considered a specific for those complaints. Throat Ailments require but a few doses. Consumptives, and all suffering with Pulmonary Affection of any kind, should not fail to give the relief and cure [illegible] Dr Crook's Wine of Tar. [illegible] safe to take at any time, and under any circumstances whatever.

Permit no other remedy to be [illegible] for Dr Crook's Wine of Tar [illegible] remedy which is [illegible] and you want [illegible] Druggists.

Work has commenced upon the reservoir. Its capacity will be three hundred thousand gallons. Gen. Forney is doing the work thoroughly and well.

The Agent of that sound Democratic and ably edited paper, the Selma Argus, was in town last week, but did not call on us. We hope he received many good paying subscribers to the Argus while here. We know of no paper in the State better worth the subscription price than the Argus.

DRAPER & JOHNSON have at last the very thing the farmers of this county have so long stood in need of. It is the celebrated Warren Improved Hoe, and will do more work and more thorough work in a given time than any two hoes of any other pattern. They are made of a peculiar pattern and of the best steel, yet they are so cheap as to be in the reach of all. Our space does not admit of a description of the hoe. It must be seen and tried to be appreciated and we advise farmers to go to DRAPER & JOHNSON'S and examine those on hand.

Hans Whatley, the slayer of Jim Alexander, and for whom the Governor had offered a reward of two hundred dollars, was captured in Chattanooga some days ago and brought and delivered to the authorities of this county, Monday last. Sometime in November or December, last year, the tragedy occurred in this place in a house occupied by the mother of Jim Alexander and other negroes, and in the face of the most strenuous and continuous efforts to arrest him, the slayer escaped. But the avenger of blood was upon his track, and after much and distant wandering he found himself in Chattanooga, where least suspecting arrest, he was captured. After examination had before Justice Forney he was committed to jail; where he now is.

The Oxford Chronicle.

We have received the first number of a new six column paper entitled as above, now published at Oxford by the Messrs Mosely. It is under the editorial control of H. L. Oliver, of the Gadsden Times, a gentleman of talent who will look sharply after the interests of the people of Oxford. The typographical appearance of the Chronicle is creditable to the printers and compositors engaged on it. We do not understand how it begins with "volume 4, number 10," but doubtless there is a reason. We wish the Messers Mosely a large measure of success in this enterprise.

At a Railroad meeting in Oxford, the 16th inst., a Committee, composed of Dr. Henry Snow, D. D. Draper and S. C. Kelly, was appointed to collect an installment of twenty-five per cent upon the subscription of the East Alabama & Cincinnatti Rail Road; also to confer with the corporate anthorities upon the propriety of ordering an election upon the question of issuing bonds upon the real estate of Oxford, the proceeds of the sale of which to be used for Rail Road and other purposes.

The Central City Fire Insurance Company, of which H. A. Stollenwerck of Selma is President, has bought one thousand dollars of our Water-Works bonds. The people of Jacksonville and especially the business men, who will be so highly benefitted by the water project, ought to hold in favorable remembrance this act of the Central City, and its excellent President. This is not the first instance in which Mr. Stollenwerck has helped Jacksonville financially. He gave liberally to our College, and it would be but a fit return if we should throw everything we can into his hands, commercially, in our dealings with Selma.

Ed. L. Woodward, Jr., will henceforth act as agent for the Central City Company which is undoubtedly a sound one, and is prepared to take fire risks for any parties in the county who may determine to adopt the safe and comparatively inexpensive system of insurance on all property liable to be lost by fire. Farmers should as well insure their barns and Gin houses and Dwelling houses as merchants their stores and stocks. It is safest.

The surprise Concert give by Messrs John M. Caldwell and S. P. Snow for the benefit of the Water works was the very best thing of the kind we have had in Jacksonville for over a year. As remarked by a gentleman who was present, no travelling show need come along here, so long as we have such talent in our own midst. The music composed by each of the young men for the occasion was pronounced by musical critics to be fine, and the Song "Time brings its Changes" (also original) was a most decisive hit, as well as the recitations. There was a pretty good audience, but not such an one as was to be expected, considering the novelty and attractiveness of the programme, and the object for which the concert was given. There were fewer young ladies and young gentlemen present than we should have expected when we consider that the whole was undertaken by two young gentlemen of the town, who, on every occasion, have not been backward in lending their powers to the successful accomplishment of every musical or dramatic undertaking lately given in behalf of any of our charatible or educational enterprises. Those who did go were abundantly repaid. Those who could have gone and did not, now doubtless regret missing the decidedly best thing of the season. The proceeds of the evening were turned over to the town treasury to be applied to the water works, for which the young gentlemen are entitled to thanks.

The Tax Assessor has a notice of his second round of appointments in this issue.

Talladega and Jacksonville ladies have been visting Oxford.

ALEXANDRIA LOCALS.

Our items are few this week. We have been so busily engaged that we had but little time to "walk around town.

Capt. Ledbetter leaves to day for the eastern markets. He will be absent several weeks. Before long GREEN & LEDBETTER will be receiving a large stock of Spring and Summer goods, direct from New York. The Captain you know is a man of excellent tastes.

Our citizens are seriously meditating the propriety of cleaning out and walling in the branch of our spring. Realy it should be done, it would add much to the appearnce of the town, and rob the atmosphere of a deal of the poison which arises from the water standing after an overflow.

The young men speak of organizing a debating society in town soon.

The wheat crop in the valley presents a more promising appearence than it did a week ago.

We received to-day several copies of the Oxford Chronicle for which we tender our thanks. We find it sound in politics, and interested in the welfare and prosperity of the people it proposes to represent. Success to the Chronicle.

Our Tax Collector Mr. E. McClelen offers a reward of half a dollar to any one who will present to him a person in Alexandria beat who has failed to pay tax for the year 1871.

If you see any one wanting good bargains in the dry goods line send them to GREEN & LEDBETTER, they are selling goods very low, in order to make room for the new stock to be in soon.

SUCCESSOR:

CANE CREEK LOCALS.

I'd like to know what has become of our "Dark Corner" writer. Why is he silent "now-a-days?" But perhaps he has been in a trance since last heard from; if so I think he had best arouse and make herculean efforts to revive the Sabbath School, which he said had gone into "Winter Quarters," or inform them that Spring will soon be here in all her charms, beauty and splendor.

We have an entertaining religious lecture once a month at Cane Creek Academy by our highly esteemed friend J. C. McAuley. Also at the same place we have an interesting school, taught by Miss Emily. Not far distant we have another conducted by Miss Lizzie. Both zealously engaged in "teaching the young idea how to shoot."

Weaver's Station is growing to be interesting. We have a Post Office, shoe shop, blacksmith shop and groceries kept there for the convenience of the neighborhood. Some cotton still going in, and corn landing by the quantity for the benefit of those who suffered by the last year's drouth.

The farmers, somewhat encouraged by the fine weather they've had lately, are planting corn but no great quantity of cotton will be planted except by those who like to be "always picking cotton."

The ladies are also very busy horticulturing, have peas as fine as "Miss Jane's."

To our regret Capt. Wight has sold out with the intention of going to Texas next Fall. We will loose a worthy citizen.

We regret to say that our young friend Bud Clark, who had the misfortune to loose his fine riding horse about the middle of January, and who has spent more than the worth of it in search of it and rogue, has heard no reliable intelligence from it as yet.

We are glad to inform you that 1872 finds our neighborhood nearly rid of "Old Bachelors" by long and hard struggle they've got "off hands."

I'll close hoping to hear something from the pen of our "Dark Corner Bachelor' soon; perhaps he is interested in hearing 'leap year speeches" and thinking on the "yellow buff" dress he is to see her wear soon, (as this seems to be a favorite color with him), and has forgotten the Locals.

ESTELLE.

LADIGA LOCALS.

We have nothing of interests to write this week except that farmers have been making good use of the fine weather for the past two weeks. They will commence planting this week.

Spring is near at hand and cattle will prefer something green to any kind of straw, so if Cross Plains local is nibbled at awhile, he need not wonder.

Rock got the last paper at night and went around and woke up every man, woman and child, (this is not a city) and told them of Cross Plains local's warning. How it happened I cannot tell, but they all replied, "nothing but a Doctor shop—Ladiga has no use for such houses, but suppose the city has."

Dame Rumor says, that the "city" wants to sell its calaboose. Is it because it has no use for it? Now while we feel neighborly, we don't wish to buy; an although advice generaly costs high, we make no charge, but suggest Mr. Local, that you paint it red, drop the "l a" and try to sell it for a Caboose. Thus may your city sell itself."

I still remain near the Sea creek.

D K & K K LOKALS KOMBINED.

BY REQUEST.

MR. EDITOR:—In konsideration of knumerous kompliments paid my lokals, (and owing to the great scarcaty of lokals) I have kindly Konkluded to kontinue to kontribute to your kolumns okkasionally.

I feel kinder pale.

We live in a sekluded korner where we have water-works as made by natur, and konsequently no votin & tryin to harmonize konflicting elements or opinions "so kalled" I'm glad to know that all opposition to your water-works has subsided, so to speak, and that ere long the sparklin fluid from the mountain stream will be gushing out at every korner in your village, so to speak.

I adopt the sublime language of A Ward, and say, let her gush

I would like to have heard "them speeches" and tasted the Mayor's hot coffee, etc.

When will Alderman Dean say his piece?

Speaking of water-works reminds me of a kreek that runs through a hill in our korner; or, more properly speaking, in June Bug, and known as the kave. You have doubtless heard of it, for it is konsidered a great kuriosity. It's a stunner, so to speak, and as a knatural kuriosity has no equals and few superiors, except the Mammoth in Kentucky. This kave, in some lokalities, is not so generally known and admired as the Mammoth, but in the Korner and June Bug it is. It was knoted, during the war, as a place of resort, especially by nonkombattants. It was also famous for being a good place to grow Salt Peter. It is inhabited now chiefly by a burd kommonly kalled the bat. He is a sekluded kuss in his habits—locks himself up in his room Allday, and goes it blind uv a knight and sings, "I won't go home till morning." He is knot konsidered a burd of rare plumage so to speak. He is engaged principally in the "jouna" business. I may diskant more at length, on the pikuliar habits and kustoms of this pikuliar burd in my next; also, if desired diskuss lizzards and june bugs and other venemous reptiles.

Unlike "Brick" we hav'nt got R. R's on the brain. We are in for a ship kanal, and want it to pass through our kave.

Brevity is the soul of wit. Hence I klose.

Some of your Lokals are not famillier with the above quotation.

O K

P. S. I desire to kall attention to the fact that your worthy townsman, Mr. Jake W. has the abrarikadabra for sale. He is the sole agent for these parts. Give him a kall.

P. S. No. 2. Don't you reckon Burt and Bob would like to have a live Lokal like me?

P. S. No. 3. Have you and Burt ever heard from your showman? Wonder if old Kris has heard from his dancin' man.

P. S. No. 4. Brick must have been born in March, from the way he blows—if not in March, then on the 1st day of April.

P. S. No. 5. I am reliably informed that one of the Oxford nabobs has offered to kompliment one uv your oldest citizens with a "lot" if he will pull up and okupy. K.

"HOME SWEET HOME."

DREAM OF THE AUTHOR.

John H. Payne, the author of that touching and immortal song, "Home, Sweet Home," was not only poor in pocket, but a homeless wanderer. In conversation with a friend he once gave expression to the following recital:

"How often," said he, "have I been in the heart of Paris, Berlin and London, or some other city, and heard persons playing 'Sweet Home,' without a shilling to buy the next meal, or a place to lay my head. The world has literally sung my song until every heart is familiar with its melody. Yet I have been a poor wanderer from my boyhood. My country has turned me ruthlessly from office, and in my old age I have to submit to humiliation for my daily bread."

He had the most exact and beautiful expression of the heart's emotion regarding home, and yet personally he was a stranger to all its tender and loving influences. A wanderer, and sometimes a vagabond, he has moved the human heart to its very depths by his exquisite lines.

Disgusted with his treatment in his own country, and still impelled by his disposition to roam, his only wish was to die in a foreign land, and to be buried by strangers and sleep in obscurity. He obtained an appointment as United States Consul at Tunis, where he died.

We now turn to a period antecedent to the composition of his song. At times he was greatly depressed, and seemed to feel most acutely his utter loneliness. One day a friend called to see him, and on entering said:

"How are you to day, Payne?"

"Down-hearted enough," was the reply; "but last night I had one of the most glorious visions in a dream that ever met mortal eye."

"Ah, indeed, what was it?"

"Well, I will tell you. I suppose you think it a scene of vast wealth, of a palace or something else of that kind that man's desires are set upon. I don't often have dreams, but when I do they impress me greatly. I don't often have dreams, but when I do they impress me greatly. In this dream I was in a home of most transcendent rural peacefulness and beauty. It was all that poet and painter could imagine. The landscape was composed of gentle rolling hills, and sweet, still valleys with meandering streams. There were flowers and birds, crops, flocks, and herds. In the midst of this stood various habitations of men, women and children, and I heard pleasant voices, laughter, music and song."

"Truly a beautiful picture of human contentment," said the friend.

"The life long imagery of my brain," cried the poet, "of home, sweet home. Ah, how my soul reveled in the picture! But gradually it faded from my sight. I was transfixed. I strained my vision to catch its outlines as they grew fainter and fainter; but at last it had faded entirely away. I then looked up, and saw a great cloud gathering, which grew dark and terrible.

"Ah!' said I, 'that cloud is significant of my own lot.'

"As I said these words I saw traced upon it in burning letters these words of the Almighty to another miserable man:

"A fugitive and vagabond shalt thou be on the earth!"

"In terror I recognized my doom, and awoke to find it both a dream and a sad reality."

The unhappy man buried his face in his hands, and for some time he seemed in the deepest misery.

"A very wonderful dream," said his companion.

"Well, do you know what I am going to do?" said Payne, looking up: "I'll tell you. I've been thinking a great deal over the matter, and I intend to write a song called 'Home, Sweet Home.' The picture of my dream shall be my inspiration for the task, and my lonely heart will give a very touching pathos to my words."

Not long after, the song of "Home, Sweet Home," was given to the world by John Howard Payne. The dream is more specially recalled by the closing verse:

"An exile from home, pleasure dazzles in vain;
Ah, give me my lowly thatched cottage again!
The birds singing sweetly that come at my call—
Give me them, and that peace of mind dearer than all.
Home, Sweet Home!
There's no place like home!"

Telegraphic.

MEMPHIS, March 18.

A desperate fight occurred at Presidio island a few miles below this city yesterday. Deputy Sheriff, F. Rodegor, went there for the purpose of arresting a negro named Jno. White, who for some time had been the terror of the negroes living there. Rodegor was met by a large body of armed negroes who proposed to assist in the arrest, but they stated that White had barricaded his cabin and would make a desperate fight. Rodegor approached the cabin and demanded a surrender. White refused, saying he would be murdered by the negroes if he did. After some further parleying one negro approached the cabin and was shot dead by White, who rushed out and secured his gun. In a few minutes he shot another and secured his gun, but was wounded as he retreated to his cabin. White then opened a sharp fire, wounding four others. Rodegor seeing that it was impossible to dislodge him, sent to the city for assistance. Deputy Sheriff Ryne summoned a posse and went over to take measures to burn White's cabin.—White then surrendered. After his arrest it was with a great deal of difficulty the negroes were kept from shooting him. They even threatened to shoot the officers if he was not delivered to them. White was brought to the city and is lodged in jail. The prisoner has served a regular term in the Third U. S. Cavalry and it is said he has killed several men before.

NEW YORK, March 18.

The Courts adjourned in respect to the late District Attorney Whiting.

Ten thousand Irishmen were in the St. Patrick's procession, and no disturbance of any kind.

Transactions in Erie to-day reached one hundred thousand shares, closing at 47 7-8.

It is stated that one Abbott formerly known as Jack Allen, of North Carolina, is here gathering some thirty followers to go to North Carolina to capture or kill the Lowery gang, and secure the reward of thirty five thousand dollrs.

ALABAMA.

MONTGOMERY, March 20.—John C. Stanton has brought suit in the United States District Court of this State against Robert Tyler, W. W. Screws and Mr. M. Cooke, editors, and W. W. Screws and M. J. Williams, publishers and proprietors of the Montgomery Daily Advertiser and Mail, for the sum of $100,000 for libel. The summons is made returnable on the fourth Monday in May. It is a defamatory matter, alleged to consist in the charge that Stanton attempted to rob and defame the State and people of Alabama and obtain money and other personal property under false pretences.

WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, March 21—Governor Warmouth and Hatch left for New York; they will return next week.

The President has submitted Governor Wormouth's proposition. It involves ten men from each wing, with Packard chairman, as a joint committee. Grant disclaimed a whish to dictate, but his language indicated conciliation. The opponents of Warmouth have declined the overture of compromise.

Congress is unimportant.

The Supreme Court has dismissed a Ku Klux case upon the governments plea of want of jurisdiction.

Truly Penitent.

During the Clay and Polk campaign the admiration of the Hon. Walter Brooke, of Mississippi, for the great Kentuckian led him to bet a pair of matched horses, all the stock he had, on the result, and this, though a strict member of the Presbyterian Church. Of course he lost, and of course he was "churched" for gaming. "All we ask of you, Mr. Brooke," said the minister, during the trial, "is to acknowledge that you are sorry, and promise to sin no more. "Sorry?" asked Mr. Brooke, rising from his seat with an air of injured innocence. "Sorry? My dear brother, when I think of those beautiful bays, gone from my gaze forever, I can truly say, with my hand upon my heart, that no transaction of my life gives me more genuine sorrow than this!"

FLOWERS IN THE WINDOW.—See that these beautiful objects have suitable care from day to day. Water them, keep off the vermin, wash them once a week or so, and occasionally give a little guano in the water that is applied. Let them have all the sunlight possible, for most plants do not well in the shade. Home is made pleasant by beautiful plants, and children as well as others are made the better by their cultivation and care. It is a cheap and available source of pleasure, and within the reach of all. How often have we been reminded of this, as we have seen a rose geranium, or some other plant in the window of some poor person who could not afford a flowerpot, but made use of an old tea-pot with the nose knocked off or some other vessel of little value. Flowers educate and refine. We always feel that we can put more confidence in those that love flowers. We are better Christians for growing flowers and enjoying their beauty. Count not that time and money lost that is devoted to their growth.

Harris of the Savannah News, gets off the following funny paragraph:

The boys in blue, stationed at St. Augustine, are giving a series of military hops. These affairs are said to be more indolent and lascivious than the hop which was inaugurated at Manassas. It will be remembered that the boys in blue, on that famous occasion got up and shook themselves with the utmost vigor.

ALL mothers who think they enjoy the personal acquaintance of their sons had better take a good square look at them if they wish to be able to distinguish them from butchers in the near future. Lady Tichborne swore on her dying bed that Arthur Orton was her son, and now the swindler acknowledges that he never saw her before the day when she recognized him as her long-lost Roger.

ABOUT ADVERTISING.—A distinguished and sagacious merchant in New York says: "I watch the papers of the locality of my customers, and when I find one who is too stingy to advertise, or if he has withdrawn his advertisement, I immediately close my account with him. The man who can't appreciate the benefits of advertising will never make a successful, merchant, and is unsafe to trust."

The Chicago Post says: "Horse-thieves are hanged in Kansas, while murderers are sent to the penitentiary for two years. Kansas must breed very valuable horses and very inferior men, if her penal code is any criterion to go by." Her criterion is all right. You see she gets her horses from Kentucky and her men from Chicago.

An amnesty has been granted by Russia to all Poles banished for various offences to the government of Archangel. They have received full permission to return to their native province or to any other province that they may choose.

In some parts of Virginia, peanuts, as a crop, rank next to corn, and are very profitable. With good cultivation they will yield one hundred bushels per acre, and average about $2 per bushel.

One of Cromwell's letters is said to furnish the origin of the maxim regard to the relative power of "sword and pen." In it there is a device of a sword crossing a pen, and underneath the legend: "Two to one the feather beat the iron."

HEALTH! BEAUTY!!

Strong and pure rich Blood—Increase of Flesh and Weight—Clear Skin and beautiful Complexion secured to all.

DR. RADWAY'S Sarsaparillian Resolvent

has made the most astonishing cures; so quick, so rapid are the changes the body undergoes under the influence of this truly wonderful Medicine, that

Every day an increase in Weight and Flesh is Felt.

THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER

Every drop of the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT communicates through the Blood, Sweat, Urine and other fluids and juices of the system the vigor of life, for it repairs the wastes of the body with new and sound material. Scrofula, Syphilis, Consumption, Glandular disease Ulcers in the throat Mouth, Tumors, Nodes in the Glands and other parts of the system, Sore Eyes, Strumorous discharges from the Ears, and the worst forms of Skin diseases, Eruptions, Fever Sores, Scald Head, Ring Worm, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Acne, Black Spots, Worms in the Flesh, Tumors, Cancers in the Womb, and all weakening and painful discharges, Night Sweats, Loss of Sperm and all wastes of the life principle, are within the curative range of this wonder of Modern Chemistry, and a few days' use will prove to any person using it for either of these forms of disease its potent power to cure them.

If the patient, daily becoming reduced by the wastes and decomposition that is continuly progressing, succeeds in arresting these wasts, and repairs the same with new material made from healthy blood—and this the SARSAPARILLIAN will and does secure—a cure is certain; for when once this remedy commences its work of purification, and succeeds in diminishing the loss of wastes its repairs will be rapid, and every day the patient will feel himself growing better and stronger, the food digesting better, appetite improving, and weight increasing.

Not only does the Sarsaparillian Resolvent excels all known remedial agents in the cure of Chronic, Scrofulous, Constitutional, and Skin diseases; but it is the only positive cure for

Kidney and Bladder Complaints,

Urinary, and Womb diseases, Gravel, Diabetes, Dropsy, Stoppage of Water, Incontinence of Urine, Bright's Disease, Albuminuria, and in all cases where there are brick-dust deposits, or the water is thick, cloudy, mixed with substances like the white of an egg, or threads like white silk, there is a morbid, dark billious appearance, and white bone dust deposits, and when there is a pricking, burning sensation when passing water, and pain in the Small of the Back and along the Loins.

DR. RADWAY'S

VINEGAR BITTERS

PURELY VEGETABLE FREE FROM ALCOHOL

J. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA

EUREKA

VINEGAR BITTERS

J. WALKER, Proprietor. R. H. McDONALD & Co., Druggists & Gen. Agents, San Francisco, Cal., and 34 Commerce St., N.Y.

MILLIONS Bear Testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.

Vinegar Bitters are not a vile Fancy Drink, Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors, doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing, also, the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and of all the Visceral Organs.

FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, whether in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Billious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Billious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.

They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid Liver and Bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effect.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

PIN, TAPE, and other WORMS, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS AND DEALERS.

Dr. GOTTLIEB FISCH'S BITTERS.

(Shape of the Bottle.)

This preparation of the great Scientist, Dr. Gottlieb Fisch, of Germany, is based on the fact that, as all materials of the body are derived from Food, so all Vital Force, or Health, is derived from the Force stored up in Food. Dr. Fisch's Bitters enables the System to liberate and appropriate these Forces, creates Appetite, cures Dyspepsia, with its resulting Debility and lack of Nervous Energy; so tones the Stomach and Liver as to make Constipation and Billiousness impossible; reinforces the System so it can tide over bad results of changing climate, water &c., and better endure the demands often unexpectedly made on its Force and Energy. Ladies in delicate health, aged persons and all emaciated and weak after sickness, will rapidly strengthen by using this great preparation.

NEAR CEDAR BLUFF Feb., 28,1871

MESSRS. J. & S. BONES, Dear Sir:

I have given the 16 inch Mill (Clemans) bought of you, a thorough test, and can but express myself perfectly satisfied. The power was the running gear fo my gin, which although in very bad order, was sufficient to grind one bushel (by the watch) in eleven minutes. I find no trouble to do my grinding before breakfast. Several of my neighbors were present at the time, and all were satisfied with the result, and were astonished at the quantity and fine quality of the meal produced in so short a time. I prefer the meal to any steam mill meal. The 16 inch mill I bought of you for the Foster Farm, and used since the above was written proves equally satisfactory. It is a complete mill.

Yours Truly,
H. H. MILLER.
