SWEET DAY.

Stay, sweet Day, for thou art fair,
Fair, and full, and calm;
Crowned, through all thy golden hours,
With Love's brightest, richest flowers,
Strong in Faith's unshaken powers,
Blessed in Hope's pure balm.

Stay, what chance and change may wait,
As you glide away,
Now is all so glad and bright;
Now we breathe in sure delight;
Now we laugh in fate's despite;
Stay with us, sweet Day.

Ah, she cannot, may not stop;
All things must decay;
Then with heart, and head, and will,
Take the joy that lingers still,
Prize the pause in wrong and ill—
Prize the passing day.

PRIDE'S PENALTY.

I was left an orphan at an early age, but with immense wealth,

Arriving at manhood. I enjoyed all that untrammeled leisure and money could procure,

When I was about thirty I determined to marry; and as my property consisted chiefly of land, situated in my native country, I intended when I married, to return there and make it my home.

One summer, after recovering from an attack of illness, I happened by chance, in traveling about to restore my health, to stop at a sea-bathing place, unfrequented by the fashionable world.

It was so unlike any other watering place I had ever visited, that I resolved to remain there until I became tired of it, as I had been of everything else.

At this retired place I met Fanny Fairclough. Her parents had gone there, like myself, for the benefit of their health rather than for amusement.

I soon discovered that Mr. Fairclough and my father had been college chums.

From my first interview with Fanny Fairclough I felt interested in her, and an intimate aquaintance increased that interest,

Soon I loved her as I had never loved woman; I read with her her favorite authors and mine; I walked and rode, and sung and talked, with her, and at last told her that I loved her.

She returned my passion, and the wedding-day was to be within a year.

The year passed away more rapidly than I had anticipated. Oh, what a happy year that was! Even now, friendless and alone, a sorrow-stricken old man on the verge of the grave, I look back upon that period as the sunny time of my existence.

Daily my betrothed grew nearer and dearer to me. When my wedding day arrived I would have made it the occasion of a grand festival. I wished the world to witness my proud joy; but my bride looked on marriage as too solemn, too serious a thing for mirth.

At length, however, the bridal parties were over, and in the quietude of our home our characters began gradually to unfold themselves to each other's view.

I found that I was not mistaken in my estimate of my wife's love.

My moon of perfect love was at its full. All was joy; all was brightness; but the shadow descended on my hearth.

I brought it there, I fed it, I nursed it, until the light of joy was extinguished, and the sun of happiness had departed forever.

My temper was naturally violent, and I was obstinate, I was selfish.

Previous to my marriage, circumstances kept this infirmity of disposition in check, and for some months after, I controlled it.

But ere long there was a change.

Before the second year of my married life had passed away I had become that worst of all oppressors—a household tyrant.

At any annoyance, no matter how slight—if my meals were not ready at the appointed hours, if a paper or book were mislaid, I would give way to expressions of anger, of which afterwards, I really felt ashamed, knowing how unworthy they were of a man; and yet, then again, I repeated them, and more violently than before.

My wife bore this with patience, but her indulgence chafed me, and I sometimes uttered taunts which no human being could suffer in silence.

Then came a reply, and when this reply did come, sad scenes occurred. I would work myself into an insane passion, and utter words which in my cooler moments I shuddered at, and which invariably drove her weeping from the room. And yet soon after she would come, and beg to be forgiven for the very words which I had forced her to utter.

The demon within me rejoiced to see her pride thus humbled before mine, for never no matter how much in fault, did I seek a reconciliation.

My temper became more and more violent, and at length, in one of our frequent quarrels, I proposed a separation.

Had a serpent stung her she would not have gazed on it as she did on me.

"When you please," she finally replied, and left the room.

I stood aghast at what I had done. I had proposed a separation, and she had consented. I had said that on that very day I would commence arrangements for the purpose,—and could I break my word? Could I go to her, and beg her not to leave me, and that, when I myself had proposed such a step? My pride again forbade me, and I obeyed its dictates; but there still remained a secret hope within me that, on cool reflection, she herself would refuse.

I determined to consult a lawyer, in whose secrecy I could confide, and make such arrangements as were absolutely necessary,

I did so, and awaited results

That night we were to go to a party. We did so. But not a word passed either of our lips on the way.

During the evening the voice of some one singing attracted my attention. The tones seemed familiar; I could not be misfaken, the voice was hers.

When it was finished she raised her eyes for a moment, and commenced another song—one I had never heard before—the story of a proud heart broken!

Then she ceased and rose from her seat, but so white was she that I feared she would faint.

We soon returned home. The distance was short, but the time seemed an age till we reached our house. I would have given worlds to have spoken and to have told her all—all my sorrow, all my repentence—but I could not; my tongue clove to the roof of my mouth; nor, indeed, until after she bade me good night, could I utter a word.

Then, and only then, I stammered out a request that she would remain a few moments.

She closed the door, and returned to her chair, raising her large dark eyes inquiringly to mine,

"Fanny," I said at last—I had not called her so for many months before—"Fanny, will you sing me those songs you sang to night?"

"Certainly, if you wish it," she replied, and seating herself at the piano, she sang them again, in a clear, calm tone.

I had determined, when the songs were concluded, to seek a reconciliation. but the demon, pride, whispered, "Will you be less firm than she? This cannot last—why humiliate yourself?"

Alas, I listened and obeyed. I suffered the last opportunity to recall our lost happiness to escape.

Pride, the tyrant, was obeyed, and I suffered her to leave the room with a "good-night."

I went up into my own lonely chamber, and sat down and pondered on the events of the evening, regretting bitterly my folly in suffering my pride to master me.

I heard my wife moving about her room, which adjoined my own, and then suddenly a heavy fall and a low moan.

I rushed into her apartment, and found her extended on the floor.

I raised her in my arms and to my horror blood was streaming from her mouth.

The truth flashed upon me at once—she had broken a blood-vessel—she would die!

I sprang to the bell. In a few minutes,—minutes which seemed an age,—the servants entered the room, but staggered, horror-stricken at beholding, their beloved mistress apparently in the agonies of death.

"The doctor!—a doctor!" I shouted. "She will die—she will die!"

In a second they all went but one, who was sobbing and praying while she wiped the blood from the blue lips of her expiring mistrsss.

Oh what agony I suffered during the interval which ensued before the arrival of the physician!

I called her by the dearest names; I begged her to speak one word. I entreated her to forgive me—only to smile once more.

She slowly opened her large eyes; a slight smile passed over her face, and she was—dead!

Just then the physicians entered, and I begged and prayed of them to exert their skill to save her.

"It will be useless to attempt it," was their passionless reply; "no human power can restore life."

I did not believe them. My wife was not, could not be dead. I clasped her in my arms; I kissed her brow, her lips, and all became a blank!

Several months elapsed ere I recovered, and since that time my days have been passed in tears and in prayers at her grave, my nights in dreaming of her goodness, her love, and my terrible sin. Years have rolled away since she was consigned to the tomb—years of suffering, of remorse, in which I clothed my spirit with sackcloth, and heaped ashes on my head. My deep repentance has, I fervently hope at length procured forgiveness. Last night she smiled upon me in my dreams, and beckoned me away. I most joyfuly acknowledge the summons. Ere many days I shall cross the portal of that mystic land where sorrows come not; and forgetting my crime, I shall abide with my angel forever and ever.

He that once did you a kindness will be more ready to do you another than he whom you yourself have obliged.

What can a man do more than die for his countrymen? Live for them; it is a longer work, and therefore a more difficult and noble one.

Advice to Young Ladies.

John Ruskin gives the following advice to young ladies; "In order to investigate oneself, it is well to find out what one is now. Don't think vaguely about it. Take pen and paper and write down as accurate a description of yourself as is possible, and if you dare not, try and get strength of hear enough to look yourself in the face, mind as well as body. Always have two mirrors on your dressing table, and with proper care dress mind and body at the same time. Put your best intelligence to finding out what you are good for and what you can be made into. The mere resolve not to be useless and the honest desire to help other people will, in the quickest and most delicate way, improve oneself. All accomplishments should be considered as means of assisting others. In music get the voice disciplined and clear, and think only of accuracy; expression and effect will take care of themselves. So in drawing; learn to set down the right shape of anything, and thereby explain its character to another person; but, if you try only to make showy drawings for praise, or pretty ones for amusement, your drawing will have little or no real interest for you and no educational power. Resolve to do each day something useful in the vulgar sense. Learn the economy of the kitchen, the good and bad qualities of every common article of food, and the simplest and best modes of their preparation; help poor families in their cooking, show them how to make as much of everything as possible, and how to make little niceties; coaxing and tempting them into tidy and pretty ways, and pleading for well-folded table cloths, however coarse, and for a flower or two out of the garden to strew, on them. One should, at the end of exery day, be able to say, as proudly as any peasant, that she has not eaten the bread of idleness. Get quit of the absurd idea that Heaven will interfere to correct great errors, while allowing its laws to take their own course in punishing small ones. If food is carelessly prepared no one expects Providence to make it palatable; neither if, through years of folly you misguide your own life, need you expect Divine interference to bring around everything at last for the best. I tell you, positively, the world is not so constituted. The consequences of great mistakes are just as sure as those of small ones, and the happiness of your whole life and of all the lives over which you have power, depends as literally on your common sense and discretion as the excellence and order of a day.'

All About Tornadoes.

There has been prepared by Gen. Hazen the Chief Signal Officer of the county, an official paper which contains a tabulated statement of six hundred tornadoes and some generalizations from their facts. The six hundred storms cover a period of eighty seven years and the whole country. Their examination leads to the conclusion that tornadoes occur most frequently in the month of June. Kansas is the State that has been most afflicted. The State has had sixty two tornadoes from 1850 to 1881: Illinois has had fifty-four from 1854 to 1881; Missouri has had forty-four from 1814 to 1881: New York has had thirty-five from 1831 to 1881; Georgia, thirty-three from 1804 to 1881; Iowa, thirty one from 1854 to 1881; Ohio, twenty-eigh from 1823 to 1881, Indiana, twenty-seven from 1852 to 1881. The States and Territories that have had only one each from 1794 to 1881 are Colorado, California, Indian Ty., Nevada, New Mexico, Montana Ruode Island, West Virginia and Wyoming The storms occur most frequently from five to six in the afternoon, a though there is no hour of the day that has been entirely free from them The average width of the path of destruction is 1,085 feet and the storm-clouds run with a velocity of from twelve to sixty miles. The wind within the vortex sometimes attains a velocity of eight hundred miles an hour, the average velocity being three hundred and ninety-two miles. Among the most valuable suggestions of the paper are those with reference to the peculiarity of the movements of tornado clouds, containing rules for arriving at their violence. A tornado cloud always has a centre. and it always moves forward from west to east. It may however, sway from side to side in its progressive movement. Changes in motion are sometimes very sudden. In the event of a sudden change the observer who is east or south of east of the storm should move quickly to the south. If he is northeast he should move to the north. If within a very short distance of the clouds the observer should run east, bearing to the south. This indicates the character of the directions which have been given for the avoidance of the disastrous effect of storms.

Child Life in Japan.

Child life appears to be much alike in all countries; and hoops, and tops, balls, battledores, kites, cat-and-dog and "the chucks" engage children here as they do at home. The land is farmed much as it is in France—in small patches and without fences. Cultivation is by the hoe. The land is fertile and in several places two crops are got in the year. The people are very industrious, and men, women and children work in the fields. On the hillsides tea and rice are cultivated in terraces, as the vines is on the hills by the Rhine. I have seen what the Bible speaks of as "watering by the foot." The husbandman breaks with his foot the ridge of a terrace, and permits water to run therefrom into the terrace below. When a sufficient quantity has run down he closes the aperture with his foot. Children swarm in the street, and those of seven years of age carry those of one or two on their backs. There are good school houses, and education in "the three R's" is compulsory. The hum of the children learning their lessons is like that I have heard in old times in our parish schools.

Craze For Tops.

The top mania has attacked the boys—not in a mild, gentle form, but with all the malignity of an epidemic. The rage of the 15 puzzle among adults was nothing compared to the power of the top craze. The German boy is content to see his top spin, but the American boy never rested until he had invented two or three lively games to play with tops. The primitive cheapest top is made by cutting a spool in two, driving a hard piece of wood into the hole, and working the small end of the spool down to a point. These tops are spun by twirling them with the fingers. The regulation top is made in a turning lathe about the size of a pear, and provided with a steel point. The best are made of box wood and cost $1. The cheaper varieties vary in price from 2 to 25 cents. The manipulator winds a string around the top, (good fishing line is best) and then with a sudden jerk pull of the cord sends it spinning on the sidewalk or ground. There are numerous fancy varieties of tops. One is a tin affair, almost flat on the upper end, where are attached numerous pieces of bright colored pasteboard. Touch these lightly as the top revolves and the disarrangement of the pieces makes a kaleidoscopic change of colors seemingly never twice alike. Another is the humming top, made below with a hole in one side. It makes some such noise as an irritated hornet. The practical variety, however, is the plain, cheap top.

"What game do you play with tops?" asked the writer of a newsboy.

He opened his big eyes wide with wonderment that any mortal should be so ignorant and said: "Why, peg-a-ory and peg-er small-pox. Don't you know how to play peg-er peg-a-tory? Oh, yer foolin! Honest now, don't yer know how? Wall, it's this way: We pink for the hue. Pinkin' for a line is throwin' out tops at it, makin' 'em spin as they go. The fellow that comes furthest from the line sets himself in a ring, an' the others spin their'n and peg at his top with 'em. If a boy's top spins and rolls out o' of the ring, he's all right; but if it don't spin, or don't roll out o' the ring he's got to put his in the ring with th'other one. Then, if all the tops get in the ring, the first one that got in takes his'n up and tries to knock the others out. As many as he knocks out he nicks. Then, the ones that are nicked are all right, an' they peg at the others to knock 'em out. That's peg-a-tory. Peg or small-pox is where one boy puts his top in the ring, and the other pegs at it. Whoever knocks it out of the ring nicks it or gives it the small-pox with his top. The feller that's nicked can then try an' knock the top out that's in the ring. Nickin' is takin' a top up and punchin' so many holes in it with the sharp point of your top. A top don't stand it long. Sometimes we play for 10 and sometimes 25 nicks."

The best tops will spin a wonderfully long time. One boy boosts a top that will go over two minutes and no man with a 2 18 horse was ever prouder or received more proportionate flattering offers for his property than the owner of this two-minute top.

Forty Cents.

Recently a stranger who was coming up from the Union depot. Detroit, stepped aside to ask of a man in the door of a clothing store; "My friend, can you tell me how far—?"

Do you want to buy some clothing?" interrupted the other.

"I guess not. I simply wanted to inquire how—?"

"I sells you a spring oafercoat for three dollar."

"I never wear more than one spring overcoat at the same time. I wanted to ask—"

"I have some vests for a dollar

"That's cheap enough, but I don't care to invest. Will you let me ask you how far—

"Doan' you vhant some bantloons for twelve shillings?"

"No."

"Some stockings for ten cents?"

"No."

"Some suspenders for two shillings?"

"No. I wanted to ask——"

"I sell you a hat for sixty cents."

The stranger picked up his satchel and walked across the street. Then facing about, he shouted out;

"I wanted to ask you how far it was from Dan to Ber——!"

But the clothier drowned him out right there with:

"Und call and oxamine my undershirt for forty cents!"

Lucky Escape.

On the night of October 14, 1651, a tall swarthy young man with a companion slipped into the George Inn, Brighton, and said he would wait to meet a seafaring acquaintance. In earlier days the host had been employed in one of the London palaces, and he recognized in his seedy visitor Prince Charles, son of the monarch, who, more than two years before, had been beheaded at Whitehall. After the battle of Worcester the young king had experienced many adventures and worn many disguises—there was a price upon his head; but the innkeeper, either from loyalty or discretion, did not offer to molest the fugitive or his companion. The captain of a collier; Nicholas Tettersell, then appeared, and took Charles and his companion, who was the Earl of Rochester, on board his vessel and landed them in France, for which service many things were promised. The Restoration came, but none of the gifts, and Tettersell therefore sailed into the Thames and moored off Whitehall, where his dingy bark attracted the attention of the King, who, being thus reminded, gave the captain a ring, a perpetual annuity of one hundred pounds a year, and took the collier into the Navy under the name of the "Lucky Escape."

Old Places.

In Prince George's County, Maryland near the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad stands the old Jenkins Mansion in a clearing of the forest. It is of stone brought in Conestoga wagons, is built in the most substantial manner, says a correspondent and it seems to stand as firm as ever, though the moss lies thick upon its roof and the ivy and the arbutus cling to its time-stained walls. The broad portico and its huge stone pillars are crumbling here and there, but even they are resisting decay slowly. The rooms inside, with their antique portraits, furniture, chimney places and polised brass andirons carry you back to the days of Knickerbookers and Periwigs, and the family take great pride in showing a room which Lafayette once occupied when a guest of the family. The house is situated just off the old Washington turnpike, and during the Revolution it was a convenient and favorite place of rest for many of the most celebrated American officers, including General Washington himself, when passing between Washington city and Baltimore. Its site is one charming in picturesque beauty, surrounded by high box-wood hedges, and in the background flows the blue Patuxent. The big stable and several old coaches are still there, but the stalls are nearly all empty and the grass is creeping up among the gravel of the serpentine drive. The negro quarters, too, are deserted and the smoke ourls over only a very few cabins. An infirm negro, bowed with age, limped by me, and with the politeness of the old days removed his hat to me and disappeared around the dairy. No other living thing was visible. The old place seemed a symbol of departed glory.

Another interesting spot near by the Jenkins mansion is the ruins of one of the first iron furnaces in the country. Iron ore is very prolific about this section and the Muirkirk" Furnace is not far away where operations are still going on. There I was shown a piece of pig iron with the perfectly defined impression of a human toe in the metal Charles E. Coffin, president of the Muirkirk Iron Company, is authority for the story of a negro salamander who worked there up to a few years ago. This man was in the habit of removing his shoes, and with feet perfectly bare treading about upon the red-hot pigs of iron. He became famous for this astonishing performance, and the negroes one and all believed him to be in league with Beelzebub and avoided him like a pest. It is said that he could depopulate a saloon in an instant by entering where a crowd of superstitious darkeys were assembled. The local minister of the Methodist church once told the story of the negro's astonishing feats before the conference in Washington and was severely handled by his brethren for giving utterance to what seemed to be such a palpable impossibility. His veracity was questioned and his position before the conference became a serious one, At last the matter assumed such importance that they adjourned and visited "White Oak Bottom" in a body. They saw to their surprise what seemed like a miracle performed before their eyes and they removed their censure from the story-teller. The impression I saw in the pig of iron was said to be from the toe of the man, who is now working in Howard county at less hazardous employment.

The neighborhood is full of historic interest, as it was closely identified with many important events in the War of the Revolution. It was at Bladensburg, but a few miles southeast, where Cockburn and Ross fought their celebrated battle in 1814, just previous to the capture of Washington. Many of the old mansions are now occupied by prominent men. Ex-Governor Oden Bowie has his home and his stables of fine racing horses there. Admiral Ammen, Chief of the Bureau of Construction, United States Navy, his brother, General Ammen, and State Senator Albertson each occupy old family homes there. The visitor will be surprised to find a section of country so close to two large cities so little affected by the march of progress. Particularly is this true in relation to the colored race. The old special holiday occasions peculiar to the anti-slavery days are still religiously observed. At these times they assemble at an appointed place in large numbers and perform their games with all the old-time vim and enthusiasism. These are not unlike the children's ring plays, except that they are accompanied by wild refrains and choruses characteristic of the race. As I boarded the train for Washington a day or two ago I was convinced that this primitive little section of Prince George' dreaming serenely in the memory of the past.

Energy will do everything that can be done in the world; and no talents, no circumstances, no opportunities, will make a two-legged animal a man without it.

According to Zeno, it is a very suggestive fact that we have two ears and only one tongue. It is better to listen than to talk, and always safe to tell no more than half we hear.

Mountain Forests.

Attention has long been given to devising means to limit the ravages of these torrents, which ruin the land, threaten estates, destroy roads, and sometimes even compromise the existence of villages. Walls have been built along the banks to protect them, or across the streams to allay the force of the waters. The most efficacious means, however, as yet discovered, has been to maintain the woods on the slopes of the mountain. The effect of cutting away the trees in promoting the formation of torrents has not been doubted by the inhabitants of mountainous regions and is clearly set forth by M. Surrell, who says:

"When we examine the tracts in the midst of which torrents of recent origin have been formed, we perceive that they have in all cases been despoiled of their trees and bushes. If, on the other hand, we examine hills whose sides have been recently stripped of wood, we observe that they are cut up by numerous torrents, which have evidently been formed very lately. Here is a remarkable double fact: wherever there are recent torrents there are no longer forests, and wherever the ground is cleared these torrents are formed; and the same eyes that see the woods fall on the declivity of a mountain may see appear there immediately a multitude of torrents.

The disastrous consequences of removing the woods from the Alps began to attract attention in the last century, and have since been discussed in many publications and official reports. In 1853 the Prefect of the Department of the Lower Alps said in a report to the Minister:

"If prompt and energetic measures are not taken it will be almost impossible to designate the precise moment when the French Alps will become a desert. The period from 1851 to 1853 will produce a new diminution in the number of population. In 1861 the Minister will remark a continuous and progressive reduction in the number of hectares devoted to agriculture; each year will aggravate the evil, and in a half century France will count more ruins and one department less."

The departments of the Upper and Lower Alps actually lost 30 000 inhabitants or one-ninth of their population, between 1851 and 1876 A law for recovering the mountains with wood, which had been prepared by M. Fabre de Rouget, Director General of the Administration of the Forests, was adopted by the Legislative bodies in 1860 and was put in operation shortly afterward.

To Be Sure.

The time appointed for the marriage ceremony in the church was 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Borealis Brown, the bridegroom, and Aurora White, the bride, were in a close carriage ten blocks away at six minutes before 3.

"We shall get there right on time," said he, looking at his watch.

Now, it is dreadfully unfashionable to get to the church promptly, and Aurora would have felt just like dropping through the floor, don't you know, if she had walked up the aisle on time,

"Don't you think, my dear, it would be better to be ten minutes late?" said she, leaning against him in a kind of harmless hug.

"No; I pride myself on punctuality."

"Five minutes, then?"

"Now, my darling, don't coax."

"Just as you say."

She put her hand carelessly on his shoulder, and then let it drop slowly along down over his coat to a small pocket set in at the waist seam, where it lingered for a few seconds.

"You have the ring where you can find it readily," she remarked, laying placidly back in her seat. "There is nothing so awkward as to fumble for the ring at the altar, you know."

"Oh, I've made sure of that point as I told you," he said confidently. "I slipped the ring right into this handy little pocket where I—Good Lord in Heaven!"

"What, Borealis—what?"

"The ring is lost!"

He thrust his fingers into his pocket madly, again and again, but the ring surely the ring was not there. He made wild conjectures, felt in all his other pockets, and concluded that he must have left it at Aurora's residence. He ordered the coachman to go about. When they had gone back almost to the house a public clock struck 3.

"What is that?" said Aurora, pointing to the bottom of the carriage.

The ring lay glittering in a corner.

"I must have dropped it," Borealis, said picking it up, "but I swear I looked in that very spot not two minutes ago."

He had looked there, as a matter of fact, just before Aurora threw the ring down.

"Well," he remarked, looking at his watch again, "you will have your way, after all. We can't get to the church before ten minutes late anyhow."

"To be sure"—

The Mourner's Bench.

Evangelist Barnes, the Preacher of the Mountains, has been laboring lately at Frankfort, Ky. In that place lives John Rocketty, whose life, though not a bad one, has been without the fold. Happening to meet Mr. Rocketty the other day Mr. Barnes urged him to mend his ways. Mr. Rocketty scouted the suggestion whereupon the Evangelist was nettled. "I will bet you ten to one in fifties" said Rocketty, "that you can't convert me." "Done," said Barnes. "I'll bring you to the mourners' bench within ten days." The pool sellers of the town are reported to have opened pools on the result. At first it was 85 to 15 that Rocketty would withstand the eloquence of the mountaineer. The odds rapidly fell, however, until the betting was 98 to 2 against Rocketty, who on the eighth day walked up to the mourners' bench.

The best people need afflictions for trial of their virtue. How can we exercise the grace of contentment if all things succeed well; of that of forgiveness, if we have no enemies?

SATURDAY, June 3, 1882.

The dead lock at Washington continues. Both sdies are anxious to break it and get down to business. but each wants to have it appear that the other side backed down.

THE CONVENTION.

The Democratic Convention which assembled in the court house here on Saturday, although not fully representative of all the Beats in the county, was still well attended, considering the fact that it was only called to send delegates to the State and Congressional Conventions. While some by-standers from the Beats that had failed to hold Beat meetings were admitted to seats upon their assuming full responsibility for their action in thus representing their Beats in the Convention, it was very apparent from the feeling of the Convention that such would not have been the case had there been more important work before the Convention than the mere sending of delegates to other Conventions, and it was fully understood, so far as the late Convention can govern others to come, that in future where beats fail to hold meetings and send up delegates they will go unrepresented in the councils of the Democratic party of this county.

The proceedings of the Convention was very harmonious and a real old fashioned spirit of Democratic revival was more than once manifested during the debates.

The proposition to call a future nominating convention to nominate a candidate for Representative was not favorably received, the Convention being evidently of opinion that no such state of affairs existed as made a Convention for this purpose now necessary. The young Democracy of the county received at the hands of the Convention a graceful tribute in the election of Emmet F. Crook to preside over its deliberations and John M. Caldwell to be Chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee of the county.

A resolution was passed with great unanimity endorsing Gen. Forney for Congress, and instructing the Calhoun delegation to stand by him as long as his name is before the Congressional Convention, thus again signally attesting the confidence of the Democracy of Calhoun in him.

The delegations to both the State and Congressional Conventions are good men of sound Democratic record, and will doubtless correctly reflect the sentiment of the county in both those Conventions. They are taken from all parts of the county, the design being to have them as nearly representative of the whole county as possible. For particulars of the Convention our readers are referred to the proceedings published in another column.

Jacksonville, and Its Feantures-Society and other Attractions—Summer Resorts—German a Tannery—Ove Deposits and Diggings.—Lands and Crops.—Politics, &c; &c, Editorial Correspondence of the Montgomery Advertiser.

JACKSONVILLE ALA; May. 26.

This cheerful, pleasant, and beautifully located town is situated on a plateau overlooking Tallasahatchie Valley, and about one mile from the S. R. and D. Road. Being the county cite of Calhoun county, the court house is in the centre of a large square and the side-walks are boarded with shade trees. Jacksonville can borst of many elegant suburban residences, with beautiful lawns and parks, interspersed with cool and inviting groves, among which may be noted those of Capt Jas. Crook, Judge T A. Walker, and Mr Geo C. Morgan formerly of our city, and Gen. Burke of Mobile.

This is also the home of Gen. W. H. Forney, and our esteemed friend J M. Wyly, whose charming and interesting family contribute much to the social amenities and attentions for which the people are noted.

The society is among the best in the State and may justly boast of its intelligence and refinement. as it formerly could of its wealth But the collapse of the Confederacy found the people sharing in our common heritage of poverty bequeathed by the war. Beginning the world anew, as it were, their manful struggle in many cases, has been crowned by recuperated fortune and prosperity. Cordial and polite, the people are never so happy as when dispensing the unstinted hospitality of their homes.

There are several churches, nearly all protestant denominations being represented The Episcopal church—Rev Mr Smith Rector is a gem. On Monday Bishop Wilmer, arrived accompanied by that good and cultivated man, Rev. Mr. Carmahan, of Anniston, who captures his audience wherever he delivers one of his impressive discourses. as he did here on Monday night The Bishop preached a most impressive sermon Tuesday forenoon, after which several candidates received always the solemn rite of confirmation.

Nature has done much for this locality and section. From many adjacent points the eye commands a magnificant prospect of valley plain, and mountain outlined on the evening sky; while there are many places of resort during the sultry season that offer inducements to both residents and visitors. Here up among the mountains, no better summer resort can be found. Board is cheap, and the time can be spent by those in search of health or recreation, with economy and real enjoyment. There is an excellent hotel, while those inclined to more privacy may find ample accommodation in private families. Mine host, Mr Robert Adams, of the former, is polite and attentive, and the writer will not forget the thoughtful attentions of himself and his good wife, nor the kindness of another estimable lady during a late brief prostration by sickness.

The natural drainage of Jacksonville leaves nothing to be done by the ordinary appliances It is perfect and the locality is unsurpassed for healthfulness and salubrity of the climate. The days are warm but the nights are cool and pleasant and "Tutt Nature's sweet restorer" brings refreshing repose. Ponce de Leon could have found a veritable fountain of youth in the pure, cold water, and bracing mountain air of this region that would bring the bloom of health to the cheek of the invalid.

Within a few miles of this place are sulpher and chalybeate springs which are frequently resorted to during the summer. The remedial properties of the waters are pronounced equal to many more widely celebrated Within the incorporation is a spring with a limestone bed and supplied by water bubbling from a hill side It is the third largest one in the State and quite a curiosity to visitors. There is also a well ninety feet deep and strongly impregnated with iron.

Prof W. J. Borden, formerly representative of Calhoun in the Legislature, assisted by Prof. W. M Russell, is in charge of a flourishing male and female school. Prof. B. claims to be the first white person born in Calhoun county.

Within two and a half miles of Jacksonville is located.

GERMANIA TANNERY.

This was organized in '69 with a capital of $30.000. About four years ago a mortgage on the tannery &c, was foreclosed by a Northern firm, and was purchased by Geo. Burke of Mobile, who in February or March a year since, sold a half interest to Mr. Geo C. Morgan.

The bark mill is run by a 62 inch Turbine wheel the water being from a large pond, covering three acres, supplied by a never failing spring On an average about $15 000 stock is regularly on hand in hides leather &c. The leather is shipped in an unfinished state, chiefly to Boston, and is adapted to saddlery and harness purposes. Hides are purchased in New Orleans, as well as the country around, and none are used but the best quality. About 40 cords of bark are used per month or near 500 a year which is obtained on the mountains along the railroad. The number of vats used for leather in lime and fresh water is 110 with ten leaches besides Hoofs, ears sinew and candel appendages of animals are making glue, and the hair for plastering—every thing being utilized. The bark shed holds 600 cords, towards of a years supply.

On the premises is a grist mill run by the Turbine wheel which keeps in motion all the machinery and is cheaper than steam power. The company own quite a village with a store, nine dwellings, an office and depot besides 23 acres of land. The store carries regularly from $4,000 to $5 000 in stock, and does a mercantile business of $120 0 but was designed chiefly for employes.

About a year since the pond was stocked with young carp now grown, and weighing, some of them taken out, several pounds

Just above Germania is a coding from which 85 000 bushels have been just shipped to Stonewall Furnace, Cherokee county.

Among the tannery employes are three brothers who were some time ago heirs of an estate in this country appraised at $128.000 but by some unknown cause the property passed into other hands

RICH ORE DEPOSITS AND DIGGINGS.

What is to prevent Jacksonville from being a great iron manufacturing town it is difficult to perceive. The country around is rich in its vast and inexhaustible deposits of iron beneath the surface of the soil and cropping out in every hill and mountain.

In the incorporation is the remains of a tram way leading from the depot to the ore diggins about a mile northeast of town.

The rich ore is found herein amense and apparently inexhaustible quantities. Thousands of tons are pited up as taken from the shafts sunk, and the "pockets" in the hill-side, but were never shipped. In 1879, Mr. R. H. Cooper, of Georgia, came to Jacksonville, laid the tram-way mentioned, and for fourteen months had a large number of hands employed in digging this ore. He shipped it to Chattanooga, Tecumseh, and other points, but after the period named, sold out to Gen Burke and Gen. Warner They sent a man here to superintend the work but neglecting his duty he was discharged and the work was discontinued. It could not have been from any objection to the ore in quality or quantity and the time is not distant when more than one furnace will be turning out the most superior quality of iron on this spot.

COAL AND KAOLIN.

On the mountain east of Jacksonville, a rich vein of pure Kaolin was discovered while the pipes were being laid to convey water into town The vein is upwards of forty feet broad in one place, and of indefinite extent The indications favor the presence of vast quantities of this material

The nearest point of the St Clair coal beds is about 20 miles distant, the deposit being at the foot of Ten Island Shoals in Coosa River A rich deposit was found in cutting through the channel while work was progressing at the shoals The coal was formerly transported by flat boats down the river and was sold as far South probably as Montgomery or Mobile.

Toward St. Clair coal fields, a survey is now being made of the

of the narrow gauge road from Cartersville via Cedar Town and Rockmart Ga, by Mr. West, the great iron man of Cedar Town This narrow gauge line will penetrate one of the finest ore and timber regions in the State which abounds also in lime and slate The line crosses the Coosa a few miles below the Ten Islands, and as surveyed runs within four miles of Jacksonville The objective point is Birmingham, but the chief object is to reach the St. Clair Coal fields, and it is stated that the owners of the coal lands propose to donate to the enterprise a half interest in the lands to secure the development of the coal interests

MISCELLANEOUS.

A cotton factory is being erected in this county, near the beautiful town of Cross Plains by Messrs McElrath & Savage, which will give employment to many needy families It is expected that the factory will be ready for operations some time in June.

The extent of the mineral wealth in this section may be inferred from the fact that since its development was begun nine furnaces have been established in this Congressional district.

In excavating the bed of the old road known as the Alabama and Tennesse river railroad several hundred thousand tons of iron ore were taken from one spot

The valley lands of the county are very productive and never wear out. The soil is easily renovated and susceptible of being made very rich; is well adapted to corn, small grain, clover and the grasses generally. Cotton has been cultivated to a large extent until the present year. About 50 per cent. of oats and wheat and from 15 to 20 per cent of corn more than last year, have been planted and the decrease in the use of commercial fertilizers estimated at 33 per cent The planters resorted generally to compositing. The political campaign is now opened in Calhoun and unusual interest is felt as to the result of the State Convention. Calhoun has its favorites, but will accord a hearty support to the nominees, from whatsoever section they may be selected. This being an old Senatorial district, Hon L. W. Grant, the able editor of the Jacksonville Republican will return to his seat next session. The prospect is almost certain for the reelection of Gold. D. Hammond the intelligent and efficient Representative in the last legislature

Nine miles from here is "Spring Vale," which is becoming widely celebrated as the cattle and sheep farm of Capt Jas. Crook. It is in charge of a german disciplman who is au fait in the business. "Spring Vale" is stocked with the finest of sheep and cattle of the purest strain.

I omitted to mention that Jacksonville is supplied with water conducted by two miles of iron pipe to a reservoir in town, 60 feet higher than the public square The source is a large mountain spring 20 feet higher still than the reservoir. The natural pressure is so great that a stream of water is easily thrown over the Court house

R. J. Y.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—In an interview with District Attorney Corkhill, he said: "I will also state that the gallows is ready and the rope on hand. If an order to hang Guiteau should require it to be done tomorrow morning at 6 o'clock, he could be executed at that hour, and as decently as such work can be done."

About 1,500 000 sacks of potatoes, containing an average of three bushels each have been imported into the city of New York during the past month. They fetch about two-thirds of the price asked for those of home production, for the reason that when cooked they present a yellowish appearance. This of course is simply a matter of education as in England the potatoes from the continent are in great demand and the color is not objected to in the least. It is claimed by many that they are more nutricious than the white varieties.

The Burnt District of Michigan.

The district in Michigan burned over by the fire of last fall has just been visited by Governor Jerome and some members of the relief committee, and the announcement is made that the sufferers will get along without further aid—There were 3,326 families, including 14,790 persons burned out and nearly all were left entirely destitute. Crops, stock and everything that could be burned was lost. very few had their land paid for, and many had the season's bills outstanding, which they relied upon their crops to pay. But the relief committees have distributed over $600.000 in money, and probably as much in supplies, contributed from all parts of the country, and this has helped the people through the winter and given them such a start they can raise crops this season. Each family has been given 3.000 feet of lumber, 4.000 shingles, a door and window sash and some articles of furniture, and there are now standing about as many houses as before the fire, although of course many of them are very small and rude. In the first few days after the calamity there was much suffering from hunger and exposure, but since the relief work got under way there has been nothing of the kind, and the charity upon the whole, has been remarkably well managed.

The total arrival of immigrants at the various ports of the United States for the year ending June 30 will probably exceed 800,000. Of the large number which arrived at New York during the past week, only 10 remain without employment, the demands for labor in all parts of the country being as urgent as ever with good wages offered as a rule.

"How do You Manage," said a lady to her friend, "to appear so happy all the time?" "I always have Parker's Ginger Tonic handy," was the reply. "And thus keep myself and family in good health. When I am well I always feel good natured." See other column. apr15

From the Cincinnati Dispatch: "We have seen its magic effects, and know it to be a good article."

From U. S. Potter, U. S. Consul at Crefeld, Rhenish-Prussia: "After long years of use, I am satisfied it is positively efficient as a healing remedy for wounds, bruises, and sprains."

W. W. Sharper, Valdosta, Ga., says: "It is a panacea for all bruises and burns."

In a case brought before him Monday Judge Woods decided, in effect, that any person guilty of decoying or inducing or persuading any person in the employment of another from the service of such employee, whether the contract be in writing or not, is guilty of a misdemeanor. The two men charged with the offense were fined $20 and costs each, and in default of bail one of them went to jail. The case was appealed and will be tried de novo in the Circuit Court, at which time the several sections of the Code bearing on this subject will be construed by the court. Under the decision of Judge Woods any man is guilty of misdemeanor who induces any hired man to leave the service of another by offer of higher wages, or otherwise, regardless of time for which he is so hired, and regardless also of the fact whether there be a written contract or not. This is an important fact for our people to know. Heretofore parties in this county have supposed it no violation of law to hold out inducements to employed men to leave their employment when there was no written contract between employer and employees.

A Few Thoughts for Thoughtful Minds.

MR. EDITOR: In your last issue is an interesting editorial under the caption, "Some Years Hence."

Although the undersigned is in perfect accord with your views as to the brilliant prospect for our beloved section of the sunny South yet apprehension and solicitude will arise in the very midst of these pleasant anticipations—very probably because it has been instilled into our minds that "The price of liberty is eternal vigilance."

Now while the advancement of our political strength and financial interests is very desirable (ceteris paribus), still unless accompanied (pari passu) by moral and intellectual culture, is there not danger of perishing by our own prosperity?

As it is somewhat characteristic of the Republican to exercise tolerance and liberality in religious opinions, the writer would like through your columns to suggest to your thinking readers that while frequent hints are thrown out as to the defects in our system of road working, and items pertaining to stock and fence regulations, there are weightier matters of the law" that should not be ignored. For instance: it may be wild fanaticism for some one to be bold enough to mildly intimate that the wholesale desecration of the Sabbath at our public works" is possibly an offence to the Great Jehovah—the author of the not yet obsolete Decalogue—for who is disapprobation no material prosperity nor wealth can compensate. Seriously, does it not seem strange that 'or a needy farmer to plow his crop on Sunday, righteous indignation and holy horror would (justly too) be expressed, but the strokes of profane engines and the toil of numerous operatives scarcely elicit a casual remark? Nor are deficiencies in our legislation wholy due to the legislators. The masses depend too much on leading men to conjecture the sentiments of the people. In conclusion though your correspondent is not one of those malcontents who say the former days were better than these" he thinks there is a happy medium attainable, between bigoted religious in tolerance and latitudinarism, and those who have the right, by priority to shape our political destiny should look well at our reckoning. Hopefully.

PHIL OSOPHER.

Senator Morgan of Alabama

There is no man in Congress, who in our estimation, has acquited himself with more credit, or who better represents the true principles and the unconquered manhood of the South, than the Senator above named. He now occupies the seat of Senator Hill, and certainly no one of his colleagues is better entitled to fill it permanently, if by a sad dispensation of Providence the great Georgian should be unable to return to his post. There are, indeed, striking resemblances between Senator Hill and Morgan. Both are fearless and impetuous; both ready and formidable in debate; both good lawyers as well as attractive orators; and both actuated more by an impulse devotion to right and abhorence of injustice and wrong, than by any calculations of political expediency. Senator Morgan is a steady opponent of the aggressions and usurpations by which the Republican party are striving to destroy all the rights of the States and merge all power into one strong consolidated government. He and those who side with him may be defeated in this contest for a time, but nothing is surer than that the States of the Union will re-assert and regain their constitutional rights and once more draw the well defined line between Federal and local jurisdiction. On the main practicable questions that loom up for early solution by Congress, Senator Morgan represents faithfully the sentiment of the great body of the Southern people, and they can hardly find any abler champion in either House He has shown that he is not to be swerved from the support of great principles by any local interests or personal influences. He is above the petty schemes of the log rollers, and unapproachable to the rings that seek to control legislation in their own interest. In short if we were asked to indicate the Southern man best fitted for the Democratic leadership in the Senate, we would unhesitatingly say that Gen. John T. Morgan admirably combines the qualities needed for the position.

Rome Courier.

The Providence of God.

"My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge."—Hosea, iv., 6.

[Providence.—An event in which the care or design of God is directly seen and shown.—Webster.]

It seems "this day is this Scripture fulfilled." God is sending his judgments upon the people, and they fail to see them as from him. This is a materialistic age; so much so that the habit of the mind has become materialistic even among professors of religion.

In reference to the direct government of God, many of them are ready to say with the ungodly, "The Lord will not do good, neither will he do evil." My mind has been opened by degrees to this startling fact. Some two years ago I was in conversation with one of our preachers with reference to the ravages of a certain cyclone, when I expressed the belief that it was a direct providence of God. The brother objected that God did not order these things, but simply overruled them. My reply was that God did not overrule; he ruled.

In proof of this I quoted "Not a sparrow falleth to the ground without your Father." He answered, "without the knowledge of your father." That would be a wonderful revelation to us, to be told that an all-wise God, one that knew every thing, knew also when a sparrow lost its life. The truth taught in this lesson is this: When a sparrow lost its life, from whatever apparent cause, it was God who hushed its song and folded its little wings in death.

Another brother, in comforting a friend in the case of the death of a child, told her the Lord did not always take these little ones out of the world; sometimes it was the result of malpractice of physicians. When David's child was sick, he said, "who can tell whether God will be gracious to me, that the child may live." 2 Sam., xii., 22

Job's children were killed by the house being blown down upon them, yet he said, "The Lord hath taken (them) away." The Old Testament saints committed their ways unto the Lord and saw his providence in everything.

While men are responsible for their volitions, and avoid or incur guilt according as their choice is righteous or unrighteous, still in their daily conduct they are carrying out God's general plan, thus the wrath of man shall praise him. Joseph's brethren in their envy and avarice sold their brother, but his own testimony is; "It was not you that sent me hither, but God." Gen., xiv., 8.

"And this is the case of the slayer, which shall flee thither, that he may live: Whoso killeth his neighbor ignorantly, whom he hated not in time past; As when a man goeth into the wood with his neighbor to hew wood, and his hand fetcheth a stroke with the axe to cut down the tree, and the head slippeth from the helve, and lighteth upon his neighbor, that he die; he shall flee unto one of those cities, and live." Deut., xix., 45.

Such a death at first thought would seem purely accidental, but God does away with the purely accidental, in his government, by informing us that such a person is killed at his instance. "And if a man lie not in wait, but God deliver him into his hand; then I will appoint thee a place whither he shall flee," Ex. xxi., 13.

The prevailing sentiment to-day is,

"The Universal Cause
Acts not by partial, but by general laws."

Many to-day do not see the hand of God in everything. They do not see in the grasshopper, the church bug, the biting frost, the flood, and the cyclone, the direct providences of God. They talk as if these were "for the best" temporarily. The argument that these work a temporal benefit, or that "cyclones are necessary to purify the atmosphere," or that all or any of these are necessary in an way to the health or prosperity of the country, is too flimsy to deserve a serious notice. These are all sent to teach backsliding America that there is a God in heaven, and these destroying agencies are brought to view to remind man that, if he don't reverence this God, he will send him "want of bread and cleanness of teeth."

This hoodwinking the understanding is a trick of Satan. He knows, if we fail to see God in these and thus fail to receive them as judgments from him, we do not receive the intended correction. Thus wickedness is not put away, God's judgments are continued, and his "people are destroyed for lack of knowledge."

Southern Presbyterians

MEMPHIS, May 27.—The appeals Atlanta Ga, special says: "Rev Samuel Park, colored, ordained Presbyterian Minister by the Memphis Presbytery was denied a seat and vote in the Presbytery at its meeting at Summerville Tenn, last winter The case created a great deal of excitement at the time and was appealed to the synod and from the synod to the Generaly Assembly, now in session a. Atlanta, and was decided to day in his favor by a vote of two to one. This makes him a member of the Memphis Presbytery, and for the present spoils the purpose of those who opposed him to create a colored Presbyterian church.

An Atlanta Ga; dispatch says: The Presbyterian Generaly Assembly decided —81 to 32—that the negro Parks, of Memphis, was entitled to the full benefits of ordination on the same basis as white members of the Southern Presbyteries. The reply of the Northern Assembly, accompanied by a modifying resolution, was recieved with much disappointment. The committee on foreign correspondence has the matter in charge, and will make a report to the Northern Assembly.

Illeness is the hot bed of ignorance and vice.

The interstate commerce bill, which gives the government the power to regulate railroad, passenger and freigh traffic, will hardly be considered in Congress this session. The House committee, it is thought, will report a substitute for the regular bill, a bill providing a commission to supervise railroad traffic, but it is not thought the committee can obtain the consideration of the House for the same, and the friends of the bills have no hope for consideration of either this session.

AGRICULTURE.

How to Get Apples on "Off" Years.—To undertake to change the bearing year of an old orchard is something of a task, but not so great a task but what it would pay in the long run. With an old orchard the first thing to be done is to remove the blossoms or small fruit. A liberal dressing of manure should be applied to the ground to induce a vigorous growth, and it would be all the better if applied the fall before, as the late fall and early spring rains will assist in carrying the fertilizing matter down to the roots. If applied late in the spring it will be of but little use the first year. Different varieties will require different treatment, or rather varieties that are not very profuse bearers will require more vigorous and thorough treatment than those that are. For instance, the Famuse or snow apple is a very profuse bearer, and if the blossoms are removed the coming spring, the tree well pruned and manure applied early so as to get the benefit of the spring rains, it will be very certain to bear a fair crop the next year, and very probably a full crop. That treatment for a single year will be likely to fully established the habit. If the few blossoms that appear the following year are removed, it will be likely to get the bearing habit so thoroughly established that it will be likely to continue without further care. With varieties that are not so profuse in their habit it is frequently necessary to resort to more heroic treatment. With such trees, after removing the blossoms or small fruit, some time between the middle of June and the 10th of July, if the tree is growing, vigorously (but not otherwise), a cut should be made entirely around each of the limbs, cutting entirely through the bark. A second cut should be made about a quarter of an inch from the first, and the intervening section of bark carefully removed. A new bark will be formed in a short time, but the downward flow of the sap will be arrested and the formation of fruit buds so encouraged that trees so treated will be very certain to be covered with bloom the following spring. To confirm the habit it may be necessary to repeat the treatment. With old orchards, containing large trees, few farmers will want to spend the time necessary to effect the change, but with young trees it is but little trouble to remove the blossoms, and by giving them the treatment described for a few years thoroughly establish the bearing habit in the odd years, and thus double the value of their returns. If the ring of bark is properly removed no harm will be done to the trees, even if repeated in alternate years for a long time. It is a fact that the bark can be removed from the entire body of a thrifty apple tree during the latter part of June or the fore part of July without any injury to the tree. By taking one half or any part of the top of a tree and giving it the above described treatment, the part so treated will have its bearing changed, and the tree made to produce a crop of apples on one or the other part each year.

Have Sharp Knives.—How the "men folks" would fret and sweat, grumble and growl, if they had to chop, mow, or whittle, or do any cutting, with blunt or round-edged implements! Yet nine out of ten of the "women folks" do most of their cutting up of meats with dull knives—round-edged, made barely usable by rubbing them on a stove-top—with an outlay of unnecessary strength and patience, hard shoes are haggled into thick and thin forms with dull, over-thick knives; long beating, instead of cutting the hash meat fine; and it makes one ache—as badly as their hands or fingers ache—to see women trying to go through or shape a piece of cloth with shears or scissors, loose or rickety at the joints; and as for cutting edges on the blades there are none. The remedy.—First, we would say, let every woman, young or old, learn to sharpen implements—if necessary, taking lessons of the men folks or some one else. Second, let every man who is a man, having a house and deserving one, give personal attention to the household cutting implements. Ten minutes a week or twenty minutes a month, of an evening or rainy day, will suffice to sharpen the shears and scissors clear to their points, tighten the joints to make the blades meet through their whole length—not so tightly as to strain the fingers, or so loose as to let the cloth turn through uncut. Also to grind off the round of the kitchen cutting and the chopping knives, and put an edge on them; ditto the table knives.

Sowing Seeds.—Joseph Harris, of Rochester, in his new seed catalogue gives his young customers some good directions about sowing garden seeds. He says they should be covered only deep enough to keep moist and that small seeds such as lettuce, radish, Drummond phlox, aster, verbena and pansy, need not be covered deeper than a sheet of writing paper is thick. If pressed into the soil and kept moist they need not be covered at all. Petunia seeds are easily covered so deep that they will not grow, while peas will grow if covered two or three inches deep. We may add to the above that for out-door planting it is a good rule to cover seeds to a depth of three to five times their diameter and no more, so that large seeds like corn and peas will be many times deeper than the minute seeds of the portulaca. All must have the three requisites of warmth, moisture and air, (but not light,) and if buried too deep the air will be excluded. Peter Henderson finds benefit in covering the seeds, after pressing it into the soil, with a thin coat of finely pulverized moss, evenly sifted on, and watered with a fine hose.

Soil for Market Garden.—A deep, rich sandy loam is the best, having a porous subsoil of sandy loam. A light sandy soil with a sand or gravel subsoil is almost useless for the growing of late crops, and especially onions, cabbage, cauliflower and celery, while a stiff clay loam with clay or hard-pan subsoil could hardly be made to pay for growing early salads, melons, cucumbers, radishes, tomatoes, etc., but this kind of soil, if underdrained and well worked, will be the very best for late vegetables. Land that is worn out by cropping on the start is useless.

A good crop of red clover, when cut for hay, removes a large quantity of nitrogen from the land, but it nevertheless leaves the surface soil actually richer in nitrogen than it was before, from the residue of roots and stubble. From whence is this large quantity of nitrogen obtained? It must be procured either from the sub-soil or the atmosphere. Dr. J. B. Lawes thinks the former seems the most probable, as extended experiments have hitherto failed to prove that leguminous plants, like clover have any special power of obtaining nitrogen from the air.

As the influence of male animals is more strongly impressed on the offspring than that of the female, it is important that due care be exercised in the selection of males for improvement. One with doubtful lineage should be avoided.

An application of a bushel and a half of plaster to the acre on clover early will infuse new life into it. If wood ashes are added it will be still better. Ashes and plaster are special fertilizers for clover.

DOMESTIC.

How to Clean Kid Gloves.—Kid gloves and slippers, when soiled, may be renovated by the following process: Take a little sweet milk and a piece of white or brown soap. Fold a clean towel three or four times, spread it over your dress, and spread the glove smoothly upon the soap, and rub the glove downward toward the fingers, holding the wrist of it by the left hand. Continue this process until the glove, if white, looks of a dingy yellow, but if colored, looks dark and entirely spoiled. Now let it dry, and then put it on your hand, and it will soon be soft, smooth, glossy, and clean. Take care, however, to omit no part of the glove in rubbing it, and see that all the soiled parts are thoroughly cleaned. This process applies only to white colored kid gloves. For black gloves that are soiled, turned white and otherwise injured take a spoonful of salad oil, drop a few drops of ink into it, and rub it all over the gloves with the tip of a feather; then let them dry in the sun. White kid boots and slippers can also be cleaned by the first process to look "as good as new," and black kid boots and slippers can be restored to their pristine gloss by the latter method. White kid gloves can be died yellow or brown by steeping saffron leaves in boiling water for eight hours, and then wetting the gloves with a sponge dipped into the decoction. The color can be graduated by the strength of the dye. A handful of saffron leaves steeped in a pint of water will color half dozen pairs of gloves.

Paste that will Keep a Year.—Dissolve a tablespoon of alum in a quart of warm water, and when cold stir in as much flour as will make it as thick as cream—mixing the flour in a separate cup so that it will not be in lumps. Add as much powdered rosin as will lie on a dime and throw in a dozen cloves to give it a pleasant odor. Put a teacup of boiling water into a tin dish, and pour in the flour mixture.

Boil for fifteen minutes; if cooked in another pan previous to boiling, it will be less likely to burn. Let it dry away, and when needed, dissolve a piece in a little boiling water.

Spiced Beef.—Take the bones out of a six-pound salt flank of beef and slit the meat into a long thin piece; sprinkle with a pinch of each of the following spices, mixed together. Mace, nutmeg, ginger, pepper, allspice and a handful of chopped parsley; roll it up tightly and place in a cloth closely tied, put into a stewpan, and one small onion, one carrot, a piece of celery and a small bunch of sweet herbs. Cover with cold water, let boil and simmer gently five hours; when cooked tie the cloth up tighter and press between two boards; let it get cold. This can either be served plain or glazed.

Cleaning Brass.—The Government recipe for cleaning brass, used in the arsenals, is said to be as follows: Make a mixture of one part common nitric acid, and one-half part sulphuric acid in a stone jar; then place ready a pail of fresh water and a box of sawdust. Dip the articles to be cleaned in the acid, then remove them into the water, after which rub them with sawdust. This immediately changes them to a brilliant color. If the brass is greasy it must first be dipped in a strong solution of potash and soda in warm water; this cuts the grease so that the acid has the power to act.

"Saucer System" for Flower Cuttings.—Common saucers or plates are used to hold the sand in which the cuttings are placed. Make the sand one or two inches deep, and put the cuttings close enough to touch each other; water the sand until it becomes in the condition of mud, and place in the greenhouse or on the parlor window sill fully exposed to the sun. To make this system a success, the sand must be kept wet as mud until the cuttings have taken root, or they will wilt and be a failure.

Furniture Covers.—A couch in the living room may be kept from fading by taking a piece of Turkish toweling the required length—that is a little longer than the couch, so that it will fall over the ends, and not slide down and wrinkle; put scallops of flannel on the edge. A border or centre piece, or even a vine worked in some bright color across the ends, is a pretty addition. A pretty bedroom set, splash curtains for behind the washstand, covers for table and dressing table mats would be very attractive made in this way.

Mantle Lambrequin—Transfer Work.—The embroidery on Cretan or Turkish towels, so fashionable for tidies, may be transferred to maroon, plush or sage green velvet, and embroidered down with briar stitch in colored filoselle.

A mantle lambrequin, done in this way, may have irregular shelves of ebonized or other fancy wood backed by the same plush, set above it, making a cabinet to contain choice bits of Satsuma ware, Dresden china, or miniatures.

Washing Crewel Work.—Make a lather of the best primrose soap, or curd soap, and rub the article to be washed in it. Do not put any soap on the work. Rinse in clear water but do not wring only squeeze. Shake and stretch till dry. Another mode is to tie a handful of bran in a muslin bag, and make a lather with warm water. Wash the crewel in this without using soap.

A Meat Stew.—A nice stew can be made by taking pieces of mutton or veal, boiling till tender, adding a few potatoes cut small, and thickening a little with flour; first stirring the flour smooth as for gravy. Season to taste with pepper and salt. Have ready a pan of hot biscuits, open them and spread in a deep dish, and pour the stew over them. This is very nice and more wholesome than dough boiled with meat.

Cure for the Earache.—Take a small piece of cotton batting or cotton wool, make a depression in the centre with the finger and fill it up with as much ground pepper as will rest on a five-cent piece; gather it into a ball and tie it up, dip the ball in sweet oil and insert it in the ear, covering the latter with cotton wool, secured by a bandage or cap.

Potato Soup.—Boil and mash potatoes. To three pints of mashed potatoes add three quarts of rich beef stock, ready boiling. Add pepper and salt to taste, and serve with fried bread. Or, if liked, take one onion, one head of celery, two spoonfuls of rice, and boil in the stock till tender, then add the mashed potatoes and serve hot, with crackers or bread.

Knitted Cuff (easy work).—Cast on sixty stitches, twenty on each of three needles; knit plain for seventy rounds, cast off; make a hem at the top one inch in depth; a fold of velvet, embroidered in gold beads, is sewed round the other end, and is edged with pleated lace. Andalusian wool is preferred for this simple cuff.

When you bury an old animosity, never mind putting up a tombstone.

HUMOROUS.

A few days after the funeral of a New York undertaker met a wealthy man whose daughter he had buried. "I was sorry and surprised on hearing of your embarrassment, and I hope the money was enough to relieve you," said the old gentleman.

"Money! embarrassed! relieve me," gasped the undertaker. "I haven't asked you for any money, and didn't intend to for some time."

The gentleman, nettled, tartly replied: "You dunned me for the expenses of my daughter's funeral within three days, and I paid the bill."

"I dunned you! I never asked you for a cent," exclaimed the undertaker. "Was it a young man?" he continued.

"Yes," said the old gentleman, "your son; and he said you wanted the money immediately."

"A few days after the funeral," said the undertaker, "a well dressed young man came to my store, representing himself as the betrothed lover of your daughter, whom he was to have married in a few days. He wished as a token of his affection for her, to pay her funeral expenses. I refused at first, telling him that her family would not permit it. But he urged it so strenuously that I finally consented, and made out the bill. He took it, and said he would go down to his father's office and make out the check. I have not heard or seen anything of him since."

And now the question is, who will have to pay for the little job which that very smart young man put up on these worthy people—the father or the undertaker?

Tony Pastor in Trouble.

Tony Pastor, of New York, who is now with his inimitable variety combination, making a tour of the principal cities of the Union, is recognized as the leading character vocalist and variety performer of the United States. He owns and runs a first-class theatre on Broadway, New York City, and has gathered about him the best troup of variety artists that could be obtained. The company has just completed a brilliant engagement at the Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, and after the present tour they will reappear in Tony Pastor's own Theatre in New York City. Mr. Pastor is the originator of his peculiar school of character singing, and has made himself immensely popular, having realized by his talent an immense fortune.

The writer of this article met Mr. Pastor recently at the Bingham House, in Philadelphia, and found him as genial in private as he is amusing before the public. During our conversation I inquired as to his physical health, and he replied that, notwithstanding the strain upon him in the discharge of his professional duties, it was excellent. He had occasionally severe pains, either the result of rheumatic attacks or colds, but any complaints of that character never troubled him long, as he had found out a remedy for all such annoying affections. I asked him what the remedy was, and he replied, "St. Jacobs Oil." I then learned from Mr. Pastor that he considered the Great German Remedy an excellent preparation for the cure or relief of rheumatism, and that it was about the only thing used among professional people for that distressing complaint. He took bottles of it with him whenever he went traveling, and would not be without it, and knew that it was very popular with a number of members of his own company. A conversation held subsequently with various members of the organization revealed the fact that St. Jacobs Oil had been performing most invaluable service for them in the way of curing them of rheumatism. Nearly every artist in the troupe used it, and was enthusiastic in its praise, and the writer was really forced to the conclusion that Tony Pastor was certainly in luck in having so valuable an article known and employed by his inimitably good company of performers, for it enabled every one to be always in his place, thus insuring comfort to the management and genuine satisfaction to the public. Tony Pastor would certainly be in trouble without St. Jacobs Oil. At least, other managers whose artists have been temporarily unsupplied, have noticed the difference between St. Jacobs Oil in stock and St. Jacobs Oil out of stock—among the members of their companies.—N. Y. Clipper.

The Earl of Bradford was brought before Lord Loughborough, and a conversation followed in which the chancellor was completely puzzled. At last he asked "How many legs has a sheep?"

"Does your lordship mean," asked Lord Bradford, a live or dead sheep?"

"Is it not the same thing?" said the chancellor.

"No, my lord," said Lord Bradford, "there is much difference. A live sheep may have four legs; a dead sheep has only two. The two fore legs are shoulders, but there are only two legs of mutton."

The night is pitch dark and the compartment in the car is crowded. An honest peasant would like to take a little nap, but his huge three-cornered hat is in the way and he does not see what to do with it. "Here, put it in the cupboard, my good man," says a commercial traveler, opening the window. The drowsy peasant complies, murmuring his thanks and expressing his ignorance of the ways of the rail, and falls into a sweet sleep, during which the commercial traveler gets into another compartment.

"All through advertising" remarked ex-Mayor Gregory, to us as he went homeward with a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, "that I bought this: Your paper contains so many wonderful cures—of course they are facts—and so I thought I'd try a bottle for the rheumatism."—Madison (Wis.) Daily Democrat.

A wealthy man displaying one day his jewels to a philosopher, the latter said: "Thank you, sir, for being willing to share such magnificent jewels with me."

"Share them with you, sir?" exclaimed the man. "What do you mean?"

"Why you allow me to look at them, and what more can you do with them yourself?" replied the philosopher.

It was at a temperance meeting. The speaker increased in eloquence and noise, and he cried: "Yes, my friends, we'll lift our temperance banner out of the mire and mud on to hard dry ground, and then sail beautifully along."

One of the best epitaphs, and one of the shortest, also, is that which Jerrold gave for Charles Knight, the amiable historian. It was simply "Good Knight."

"Facts Tell The Story."

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 27, 1882.

Mr. H. R. Stevens:

Heretofore, I have been strongly opposed to all proprietary medicines, but, as there is an exception to most rules, I feel that my prejudice against patent medicines has had a fearful shock in the case of your Vegetine, and has been compelled to give way before the stronger evidence of facts. About two years ago, I was induced to give a fair trial of your Vegetine, as a detergent in some Strumous (Scrofulosis) cases of hereditary transmission, attended with swellings of the lymphatic glands and joints, carious ulcerations of bones and constitutional syphilitic taint, &c., and in justice, I feel I should be derelict to duty, did I not testify to the great value of your Vegetine. Without exception, I have found it an admirable adjunct in the removal of the above constitutional disturbances. I am now using it freely in my practice. I am aware that I am rendering myself amenable to the charge of unprofessional conduct in thus outraging the rules of medical ethics, in fostering a so-called Quack Medicine. This is simply Bosh! Facts tell the story, and I again assert that Vegetine is a valuable adjunct to our Materia Medica. If this testimony to its value will sell one more bottle, I shall tell that I have done some poor sufferer a Samaritan benefit.

Yours very truly,

A young Roumanian engineer thinks he has solved the problem of submarine navigation. A few weeks ago this gentleman submitted to the consideration of a technical commission, appointed by the Roumanian Government, his model of a fish-shaped steel boat, provided with the means of locomotion and stored with air sufficient for the consumption of its crew during a period of submersion not exceeding fifteen hours. The stock of air, however, can be renewed at will by raising the vessel to a point form six to nine feet beneath the surface of the water, whence, by means of pneumatic pumps and a slender iron tube passed through a practical circular trap in its roof, it will be able to take in its atmospheric provision. The interior of the boat is illuminated brilliantly from stem to stern by electric light thrown upon powerful reflectors. With the aid of this light it will be enabled to search for torpedoes at but little risk to itself, and to conduct its own offensive operations against hostile fleets with the utmost precision.

Twenty Years a Sufferer.

R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.: Dear Sir—Twenty years ago I was shipwrecked on the Atlantic Ocean, and the cold and exposure caused a large abscess to form on each leg, which kept continually discharging. After spending hundreds of dollars, with no benefit, I tried your "Golden Medical Discovery" and now, in less than three months after taking the first bottle, I am thankful to say I am completely cured, and for the first time in ten years can put my left heel to the ground. I am yours,

WILLIAM RYDER, 87 Jefferson St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Canada has become more emphatically a dairy country than the United States. With a population of 5,000,000 they manufacture annually 60,000,000 pounds of cheese, equal to twelve pounds per capita while we, with 50,000,000 make 800,000,000, or six pounds per capita. With a population not exceeding one-tenth of ours their exports of butter are about one-half as great as ours.

Thousands of women bless the day when Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" was made known to them. In all those derangements causing backache, dragging-down sensations, nervous and general debility, it is a sovereign remedy. Its soothing and healing properties render it of the utmost value to ladies suffering from "internal fever," congestion, inflammation, or ulceration. By druggists.

"Too much absorbed in his business" was the comment of a Western newspaper on the death of a brewer who was found drowned in a tank of his own beer.

Bad boys who stone railway trains should be made an example of. The first thing we know one of them will throw a stone at the United States Navy, and then what will become of the nation?

The original "Little Liver Pills" are Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," and are extensively imitated. They cure sick and bilious headache. Private Government stamp with Dr. Pierce's signature and portrait mark the genuine. By druggists.

The facetious postage stamp clerk who told a man that asked for two twos that this was not an æsthetic post office, is now looking for a new situation.

Skill in the Workshop.—To do good work the mechanic must have good health. If long hours of confinement in close rooms have enfeebled his hand or dimmed his sight, let him at once, and before some organic trouble appears, take plenty of Hop Bitters. His system will be rejuvenated, his nerves strengthened, his sight become clear, and the whole constitution be built up to a higher working condition.

A fashion journal says that plump girls are no longer popular. Correct; it's the slim girl with the plump fortune that now takes the cake.

"The Doctors told Me to take a blue pill, but I didn't for I had already been poisoned twice by mercury. The druggist told me to try Kidney-Wort, and I did. It was just the thing for my biliousness and constipation, and now I am as well as ever." Torpid kidneys and liver is the trouble, for which Kidney-Wort always proves to be the best remedy known.—Hartford Courant.

"I don't know, mar," replied the young hopeful, but I can with a spoon.

RADWAY'S
Sarsaparillian Resolvent.

Pure blood makes sound flesh, strong bone, and a clear skin. If you would have your flesh firm, your bones sound without caries, and your complexion fair, use RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT.

A remedy composed of ingredients of extraordinary medical properties essential to purify, repair and invigorate the broken-down and wasted body—QUICK, PLEASANT, SAFE and PERMANENT in its treatment and cure.

No matter by what name the complaint may be designated, whether it be Scrofula, Consumption, Syphilis, Ulcers, Sores, Tumors, Boils, Erysipelas or Salt-Rheum, diseases of the Lungs, Kidneys Bladder, Womb, Skin, Liver, Stomach or Bowels, either chronic or constitutional, the virus of the disease is in the BLOOD which supplies the waste, and builds and repairs these organs and wasted tissues of the system. If the blood is unhealthy, the process of repair must be unsound.

The Sarsaparillian Resolvent not only is a compensating remedy, but secures the harmonious action of each of the organs. It establishes throughout the entire system functional harmony, and supplies the blood-vessels with a pure and healthy current of new life. The skin, after a few days use of the Sarsaparillian, becomes clear and beautiful. Pimples, Blotches, Black Spots, Skin Eruptions are removed; Sores and Ulcers soon cured. Persons suffering from Scrofula, Eruptive Diseases of the Eyes, Mouth, Ears, Legs, Throat and Glands, that have accumulated and spread, either from uncured diseases or mercury, or from the use of Corrosive Sublimate, may rely upon a cure if the Sarsaparillian is continued a sufficient time to make its impression on the system.

One bottle contains more of the active principles of Medicines than any other Preparation taken in teaspoonful doses, while others require five or six times as much.

ONE DOLLAR PER BOTTLE.

MINUTE REMEDY.

Only requires minutes not hours, to relieve pain and cure acute disease.

RADWAY'S
READY RELIEF,

In from one to twenty minutes, never fails to relieve PAIN with one thorough application; no matter how violent or excruciating the pain, the Rheumatic, Bed-ridden, Infirm, Crippled, Nervous, Neuralgic or prostrated with disease may suffer, RADWAY'S READY RELIEF will afford instant ease.

Inflammation of the Kidneys, Inflammation of the Bladder, Inflammation of the Bowels, Congestion of the Lungs, Sore Throat, Difficult Breathing, Palpitation of the Heart, Hysterics, Croup, Diphtheria, Catarrh, Influenza, Headache, Toothache, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Cold Chills, Ague Chills, Chilblains and Frost-bites, Bruises, Summer Complaints, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Coughs, Colds, Sprains, Pains in the Chest, Back, or Limbs are instantly relieved.

FEVER AND AGUE.

FEVER AND AGUE cured for 50 cts. There is not a remedial agent in this world that will cure Fever and Ague, and other Malarious, Bilious, Scarlet, Typhoid, Yellow and other fevers (aided by RADWAY'S PILLS) so quickly as RADWAY'S READY RELIEF.

It will in a few minutes, when taken according to the directions, cure Cramps, Spasms, Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Colic, Wind in the Bowels, and all Internal Pains.

Travelers should always carry a bottle of Radway's Ready Relief with them. A few drops in water will prevent sickness or pains from change of water. It is better than French Brandy or Bitters as a stimulant.

Miners and Lumbermen should always be provided with it.

CAUTION.

All remedial agents capable of destroying life by an overdose should be avoided. Morphine, opium, strychnine, arnica, hyosciamus, and other powerful remedies, do at certain times, in very small doses, relieve the patient during their action in the system. But perhaps the second dose, if repeated, may aggravate and increase the suffering, and another dose cause death. There is no necessity for using those uncertain agents when a positive remedy like Radway's Ready Relief will stop the most excruciating pain quicker, without entailing the least difficulty in either infant or adult.

THE TRUE RELIEF.

Radway's Ready Relief is the only remedial agent in vogue that will instantly stop pain.

THE AULD ASH TREE.

There grows an ash by my bour door,
And a' its boughs are buskit braw
In fairest weeds o' simmer green,
And birds sit singing on them a',
But cease your sangs, ye blithesome birds,
An' o' your littin' let me be,
Ye bring deid simmers frae their graves
To weary me, to weary me!

There grows an ash by my bour door,
And a' its boughs are clad in snaw;
The ice-drap rings at ilka twig,
And sad the nor' wind soughs thro' a',
Oh, cease thy mane, thou norlan' wind,
And o' thy wailin' let me be;
Thou bringest deid winters frae their graves
To weary me, to weary me!

Oh, I wad fain forget them a':
Remember'd guid but deepens ill,
As gleids o licht far seen by nicht
Mak' the near mirk but mirker still.
Then silent be, thou dear old tree,
O' a' thy voices let me be;
They bring the deid years frae their graves
To weary me, to weary me!

LIL'S FOLLY.

Pretty Lilian Lawney, exquisitely costumed, from the silken ostrich plume of her hat to the tip of her dainty boot, ran lightly down the high steps of her beautiful new home.

She had been married a month, and was very happy as the darling of an old man, who, while fortunate enough to surround her with luxury, was also more fortunate to possess the utter faith and love of his young wife. Major Lawney had never regretted the few years of tried fidelity and experience which made his breast a haven of rest and peace to this otherwise lonely girl. It was Lilian who grieved that her brief twenty summers might separate so far their now united lives.

But this brilliant winter day possessed for her no introspection. She only knew that her happy heart seemed to be reflected from the dazzling streets and bright blue sky. Her content seemed to make all the world content about her, until, quickly turning the corners of a square, she came suddenly upon a knot of boys, in the midst of which was a dog, a miserable, crouching creature, over which her heart melted. She stopped.

"What are you doing with that poor dog?" she asked, somewhat severely.

The boys had paused, at her sudden appearance upon the scene, with the air of detected criminals.

One, revealing that he had a heart in his breast, finally answered:

"Ned Rollins, he's turned a whole bottle of kerosene over him, and they are going to set it on fire!"

"Is that true?" demanded Lilian of one of the older boys.

"He's my dog, and I've a right to do what I please with him!" he returned, insolently; and he rose up from his crouching position, and gave the poor dog a kick, which actually caused Lilian a feeling of physical faintness.

The other boys looked somewhat cowed at the indignant flash of her beautiful eyes, but the bully stood sullen and defiant.

"You don't want the dog, I understand?" she said, at length, addressing him

"No; I am going to kill him!" he answered, brutally.

"He said he'd sell him to me; and now he won't" spoke up another of the boys.

"Will you sell him to me?" asked Lilian, quickly.

"How much'll you give?" demanded the young ruffian.

Lilian took out her little azure purse, with its gold rings, and turned the coin into her hand. Only a few pennies, and a gold sovereign, which latter she had kept for a pocket piece for some months. Her husband had dropped it into her purse one day, playfully proposing that she should make some wise investment of it. She turned the coin in her palm over regretfully. There was no help for it.

"I will give you this," she said, taking out the sovereign.

"You may have him."

Transferring the coin to the boy's hand, Lilian bent over her new purchase, patting him, and taking the string which was tied about his neck.

The dog was only a puppy yet, apparently of a large breed of animal, was of good size, with a shaggy, rusty coat; but Lilian observed that his head, with its drooping, silky ears, was really pretty, and intelligence shone in the appealing brown eyes. Still, the forlorn, half starved creature was a ludicrous appendage to the elegant young lady, and as she rose up to lead him away the boys set up a shout of derision. Lilian's cheeks burned; but she continued to lead and coax the animal through the quiet square to her own door. With a breath of relief she at length shut it upon him. In the vestibule of the elegant house the miserable dog looked more miserable than ever by contrast, and Lilian looked at him thoughtfully, a faint smile of humor relieving her excitement and compassion.

At that moment she heard her husband's step in the drawing room.

"Major!" she called, gaily.

"Darling!" was the response.

"I have invested my sovereign. Come and see!"

Major Lawney, with handsome, manly face and curling gray hair, appeared in the hall.

With a dramatic air of mock triumph Lilian pointed to the dog.

"Why, Lilian, where did you get that unfortunate creature?" demanded her husband, in the low tone of utter surprise.

"Found him with some boys who were going to torture him. I could not save him any other way, so I bought him, and I had only the sovereign to pay for him with. He isn't very nice, but pity him so!—and I may keep him, may'n't I Guy?"

Major Lawney looked from the lovely face to the unlovely dog, and the next moment his own face broke slowly into a smile.

"Yes, you may keep him, and he shall be called Lil's Folly," he said, rather dryly.

The next instant her arms were around his neck, and they were laughing heartily together.

But Lil's Folly, fed and washed, brushed and treated kindly, began to have a respectable appearance. His shaggy coat became black and glossy. Lil observed that he was growing; and Major Lawney surreptitiously fed him from his plate at dinner, and pronounced him a very good specimen of the Newfoundland.

"Not so bad an investment, Lil," he finally remarked, kindly, when in the spring Folly had reached a remarkable size.

Lil laughed.

"Thank you! I can bear considerable of that sort of thing, Guy; I have been ashamed of him so long!"

Folly was invested with a handsome new collar, and in the summer went down to the seashore with them. They took board at one of the hotels. Lil had never been in such a place before. The great restless, level sea, the stretch of silent, shifting sky, the panorama of the gliding sails were indescribably delightful to her. She was constantly out of doors, running along the shore and climbing the rocks like a child. She watched sun-rises and sun-sets. She sat in the yellow sands, watching the snowy surf, and lived all the happiness she had ever dreamed.

Her husband leisurely accompanied her light footsteps. If his thoughts were graver than hers, they were not less pleasant; and that bonny, golden, glancing head was the light of his eyes. But one day he had letters to write when Lil wanted to be out of doors

"Be as quick as you can, Guy, and I will run about by myself, with Folly, until you are ready, when we shall go down to the shallows," she said, and was away, the great Newfoundland dog at her side.

Folly was sagacious, docile, and very obedient. Along the shore he was allowed to accompany them; but at the village, where Major Lawney received his mail twice a week, he was found an embarrassment—a certain belligerent mastiff making war upon him; and though Folly, being inclined bore himself bravely, he was the greatest sufferer in these encounters, by reason of his shaggy coat, which gave the mastiff so undetachable a hold upon him.

Lil also had occasional errands at the village. If Folly followed unperceived and was sent back, he always obeyed, not only turning back at the command, "Home, sir—home!" but returning to the piazza of the hotel, where he lay down and patiently bided his time.

But this morning he was free to follow his young mistress. He bounded at her side, his head erect, his great tail moving like a banner, apparently as happy as she was.

Lil took a new direction this morning, and, being out of sight of the hotel, ran out upon a promontory that reached far into the restless water. There she sat down to rest, but soon busied herself picking up some beautiful pink seashells.

When an hour had passed in this way she turned to retrace her steps, but paused in amazement. She was upon a small island. The sea had advanced, crossed the neck at its lowest point, and cut her off from the main land. And, to her horror, she saw that it was still advancing, and lessening the little island upon which she and the dog stood.

After a moment she climbed upon the highest rock and watched it. Yes, the tide was coming in rapidly, and swiftly and surely surrounding the island. She had reason to believe that it would soon be submerged. Folly, too, seemed to scent danger. He ran back and forth uneasily, sniffing the air.

Lil sat down on the rock and tried to think. She was about a mile from the hotel, and out of sight of it. Her husband would apprehend no trouble, and, when he should have finished his letters, would take a cigar and await her return. No one was on the shore and no boats in sight. If the water should submerge the rocks upon which she sat, there was no prospects but that she would be drowned.

I cannot tell how long the poor girl sat there watching the crawling water—trying to be brave—trying not to think how happy she had been—how her husband would be stricken by her death—for she never knew herself.

But she rose at last, making a desperate effort for life. She determined to send the dog ashore with a message to her husband.

Tearing a blank page from a letter in her pocket, she wrote a few words upon it, with the little gold pencil that hung from her watch guard, then tried to fasten the note to Folly's collar; but the paper was too perishable to trust to the water. The salt drops, already dripping from his shaggy coat, instantly soaked it and made it worthless, and she broke into a bitter cry. The next instant she snatched the pretty straw hat from her head and tied it securely by its cardinal ribbons to Folly's neck.

He looked into her face, whined, and crouched at her feet. Was he troubled for her or himself?

"Go home—home, sir," she said.

For the first time Folly did not obey. He alternately crouched before her, and sprung upon her breast, wagging his tail. She caught hold of his collar and led him to the water's edge.

"Go home, Folly!"—home!—home!"

With a desperate howl the dog sprung into the water.

He swam away and left Lil alone. The water encircled her within a few yards. She was certain, now, that it would rise about the rocks upon which she sat. In spite of herself she was crying miserably—whispering her husband's name—trying, poor child, to say her prayers, to say humbly "Thy will, not mine, be done." But it was hard, while the cruel, craving, cold waves came up, up, and there was no sound but their clashing voices. She was not ill, neither. Her heart beat so wildly in her young breast, the blood beat so hot about her throbbing temples, and the sweet lips that trembled were yet thrilled by kisses.

"It will be too late!—too late!"

Folly might go directly to the hotel and display the drenched hat; then, again, for once, he might his away to seek his own pleasure, and the hat be torn from his neck and never be found in time to tell the story. Already the water was creeping around her feet—already she sat on a level with the tossing waves. Ten minutes more, and—

"Lil! Lil! Lil!"

A call—her name!

She sprang up, tore off her duster of pale linen, and waved it aloft to guide the coming boat. She could hear the oars; and at last—at last—she saw the dory leaping over the waves. There was her husband and another strong oarsman, and Folly stood in the stern.

She utterly lost control of herself then, and wept wildly, until her husband's arms took her into the boat; and then, sobbing into calmness on his knees, as they rowed away from the dreadful spot, Lil prayed.

When he could talk and she could listen, Major Lawney told her how Folly had come ashore:

"He came bounding into the chamber with the hat in his mouth, evidently wanting to attract my attention to it. I was still busy writing, and half-absently ordered him out. He would not go—but sprung around me, whining—until, glancing at my watch, and seeing how late it was, with no sound of your arrival, I looked at him more closely, and saw that he was very wet. On trying to take the hat away from him, I observed that it was attached to his neck, and that it was the one you had worn away. The truth then rushed over me; but never was there a more miserable man, for I did not know which way to go. I feared that you were drowned. I rushed down to the shore, called to the landlord's son, and pushed off the dory. I begged him to come with me; Folly, too, jumped in; and when we began to row he showed every sign of dissatisfaction until we turned the boat. Every time I called he barked—until, dear child, we came in sight of you—and then I could hardly keep him in the boat—so anxious was he to reach you. But for his help, sweetheart, death would have separated us. No money shall ever buy Folly."

The Great Auroral Display.

The brilliant aurora which illuminated our northern heavens in the early part of April seems to have been the most widespread and complete phenomena of this kind witnessed in the middle latitudes for years. Our dispatches show over how large a part of the country the magnetic storms which give rise to the auroral display raged with intensity, as evidenced by the disturbance of magnetic needles and by the effect on telegraph wires and cables. As the annual period of maximum auroral frequency begins in April the recent display is not untimely, but its extension southward is most notable.

Since 1819, when Gen. Sabine demonstrated incontestably "that there is an intimate connection between the causes of auroras and those of terrestrial magnetism," there has been little room to doubt that the causes of both these phenomena lie beyond our own planet. The same investigator has also abundantly shown, as the result of laborious and lengthened observation, that both the occasional disturbance in the magnetic state of the earth and conspicuous auroras are coincident with the mysterious outbursts of solar spots. On the 1st of December, 1859, while two English astronomers were independently examining and measuring the spots on the sun, a bright outburst on the fiery orb was noticed—the whole time of the observation not exceeding five minutes. But subsequently they found that simultaneously with this solar eruption the magnetic needles at Kew observatory had been strongly jerked; the magnetic currents passing through our atmosphere at that moment set up such strong electric currents in the telegraph wires of the country that the operators at Washington and Philadelphia received sharp shocks. In Norway some telegraph machinery was set on fire, and it was reported that magnetic storms synchronously prevailed in the West Indies, South America, and Australia. These and other coincidences in the dates of remarkable auroral displays in the northern and southern hemispheres, are so marked that they justify the conclusion of eminent physicists, that a great exhibition of auroral light at one of the earth's magnetic poles generally occurs at the same time at the opposite pole. We may therefore expect to hear that such an exhibition or magnetic storm, has recently been observed at widely remote points on the globe.

The meteorological sequences of auroral displays, though long a subject of scientific inquiry, are but obscurely, if at all, determined. But if the magnetic storm is due to cosmical causes, especially to variations of solar activity, it seems highly probable that there is a connection between the aurora and the weather over large geographical areas. The aurora may thus mark great changes in the amount of heat the sun radiates on the earth. It is known that a connection between these phenomena has been pretty well established by the Italian astronomer Secchi and the French meteorologist, Marie Davy. As the result of investigations of the relations of auroras to the prediction of weather, M. Davy, in 1866, announced as the rule that "general disturbance of the telegraphic lines, due to widespread auroras, indicate general movements of the atmosphere in high latitudes and over the Atlantic."

In the tropics, where the electrical intensity of the atmosphere is frequently relieved by violent thunder storms, magnetic intensity is too small to manifest itself in auroral displays. It would seem probable from this fact that prior to and during an auroral display in our latitudes there is a preponderance of polar winds, as M Davy estimates. Prof. Edlund of Stockholm also reaches the conclusion that the aurora is most frequent where thunder storms are least frequent." All that can, however, be inferred from these data is that the aurora may indicate a temporary absense of the warm, vapor-laden, atmospheric currents, and consequently a postponement of the period of thunder storms. While, therefore, the recent aurora and magnetic storm were associated with a cold spell of weather from the far north, we need not apprehend a continuance of such low temperature. But the whole subject of the meteorological significance of these occult phenomena demands fuller investigation before reliable, practical, deductions can be drawn.

"A Splendid Game."

"What in the world is that?" asked the young folks of Don and Dorry, and their host and hostess candidly admitted that they hadn't the slightest idea what it was. They never had heard of it before.

"Well, then, how can we play it?" insisted the little spokespeople.

"I don't know," answered Dorry, looking in a puzzled way at the door.

"All join hands and form a circle!" cried a voice.

Every one arose, and soon the circle stood expectant.

"Your dear great great fairy godmother is coming to see you," continued the voice. "She is slightly deaf, but you must not mind that."

"Oh, no, no!" cried the laughing circle, "not in the least."

"She brings her white gnome with her," said the invisible speaker, "and don't let him know your names or he will get you into trouble.

"No, no, no!" cried the circle, wildly.

A slight stirring was heard in the hall, the doors opened, and in walked the fairy godmother and her white gnome.

She was a tall, much bent old woman, in a ruffled cap, a peak hat and a long red cloak. He, the gnome, wore red trousers and red sleeves. The rest of his body was dressed in a white pillow-case with arm holes cut in it. It was gathered in at his belt; gathered also with a red ribbon tied around the throat; the corners of the pillow case tied with narrow ribbon formed his ears, and there was a white bandage over the eyes, and a round opening for his mouth. The godmother dragged in a large sack, and the gnome bore a stick with bells at the end.

"Let me into the ring, dears," squeaked the fairy godmother.

"Let me into the ring, dears," growled the white gnome.

The circle obeyed.

"Now, my dears," squeaked the fairy godmother, "I've brought you a bagful of lovely things; but, you must know, I am under an enchantment. All I can do is to let you each take out a gift when your turn comes; but when you send me a 'Thank-you,' don't let my white gnome know who it is, for if he guesses your name you must put the gift back without opening the paper. But if he guesses the wrong name you may keep the gift. So now begin one at a time. Keep the magic circle moving until my gnome knocks three times."

Around went the circle, eager with fun and expectation. Suddenly the blinded gnome pounded three times with the stick and then pointed it straight in front of him, jingling the little bells. Tommy Budd was the happy youth pointed at.

"Help yourself, my dear," squeaked the fairy godmother as she held the sack toward him. He plunged his arm into the opening and brought out a neat paper parcel.

"Hey! What did you say, dear!" she squeaked. "Take hold of the stick."

Tommy seized the end of the stick, and said, in a hoarse tone:

"Thank you, ma'ma."

"That's John Stevens," growled the gnome. "Put it back! put it back!"

But it wasn't John Stevens, and so Tommy kept the parcel.

The circle moved again. The gnome knocked three times, and this time the stick pointed to Dorry. She tried to be polite, and direct her neighbors hand to it, but the godmother would not hear of that.

"Help yourself, child," she squeaked, and Dorry did. The paper parcel which she drew from the sack was so tempting and pretty, all tied with ribbon, that she really tried very hard to disguise her "Thank you," but the gnome was too sharp for her

'No, no!" he growled. That's Dorothy Reed. Put it back! put it back!"

And poor Dorry dropped the pretty parcel into the bag again.

So the merry game went on; some escaped detection and saved their gifts; some were detected and lost them; but the godmother would not suffer those who had parcels to try again, and, therefore, in the course of the game, those who failed at first succeeded after a while. When all had parcels, and the bag was nearly empty, what did that old farry do but straighten up, throw off her hat, cap, false face and cloak, and if it wasn't Uncle George himself, very red in the face, and very glad to be out of his prison. Instantly one and all discovered that they had known all along it was Mr. Reed.

"Ha! ha!" they laughed; "and now"—starting in pursuit—"lets see who the white gnome is!"

They caught him at the foot of the stairs, and were not very much astonished when Ed Tyler came to light.

"That is a splendid game!" declared some. "Grand!" cried others "Fine," "first-rate," "glorious." "capital," "as good as Christmas," said the rest. Then they opened their parcels and there was great rejoicing.

School Teachers in Idaho.

When he had finished with the climate, soil and productions of Idaho, one of the group asked:

"How about education facilities?"

"That's the only thing we lack," replied the old man with a mournful sigh. "We've got schools enough, but we can't keep no teachers.

"What's the trouble?"

"Well, take my school, for instance—only two miles from the nearest house, eminently situated on top of a hill and paying the highest salary. We can't keep a teacher over two weeks."

"Do they die?"

"Some do, though its no place for dying. We had a young fellow from Ohio, and he met a grizzly and whistled for him. The grizzly cum. We had another, and a widder run him down and married him inside of a month. The third one was lame, and the Injuns overtook him. Then we tried women folks. The first one got married the night she lit down there; I took the second about the middle of the third week, and the next one was abducted by a stage robber."

"Why don't you get the ugliest, homeliest women you can find—some perfect old terror, like that lantern-jawed, razor-faced female over by the ticket-window?"

"Why don't we! Stranger, you Eastern folks will never understand us pioneers in the world—never. That's my wife—the identical school teacher I married, and she was the handsomest one in the drove!"

The City of Roses.

A sojourner in New Orleans says I don't believe there is any region on earth where roses grow in such abundance, variety, beauty and swee ness as they do in this country. A Mississippi gentleman, to whom I have been indebted for information on various objects, tells me that there is growing and in bloom at his home this moment a Lamarque rose vine eighty feet long. The stem is eight inches through in the thickest part. It was planted seventeen or eighteen years ago. It is twined around a veranda, and its gorgeous clusters of cream-tinted roses are splendid to behold. At New Orleans the Marechal Neil roses cause the Northerner to stare in speechless wonder. I saw one of the plants that must have been fifty feet long. I have seen vines of the same rose that long in the North, but they were scraggy and lean-looking and in the florists greenhouses. At New Orleans they run wild and revel like the midsummer night's dream. The blossoms grow in gorgeous clusters of half a dozen or more and the flowers are so large that they would more than cover the top of a large sized coffee cup. A single one of the pale gold beauties will fill a room with perfume. They are as plenty down here as "whitetop" in a Northern meadow. And they sell for one dollar a bud up North!

In some of the private citizens' yards in New Orleans there are as many as a hundred different kinds of roses all in bloom at once. They do not require protection from the cold at any time, either. They all stand out doors in the open ground, and many varieties bloom more or less all the winter through. The rose is a favorite flower at New Orleans. At the Jockey Club races we saw dozens of handsomely dressed ladies with exquisite bunches of rosebuds at their belts and elsewhere in the dresses—the sweet, lovely flower that nature made, none of your abominable artificial things.

The rose the French inhibitants of New Orleans are fondest of for decoration is called the "gold of Ophir." Northern florists have it, but it is not common. The bud is especially prized for its beauty. It is a smallish rose, of a very pale pink, shading off toward the heart in a deep, rich gold color. Faint streaks of crimson touch the outer petals. It is one of the loveliest roses I ever saw.

Saved From Drowning.

On the 12th of April Fort Worth, Arkansas, was visited by a terrific hail, rain and thunderstorm. On that day Mrs. David McNeily, of Mansfield, accompanied by a youth who is living in Mr. McNeily's family, but whose name we could not learn, was in the city trading. After the storm had abated they started on their return to Mansfield in a two horse wagon. Night overtook them before they arrived at their destination. It was 8 o'clock and intensely dark when they reached Walnut Creek, near Mansfield. The stream was swollen by the rains, but the young man deemed it fordable and drove in. The horses immediately sank, the wagon floated away from the running gears and the lady and the youth, who could not swim, were carried by the raging, muddy waters down the stream, enveloped in darkness. They managed to cling to the wagon-bed, which was turning over.

The lady, seeing no chance for escape, begged the young man to leave her to her fate and make his way to the shore as best he could. This he refused to think of, and time and again pulled her from the surging, angry waters and placed her upon the floating and rolling bed. For three dreadful hours this was continued, at the end of this time, having drifted the distance of a mile and a half, the wagon body bearing this fainting lady and exhausted youth lodged against a log which lay across the stream.

With a last manly effort this brave young man removed his charge—the helpless lady—to the shore, where she sank to the ground as if life was extinct. In that dark, damp and almost-freezing night this hopeless couple wandered through the tangled thickets of Walnut Creek bottom, the young man now shouting for assistance and now trying to revive Mrs. McNeily, who frequently fainted. Some students at the college building finally heard the cries of distress and went to the assistance of the sufferers.

Duke of Cumberland.

At the magnificent chateau of Penzing, near Vienna, lives the Duke of Cumberland, a Prince of England and Ireland and hereditary Duke of Brunswick and Luneberg, son of the late King George the Fifth, of Hanover, who died four years ago, after having lived twelve years in Austria as a sort of political refugee. During the Schleswig-Holstein war of 1866, the late King sided with Austria, and Bismarck and King (since Kaiser) William seized the estates and personal property of the house of Hanover as a means of forcing the King to abandon Austria and join the confederation which was even then being planned as the means of elevating William to the rank of Emperor. King George was faithful to his principles and never made the smallest concession to the greed of Prussia. He had a comfortable income from his Austrian and English properties which Bismarck could not touch, and he used to drive around the Ring in Vienna and through the Prater in a noble barouche drawn by six white horses. The poor King was blind, yet his face indicated the cheerfulness and benignity which never deserted him, and the effect of his bows to the right and left as he passed along the streets was a little odd, particularly when he turned his head to greet a dead wall or a square in which no one was in sight. Soon after the death of his father the Duke of Cumberland was approached by Bismarck's agents with propositions to restore the family estate on condition that the imperial title be recognized, but nothing has actually been accomplished, though the negotiations have recently been renewed and carried on at length in Vienna. The property is worth fifteen or twenty millions and as the Duke's standing out will not affect the Kaiser's title in the slightest degree no one will blame the family if they sacrifice their pride and get back their estates. The Duke is second cousin to Queen Victoria and his wife, the Princess Thyra, of Denmark, is a sister of the Princess of Wales and of the Czarina.

Domestic Infelicity.

This story of domestic infelicity and a man's stern resolve to have his rights comes from the town of Norwich, in the land of the wooden nutmeg and the machine to do everything.

At about twelve o'clock Wednesday an excited man arrived at the freight depot of the Norwich and Worcester Railroad upon a bare backed horse, that showed every evidence of having been driven hard, and entering the office of the company, was inclined at first to talk so fast that he could not be understood. For some moments the clerks could not decide whether they were being addressed by a lunatic or a talking machine that had lost its balance wheel. The flushed and perspiring man began at last to let forth a few oaths, and then followed a story incoherently told about the sudden departure of his wife "with a handsomer man." She had taken all of his furniture and his clothing. In an earnestly excited manner he declared: "I don't want nothing of the woman, but I do want my best pair of trowsers, and I'm going to have them."

He then wandered about the freight depot, and his eye struck what he recognized as his household goods, billed to a Worcester man. They consisted of four chairs, a cradle, an infant chair, a bed, bureau, two barrels and bedding. There was also a trunk. He pounced upon it, and wrenching open the cover, took out a pair of second-hand pantaloons. "Now they can go, and be durned!" said he, as a smile swept over his countenance. He started for the house. The gentleman in charge called upon him to deliver up the coveted trowsers, as they were directed to another man and in keeping of the company. He gave them up, mounted his bare-backed horse and made away, declaring. "No other man can wear them clothes in peace, and don't you forget it!" The goods will occupy a little corner of the freight department until the matter is settled.

A Turk as a Bachelor.

If he be a bachelor, Church and State combine to make life miserable for him. He must live with his parents, and while they still exist, the authorities content themselves with a general reprehension of his celibacy. But when they die, if they leave him homeless, his troubles begin. It is forbidden any householder to take a young man into his dwelling without permission of the civil and religious magistrate of the quarter. Before this is granted the lodger must undergo a severe inquiry, which takes into account not personal reputation, only, but that of his kindred. The landlord, moreover, must display his ability to have this young stranger waited on without offence to morals—that is, without employing his female servants or the female members of his family. If the bachelor be rich enough to occupy a house, or to rent "unfurn shed chambers," he cannot possibly obtain that simple privilege unless he show that a woman of good repute lives therein. Those who can produce a blameless mother or sister have no difficulty, when the identification has been thoroughly established; even an elderly aunt is admissable. But if a young man have no kindred he may go homeless for an indefinite time. The abolition of the slave trade is a grievance he warmly feels. In the days when this edict was passed, one could go into the street and buy a female creature, white or black, ugly or beautiful, according to one's means, and thus fulfil the law. Times have changed. It may probably be the fact that slaves are still to be purchased by those who have cash enough. Many Turks have assured me it is so, though I have met with none who spoke, or admitted he spoke from experience. But the cost is very high; the merchant would not deal with a young bachelor thus circumstanced, and the transaction would surely be discovered.

How Chinamen Bargain for Wives.

An Australian Chinaman, when anxious to have a wife of his own nation, sends a letter to an agent in Hong Kong. The following is a condensed translation of ond of these epistles: "I want a wife; she must be a maiden under twenty years of age, and must not have left her father's home. She must have never read a book, ane her eyelashes must be half an inch in length. Her teeth must be as sparkling as the pearls of Ceylon. Her breath must be like unto the scents of the magnificent, odorous groves of Java, and her attire must be from the silken weavers of the Ka Li Ching, which are on the banks of the greatest river in the world—the great overflowing Yanktse Kiang." The price of a Chinese woman delivered in Sydney is £38; but two Chinese woman only cost £52; theretore the heathen Chinese import women in couples. The importer never sees his woman before they arrive, and then he generally selects the best looking one. The other is shown around to a number of the well-to do Cainamen, and after they have inspected her she is submitted to what is called public auction. At a recent sale at Sydney a young girl, aged about 19, was offered, and, after some spirited bidding, she was purchased by a wealthy Chinese store-keeper, whose place of business is in one of the leading towns of New South Wales, for £120. The melancholy aspect of the Celestial girl as she went away in company with the man who purchased her was deplorable to the last degree.

Risen From Its Ashes.

The Invalid's Hotel, at Buffalo, N. Y., conducted under the auspices of the World's Dispensary Medical Association having been destroyed by fire in February, 1881, has been entirely rebuilt with all the improvements that experience has shown to be necessary. No pains or expense has been spared to furnish every convenience for invalids. Bathing, a regulated diet, the means of instruction and entertainment, the best medical and surgical attention, complete heating and ventilating apparatus, are all combined under one roof. The building has all the advantages of a hospital and a first-class hotel. No where else in the world are to be found greater facilities for the preservation and recuperation of health. All inquiries and communications should be addressed to the "World's Dispensary Medical Association," Buffalo, N. Y.

The Republican.

SATURDAY, June 10, 1882.

The Editor has gone to the State Convention at Montgomery as a "looker on in venice." This will account for the scarcity of editorial matter in this issue.

According to a special of the 6th from Atlanta to the Augusta Evening News Senator Hill and family reached Atlanta on the 8th. It is to be hoped that he has not left the Springs that have been so beneficial to him too soon.

Four counties of this Congressional District, to wit: Etowah, Cleburne, Shelby and Calhoun, have endorsed in Convention the course of Gen. Forney in Congress, and instructed their delegates to vote for his renomination. Gen. Forney will doubtless be his own successor with little trouble. he District shows great wisdom in continuing him in place. It will be seen from an article from the Mobile Register and Selma Times, published in another column, that he is always regarded outside the District as one among the most influential Democrats in the House of Representatives not only from Alabama, but from the country at large. Efficiency and influence for good to a constituency can only come of long service and training, and those constituencies who keep their servants in representative capacity longest in position are, as a rule, the best served.

Senator Hill Steadily Improving.

LITTLE ROCK, June 5,

A dispatch from Eureka Springs confirms the report that since the latest operations for a cancer on the tongue Senator Ben Hill's condition is steadily improving.

AUGUSTA, GA., June 6.

A letter from Eureka Springs, received this morning, states that Hon. Ben Hill is slowly but surely improving. His general health is very much improved. His appetite and digestion is good, and he sleeps well. The ulcer is in better condition, and strong hopes are now entertained of his recovery.

Protection Fallacies.

The Canadian protectionists are trying to convince the farmers and workingmen of the dominion that the present prosperity of the North American British colony is entirely owing to the absurd, antiquated, swindling system which they succeeded in fastening on that country three or four years ago. This is only the echo of the protecting chorus on this side of the St. Lawrence. The fact is the Dominion is prosperous and the United States are prosperous, not because of protection, but it is in spite of it. If protection is so much of a blessing why is it that the workingmen in every branch of business are more dissatisfied with their wages now than they have been at almost any period in our history? It is true that protection protects, but its golden wings are thrown not over the day laborer and the mechanic, but over the manufacturing millionaire, who grinds his employee down to the last mill.—N. Y. Herald.

Philadelphia Record: "Wages in England have advanced since the adoption of free trade in 1846 nearly fifty per ct. The wages paid in Great Brittain are sixty per cent. higher than in Germany, France, Spain and other countries where trade is fettered by protective tariff. Nothing operates in this country to prevent a reduction of wages to the European standard except the cheapness of land and the rivalry of employment in unprotected industries. The factory hands in New England are not much better paid than in Old England."

Democratic Protection.

We hear of labor troubles through out the land. From among the weavers and spinners of New England and the coal miners and the iron workers of Pensylvania and the West come harsh notes of discontent, because employers, munificently protected, seek to reduce the hard earned wages of those who toil early and late to produce wealth for others.

The prominent and plausible argument used by the advocates of an excessively high tariff is that it guarantees to home labor steady employment and liberal pay.

That sounds very pretty; bnt we fear, like some other word promising things, it is more captivating than reliable.

Under our present war framed tariff the duties levied on many manufactured articles and on iron and coal amount almost to prohibition.

Why then should monopolized interests press wages down, down, to a rate barely sufficient to keep body and soul together?

The real creators of wealth in this country are they who develop by labor the farmer, artisans, miners and workingmen. They give life to capital, unlock hidden treasure, and they should be the especial objects of governmental care and encouragement.

We believe in protection not in a craftily wrought scheme to enrich the favored few at the expense of the general public, but in honest protection, fashioned by justice to foster every legitimate enterprise industry and business pursuits, to distribute equitably the burden of taxation, to regard the rights of labor as well as of capital to blunt the knife of mercenary monopoly and to afford each individual the sure oportunity of realizing and enjoying the just pecuniary reward

That is Democratic protection. It is for the Constitution and for the people.—New Jersy Constitutionalist.

A little girl once said that she would be very glad to go to heaven, because they had plenty of preserves there. On being cross-examined, she took down her catechism, and triumphantly read: "Why ought the saints to love God?"

To the People of Alabama:

MONTGOMERY, ALA., May 1882.

I have lived in Alabama all my life; have occupied various offices by the will of the people. I know that I have discharged the duties of those offices with fidelity, and I have reason to believe, to the satisfaction of the people

What have been my political principles, before and since the war between the States you know. What efforts I have made to rescue Alabama from the hands of "the spoilers," you likewise know. In the memmorable canvass of 1874, when the destiny of Alabama, for weal or woe, hung on its result, my voice was heard, in all sections of the State, urging her sons to battle manfully for the right, The right succeeded in the triumphant election of the lamented George S. Houston. The prosperous career of the State since that time has been upward and onward. I have been no silent worker in the ranks, in the canvasses since 1874

You know me, and what I am, and what I have been.

According to the provisions of our Federal Constitution, upon the next General Assembly will devolve the duty of electing a Senator to represent Alabama in the United States Congress, for six years from March next. You, the people of the State, in your several and respective counties, elect the members of the General Assembly, and in this election you will, doubtless as you ought, give some consideration to the question, Who shall be the Senator to succeed Gen. John T Morgan?" Shall he be selected for another term of six years, or will you have some other citizen in his place?

Now, I propose to compete for that place; and I appeal to you to say whether your Representatives or Sentors shall vote for Gen. Morgan or for me, or for some other citizen. Let your preferences be made known in the selection of the members of the General Assembly. If it be your will that I shall be elected you have it in your power to make that will obeyed. and I shall thank you.

I shall say nothing derogatory to Gen. Morgan.

I have never thought that one man shall hold office always. "Rotation in office was a cardinal principle of Whig and Democratic faiith, in the past, and the condition of the present calls for no departure from that ancient faith.

I have heretofore acted on the principle that the office of Senator in the United States Congress should not be sought—that the office should seek the man. But the practice has been and is to make known, at least the desire for the office.

This desire prompts me to address you now. Your will, as expressed through the General Assembly, is the sovereign will to which every citizen must bow.

I desire the office, because I believe I can serve you and my native State, and because I feel that the offices is the highest honor within the gift of the people of a State, and I wish to enjoy the honor. Whether I deserve the office it is for you to say Very respectfully, your friend and fellow citizen.

Alabama Town set on Fire by Rioting Blacks.

TUSCALOOSA, ALA., June 4.

The town of Epes; in Sumter county, Ala., was almost totally destroyed by fire last night. The fire originated in a vacant building about 1 o'clock last night. It had been recently erected, kerosene oil being used to cause quick burning. It was the work of incendiaries who have been employed as hands on the railroad. The cause for the commission of the act resulted from a fight which took place between two negroes on Sunday evening, one being a railroad hand, the other a farm hand. Several negroes were arrested and placed in the vacant building, and the chums of the railroad hand were heard to make threats that they would leave the town in ashes. The occurrence was wholly unexpected and in consequence nearly everything was destroyed. All business houses, including three stores and one bar-room were burned to the ground. The estimated loss is from $20,000 to $25,000. There was partial insurance on the property destroyed.

No dwellings were destroyed and no one injured. Nine of the parties have been arrested, four of whom are in charge of a guard at this place, and four have been stopped at Tuscaloosa. There are still another party at large, who has succeeded in keeping his whereabouts unknown. No further trouble is apprehended. There is ample evidence to convict all concerned.

Early vs. Late Oats.

As we are engaged in a discussion of the comparative merits of early sowing of wheat, we will also direct the attention of our readers to the following article in reference to the great advantage of early oat sowing:

"Last August, we published an editorial showing the advantages of sowing oats in August or September, and requested that some of our farmers should make an experiment by sowing, one earlier, the other in December and give us the results.

Among those who thought enough of the matter to try it was Mr. H. L. Hart, in this county. He sowed one field the first week in September, another in December. We have before us specimens of the September sowing: they average five feet high with large heavy heads, well matured; the other field is only a foot high and will not mature before the middle of June."

Gallatin (Tenn.) Examiner.

In a cave formerly occupied by the Jesse James gang near Gallatin, Tenn; a couple of gentlemen found the other day a large cast iron sugar kettle, filled with specie and jewelry of various kinds. They hardly believed their senses, but finally managed to examine the treasure and found that there was over $400,000 in specie besides numerous gold watches, rings, diamonds and other jewels of great value. Maj. Munday guarded the treasure while Mr. Spillers hastened to Gallatin, and securing his horse and wagon, returned as speedily as possible to the cave. They placed the kettle and its contents in the wagon and drove speedily to Gallatin and at once deposited the treasure in the vaults of the Sum-

Our want of usefulness is often to be ascribed more to our want of spirituality, than to our want of natural ability.

Truth and love are two of the most powerful things in the world, and when they both go together, they cannot easily be withstood.

The heart, only a handful of muscle, the whole world cannot fill; and when broken, only he who made it can mend it.

The man who is not living aright is sour within, and the sour works out. He who lives aright is your sympathetic and generous man.

"Let men laugh when you sacrifice desire to duty, if they will. You have time and eternity to rejoice in."

Contentment is a pearl of great price, and whoever procures it at the expense of ten thousand desires makes a wise and happy purchase.

Don't let the duties of to-day lie over to be fulfilled to-morrow. A life like a business transaction, carried on such principles will result in failure.

Character is not cut in marble—it is not something solid and unalterable. It is something living and changing, and may come diseased as our bodies do.

Who is wise.? He that is teachable. Who is mighty? He that conquers himself. Who is rich? He that is contented. Who is honored? He that honoreth others.

If we but knew the secret sorrows which other hearts endure, we would make allowance for many of their seeming inconsistencies, and pity rather than condemn.

Falsehood is in a hurry; it may be detected at any moment and punished: truth is calm, serene; it's judgment is on high: its King cometh out of the chambers of eternity.

Most men call fretting a minor fault, a foible, and not a vice. There is no vice except drunkenness, which can so utterly destroy the peace and happiness of a home.

Don't be afraid of loving people too much, or throwing away too much kindness. It is just such things the world stands in need of and they have the great advantage of enriching the giver:

It is a great deal better to lead a holy life than to talk about it. We are glad to let our light shine, and if it does, we shall not need to tell any body it does. The light will be its own witness.

KIND words are the bright flowers of earthly existence; use them, and especially around the fireside circle. They are the jewels beyond price, and powerful to heal the wounded heart, and make the weighed down spirit glad.

It is an excellent thing when men's religion makes them generous, free hearted and open handed, scorning to do a thing that is paltry and sneaking—Mathew Henry.

If you renounce all for Christ you must expect to be counted a fool if you cannot be called a Christian: "Except a man deny himself, he cannot be my deciple.

The more believers love God, the more they love one another; as the lines of a circle, the nearer they come to the centre, the nearer they come to each other.

As in a journey you must see milestone after milestone fall into your rear, otherwise you may remain stationary; so in a grand march of a noble life, one paltriness after another must disappear or you have lost your chance.—United Presbyterian.

How to Cook Rice.

Rice is becoming a much more popular article of food than heretofore. It is frequently substituted for potatoes at the chief meal of the day, being more nutritious and much more readily digested At its present cost, it is relatively cheaper than potatoes, oatmeal or grain-grits of any kind. In prepairing it only just enough cold-water should be poured on it to prevent the rice from burning at the bottom of the pot. which should have a close fitting cover, and with a moderate fire the rice is steamed rather than boiled until it is nearly done; then the cover is taken off, the surplus steam and moisture allowed to escape, and the rich turns out a mass of snow white kernels. each separate from the other, and as much superior to the usual soggy mass, as a fine mealy potato is superior to the water soaked article.

An Important Discovery.

Baltimore Day: Okefinokee, which has hitherto been described as Georgia's great swamp, proves to be no swamp at all, but a lake. According to a coressondent of the Savannah News, a seemingly impenetrable border of heavy timber and tangled undergrowth, more than one hundred and thirty miles in circuit, incloses an ancient, clear water lake. dotted over with islands thousands of acres in extent. It is claimed that this great basin can be drained, and that the land thus reclaimed can be utilized for agricultural purposes, More than 800. 000 acres of rich productive soil. it is thought, could thus be secured, In addition to the land a vast quantity of timber would be rendered available

Rome Courier.

The telegraph reports the introduction into Congress yesterday, by Mr. Herndon, of Alabama. of a bill providing for a a survey to asertain the practicability of a canal uniting the waters of the Tennessee and Coosa rivers. Such a work will be the greatest possible improvement in the interest of Rome and of this section of Georgia and Alabama, as the route of the canal would have to be through Wills Valley, and it would join the Coosa not far below its head at the junction of the Etowah and Oostanaula. We trust that the survey will be ordered.

Tuskegee News:

Cotton and corn crops are in good condition, and the farmers are anxiously awaiting the coming rain. The oat crop is very fine.

The truth can not be burned beheaded or crucified. A lie on the throne is a lie still, and truth in a dungeon is truth still; and a lie on the throne is on the way to defeat, and the truth in the dungeon is on the way to victory.

PERRY DAVIS' VEGETABLE
PAIN KILLER
A Never-Failing Cure for Burns, Scalds, Bruises, Cuts, Sores, etc.

After forty years of trial, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER stands unrivaled. It is safe! It acts immediately! It never fails!

Editor of the St. John (N. B.) News, says: In flesh wounds, aches, pains, sores, etc., it is the most effectual remedy we know of. No family should be without a bottle of it for a single hour.
From the Cincinnati Dispatch: We have seen its magic effects, and know it to be a good article.
From I. S. Potter, U. S. Consul at Crefeld, Rhenish Prussia: After long years of use, I am satisfied it is positively efficient as a healing remedy for wounds, bruises, and sprains.
W. W. Sharper, Valdosta, Ga., says: It is a panacea for all bruises and burns.
From R. W. Adams, Saco, Me.: It gave me immediate relief.
R. Lewis says: In forty years' use it never has failed me.
W. W. Lum, Nicholville, N. Y., says: I use your PAIN KILLER frequently. It relieves pain and soreness, and heals wounds like magic.
J. W. Dee says: For scalds and burns it has no equal.

PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER is not a new untried remedy. For forty years it has been in constant use; and those who have used it the longest are its best friends.
Its success is entirely because of its merit. Every family should have a bottle ready for use. Much pain and heavy doctors' bills may often be saved by prompt application of the PAIN KILLER. Unlike most medicines, it is perfectly safe even in the hands of a child. Try it once thoroughly, and it will prove its value. Your druggist has it at 25c., 50c., and $1.00 per bottle. Get Married and Be Happy.

We think all young men ought to get married, provided they can do so without starving somebody's fair daughter. Blessed is that institution which will enable a young man to marry without ruining such a fearful risk. Such an institution is the Selma Marriage Benefit Association. This is somewhat like a Life Insurance association, the important difference being, that, while in life insurance the money is paid over for the benefit of your wife's second husband, on the Marriage Benefit plan the money is paid to you when you get married; while in the one you have to die for some body else to win, in the other you only have to marry to win yourself. The officers and directors of the Selma Marriage Benefit Association are among the best men of Selma. We take pleasure in recommending the Association to al young men who have the faintest hope of getting married. And we suggest that the sure prospect of receiving a $3,000 benefit at marriage will have wonderful influence in eliciting a "Yes" instead of a "No" from a fair girl who has sense enough to know that love alone never made a pot boil. See adv elsewhere.

TATE SPRINGS.

Health and Pleasure for Alabamians.

Already fourteen States are represented by the guests in attendance at Tate Springs, East Tennessee. A good company has been there all winter and has rapidly increased since the 1st of March. The demand for the water has doubled in the past six months, and is being shipped now to all points of the union at the rate of 2,000 bbls. per. annum. We have seen no natural mineral water so strongly endorsed as a remedial agent for dyspepsia and diseases of the liver, stomach, bowels and kidneys. Our doctors prescribe it and hundreds in Alabama are daily drinking the water at home and can attest its power over disease. When the summer travel sets in, more of our Alabama "summer resorters" will be found at Tate Springs than at any other resort outside of the State. Dr. J. S. Weatherly of Montgomery, is resident physician. The new building is all complete and furnished Send for for large 40 page pamphlet containing full information on all points. Messrs Tomlinson & Ragsdale, proprietors, will promptly answer all inquiries jul0

The mining fever is just at present highest in Montanna. Late reports from Miles City are of an exciting nature. The Judith mountains are said to contain hoardes of buried wealth. Every body, far and near, is rushing to the new "bonanzas." Teams of all descriptions are continually moving to the mines. The local name is Maginnis and its situation is near the centre of the territory. It is claimed that the district is richer in gold and silver than any in either Idaho or Montana. Near the mines which contain only about nine square miles, is the United States, post Fort Maginnis. The presence of arrived force will greatly help the new camp. Some miners claim from twenty to twenty five locations, upon all of which they are endeavoring to do the necessary amount of work to enable them to hold them till the next season. Those that have been worked are increasing in richness.

Among the most developed are the Montana, War Eagle, Florence Collar, Homestake, Comet, Keystone Whail, Mother, Green, Judith, Spencer, Minnessota, Eldorado, Treasure Box, North Star, Crazy Horse, Eureka, Maggie, Silver Star Hidden Treasure, last Chance and Doughnut. The Collar and Montana, mines so far, have proved the richest strike in the mountains. They have over $100,000 worth of high grade ore ready for reduction. The Collar, is a silver lead, and essays from $350 to $2,000 to the ton. The Montana, mine now owned by the First National Bank of Helena, runs $1000 to the ton, and is growing richer as the lead is being worked.

A tunnel in the side of the mountain, to tap the vein 200 feet lower, has already begun. Many of the other mines are beginning to assay very, high and will probably prove as rich, if not richer than the Collar or the Montana mine. The War Eagle is a marvelously rich lead, with a fine grain of galena. It has no rock whatever in it, and it is pure lead and silver. The silver in some pieces assays nearly $3,000. The quartz of the other mines is of various qualities and colors, some of it beautifully stained with copper, and some of it showing free silver.

Race Between Indiana and Ohio Liars

Toledo Bee.

Ohio is not to be outdone by any Hoosier liar, and therefore the discovery of a great winged serpent in Indiana, that sent i s servants out to catch lambs which were hauled up for it to swallow has led to the finding of an immense four-leged snake, near Lebanon, Ohio, which caught a boy thirteen years old and attempted to carry him into a hollow tree, but got scared and dropped the youth and went into the hole alone. A party of men commenced chopping the tree down, when the snake rushed out, raised up on its legs, rushed off like a race horse and disappeared in a cave. The story adds that a large force is engaged in watching the hole intent on capturing the monister—but they will never do it. This story lay over the Hoosier liar sufficientlyand now he can try it again. Then we will tell him about the big snake a Bee reporter is now hunting far out in the Black Swamp.

A very interesting and important account of the process of manufacturing steel and ingot iron from phosphoric pig-iron was lately given by Messrs S. G. Thomas and P. C. Gilchrist before the Society of Arts, London. Nine tenths of the iron ores of Europe are so phosphoric as to produce a pig iron unfit for steel making without a process of dephosphorization, but through the lime method steel can be made from a phosphoric pig of an actually purer nature than that obtained from hematite iron. The Bessemer basic process was perfectly adapted to the manufacture of soft weldable iron, having all the characteristics of puddled iron, with considerable greater strength elasticity, and ductility. This soft basic Bessemer steel could be made at a less price per ton than the ordinary puddled iron and a further saving was secured in its subsequent treatment by the smaller loss it involves in rolling. Nearly half a million tons a year of the new metal were now being turned out, and on the continent of Europe works were in course of construction having a capacity for making an other half million tons annualy, while in England the new special works erecting had a capacity for producing only 20,000 tons.

Burning of the Centre Court House.

About three o'clock last night our village was thrown into consternation by the cry of fire, In a moment after the first alarm was sounded, Mr Willie Chisolm, with wonderful forethought, began to ring the bell at the Methodist church. By this time the town was astir and every-body hurrying to the scene of the fire. But the fire fiend had gone too far to be checked. Some daring young men tore the blinds from the windows of the probates judge's office and tried to enter, but the smoke was so suffocating that they could not enter. Not a single record was preserved. Every book and paper belonging to the county offic s were lost. This morning nothing remains to tell the tale except the bare and blackened walls of what was once our court house. There are various surmises as to the cause of the fire, but as yet no definite conclusion has been reached —Coosa River News.

No man ever sailed over the same route that another sailed over before him. Every man who starts on the ocean of life arches his sail to an untried breeze. Like Coleridge's mariner, he is "the first that ever burst into that lonely sea."

AGRICULTURE.

POULTRY IN LARGE FLOCKS.—For a given amount of capital invested there is more profit in poultry when rightly managed than anything else on the farm. It is well-known, however, that small flocks pay a greater proportional return than larger ones. This is partly because small flocks receive more attention, and partly because fowls will not thrive when kept together in large numbers. In venturing into the poultry business beginners should understand that if it is intended to keep the fowls in large flocks, even when well attended, bountifully fed, and the full range of the farm given, success cannot be assured. This experiment has been tried over and over again, and to-day there is but one farm in the United States devoted to poultry in large numbers, and that is one conducted on a different plan from that to which farmers are accustomed. Poultry raising should be encouraged. It can be so managed as to give light employment to women and children, and is within the reach of those with limited means. Long before Americans discovered that there was a great secret in poultry-raising the French put in operation a method that enables them to ship eggs to England, Germany and Austria, as well as to supply a large demand at home. It is often remarked that the French are the most successful poulterers in the world, but we can do all they can do in the matter, and more, too, for they have no home-raised Indian corn to assist them. They divide their fowls into flocks of not more than one dozen. Each flock has a small fowl house 10x10 feet, and a yard of about 100 feet deep, divided in the middle. The houses stand separately in the center of the yards which are thirty feet wide. Each house thus has a 50x30 feet yard in front, and the same in the rear. An acre of ground will allow fourteen of these houses and yards. The fourteen yards, with one dozen fowls each, will accomodate 168 fowls. This is a large number for an acre of ground, but they are kept healthy by changing them from one vacant yard to another. The partition fences are built very cheaply sometimes of wire, and again of lath. To make this system plainer to the reader, it should be known that two flocks of fowls are never in adjoining yards, as perfect seclusion from other flocks must be enjoyed by each of the small flocks. Thus, while one flock is running in the yard at the front of its house, the adjoining yard on the left and right is empty, as the next lot of fowls will be running in the rear of their quarters; or, to illustrate by means of a checker-board, the dark spaces representing the occupied yards, and the white spaces the vacant ones. As soon as the fowls are placed in one of the yards (the front one, for instance) the rear one is spaded up and seeded to grass, oats, rye, quick-growing vegetables having good large tops, or anything else that will afford plenty of green food. When a fair growth has been secured the fowls are turned into the rear yard, and the front one is in turn spaded up and seeded down. The frequent spading of the ground not only keeps the yards fresh and clean, but their fertility is greatly increased by the rich droppings of the fowls.

THERE is no doubt that plants are more productive on stakes or high trellises than when grown in any other way; and then the influence of the sun all around alike is favorable to a thorough ripening of the fruit, improving the flavor considerably, esp-cially in the estimation of those who like to eat tomatoes raw. It may be repeated that the stakes for tomatoes must be very stout and strong, as the weight of the fruit requires something substantial to rest on, and if the stakes can have arms or knots to help sustain the branches it will be better than depending on twine alone. The stakes must be planted in the ground firmly before the plants are set. These plants are easily kept in position by a light tying until the fruit comes, then the weight requires good judgment to secure them well.

HOW TO GET EARLY SWEET CORN.—Judge Miller, of Missouri, mentioned a fact discovered by himself, in which a full week can be gained in getting sweet corn for boiling. He said it was that as soon as the ear is formed, break the top down or cut it off, but leave the stalk erect in order that the pollen of the tassel will be sure to dust the silk of the ears, as they may not be fully impregnated should the stalk be topped. He stated that he had experimented for years and was entirely satisfied that it is uniformly practical and of value. In fact he thinks that the ear becomes more fully developed also. This is a hint easy to adopt, and may be of interest to truckers as well as for the private garden.

THE osage orange may be made into a very beautiful object on the lawn if well cut back to the pyramid shape, so that the head is compact and dense. The glossy green of the foliage and the gold of the oranges form a picture not often excelled.

GOOD raw-bone dust is estimated to last about seven years.

New Jersey Summer Resorts.

Along the Atlantic coast of New Jersey from Sandy Hook down to Sea Side Park a distance of 27 miles there are some 25 summer resorts, most prominent of which are Long Branch, Ocean Grove, Asbury Park, Spring Lake and Sea Girt. By the competition of the Pennsylvania Railroad last year from Whiting's to Sea Side Park, and this Spring from Sea Side Park northward along the coast to Sea Girt, there is a through line from Philadelphia. Eight miles shorter to Sea Girt and all points northward thereof, than by the old route of the Pennsylvania Railroad. This we think is destined to be the most popular of summer railroads as it takes the shortest line across the State of New Jersey and runs parallel, and within view of the ocean for a third of its entire length from Philadelphia. Starting from the Station foot of Market Street the trains run through Mt. Holly, New Lisbon, Tom's river and across the Barnegat Bay on a bridge some eight thousand feet long to the narrow strip of land on which Sea Side Park is located, and from thence passes through Lavalette City, Chadwick's, Mantoloking, Bay Head, Bay Head Sc., Point Pleasant, Manasquan, Sea Girt, Spring Lake, Ocean Beach, Ocean Grove, Asbury Park, Deal-beach, Elberon, and West End. By a recent pooling arrangement the Pennsylvania Railroad has secured the use of the tracks of the New York and Long Branch Railroad, and have now practically the short route from Philadelphia to Long Branch and are running through trains from Philadelphia via this new line. The traffic arrangement with the New York and Long Branch Railroad also gives the Pennsylvania Railroad, a short line from New York City by way of Newark, Rahway and Amboy via which they are now running through trains to Long Branch and all points on the coast as far as Sea Side Park inclusive from Desbrosses and Courtlandt Streets. Brooklyn passengers are taken direct to Jersey City by the Annex Steamers from foot of Fulton Street, thereby saving an extra ferriage besides avoiding ansfer over New York.

DOMESTIC.

A FEW PARLOR GAMES.—The games that follow are not all of them particularly new, but they are very pleasant, and are quite worth trying: One player says: "Have you seen my cat?" The next replies; "Yes, I've seen your cat." "Do you know what my cat is doing?" "Yes, I know what your cat is doing." "Do it." And then if the player neglects to purr or scratch she pays a forfeit. Of course, that game may be varied considerably by choosing any other animal.

The Interrupted Reply.—The company are seated in a circle, when one whispers to her right hand neighbor. Say that she asks: "Of what use is a book?" The answer would naturally be, "To read." But instead, she asks another question of her right hand friend, and when the questions have gone around the last answer is given aloud—of course producing much laughter among the party.

Puzzle Music.—One player leaves the room, and the rest determine on something he must do on his return. Say he has to dance around the room to discover a hidden person, or to touch a particular object. When he enters he is informed by song or piano when he is near or far from his object; the singing or playing becoming louder or softer as he approaches or recedes from the solution. With little trouble this may be made a most amusing game. It is, in fact, but a modification of the old nursery frolic, "Hot Boiled Beans and Bacon."

The Traveler.—The traveler leaves the room, and then the company determine on the country he is to visit, and prepare accordingly. Say he is to guess Germany, you have a student with a long pipe, a book and spectacles; Turkey, a lady in a turban, reclining on a sofa cushion; Lapland, a tent with natives sitting round a fire. This may be made by a few chairs turned upside down and a tablecloth thrown over them, the natives wrapped in shawls, etc. The traveler comes in at a given signal and must guess the country shown or pay a forfeit.

The Key to the King's Garden.—The plan is for one to give a sentence: "I give you the key of the King's garden." The next person repeats the words with an addition: "I give you the string that holds the key of the King's garden." Then the third adds, "I give you the scissors to cut the string that holds the key of the King's garden." A fifth, "I give you a patent file to sharpen the scissors to cut the string that holds the key of the King's garden." A fifth, "I give you a box to hold the patent, file to sharpen the scissors to cut the string that holds the key of the King's garden," and so on till one player fails and pays a forfeit.

The Secret that Travels.—A game of the simplest character, but which among young people will often be found to afford genuine amusement. It has its advantage—that any child can join in it without having previously possessed a knowledge of the past time. The players sit around a table; or, at least dispose themselves in a circle. One player starts the game by whispering a sentence in the ear of the player on the right hand. This sentence is the secret. The player, to whom the secret has been confided, tells it to his right hand neighbor, and so on all around the table circle. The last player repeats aloud the sentence as he understands it, and then the first player gives out the sentence in its original form. As a general rule, it will be found that in passing from one to another, the words have been so altered as to be almost unrecognizable.

Kansas Praising It.

"While I was in Topeka last Winter," said the Hon. Arthur Edgington, 'I had a pretty rough time of it. I got a bad cold, and, then that not being sufficiently severe, I was also attacked with rheumatism. The pain was in my left shoulder. At times I almost writhed in agony. I tell you sir, that the pain could not have been greater had my shoulder been screwed up in a vise. I was utterly helpless, and felt I was destined to remain in that condition indefinitely. My friends and a physician were generous in their prescriptions and my room soon became a miniature apothecary shop. But nothing did me any good. One day some one told me I was enduring a great deal of needless pain when I could invest fifty cents in a bottle of St Jacobs Oil and be cured. I invested in a bottle of the Oil, rubbed it on my shoulder twice, and in two days forgot that I ever had rheumatism. Yes, that is a great remedy, and no mistake. They can't say too much in favor of its healing power."

The above was uttered by Mr. Edgington while sitting in the porch of the La Gonda House, at Columbus, the other evening, and was overheard by an escaped reporter, who is traveling over the country incog. Inquiry developed the fact that Mr. Edgington is one of the most widely known men in Kansas, figuring prominently in politics, and acting as the responsible agent of the Bradstreet Commercial Agency. Upon subsequently making Mr Edgington's acquaintance the reporter was assured that all he had heard was true, and he was at liberty to use it in the papers. —Oswego (Kan.) Democrat.

REPAIRING RUBBERS AND WOOD.—Rubber, or even leather boots, may be repaired by using the following cement: Take gum shellac three parts. India rubber one part by weight. Dissolve these ingredients in separate vessels, in ether free from alcohol, applying a gentle heat. When thoroughly dissolved mix the two solutions, and keep in a bottle tightly stopped. This glue resists the action of hot and cold water, and most of the acids and alkalies. Pieces of wood or leather or other substances, joined together by it will part at any other point, than at the join.

The St. Paul (Minn.) Globe, observes: Things had gone wrong with him, and he wanted to die; yet he had the whole house darting around mighty lively, so we heard, hunting for the St. Jacobs Oil bottle, when the first twinge of rheumatism gathered him up.

POINTED STRIPES FOR AFGHANS.—Cast on twenty-seven stitches. Make a stitch at each end of the needle; knit the rest plain; in the middle slip off one, narrow, then slip one not knit over the one just narrowed. The odd rows, as 3, 5, 7, etc. are to be like the first row. The even numbers, as 2, 4, 6, etc., are to be knit plain. Knit each strip eleven blocks, each block to contain twenty-four ribs. Make fifteen strips, which will be pointed; this size takes when made of two colors, one and a half pounds each of Germantown wool. Crochet the strips together with black.

FRENCH SALAD.—Place a little heap of mixed salad in the dish, sprinkle a little powdered white sugar over it, a little pepper and salt, a little vinegar and olive oil garnished with beetroot.

SEASONED posts treated over the lower third to two or three washings or soakings of cheap petroleum will make them last longer than by almost any other process. This is easier than to coat with tar, and far more sensible than to set top end down. Parker Earle, Cobdens, Ill., earnestly commends this treatment after experiments.

HUMOROUS.

WHY HE DIDN'T CRY.—In the play running recently at the Detroit Opera House, there is an affecting death scene which calls out the handkerchiefs all over the house. A gallery god who succumbed to the situation one night, next day met a boot black at the Post office, and called out:

"Say, Billy, did you cry up there 'tother night when the drummer boy died?"

"Noah."

"You didn't?'

"Noah. I was just breakin' down an' gettin' ready to when a boy behind me dropped a sidewalk spike down my back, and afore I got over whalin' him the drummer boy was dead and buried and his dad had worn out two weeds on his hat. 'Twasn't no use to feel bad then."

Be Sensible.

You have allowed your bowels to become habitually costive, your liver has become torpid, the same thing ails your kidneys, and you are just used up. Now be sensible get a package of Kidney-Wort, take it faithfully and soon you will forget you've any such organs, for you will be a well man.—Albany Argus.

THOMAS COOKE, the actor and musical composer, was once taken to task in court in a case concerning a piracy on the music of "The Old Gentleman," and was asked what he meant by stress and expression. He replied "When I speak of an ass, the stress is on the ass; but when I say, you are an ass; the stress is on you."

Worthless Stuff!

Not so fast my friend; if you could see the strong, healthy, blooming men, and children that have been raised from beds of sickness, suffering and almost death, by the use of Hop Bitters, you would say "Glorious and invaluable remedy."

IT is said that Lord Erskine, throughout the first half of one of his speeches, mistook the side which he was retained to defend, and when apprised of his blunder by the horror stricken looks of his client, proceeded composedly to overthrow all his own arguments, alleging that he thought it as well to state his adversary's case in order to refute it.

A CHARITABLE man wrote to a newspaper about the duty of helping the poor who ask for aid, and wound up by saying, "If you can give nothing else, you can at least give the applicant a little kindly word." The printer made it "a little kindling wood," and, like Shakespeare, "he builded better than he knew."

A SHORT time since two young ladies were accosted by a gypsy woman, who told them that for a shilling each she would show them their husband's faces in a pail of water, which being brought they exclaimed, "We only see our own faces." "Well," said the old woman, "those faces will be your husbands' when you are married."

AN old farmer found himself by chance in a London eating house one day. The waiter asked him what he would take. Hodge didn't know. "Shall I bring you a bill of fare, sir?"

Advice to Consumptives.

On the appearance of the first symptoms—as general debility, loss of appetite, pallor, chilly sensations, followed by night-sweats and cough—prompt measures for relief should be taken. Consumption is scrofulous disease of the lungs:—therefore use the great anti-scrofula, or blood purifier and strength-restorer,—Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." Superior to Cod liver oil as a nutritive, and unsurpassed as a pectoral. For weak lungs, spitting of blood, and kindred affections, it has no equal. Sold by druggists the world over. For Dr. Pierce's pamphlet on Consumption, send two stamps to WORLD'S DISPENSARY ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

GOOD NIGHT.

Good night!
Now the weary rest by right,
And the busy fingers bending
Over work that seems unending,
Toil no more till morning light—
Good night!

Go to rest!
Close the eyes with slumber prest;
In the streets the silence growing,
Wakes but to the watch-horn blowing,
Night makes only one request—
Go to rest!

Slumber sweet!
Blessed dreams each dreamer greet,
He whom love has kept from sleeping
In sweet dreams now o'er him creeping
May he his beloved meet—
Slumber sweet!

Good night!
Slumber till the morning light,
Slumber till the new to-morrow
Comes and brings its own new sorrow,
We are in the Father's sight—
Good night!

FORTY YEARS IN LOVE.

"It won't do," said old Tibbets, shaking his head furiously. "I always have hated those Partidges, and you shan't marry Fanny."

"A man's affection"—began Horatio.

"Nonsense!" cried old Tibbets. "You talk like a boarding school girl. You are of age, I know; but I give you warning, if you persist, I'll take that clever little Johnson into partnership instead of you and you may beg or starve as you please, for the sake of a red haired girl like Fanny Partridge."

Off trotted old Tibbets as he uttered these last words.

"I'd rather see you in your grave. Fannie," cried Mrs. Patridge. "Old Tibbets' son. Why didn't you choose a chimney sweep? It was Tibbets that cheated your pa's brother out of that piece of property. A bigger rascal never walked! No, Fanny, you walk over my dead body before you go to church with him."

Fanny was seventeen and very submissive. Horatio, although five and twenty, submissive likewise. Parental authority prevailed. One meeting was allowed in which the two might bid good bye to each other. Fanny wept. Horatio held her hands in both his, and kissed them very fondly.

"They may yield in time," said Horatio, "or something may happen to alter things. Be true to me for a little while. I shall never love any one but you."

"My heart is broken," said Fanny, believing it sincerely. "But I shall be true to you all my life."

Immediately he kissed her. He never forgot how hard it was to take his lips from hers; and their arms encircled each other, and it was really a wonder that the two young lovers did not die then and there.

Old Tibbets rewarded his son by making him partner in the prosperous firm of Tibbets & Co., forthwith, while Mamma Partridge hurried Fanny away to the north of France.

Horatio did not forget easily. It had been a cherished plan of his to marry Fanny. He had a mind that was prone to dwell upon details. All his fancies about the future had been perfectly finished pictures.

It was hard to believe that the little round tea table would never be set with painted china, that Fanny, as Mrs. Tibbets, would not sit beside him in the third pew from the front on Sunday mornings: that they would not have their portraits painted to hang on each side of the parlor mantelpiece.

Fanny was his practical or general idea; that they might have walked together forever in the moonlight was, perhaps, strongest with her. But had he been the most perfect hero of romance she could not have placed him on a higher pedestal.

The match certainly would have been a happy one had fate willed it to be a match at all. They loved each other too well to seek comfort in new coming lovers.

Horatio became very steady, and shunned ladies' society; and Fanny after refusing an English baronet and a German baron, declined going into society any more, and settled down with her mother in a little town upon the Continent, where four or five English families dwelling there exchanged whist parties, and there were no young English people whatever. There, at thirty, she was still living; and then it was that there came to the place an English traveler, who called upon her. He was a friend of Mr. Horatio Tibbets, and had been commissioned to hand her a small parcel, and he was to tell Mr. Tibbets how she looked and was; and that he was very well, quite bald for his years and unmarried. Then the traveler went away.

The gift was a dainty work box worth a great deal of money, and in the little box where the thimble was also a ring. Its motto was "Dinna forget."

"Dinna forget."

Fanny never showed this gift to her mother, but she wore that ring against her heart under the dress.

New hope crept into her soul; and when a few years after a good-looking, wealthy widower offered his hand, with a genuine love in the bargain, she refused without hesitation. Forget? Never! He had not forgotten. But sad, ten of them at least and the memory of the old family feud still dwelt in the bosom of the two old people.

At last, at the age of eighty. Mrs. Partridge died: and Fanny, all alone in what had always remained a strange land, felt miserably desolate. Youth had departed—friends were few. It had been her mother's wish to remain in France, now her heart dictated a return home. The first morning paper she opened there told her of the death of Mr. Tibbets, aged ninety,

The paper dropped from Fanny's hand, and she sat quite motionless for more than twenty minutes. Then she began to cry very softly, and took the ring from her pocket and looked at it.

"Dinna forget," she sobbed, "I am sure he has not forgotten."

And she began to wonder what he looked like now. He must have altered. Perhaps he was so portly, like his father. Well, she was rather stout herself. One could not be a slender youth forever; and he had probably a streak of grey in his dark hair. Nothing could alter his eyes, however. Or, if he was altogether altered, she would love him still. Why not, since it was the heart that loved, and not the flesh and blood.

And she so managed that the news should reach him in a few days' time that she was there. He has heard it, as she has meant he should. He was all alone and very lonely. He had been an obedient son and an affectionate one and had loved the testy old man dearly. But now he thought it would harm no one if he should try to realize his youthful dreams.

He sighed and looked out of the window; walked to the fire-place and stood there unrelenting: brightened up and began to make one of his fancy pictures of Fanny at the other side of the fire.

"She'll be older, of course," he said. "Thin — perhaps fragile and worn; pale, too. No matter: it's Fanny and she'll be beautiful to me."

And he wrote her a letter on the spot in which, however, he only told her he was coming to see her.

An elderly lady was walking in a green lane near Honsey, with two children, and a poodle which was her own, the children her landlady's. She was a very stout lady, with four chins and a red face, and no waist whatever.

As she walked, there came up the lane a weary old gentleman, with a large green umbrella under his arm. His nose and chin met. His head was as smooth as an egg, except just at the nape of the neck, where six hairs still clung. His ears stood out on each side of his face, large, yellow and with frosty pinches on them. He had water blue eyes, and a wart on his forehead. Just the kind of old man the stout lady hated.

For his part, he disliked fat women.

"A frizzy old creature," he thought; and just then poodle and children, all tied together with blue ribbon, tangled themselves about his legs and nearly overset him.

"Come here, my dears, don't run against the gentleman in that way," said the fat lady in a faint voice.

"People should teach their grandchildren and their dogs better manners" said the old gentleman, testily.

"My grandchildren?" panted the old lady; "what impertinence! I beg you will not kick that dog, sir. Cruelty to animals is forbidden by law, thank heaven!"

"If this dog is mad as he seems to be I will have him shot," said the old gentleman.

"Come here, Fido, darling," cried the elderly lady. "My dears, run home to your ma,"

And just then out stepped the landlady. To her the old gentleman addressed himself.

"I beg pardon, ma'am. Can you tell me in which of these houses I can find a lady of the name of Partrigde—Miss Fanny Partridge?"

"Why, this is the house, sir," said the landlady, "and here is Miss Partridge herself."

"Will you hand her this?" said the old gentleman, looking eagerly around for Miss Partridge, and never thinking of the stout lady.

"Here ma'am" said the landlady, presenting the card to that individual. "That, sir, is Miss Partridge.

The name upon the card was 'Horatio Tibbets.'" That hideous little old man, like a weasel, with green cotton umbrella, and no hair, Horatio?

That overgrown woman, like a lobster Fanny?

Neither would believe it; but it was true—as true as age is, and time, and change, and all the rest of it. They sat on the horse hair sofa, in the parlor, and tried to talk; and as they did so, they discovered that Fanny and Horatio who loved each other, were both dead—as if the sods were over their poor hearts!

Had they married years before, probably they would have been still dear to each other, still pleasant to look upon in the affections, but meeting as strangers they repulsed each other.

"If she should presume on our old affection!" thought Fanny, such a very disagreeable old maid!

"If he should expect me to remember the past, this dreadful mountain of flesh!" thought Horatio, and then he told her he was glad to see her looking so well and hoped they would be neighbors.

She thought that unlikely; the place did not agree with her.

Each dodged the past, not guessing how glad the other was to dodge it also, and they parted forever, politely hoping to meet very soon. That night two pillows were wet with tears. Fanny wept for the youthful lover of whose death she seemed to have heard that day, and Horatio for a lost Fanny, now only a memory. But there was no thought of any present liking, of any flashing up old flame. They did not even wish to meet again.

There was a certain horror in that meeting not to be forgotton.

They never met more; but when Fanny died, years after, the ring with its motto of "Dinna forget"—the ring whichno power could have placed upon her fat finger—hung by its ribbon over her heart, and Horatio was buried with him a lock of hair severed from Fanny's head in the long ago, when it was golden.

Each heart was young and true; but forty years of comfortable, well-to-do life had been very cruel to their bodies—to their voice—to their manners.

Do you suppose that somewhere beyond the stars they have met and are lovers again? I hope so; for in their own way they suffered greatly here for no fault of their own.

A Profitable Investment.

One of the most provoking and unsatisfactory duties imposed upon the claim department of any railroad is to settle for stock killed by its trains. No one ever heard of a poor cow which had outlived its usefulness being killed in this way. A ringboned, spavined plug of a horse never ends his days in this manner. An elm-peeled hog was never known to get in front of a locomotive. This kind of stock goes off by itself in some out of the way place and considerately dies. It is only the pure bred Short-horn, the fiery, untamed thoroughbred horse, or the fat, sleek Chester White hog that is foolish enough to venture onto the railroad track. At least the railroad companies so imagine judging from the fabulous figures put upon thus killed. A man in Indiana owned a horse whose age might have been demonstrated by his teeth if he had been the fortunate possessor of these useful appendages. He was spavined, had a hip disjointed, was blind in one eye, had the heaves and blind staggers, in fact had been an eyesore to the community for years. There was not a neighbor who would have given two dollars for him under any circumstances, unless for the purpose of shooting him, out of mercy to the animal. Yet one day this worn out specimen staggered through an open pair of bars, and after a series of desperate efforts managed to plant himself upon the railroad track, and when a train approached, being deaf could not hear the whistle, and of course was killed. The owner came to the front with a bill in which he valued the animated carcass at $300, and, after several interviews with the claim agent, during which he insisted that the horse was a young and speedy animal with a record of 2:14½, the company compromised the matter and paid the owner $200, with which he bought a good team. He is now scouring the country for another rack of bones, with an idea of repeating his profitable experiment.

New Jersey Summer Resorts.

Along the Atlantic coast of New Jersey from Sandy Hook down to Sea Side Park a distance of 37 miles there are some 25 summer resorts, most prominent of which are Long Branch, Ocean Grove, Asbury Park, Spring Lake and Sea Girt. By the competition of the Pennsylvania Railroad last year from Whiting's to Sea Side Park, and this Spring from Sea Side Park northward along the coast to Sea Girt, there is a through line from Philadelphia. Eight miles shorter to Sea Girt and all points northward thereof, than by the old route of the Pennsylvania Railroad. This we think is destined to be the most popular of summer railroads as it takes the shortest line across the State of New Jersey and runs parallel, and within view of the ocean for a third of its entire length from Philadelphia. Starting from the Station foot of Market Street the trains run through Mt. Holly, New Lisbon, Tom's river and across the Barnegat Bay on a bridge some eight thousand feet long to the narrow strip of land on which Sea Side Park is located, and from thence passes through Lavalette City, Cnadwick's, Mantoloking, Bay Head, Bay Head Sc., Point Pleasant, Manasquan, Sea Girt, Spring Lake, Ocean Beach, Ocean Grove, Asbury Park, Dealbeach, Elberon, and West End. By a recent pooling arrangement the Pennsylvania Railroad has secured the use of the tracks of the New York and Long Branch Railroad, and have now practically the short route from Philadelphia to Long Branch and are running through trains from Philadelphia via this new line. The traffic arrangement with the New York and Long Branch Railroad also gives the Pennsylvania Railroad, a short line from New York City by way of Newark, Rahway and Amboy via which they are now running through trains to Long Branch and all points on the coast as far as Sea Side Park inclusive from Desbrosses and Courtlandt Streets. Brooklyn passengers are taken direct to Jersey City by the Annex Steamers from foot of Fulton Street, thereby saving an extra ferriage besides avoiding transfer over New York.

Flowers in Tombs.

Egyptology has furnished admirable matter for the romance maker, but in the late discoveries near Thebes there is material which might wake up any one's dormant poetry. Covering the grim mummies, cured with bitumen, swathed in cerements, had been placed a wreath of flowers. The white and blue lotus had been gathered, and mingled with them; there was a profusion of small delicate blossoms, yellow, red and white tinted all garlanded and interwoven. The death's heads peered out from amid the bloom of a past age. Three thousand years had gone since their perfume had robbed death of its terrors, and still these fragile flowers had neither lost their color nor shape. Putting aside the verses, the sonnets, which these flowers might inspire modern science steps in and silences for the nonce the sounds of the lyre. What are these flowers? asks the Dryasdust botanist. With a magnifying glass each petal, stamen, and leaf is examined. Dr. Schweinfur this studying these tender relics, eager to discover their kind and species. Never was botanist placed face to face with such treasures. Herbariums are frail, fragile, brittle things. The oldest collection known are only of the 17th century, and there are but two or three of them in the world. Here are floral treasures of 300 B. C., and they are as fresh as if culled but yesterday. Three or four was at once classed, but here is one which has disappeared entirely from the flowerbeds of this earth, and there is another found only to day in furtherest Abyssinia. Had Linnæus only been alive how he would have reveled as he botanized over his field of mummies. There are more material things, too, which have been found with these mummies. Packed away with the mortal remains of Queen Isimkheb were various kinds of fruits. That long wait which this lady had to make before a kind of quasi-immortal stage was reached (that condition which M. Maspiero designates as the Egyptian ka), was to be broken by occasional refreshments. Here are sugared dates, almost as fresh as when plucked from the tree. But more than this, as if Queen Isimkheb had really broken her fast, here are teeth marks in the fruit, and scoopings out evidently made by spoons. De Foe, in his "Robinson Crusoe," made his hero start with amazement when on the shore of his island he saw for the first time the footprints of another man. When Mariette Bey in his necropolis of Apis, came across the impression of toes and heels in the sands, which the last of the old Egyptian priests had left, the explorer's emotions were indescribable Here with these Theban mummies we bridge over thousands of years, past ones are at one and the same time both far and near to us.

Digitated Stockings.

These articles of clothing occupy a conspicuous place in "the clothes of the future," and the innovation has been cordially welcomed in many quarters. A medical contemporary thus gravely pronounces in their favor. "They would be more comfortable, more healthy—giving better play to the foot and securing increased breadth and space for expansion across the base of the toes." All that is very well, but the universal undigitated stocking need not fear its rival. It has long since driven out of the field the ancient stocking with a stall for the big toe: and if a two toed stocking could not hold its own, what chance is there that a five-toed innovation will make much way? The toes are already cramped in the modern boot, and they would be squeezed still tighter if digitation is to prevail, for there is no hope that fashion will prescribe broad-toed boots merely to make room for stockings in the future. Besides, busy people perhaps find life short enough already without adding to the demands upon their time that of inserting each toe in a separate stall.

The Hills of Cursing.

A writer thus describes a recent visit to the once famous mountains, Ebal and Gerizim, on which he spent a day. He states that he and a fellow-traveler ascended the latter, and they afterward proceed to test the acoustic property of the valley between. To do this his fellow traveler rode down Gerizim, across the valley, and began to ascend Ebal, his "horse looking the size of an ant." After ascending a considerable distance, until he appeared but a faint dot on the hillside, he stopped. It had been arranged that the two should signal to each other when ready to speak, but that was now seen to be hopeless, so, waiting until the dot appeared to have ceased to move, the author, the Rev. H. Jones, commenced to read aloud from a book: "feeling that he might just as well have thought of addressing the House of Commons from Lambeth Palace." After a while he paused to hear the result. Great was his surprise when from the little dot on the hillside he heard the words of the twenty-third psalm, and this in spite of the conversation carried on by some Turkish soldiers near. On the two meeting they found that each had heard the other with perfect distinctness.

A Fashionable Hamlet.

Mr. Edwards, the business manager of Mr. Booth's company, was recently asked if he ever got left without his baggage.

"Only once," said he, as the cold chills seemed to run over him. "It was at Waterbury, Conn., last season. I don't think I shall ever forget that if I live to be as old as a railroad restaurant sandwich."

"What did you do?" we asked, hoping to hear a tale of woe that would make our hair stand. It would take a good deal of a tale to make much hair stand on our head, but that will be all right.

"Do?" said he, with the air of a man that would do or die trying, "We gave them Hamlet in every day clothes. When I found the baggage, with the costumes, had not arrived, I was just going to throw myself in the river, when I thought I would go and tell Mr. Booth about it, and bid good-bye to some of the people who had always thought a good deal of me, before killing myself. To my astonishment Mr. Booth took it as cool as you would take an invatation to drink. He said inasmuch as the people were in the hall, he would make a few remarks to them about the accident, and then they would go on and play three acts of Hamlet in the clothes they had on. And so it was fixed up that way. Well, the thought of Hamlet in a short tailed coat and tight pants almost made me sick, but when Mr. Booth came on the stage looking like an Episcopal minister, with a Knight Templar's cheese knife that he had borrowed, I couldn't think of anything but Hamlet. I forgot all about his clothes, and I believe if he had only had on a pair of sailor pants and a red flannel fireman's shirt, that the people would only have seen Hamlet. I tell you, he is the greatest actor that ever lived. The people sat perfectly still, and seemed wrapped up in Mr. Booth. That is, they were when they did not look at the other fellows. But when they took in Laertes with a short ham fat coat on, a pair of la-de-da pants, and a pancake hat, it seemed to me I could hear them smile. And the king Hamlet's step-father, he was a sight. Imagine a king with a cut-a-way checkered coat, a Pullman car blanket thrown over his shoulder for a robe, and a leg of a chair for a scepter, mashed on a queen with a traveling dress and a gray woolen basque, with big buttons on. And think of Polonius with a linen duster and straw hat with a blue ribbon on. O, it made me tired. Ophelia was all right enough. She had on some crazy clothes that she had been traveling in, and we got some straw out of a barn, and flowers off of the bonnets, and she pulled through pretty well. But the ghost. You would have died to see the ghost. He had on one of these long hang-me-down ulster overcoats with a buckle in the back as big as a curry comb, and the belt was hanging down on both sides. The boys got him a green mosquito bar to put over the scepter; he fell over a chair and came on. I should have laughed if I had been on my death bed, when he said to Ha let, "I am thy father's ghost." He looked more like a drummer for a wholesale confectionery house, with a sort of tin skimmer on his head, and I believe the audience would have gone wild with laughter if it had not been for Mr. Booth. I don't belive you could get him to laugh on the stage for $1,000,000. He just looked at the ghost as though it was a genuine one, and the audience looked at Booth, and forgot all about the ulster, and the ghost's pants being rolled up at the bottom. It was probably the greatest triumph that an actor had ever had, for Mr. Booth to compel that vast audience to forget the ludicrous surroundings and think only of the character he was portraying. I wouldn't have missed that night's performance for $1,000, and when, at 10 o'clock, I heard the boys getting the trunks up stairs I was almost sorry. The last two acts were played with the costumes, but they were no better performed than the first. Still, I think on the whole, I had rather the baggage would be there. It makes a manager feel better.

Courtesy at Home.

Good breeding, like charity, should begin at home The days are past when children used to rise the moment their parents entered the room where they were and stand until they had received permission to sit. But the mistake is now made usually in the other direction of allowing to small boys and girls too much license to disturb the peace of the household. I think the best way to train children in courtesy would be to observe toward them a scrupulous politeness. I would go so far as to say that we should make it as much a point to listen to children without interrupting them and to answer sincerely and respectfully as if they were grown up. And indeed many of their wise, quaint sayings are far better worth listening to than the stereotyped common places of most morning callers. Of course to allow uninterrupted chatter would be to surrender the repose of the household, but it is very easy if children are themselves scrupulous to respect the convenience of others, and to know when to talk and when to be silent.

The Empress of Austria.

The Empress of Austria arrived at Paris recently on her way home from her annual hunting adventures. A correspondent says:

"She was dressed in a long black satin gown with eighteen inches of balayeuse, and wore a sealskin mantle and a brown plush directory bonnet, all of which she changed after she had breakfasted with her sisters, the Queen of Naples, the Countess de Trani and the Duchess d'Alencon, who were waiting to receive her at the Hotel Bristol. For the edification of those of your readers whom such details interest, I will state that the second toilet was composed of a short black silk gown, with a pompadour bonnet, and a satin visite, the whole set off with tan colored gloves reaching as high as the elbow and pulled down into wrinkles. Her majesty is 44 years of age, but does not look more than 35; she is tall, graceful, and, as those who are admitted to her intimacy aver, very gracious, and not a bit stuck up, which, I am inclined to believe, as her dearest friend and most constant companion three years ago was the ecuyere Elisa, since then the hippic star of the Cirque de Champs Elysees. Her passion is hunting—dogs and horses are her joy. When she was last here her pet was an immense mastiff, which caused a terrible excitement on the Place Vendome, by his hostility to the petticoats of a traveling English woman who approached too closely, in Herold's opinion, the sacred person of his august mistress. When she was at Supetor, for sea bathing, a year afterward, she had a pack of beagles in the gardens of her villa, which used to crawl through the hedge and bite peripatetic minstrels who haunted its environs in quest of alms; this time she is accompanied by two Scotch terriers and a Russian greyhound only; other canines, however, have been sent on to complete her collection. Fond as she is though, of the dogs, horses have the first place in her heart, and at least thirty dealers are in treaty for "the inspection, if not the purchase, of some most remarkable hanimals, for, if 'er majesty won't buy, it will be a 'onor to show 'em to 'er." I fancy she will buy, as she has but four with her now, two—Nihilist and Coast guard hacks which she never leaves behind, and Quicksilver and Lady Oventry, hunters, picked up during her recent hunting holiday in Cheshire. All these quadrupeds always travel in the imperial train, which is the handsomest and most comfortable on the continent, consisting of a drawing room, a bedroom hung with blue silk, a dressing room, a kitchen, a baggage car fitted up with closets and wardrobes, and a dining room where twelve persons can sit down at a time to table. She was at the Gymnase on Thursday, as she had been the evening before at the Chatelet, and she accepted M. Grevy's box at the National Academy of Music on Friday, but did not sit out the entire performance of "Namouna," which people will not accept as a chef d'oeuvre, notwithstanding the monster articles in its praise published by some of the newspapers It was, perhaps to excuse her abrupt departure from the presidential box that the Countess of Hohenems made that morning call on Rita Saugalla. It is rather a singular fact that this imperial lady, the haughtiest of all aristocrats, never designed to put her foot on the soil of France while there was a Cæsar at the Tuileries, and yet never lets past a twelve month without a visit to the capital of the Republic.

Violets.

A good many persons have the idea that the pansy and violet are the same plant under different names. This is not so. They may be relatives, but they belong to different households. The violet should have a rich soil to enable it to bloom well. The runners should also be kept cut off pretty closely, and the strength of the plant confined to the crown. It is usually propagated by cuttings, which are best started in wet sand. The best plan of all, for the amateur, is to buy his plants of some good florist. He will then be sure of getting well-rooted plants, and those that are true to name and avoid the risk of failure, which may ensue if he tries to root his own cuttings. The Russian violet is an old variety and a very good one. Its flowers are single, of a soft, light blue in color, and borne on stems five and six inches in length, thus making them very desirable and useful for use in boquets. The blooms are large and fine, and of most delightful fragrance. If you have a cool room in which to grow them, you can have flowers from this variety all winter. But they generally blast in our ordinary living rooms. If you try them in pots, be careful to keep all decaying leaves cut off, and do not give too much water The double blue Neapolitan is probably our finest variety. It is like a little rose. But for fragance, it is inferior to the old Russian.

A New Festival.

On the very eve of a tree planting convention and a great musical festival Cincinnati has conceived a new festival. Some of her leading citizens are planning a great dramatic entertainment to take place in the Music Hall next fall, It is proposed to give several of Shakespeare's plays on a scale of magnificence never before attempted. One play already chosen for representation is "Julius Cæsar," and it is proposed to have Booth, Barrett and McCullough in the cast, supported by a chosen company seven hundred strong. Another play selected is "Midsummer Night Dream," with Joe Jefferson, Stuart Robson, Crane, Nat. Goodwin and Florence as Bottom and his companions. It is thought that with the expenditure of $50,000 these dramas can be magnificently mounted and put upon the stage, and $43,000 of that sum is a ready guaranteed.

DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

FOR GOVERNOR,
EDWAND A. O'NEAL,
Of Lauderdale,

FOR SECRETARY OF STATE,
ELLIS PHELAN,
Of Jefferson.

FOR ATTORNEY GENERAL,
HENRY C. TOMPKINS,
Of Montgomery.

FOR TREASURER,
ISAAC H. VINCENT,
Of Chambers.

FOR AUDITOR,
JESSE M. CARMICHAEL,
Of Dale.

FOR SUPERINTENDENT OF EDUCATION
HENRY C. ARMSTRONG,
Of Macon.

THE STATE CONVENTION.

This important body of men, representing the Democaatic Party of Alabama, did its work well. The greatest harmony and good feeling prevailed throughout. While in every instance we did not get our choice in the nominations made, we shall most cheerfully support the ticket and run it up to our mast-head this week. Good men were defeated for the various places, as of necessity always happens in such cases, but as far as we can learn both they and friends submit with grace, and it is safe to say the whole ticket will be elected by an overwhelming majority.

The State Committee.

Montgomery Advertiser.

The Democratic party of Alabama is to be congratulated on the choice of Col. Jno. M. McKleroy as Chairman of the State Executive Committee. A man of brilliant parts he is eminently gifted in those steady-going business qualifications necessary in any executive officer. His abilities as an organizer are of a high order, and the party throughout the State knows that when it comes to hard work and faithful services, its distinguished adherent from Barbour is always to the front and stays there with the last man. A better selection could not have been made. No man could have been chosen who would do more to preserve and promote harmony and rouse the rank and file to vigorous action. Mr. TENNENT LOMAN, who was re-elected Secretary, has served in that office for several years and his capacity for work and familiarity with all the duties of the position, make him indispensable, both to the committee and the party.

The committee, as a whole, is an able one and will carry on an earnest and successful campaign. They are representative men and are recommended to the people as worthy of their confidence.

The retiring committee have done good service for the party during their term of office, and their work has met the approbation of the people.

To the retiring chairman, Capt. Jos. F. Johnston, of Selma, the thanks of the party and people are especially due for the zeal and fidelity with which he has discharged the duties of the office for the past four years. If made a capable and efficient chairman and his services are held in highest appreciation.

In passing by an office the other day we noticed a copy of Ingersoll's lectures in the library. To estimate the injury of the youth of America, by this skeptic is impossible. Brilliant in conception, lofty and bold in imagery, plausible in deduction, terse, epigrammatic yet of exquisite rhetorical finish, his works are of just such a character to captivate and mould the receptive mind of youth. The defenders of infidelity may point to the grandeur of intellect, the polish of education, the philosophic reason, with which skepticism assails the truths of christianity, but in vain. For twenty centuries the bible has withstood the combined powers of infidelity and so called science. Voltaire the mightiest intellectual giant that ever wielded the pen in defease of atheism, went down in defeat and when the dark shadows of the mysterious beyond were clearing around him, and the frail earthly tenement admonished him of death bitterly disclaimed those opinions which in the pride and vigor of intellectual manhood he so boldly promulgated to the world. Tom Paine fearless in denunciation, recognizing no restraint and acknowledging no religion. as he saw the shadows of life lengthening, dragged that daring intellect to insensibility and went down to death groping amid darkness which rays of light from his own "Common Sense" and "Reason" failed to penetrate. Talk of progressive thought scientific development, but the bible in the grandeur of its primitive simplicity is a far better code than all the philosophies of France, Germany and America combined

Reception of Gen. O'Neal at Florence Alabama.

FLORENCE, ALA., June 11.— A large and enthusiastic concourse of people of Florence and Lauderdale county assembled last night at the court-house to tender congratulations and welcome to Gen. E. A. O'Neal, our nominee for Governor. An eloquent address of welcome was made by Hon. Robert McFarland and responded to by Gen. O'Neal in his usual peculiarly happy and telling style. The greatest enthusiasm prevails here among all classes of our people. Cannon are now thundering a salute of welcome to the gallant old hero, and increased majorities in every county in the State may be expected No nomination could have excited the more enthusiastic support of all classes of our people. The convention has made no mistake.

Headquarters of the Southern Baptist missionary board have been moved from Marion to Atlanta.

The Democratic Nominations.

Birmingham Observer.

The Democracy of the State may congratulate itself upon the work of the convention at Montgomery. There never was in the State a convention which had before it the names of more worthy aspirants for office. All were known as men of ability and integrity, and their claims were ardently espoused and advocated by their numerous friends. The action of the convention was flattering to all these gentlemen, and the naming of the State officers for the next term, O'Neal for Governor, Phelan for Secretary of State, Vincent for Treasurer, Thompkins for Attorney General, Carmichael for Auditor, and Armstrong, Superintendant of Public Instruction, was an honor of high significance to each of these gentlemen.

No patriotic citizen or ardent democrat can justly find fault with the choice for Governor; of such a man as Gen. A. O'Neal: His name has already become synonymous to his State and devotion to her interests and to his party of faithful, hearty allegiance to its best principles. He can well point to the tenor of his past life as an assurance that the affairs of Ala, will be administered in the interest of the good name of the State at home and abroad. His heart is brave and true; his head is clear and cool, and the roll of honor upon which are the names of all the democratic governors since the war, is to have a new lustre from the name of O'Neal.

The nomination for Secretary of State, of Maj Ellis Phelan, gives us peculiar pleasure. It is hardly news to our readers that Mr. Phelan is fitted to perform readily the duties of any office the State can give. The other nominees have already served the people ably and faithfully, and it is a credit to the State that they were importuned to remain in office. Rotation in office is rather the ethics of office seekers than a proper principle for the guidance of State conventions. When the State secures good and true officers let them be retained as long as possible.

The Auriferous Southwest.

New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The opening of the Southern Pacific Railroad to passenger and freight trafic, will give an astonishing impetus to the mining interests of the vast South-western limits of this Republic. Since the period of the Spanish conquest of the yet, to Americanize, almost unknown foot hill slopes, mountain sides and beautiful fertile valleys of New Mexico and Arizona, strange traditions of rich gold and silver deposits and wide fields of surface gold have been current among the hardy settlers of the Southwest.

Nor are these rumors foundationless; for bold prospectors, who have in small parties penetrated the Indian country, have returned bearing with them rich specimens of gold and silver quartz, and little bags of precious gold dust, that was washed out of the black sand found at the bottom of the mountain streams.

While the level regions of New Mexico and Arizona are usually sterile and dry, there are valleys hidden among the green foot-hills, and long winding cañadas and passes, where, protected from the cold chilling northers that sweep from the snow-covered peaks of the bleak northwest, vegetation is perennial and grass flourishes the whole year round.

But the taller foot hills and giant mountains are the home and the hunting ground of the sanguinary and treacherous Hill Apaches, the most of whose country is a terra incognita even to the white settlers of the Southwest. There are flowering valleys that have never yet echoed to the white man's tread, yet we have the most unmistakable proofs that in these mountain vales and glens "paying dirt" is spread over a large area of as valuable placer mines as were ever yet worked in Guinea, in Australia or in California.

With the appearance of the iron-horse in these vast solitudes, the miners, the prospectors and the hardy frontiersmen of the Southwest will gradually encroach upon the red-skins, who have hitherto kept back the march of civilization, and have more than once defeated our troops in fair fight in the mountain passes and winding glens.

The rich mining country they have guarded with such ferocious valor will be thrown open to the world; the mines will be developed, and an auriferous region, second to none other in the world, will become the Eldorado of this republic. Quick and cheap transportation by rail to these hitherto inaccessible regions, will give a surprising impetus to immigration; while thousands of our idle and unemployed youth will take advantage of this new field of enterprise newly presented to their courage and hardihood, and the great Southwest will be developed by the bone and sinew of this section.

CHICKEN CHOLERA.

No Longer to be Feared.

American Poultry Adviser.

We have not seen greater enthusiasm manifested than at present, in the endeavor to eradicate chicken cholera. Many leading poultrymen throughout the country are placing at our command large quantities of Siberian Corn, the great cholera preventative, to be loaned to all who desire to get a start in the seed. They seem to be perfectly confident that if once introduced in a section so its good properties would be known, everybody would have it. And there is no doubt, if generally introduced, chicken cholera would be a stranger.

It should be planted about July 1st, in rows like corn. It matures early, yields very abundantly and makes the best poultry feed there is. As the season for planting is near at hand in order that our readers may get the seed without delay, write to the American Poultry Adviser Zanesville, Ohio. Enclose in your letter a half sheet of letter paper, with your name, post office, county and State written plainly on one side. This address written by yourself will be pasted on your package of seed and returned to you immediately. Also enclose in your letter a silver dime to pay freight on seed from where it is raised to Zanesville, and pay postage, and for wrapping up the seed.

All parties receiving this seed are to return the same amount they received in package, to the American Poultry Adviser, prompt in the fall after gathering it, to be returned to the owners, who have loaned the seed. This gives everybody a chance to get a start in this valuable feed free, and we think it the duty of every one who keeps fowls to plant a little, enough to keep their own fowls free from disease. If every one will do this, cholera will no longer be the dread of the poultryman, and thousands of dollars will be saved in each State throughout the Union.

Bro. Editors, please copy the above, adding thereto whatever seemeth good unto you. We now have the seed in abundance and when the farmers are willing to distribute it thus, we certainly should lend them a helping hand. Let us all make the effort that the seed may be introduced in every county in the United States this season. Please publish in your first issue after receiving this.

A Masonic Incident.

Several years ago Capt. T.—— of Portsmouth, was overhauled by pirates. Officers and men were taken to the piratical craft to swing from the yard arm. Capt T's description of the scene, as the pirates adjusted the noose about himself and men, is very thrilling. All efforts to soften the hearts of the cut throats, or gain a short respite, were useless. The captors acted on the principle that dead men tell no tales; they had no time to lose. Capt. T. was in despair, and above all the scenes of his life which passed before him in that moment of agony, rose the picture of his wife and children awaiting his return in their Portsmouth home. Prayers for mercy had availed him nothing, and he resigned himself to the doom which was to launch him instantly into eternity. Suddenly an inspiration flashed into his mind. He gave a certain masonic sign. The pirate chief sprang forward and tore the noose from his neck. In a voice of thunder he ordered his men to release the captive crew. Dumfounded and bewildered, they found themselves the guests of the pirate crew, and recipients of their hospitality, while the captain and his officers were treated to the best the corsair could offer. They were finally taken back to their own vessel, and Capt. T. used to repeat with a hearty relish the words of the pirate boatswain, when he landed him from the boat to the vessel,: "Thank your God you fell into such good hands!"

Blackshear News and Signal; "Capt J. M. Lee showed us some spirits turpentine made from sawdust and refuse of the saw mill. It is extracted by a sweating process, and yields fourteen gallons of spirits, three to four of rosin and a quantity of tar per cord. The spirits produced has a different oder from that produced by distillation. The experiment was made by Capt. Lee, at Reppard's mill, 10¾ Savannah, Florida and Western Railway, in Clinth county, with the above result. We shall have something more to say about this new discovery again soon."

American Baptist: Georgia furnished the Home Mission Society of New York its first coresponding secretary, and Rev, Jesse Mercer a Georgia Baptist, was the first man to make provision in his will for this society. It will be interesting to know that Jesse Mercer married the childless widow of a rich Jew, no children were born to him, and by mutual consent all their property was given for benevolent purposes. In this providential arrangement is laid the foundation of Mercer University. Why not some more Baptist preachers marry rich Jew's widows?

Fifteen Million Dollars an Acre

[New York Letter.]

In the more common streets of New York land is worth from $250,000 to $350,000 per acre. In the best part of Broadway its value has increased to $5,000,000 per acre; but in the vicinity of Wall street its value is an immensely increased, because this locality is the money heart of America. The land on which the Drexel building stands cost its present owners at the rate of $14,000,000 per acre. It occupies the corner of Wall and Broad streets which may be considered the most valuable corner on this continent, and yet when I was a Broad street clerk in 1840 this very place was occupied as a hat store. The coresponding value of property in this neighborhood has been, illustrated by the recent sale of the corner of Broad street and Exchange place which was at the rate of $15,000,000 per acre. Hence the Drexel lot was none too dear. In fact, these dazzling figures are justified by immensity of the transactions which occur here daily. Almost all the railroads on the continent except New England are managed within 300 feet of this spot, and the general pressure of our immense financial system gives it a value which a few years ago could not have been dreamed of.

A Boston man besought his wife he being but three years married, for the privilege of a latch key. "Latch key!" she exclaimed, in tones of amazement, "what use can you have for a latch key when the Woman's Emancipation League meets Monday night, the Ladies Domestic Mission Tuesday, the Sisters of Jerico Wednesday, the Daughters of Nineveh Friday, and the Women's Progressive Art Association and the Suffrage Band on alternate Saturday nights. You stay at home and see that the baby dosen't fall out of the cradle." He stays.

JAY GOULD MAKING COMMUNISTS.

The Great Monopolist Sowing the Seed for a Day of Reckoning

Rufus Hatch in the N. Y. Hour.

The readers of the Hour have been warned of what has come to pass concerning, the construction of railroads three, four and five hundred miles beyond settlement of population. Construction has ceased because the demand for a sample of their securities has ceased. This means a closing up of iron mines, in a measure of coal mines, the absolute closing up of blast furnaces, the shutting down of rolling-mills and the discontinuance of the car and engine shops, thus throwing millions of people out of employment. And when out of employment men have not much to do but trace the finger of monopoly in its effect upon their lives. Every time Mr. Gould spends half a million of dollars on a green house, he adds to the ranks of the communists; every time there is a combination made against the public for the purpose of doubling ocean telegraph tariff. or any telegraph tariff, members are added to the ranks of the communists; every time railroad pools are formed after the Fink method, or any other method, the communists gain volunteers. Any means of making the very few very rich and the very many very poor, sow the seed for a day of reckoning. It is a theory entertained by some wicked people that one or more men can buy and control the decisions of Judges in this city; the actions of Attorney-Generals; and it is a well known fact that lawyers are bound to take fees when offered, and then as the world wags to do their best for the client But can one man monopolize all the intelligence of the United States?—does Mr. Gould control the New York Associated Press and all the papers which that organization represents? It is certain that the National Associated Press does not belong to him.

The following is an extract from the speech of Mr. McKenzie of Kentucky, on the tariff commission bill:

I appeal to you, gentlemen, who differ from me in sentiment, to know if it is not true that the legislation of the past twenty years has been in the interest of banks and bankers, and railroad corporations, and the great protected interests of the land? I ask any gentleman here to point me to a single statute that adorns the Statute books of our country that is designed expressly and exclusively for the interests of the farming people.

They cannot wine you and dine you. They have no paid and salaried lobby here to protect their interests. The great majority of them are poor Your corridors are not crowded with the salaried agents of the farming interests. But you cannot start out of one of these corriders without running afoul of a man who wants to recharter the national banks; without running afoul of a man who wants to protect the salt interest; without running afoul of the man who is in favor of the protection of the iron interest. Not a single farmer is to be heard from, either by himself or his agents, in these corridors. Producing all the wealth of the country, establishing its prosperity, he stands in legislation representing seven-tenths of the whole population of the United States; he stands here without a lobby and comparatively without a friend.

A Georgia Bonanza.

It is said a rich strike has just been made in the famous old Magruder mines, in Lincoln county, Georgia, in the shape of a four and a half foot vein of silver, assaying $150 to the ton. The vein bears unmistakable evidence of being a true fissure, and the owners of the mine are very happy over their good fortune. The crop ore in these mines is, like most of the Georgia ores, of the rotten variety, and easily worked. The mines have not been idle in recent years, but a lack of capital has prevented the owners from developing them in as vigorous a manner as they would like to. With this new strike, however, they will have no difficulty in obtaining the money necessary to work the property thoroughly. The Magruder mines are an old and famous property. Before the war they were worked for gold only, and yielded a profit of one thousand dollars per week, a profit which would be duplicated at the present time if they were vigorously worked.

New Telegraph Company—Capital $21,000,000.

CHICAGO, June 12.—Announcement is made that a new telegraph company with a capital of $21,000,000 has been organized, and that work has actually begun on its lines in the East, and that they are to be pushed rapidly West, connecting all the principal cities. Elisha Gray, electrician, gives the following facts in regard to it. The principal stockholders are the Hon. George D. Roberts and S. B. White of New York, Hon. John B. Alley and Ex Collector Beard, of Boston, and Gov. Foster, of Ohio, who, who with his friends, holds a large block of the stock. Lines are to be operated with Gray's patents. It is to be known as the Postal Telegraph Company.

Material reductions in telegraph tolls are promised. $700.000 have already been paid in for preliminaries.

Hard Times in Illinois.

CHICAGO, June 12.—A special from Danville says: Reports from Patrick county are to the effect that 5,000 persons are starving. The drought of last year greatly curtailed crops. A load of corn was received at the court house a few days ago, and hundreds of starving women and children crowded around the vehicle imploring to be given a quart or peck of corn The court house was crowded with men, and women and children begging bread. Three hundred had not tasted food for 2 days. Several wagons with relief have been sent from Danville.

Some of Henry countye's citizens have planted sunflowers. There is scarcely a doubt now that this plant is a preventive of fever.

Suppose our town should catch fire what will become of it?

Col. J. H. Caldwell has gone to Texas to visit his aged mother, whom we are sorry to learn is dangerously ill.

A man was brought into town badly drunk and put in jail the other day, from what cause we did not learn.

Mrs, Lee Alexander, is visiting the family of Mrs Frank.

Mr C. H. Francis of Montgomery is in town.

Mrs Scott of Montgomery is visiting the family of Mrs Morgan.

Mrs Rosa Pigues nee Miss, Rosa Rowan, is visiting her uncles family.

Several of our citizens are absent attending commencement exercises of Oxford College.

Mrs, Graham nee Miss Lizzie Hoke is visiting the family of Mrs. Alexander.

Miss Baird one of the belles of the empire State is in town visiting friends.

Miss Wilson an accomplished daughter of Talladega is visiting the family of her sister Mrs. G. W. Wilson.

Misses Dora, Mamie and Mary Crook have returned to spend summer vacation with us. We are happy to welcome them home.

Miss Marie Arnold a society belle from the capitol city, is spending the month with her friend Miss Annie Wyly.

Miss Bowen, the gifted young elocutionist, was expected to be present at the last meeting of the Jacksonville Literary Society, but owing to press of other engagements could not come.

It is with peculiar pride that we learn of the splendid triumphs of our young friend Miss Ella Wyly at the recent commencement of Rome College. She was crowned time and again and flowers were showed in lavish profusion upon her, eloquent testimonials of the high appreciation in which the Romans hold the mocking bird of Calhoun.

The gallant soldier boys Edwards Wyly and Rowan, are home for the summer holidays dressed in their splendid uniforms of cadet gray, and sparkling brass buttons.

Messrs Browder and Lowe of Montgomery are in town. There is a (Lowe) rumor that if our boys are not very wily, we will lose one of our beautiful mountain flowers.

We enjoyed a pleasant conversation last evening with Miss Edith Lockett, daughter of Col. Lockett, so long and favorably known in Alabama. We listened with deep interest, to her vivid descriptions of life in the Land of the Pyramids. Miss Edith is quite an addition to our youthful society.

We are pleased to meet our young friend Walter Hoke of Montgomery, formerly of this place. We heard Walter contemplated embarking upon the matrimonial sea, at no distant day, but we expect it is a hoax.

Next Thursday night there will be a lawn party at Mrs Morgans. Dancing, music, ice lemonade, and cake will be some of the enjoyable features of the occasion. Admission 25cts for benefit Episcopal church. All are invited to attend.

Gen. Forney of Alabama and Messrs. Ketchum and Hiscock of New York were named as House members of the Conference Committee on the District of Columbia appropriation bill. The longer Gen. Forney serves the more his ability is recognized in Congress and the greater his influence becomes. His constituents recognize this fact and will doubtless return him again this fall, without opposition.

PLENTY OF MONEY YET.

Messrs. Stevenson and Grant have been notified by the Real Estate Loan and Banking Company of Alabama, that they have two hundred thousand dollars cash which they desire to negotiate in the next sixty days. If you want any of this money, all you have to do is to apply to Messrs. Stevenson and Grant, give the proper security, and you will get it quickly without doubt. Messrs. Stevenson and Grant will be glad to furnish all information asked for, when parties apply at their office in person.

Preserving Meat.

[New York Times.]

There is no good reason why farmers and their families should eat so much salt pork, leaving all the fresh meat to the inhabitants of cities and villages, when the following method will keep meat fresh for weeks even in the warmest weather; I have tried it for several years.

As soon as the animal heat is out of the meat, slice it up for cooking. Prepare a large jar by scalding it well with hot water and salt. Mix salt and pulverized saltpetre. Cover the bottom of the jar with a sprinkle of salt and pepper. Put down a layer of meat, sprinkle with salt and pepper the same as if it were going to the table, and continue in this manner until the jar is full. Fold a cloth or towel, and wet it in strong salt and water in which a little of the saltpetre is dissolved. Press the cloth closely over the meat and set in a cool place. Be sure and press the cloth in tightly as each layer is removed, and your meat will keep for months.

It is a good plan to let the meat remain over night after it is sliced before packing. Then drain off the blood that oozes from it. It will be necessary to change the cloth occasionally, or take it off and wash it first in cold water as at first. In this way farmers can have fresh meat all the year round. I have kept beef that was killed on the eleventh of February till the twenty first of June,

Then I packed a large jar of veal in the same way during dog days, and it kept six weeks. This recipe alone is worth the price of any newspaper in the land.

Augusta Chronicle on the yield of the oat crops of Georgia; We are told that the yield in Wilkes and Lincoln counties will be fully a million bushels. The crop of Hancock is estimated at one million bushels. The Washington Gazette says the entire small grain of Wilkes has been estimated at one and a quarter million bushels. One planter in that county has a thousand acres in oats and the yield will be fully forty thousand bushels. A planter near Augusta will make twenty thousand bushels of oats and wheat. With this immense crop there will be more than sufficient for home consumption and a large quantity can be sold, bringing a considerable amount of money into the State.

The South will not only raise more corn, oats and wheat in the cotton belt this year than ever before, but it will raise more corn, cotton, oats and wheat than any previous years, and especially more cotton in the counties and section which ten years ago were deemed good only for the grains. Counties in North Georgia, North Alabama, East and Middle Tennessee, which practically made no cotton at all ten years ago, now produce it as a variety crop, and find it very profitable. The farmers in these counties have not become cotton crazy at all. They have largely increased their production of grain and provisions; have added hay to their crops; have planted orchards and vineyards; are generally in a more prosperous and independent condition than at any time for several years. The Tradesman.

The Successful Farmer.

Many years of experience and much observation have taught us that two things are absolutely necessary to successful farming. The first requisite is to ascertain, by experiment, what crops the land is best adapted for. We say crops, for the second requisite is a proper annual diversity, which insures the farmer against want or that most to be dreaded-foe—debt.

Having decided what can be raised with profit, we urge an adherence to these crops, regardless of exceptional changes in the markets. Some years prices may run very low, and discouragement will enter the mind of the farmer, especially if some other farm product, not adapted to his soil, sells for high prices. It is at such times the temptation to depart from the beaten path is presented. If the farmer yields the chances are ten to one that he is ruined.

It requires long experience and careful study to learn him to grow any given crop—cane, cotton, corn, rice, etc.—to the best advantage. The diversity and rotation, absolutely essential to success will fully occupy the mind and time of the farmer without allowing any running after "strange gods." If he is growing cotton, corn, oats and rice, or any possible combination of crops his whole attention should be devoted to the cheapest way of producing the largest yield. He should never be contented with moderate yields. His land should be forced to the greatest possible extent for in this way, and this alone, is there real profit.

It has become fashionable to buy large quantities of commercial fertilizers.—These are valuable and produce immediate results. But they cost money, and money our farmers do not always have. The far seeing tiller of the soil takes into consideration his future wants, and clover and cow peas furnish the bulk of his fertilizing material, at insignificant cost.

The successful farmer does not attempt too much. He concentrates, and the more he does this the greater are his gains. He does not expect large crops from his land without liberal manuring. He recognizes the necessity of constant study and watchfulness. In slang phrase, which is, however, exactly to the point, he does not "bite off a bigger piece than he can chew," neither does he "put all his eggs into one dish." —Merchant, Mechanic and Farmer.

With the return of summer holidays our town is made merry and gay by the return of many young ladies and gentlemen from their collegiate institutions.

New Wheat can be stored, ground and the flour sacked and branded at the fine flouring mills of Francis and Sevenson, 2 miles from Jacksonville.

CROSS PLAINS LOCALS.

The weather is warm enough now for every body, as the thermometer is sporting up in the nineties. Our farmer friends are looking more cheerful as the cotton crop begins to brighten up.

Mr. Jno D. Blackwell is still confined to his room with rheumatism.

Mr. D. D. Lofman, proprietor of the Cross Plaines Hotel, is having the verandah which extends around the building roofed over, thereby adding greatly to the appearance of the house as well as the comfort of his guests.

Our popular Mayor, Mr. J. A. Wolf, is erecting a very neat cottage residence on a new street just being opened on the west side of the railroad.

We learn that several others will be erected during the summer, as there is a great demand for houses here.

The Episcopal church is completed and is a beauty of its kind. It is an honor to our town.

We noticed the plaster work of the Cumberland Presbyterian church is progressing finely.

Mr. Tom Sparks will have the most imposing business house in the place, when completed.

Dr. McDonald is preaching to our people every night this week. We trust much good will result from the labors of this devoted minister.

Your reporter understands that it has been discovered that stock will eat dog fennel and really love it. Parties interested will take notice, that the abundant crop now going on our commons will be given to the first applicant; the only requirement bring that he will harvest it as soon as possible.

OCCASIONAL

ALEXANDRIA LOCALS.

An effort is being made to have a good school here. Let every lady send their children in and build up a large school, rather than send them off among temptations, where children are so liable to aberance.

We are in favor of road law; for is there any justice in forcing a man of no property that wouldn't wear out a road in an age, to repair where wagons belonging to men of property have cut in ditches? Let tax on property hire the work done, then we will have good roads.

May God speed the time when the poisonous breath of malt liquors shall be swept from our land, but hope the next representative we send to the legislature will not have his valuable time disturbed by petitions for local prohibition laws; let the whole country either have or not have the accursed drink.

We are in favor of the stock law in our valley, but to say it will be satisfactory all over the mountainous county of Calhoun is absurd.

Would just correct one mistake for Judge Bullum. Miss Cooper is expected home from Chattanooga, where she is visiting relatives, by the first of next week instead of next fall.

The appreciated visitors, Hon. D. D. Draper, wife and daughter, have been guests of the hospitable family of S. L. Green during the spring season. Sorry to learn they will soon leave for Virginia.

Would be glad for our Jacksonville friends to meet us at Sulpher Springs about the middle of next month and have a pic nic. We can furnish the watermelons and luxuriant fruits by that time, if they will have the lemonade. etc., etc. HOME SUPPORTER.

TATE SPRINGS.

Health and Pleasure for Alabamians.

Already fourteen States are represented by the guests in attendance at Tate Springs, East Tennessee. A good company has been there all winter and has rapidly increased since the 1st of March. The demand for the water has doubled in the past six months, and is being shipped now to all points of the union at the rate of 2,000 bbls. per. annum. We have seen no natural mineral water so strongly endorsed as a remedial agent for dyspepsia and diseases of the liver, stomach, bowels and kidneys. Our doctors prescribe it and hundreds in Alabama are daily drinking the water at home and can attest its power over disease. When the summer travel sets in, more of our Alabama "summer resorters" will be found at Tate Springs than at any other resort outside of the State. Dr. J. S. Weatherly of Montgomery, is resident physician. The new building is all complete and furnished Send for for large 40 page pamphlet containing full information on all points. AGRICULTURAL.

PROFITS OF OXEN.—A friend says that a good farmer of his acquaintance purchased a yoke of ordinary cattle for two hundred dollars and used them for hauling wood, rails, and anything else, and for doing most of the plowing for Spring crops on a farm of seventy acres. In June he sold them for beef for two hundred and sixty dollars. He thinks their labor paid well for the meal they consumed. On the same day that he drove these oxen to market he purchased another yoke for one hundred and ninety dollars. After a few months he sold these for beef at an advance, which also paid well for the meal they consumed, and purchased another yoke at once, and commenced feeding them with meal, working them occasionally. By this system of trafficking he made about three hundred dollars in one year, and had a good ox team constantly, receiving a good price for all grain fed them, besides making a large quantity of excellent manure. He is a good manager, always feeding his teams well, treats them kindly, and never allows them to be overworked, or worried by disagreeable drivers, who use up more of the energies of the team by bawling at and whipping them than by the labor got out of them. He never purchases poor oxen, even at a cheap rate, as it requires many dollars' worth of meal to get them into a fattening condition.

A HINT TO CHEESE MAKERS,—In the effort to become a successful manufacturer of cheese, the first point to which the aspirant should direct his attention is the distinction between good and poor cheese, that he may have a clear idea of what he should aim to produce, and what to avoid. Until he learns this, he will not be able to appreciate the bearing and importance of the various steps in the process of making and curing. To post himself in regard to what is required to sell well, his best course is to go into the market and see for himself what brings the highest prices. His own senses of seeing, tasting, smelling, and feeling, must be employed in determining. No description, however exact or lucid, will suffice, though it may aid the beginner in forming a correct judgment. If the student cannot watch the markets, the next best thing is to watch the factories of the best makers, visiting them often and inspecting and discussing the various points of merit or demerit, if they have any. It is also well to study the public taste and his own preferences, but too much weight should not be attached to the latter, as individual tastes are often warped by peculiar circumstances and habits, so that it may not accord with the preference of others. Dealers in cheese should be consulted, but cautiously. If they are not well informed themselves, they are quite liable to lead makers astray. They sometimes differ widely from each other, and lose sight of intrinsic merit, which should always be kept in view. The importance of manufacturers posting themselves thoroughly by every means within reach, is evidenced by the fact everywhere observable, that makers who are the best judges produce the best goods.

BEETS FOR THE GARDEN.—Those who only know the long late "Blood Beet," have yet to learn the difference in beets. As soon as any part of the garden can be worked, a sowing of early beets should be made. Select a light soil if possible, and manure it well; make the rows a foot apart, sow the seeds thickly, at least two inches deep, and press down the soil firmly with a light roller, or pat it down with the hoe. The earliest varieties are the "Egyptian," and "Blood Turnip." The "Bassano" is not quite so early, or so fine grained, though good. The thick sowing is advised in order to have plenty of young beets at the thinning; when two or three inches high, thin to 4 to 6 inches in the row, saving those that are pulled out to be used as "greens." Many prefer them even to spinach. It is well to sow seed for a succession, once in two weeks up to July. The "Blood Turnip" is so much superior to any of the large beets, that we prefer it for winter use. For this purpose the seed should not be sown before the middle of June, else they will grow stringy.

FARM AND FARM-YARD HINTS.—Very few persons would believe what a difference it makes in the milking qualities of cows to give them a good carding every two or three times a week. Nor are the milking qualities alone affected; the animals will make better growth and thrive better in every respect, and do it on less food than they will without this little hygienic attention. One of the best dairymen in Vermont says: "I have come to the conclusion, after seven years' experience in the feeding of meal every day to such of my cows as were giving milk, that in future I would feed more meal instead of less. I believe that when the cows have been properly selected, and are of a breed that are reliable as to butter qualities, it amounts to a certainty that all we feed them above what is required to sustain their bodies, will be returned to us in butter, with a large profit on the investment. At the same time care should be exercised not to over feed. Gilt-edge butter can not be made from cows thin or poorly fed.

BRINING butter is becoming a usual process for its preservation. Use a tub somewhat tapering, with heavy staves, and hoops provided at both ends. Turn the tub on its small end in packing. Line the tub with a sack of cotton cloth. Pack the butter to within an inch of the groove for the head. Lay a cloth over it, and bring the edges of the sack over and neatly press it down. Next put in the head and turn the tub on the large end. The sack of butter falls, thus leaving a space on the sides and top. Strong brine is then poured in at a hole in the top until it floats the butter. The hole is then tightly corked. Good butter put up in this way will keep in a sound condition one year.

SPRING HOUSE CLEANING.—All premises that have been occupied by poultry during the winter, should now be thoroughly cleansed. All nests, feed boxes and fixtures must be overhauled to remove dirt and any lurking disease. Wash movable fixtures with carbolic acid and water or whitewash with carbolic in the wash, and above all things fumigate well with tobacco stems and sulphur. Germs of disease are sometimes a long time accumulating and a genuine cleaning out is absolutely necessary after the closed doors of the winter.

THE Country Gentleman points out a fact which it is important for cultivators of corn to bear in mind, namely, that the roots of corn twelve or fifteen inches high will meet midway between the three-feet rows, and that long before the ears form the entire ground between the rows will be occupied by their long and slender fibers. It concludes from this that "hilling" corn is not only unnecessary but injurious. Flat culture is regarded as decidedly the best.

TO PREVENT SMOKE FROM A LAMP.—Soak the wick in strong vinegar, and dry it thoroughly before you use it. It will then burn both sweet and pleasant, and will give a great deal of satisfaction for the trifling work in preparing.

"Is the human skull growing thinner?" is a question raised by Mr. W. B. Cooper, who endeavors to prove by generally accepted laws of evolution that such must be the case. These laws teach that the stronger organisms must survive the weak in the struggle for life, and that all living creatures possess the natural tendency of becoming accommodated to altered circumstances within certain limits. Mr. Cooper argues that when barbaric warfare and the dangers of the chase were common occurrences the law of natural selection must have operated to eliminate individuals with skulls to weak too withstand the severe shocks to which they were exposed. Adaption, also, must have exerted an influence in causing the bony armor of the brain to become thickened to serve as a protection for that delicate organ. With civilized man a change is found. Natural selection no longer has special occasion to remove persons of weak crania, as the skull is seldom exposed to violence. For the same reason the law of adaptation, which, like all evolutionary laws, may be progressive or retrogressive, tends rather to decrease the skull's thickness than to increase it—the brain no longer having need of a strong protective covering. Men's skulls are now less exposed to violence than at any former period in the world's history, but in view of the fact that the most advanced races of to-day were barbarians a few centuries ago, it is obviously too early to look for any great change. He maintains, however, that in accordance with theory the brain must be fast losing its shield, and points out that it is no unusual event nowadays to hear of fractures ascribed to unusual thinness of the skull.

Kansas Praising It.

"While I was in Topeka last Winter, said the Hon. Arthur Edgington, 'I had a pretty rough time of it. I got a bad cold, and, then that not being sufficiently severe, I was also attacked with rheumatism. The pain was in my left shoulder. At times I almost writhed in agony. I tell you sir, that the pain could not have been greater had my shoulder been screwed up in a vise. I was utterly helpless, and felt I was destined to remain in that condition indefinitely. My friends and a physician were generous in their prescriptions and my room soon became a miniature apothecary shop. But nothing did me any good. One day some one told me I was enduring a great deal of needless pain when I could invest fifty cents in a bottle of St Jacobs Oil and be cured. I invested in a bottle of the Oil, rubbed it on my shoulder twice, and in two days forgot that I ever had rheumatism. Yes, that is a great remedy, and no mistake. They can't say too much in favor of its healing power."

The above was uttered by Mr. Edgington while sitting in the porch of the La Gonda House, at Columbus, the other evening, and was overheard by an escaped reporter, who is traveling over the country incog. Inquiry developed the fact that Mr. Edgington is one of the most widely known men in Kansas, figuring prominently in politics, and acting as the responsible agent of the Bradstreet Commercial Agency. Upon subsequently making Mr Edgington's acquaintance the reporter was assured that all he had heard was true, and he was at liberty to use it in the papers. —Oswego (Kan.) Democrat.

The calculations made by Prof. Langley concerning the heat of the sun, show some remarkable results. Thus, a sunbeam one centimetre in section is found, in the clear sky of the Alleghany Mountains, to bring to the earth in one minute enough heat to warm one grain of water by one degree C. It would, therefore, if concentrated upon a film of water 1 500th of a millimetre thick, one millimetre wide, and ten millimetres long, raise it eighty-three and one-third degrees in one second, provided all the heat could be maintained. And, since the specific heat is only 0 0052, a strip of that metal of the same dimensions would, on a similar supposition, be warmed in one second to 2.503 degrees C.—a temperature, in fact, sufficient to melt it.

King Cotton has conquered a new realm, and now proposes to house men as well as clothe them. A preparation called celluloid, in which cotton is a leading ingredient, has been used lately as a substitute for ivory in the manufacture of billiard balls and paper cutters; and now a Canadian manufacturer has invented a process by which compressed cotton may be used not merely for doors and window frames, but for the whole facade of large buildings Treated with certain chemicals and compressed, it can be made perfectly fire-proof, and as hard as stone, absolutely air and damp proof, and a material is thus produced admirably adapted for the lining—internal and external—of buildings of which the shell may or may not be constructed of other material, while it easily lends itself for decorative purposes.

The St. Paul (Minn.) Globe observes: Things had gone wrong with him, and he wanted to die; yet he had the whole house darting around mighty lively, so we heard, hunting for the St. Jacobs Oil bottle, when the first twinge of rheumatism gathered him up.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y.

The society which was formed at Milan for the commercial exploration of Africa, has already examined the Borka plateau, and founded two stations at Bengazi and Derna, and this year it proposes to send agents to accompany an Arab caravan from the Mediterranean to Wadai, across the desert, and through the oasis of Audjila, Jalo, Kufra and Waniauga. The society also hopes to obtain the necessary firmans from Constantinopel to enable it to establish an agricultural colony to the east of the Barka plateau, and, if possible an attempt will even be made to explore the route, leading from Abyssinia towards Assab, the Italian settlement on the Red Sea.

The practice is common among the engravers and watchmakers of Germany of hardening their tools in sealing-wax. The tool is heated to whiteness and plunged into the wax, withdrawn after an instant, and plunged again, the process being repeated until the steel is too cold to enter the wax. The advantages claimed for this method are that the steel becomes almost as hard as the diamond, and when touched with a little oil or turpentine, the tools are superior for engraving, and also for piercing the hardest metals.

HUMOROUS.

THERE is a young editor wandering on the face of the earth who formerly published a paper at Storm Lake, Iowa. He left there the day after the issue of the last paper, and is supposed to be crossing the State on foot to get away from an infuriated female populace. It seems there was a concert given by young ladies of the city, and the gallant young editor wrote it up in splendid shape. The same day he had visited a herd of short-horn cattle, owned by a farmer in the vicinity, and he wrote the cattle also. The cross-eyed foreman of the office got the two articles mixed up as follows: "The concert given last evening by sixteen of Storm Lake's most beautiful and interesting young ladies was highly appreciated. They were elegantly dressed and sang in a most charming manner, winning the plaudits of the entire audience, who pronounced them the finest shorthorns in the county. A few of them are of a rich brown color, but the majority are spotted brown and white. Several of the heifers were fine bodied, tight limbed animals, and promise to prove good property.

THE only satisfactory things in this life are the smoking cars of the Union Railway Company. If you get on board, you are expected to smoke. If you don't happen to have a cigar the conductor hands you a box of the best brand, and gives you a light. If you refuse a cigar, you may have a cigarette. If you refuse both, the car stops, and the conductor requests you to take the next car, for if the superintendent of the road should find any one on board who did not smoke, why then, you know—at this point you accept a cigar and say no more about it. In a few days there are to be drawing room and sleeping cars. If this don't knock the Charles river scheme the company proposo to put on ice cream and soda water cars, caramel and chewing gum cars, ladies' and gents' restaurant cars, billiard saloon cars, drive round the yard and up to your room, put you to bed, and turn out the gas cars, and several other varieties.

Beautifiers.

Ladies, you cannot make fair skin, rosy cheeks and sparkling eyes with all the cosmetics of France, or beautifiers of the world, while in poor health, and nothing will will give you such health, strength, buoyant spirits and beauty as Hop Bitters. A trial is certain proof.

THERE was an amusing incident in the Surrogate Court. A will had been offered for probate, and the surrogate was examining the witness to it with his usual care.

"Was the testator in his sound mind and free from undue influence when he made his testament?" asked the court.

"He was not," said the witness.

"What influence was he under?" queried the Surrogate.

"Under the influence of liquor," naively came the response.

The joke was fully appreciated, and Court and spectators joined in the laughter.

MR. JOHNS came to a hotel in Bismarck with a cheap looking trunk, worth about $7. The clerk sized him up and gave him a back room, just under the roof, with a dormer window, a camp bed and a tin basin for furniture. The porter snubbed him, and he was the last man waited on at the table, and was always seated where he couldn't reach the bread nor the castor. He went away on business, was gone six weeks, and left his room door open. And when he came back and opened that old trunk and took $12,000 in gold out of it, the landlord pulled out all his hair for mortification, and went and got roaring drunk for five days, the clerk forgot to paste down his front hair, and went one whole day without changing his eight-inch cuffs, and the porter went out in the woods and lay down and died.

Moral: Never disdain to go through a trunk because it looks cheap. You can't tell what it may assay.

Advice to Consumptives.

On the appearance of the first symptoms—as general debility, loss of appetite, pallor, chilly sensations, followed by night-sweats and cough—prompt measures for relief should be taken. Consumption is scrofulous disease of the lungs:—therefore use the great anti-scrofula, or blood purifier and strength-restorer,—Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." Superior to Cod liver oil as a nutritive, and unsurpassed as a pectoral. For weak lungs, spitting of blood, and kindred affections, it has no equal. Sold by druggists the world over. HE was a young country fellow, a little awkward and bashful, but of sterling worth of character. MANY A TIME AND OFT.

When the house is still and the day is done,
And the stars shine out aloft,
I sit by the falling fire alone,
And think of the years that are past and gone,
Many a time and oft.

I dream of that village by the sea;
I dream of that seat by the trysting tree,
And of one who will never come back to me,
Ah! many a time and oft!
When the city is hushed and the chimes are still,
And the voices of the crowd are soft,
My thoughts wander on at their own wild will,
And my tears fall fast and my heart is chill,
Many a time and oft.
I dream of the hopes, all fated and fled,
Of the vow that is broken, the shaft that is sped;
Of one to whom I forever am dead—
Ah! many a time and oft.

A PHYSICIAN'S REWARD.

I had been six years a surgeon in the navy, and for the last two of these six years I had been cruising on that dreadful Gold Coast. Perhaps I was not the best tempered man in the service, but I thought I was badly treated. The Admiralty and I had a slight disagreement, and the end was that I threw up my commission in disgust. My health was much broken, and while I was recruiting my strength in a little Devon village, I did the one thing which I have never regretted, fell in love with a good girl and married her. I had a certain amount of money, which I invested in a country practice; and for some time all went well with us.

But we were not to escape our share of trouble. My health, which had suffered more seriously than I imagined during my period of service, broke down; my practice went to the dogs; we got deeply into debt, and, to make a long story short, three years after my marriage, one miserable Sunday in November, I found my wife and myself, with our two little children occupying a single poor room in Greenville street off Guildford street.

We had then been in London about six months, and I had been unable—chiefly on account of my precarious health—to get anything to do. About a month, however, before the day I speak of, my only friend in London had held out a hope of obtaining for me the post of private physician to a wealthy relative. But my friend had been compelled suddenly to go abroad, and though he was daily expected back, yet three weeks had now passed, and I had gone to his home in Kensington day after day without any tidings of him.

Meanwhile our little stock of money was quite exhausted; everything that can be spared was sold or pawned; and on this Sunday evening, with a month's rent due next day, my wife and I sat before a miserable apology for a fire, with absolute want staring us in the face. We had not quite a shilling left, and when I looked at my sleeping children and thought of the future, I fairly broke down in utter despair. It was then I found what a treasure I had in the noble woman by my side. Affecting a cheerfulness which she could not feel, she imparted to me a portion of her own courage, and at length induced me—anxious to please her, and glad to do anything rather than sit powerless—to go once to my friend's house.

It was ten o'clock, on a cold drizzling night, when I sat out on my walk. I somehow felt a kind of fictitious hopefulness and walked briskly, resolutely shutting out the thought of failure I stood some time at my friend's door before I dared to ring the bell that would change my hopes or my fears into certainty; and when at last the servant who answered my ring told me that her master had not yet returned, I fairly staggered into a chair in the hall, overcome with disappointment.

The woman, seeing my condition, brought me a little brandy, which revived me somewhat; but it was some time before I felt able to move, and it struck midnight as I left the door for my long and cheerless walk. The rain fell in a steady drizzle, but though I was lightly clad I never heeded it; my thoughts were fixed on my poor wife sitting alone and watching for me, and on the wretched news I was bringing her. I walked on, heedless of the bitter cold and of the constant rain, feeling the numbness of misery in my heart.

How it happened I do not know, but somehow I lost my way, and after wandering aimlessly for some time, I found that I was in a street that I did not know—the Gray's Inn Road, as I afterward learned. I could see no one to direct me, and was walking on rather anxiously when I stumbled over the form of a man, who was lying half out of the covered entrance of a wretched court. For a few yards I walked, too absorbed in my own troubles to think of aught else; but then, thank God, I thought of the unfortunate man lying in the rain, and as a doctor, felt, perhaps more strongly than I otherwise should, that it was my duty to go back and assist him if possible. There was a gas-lamp in the entrance to the court, and by it I was enabled to see that the prostrate figure was that of a singularly tall and powerfully built man; and on a closer inspection I was surprised to find that his dress was that of a gentleman. At once I though that he had been robbed and perhaps murdered; but, taking his hand to feel his pulse, I saw that he had a remarkably handsome diamond ring on his finger, and the beating of his pulse though very faint showed me that he was not.

Then I thought with something of contempt, that I had a case of mere drunkenness to deal with; but yet on careful examination I could detect no fume of spirits, and the faint action of his heart at length convinced me that the man was in a state of complete exhaustion, probably from want of food.

With considerable labor, in my weak condition, I managed—half lifting, half dragging him—to convey him into the covered passage, and determined to stay with him until some passer-by would assist me. I had not waited long when a half-tipsy woman, walking past, looked into the passage and came over to see what was the matter. She looked keenly at me and at my unconscious patient, and I noticed her eye gleamed as she caught sight of a massive gold chain on his vest.

I asked her to go at once and fetch assistance, but she immediately replied that I need not trouble myself any further.

"I know him well, He's Rooney, that owns the public house near by. I'll get him home all right."

At first her assurance almost imposed upon me, but when I looked at the pale, aristocratic face that I supported on my knee, I felt convinced that she had invented the story with a view to plundering the helpless man.

I talk here sternly that if she did not go for a policeman I would do so myself. She went off hurriedly—as I thought for that purpose—but came back no more; and now I was once more alone with my strange patient, and as the minutes went by I knew not what to do.

Help, however, was near. I noticed a poor girl—she did not look more than sixteen—walking slowly on the other side of the street; I called to her, and after a moment's hesitation she came over. I briefly explained to her the circumstances, and asked her, if she possibly could, to get me a drop of cordial, or the man would die.

"I have only got fourpence," she said, in a kindly Irish voice, "and I was going to pay for my bed with that at the kitchen in Fulwood's Rents; but, sure I'll get something from the chemist's instead, and I'll trust to God for a night's lodging—I've slept out before now."

And away she went—surely not the worst of Good Samaritans.

Very soon she returned with the medicine, and I sent her again to fetch a policeman. I forced a little between the man's teeth, and presently he came to and opened his eyes. I asked him how he came there; he said: "Tired and starving." And then I asked him where he came from, and he suddenly brightened up, and looking at me keenly for a moment, said, "Edinburgh," but from the way he said it I felt convinced he was deceiving me, and shortly after asked the same question again, and he, with the same look, said, "Glasgow."

In his weak state, however, I forbore questioning him further, and a policeman coming up, we got him in a cab and took him to the hospital, where I waited until he was put in bed. Before I left I asked the house surgeon to give a shilling to the poor girl—Mary Kennedy was her name. He readily did so, and she went off to sleep in "Old Walter's" lodging-house in Fulwood's Rents

When at last I got home, I found my wife waiting anxiously for me. However, when I told my story she forgave the delay, and in talking over the strange circumstances of the night we forgot for the time our own troubles. My wife insisted that something good would come of the matter, and at eight o'clock next morning she roused me and made me set off for the hospital. As I was on my way there, my eye was caught by the following advertisement on a boarding:

"ONE HUNDRED POUNDS REWARD.—A Gentleman of unsound mind has escaped from the M—— Private Asylum. The above reward will be paid to any person finding him and restoring him to his friends."

Then followed a description which exactly tallied with the appearance of my patient. Everything was now clear to me, and I fairly ran to the hospital.

Here, however, my hopes were damped, for I found that Policeman Z had gone there before me and told a story very different from the true one which I have narrated, and had actually gone the length of warning the authorities against me. The solicitor whose address was given in the advertisement had been sent for, and the worthy constable had evidently determined to brazen it out and secure the £100. I saw the house surgeon, and told him the whole story. He thought for a few moments, and then said: "We must get the girl at once."

I went myself immediately to the wretched den where she had stopped, and brought her back with me. A very short examination before the solicitor settled Policeman Z's case; and an hour afterward I was able to go back to my wife with more money in my pocket than I had had for many a long day.

But that was not the best of it. I visited my patient—who was no other than the wealthy baronet, Sir Charles Frampton—every day.

He was perfectly harmless, and after residing abroad with us for a couple of years, he so far recovered that he was enabled to dispense with my services, and to manage his own affairs. He showed his gratitude, however, in most princely fashion; settled an annuity on poor Mary Kennedy (she had previously been liberally rewarded by his friends), and bought for me the practice which I still hold.

From that day every thing has prospered with me, and I am now rich enough to leave the work to my oldest son, and amuse myself in writing some of the curious incidents of my life, not the least strange of which is the providential occurrence in Gray's Inn Road.

A Smuggling Machine.

A singular adaptation of the railway engine has been made in Russia. Information having been giving to the authorities at Alexandrovo, on the Polish frontier, that the locomotive of the express leaving that station for Warsaw had been ingeniously converted into a receptacle for smuggling goods, it was carefully examined during its sojourn at that station. Though nothing was found wrong, it was deemed advisable that a custom house official should accompany the train to its destination where the engine furnace and boiler were emptied and deliberately taken to pieces. In the interior was discovered a secret compartment, containing 123 pounds of foreign cigars and several parcels of valuable silk. Several arrests were made, including that of the driver, but his astonishment at finding the engine to which he had so long been accustomed converted into a hardened offender against the laws was so genuine that he was released and allowed to return to his duties.

Cooking in Germany.

I doubt whether the mysteries of German cooking are comprehensible to the Anglo-Saxon mind, permanently endurable by the Anglo-Saxon stomach. In order to obtain that piece of mind which is absolutely necessary to aid the digestion of the compounds which daily come upon the table, one must not seek to comprehend.

Is there not a close relationship between the methods of cooking of a people and their intellectual and moral development? Cannot the positive, practical directness of the Anglo-Saxon mind be connected with their plain, succulent, unmistakable roast and chops?—or the grace and æsthetic sense of the French referred to their delicate ragouts and sauces?—and the cloudy self-evolving philosophies of the Germans to their incomprehensible mixture of fish, flesh, fruit and vegetables? Or would a closer analysis show that the reverse process works out food preparation from innate characteristics?

The fundamental principle of German cooking is to mix as many incongruous things as possible. My countrymen have a special talent, recognized the world over, for inventing mixed drinks but their combinations pale before those of the Germans in mixed cooking. That compound which is so toothsome to a German, a herring salad, is concocted from sixteen different articles. A German beefsteak is made of hashed meets, rolled in a ball and fried. What they call roast is a chuck of meet boiled a while and then baked; it usually looks like a lump of india rubber. With the meats is always served a compote, made of stewed or preserved fruits. The vegetables are deemed at their best when they are floating in grease. Sausage, however, is the great national delicacy. It is produced in great varieties of size and quality; and the sausage shops of Berlin are the most elegant in the city. The German family table, with its mysterious and abominations, is the severest which the American has to undergo who submits himself to the domestic life of the country. My estimable landlady modified her culinary practices somewhat to suit my fancies; yet six months of effort failed to reconcile me to the strange diet. I have met with a few Americans in Germany, a long time there, who first endured, then finally embraced the execrable cookery; but as one might suspect, they have in a degree become denationalized.

In Berlin, however, one is not obliged to suffer this daily martyrdom; there are a few good restaurants, where one can fare sumptuously and in a civilized way.

Church Fairs.

It was a church fair, and he had come there at a special request of his "cousin," who was at the head of the flower table. He opened the door bashfully, and stood hat in hand, looking at the brilliant scene before him, when a young lady rushed up, and grabbing him by the arm, said:

"Oh, you must, you will take a chance in our cake. Come right over here. This way."

Blushing to the roots of his hair, he stammered out that "really he didn't have the pleasure of knowing—"

"Oh, that's all right," said the young lady. "You'll know me better before you leave. I'm one of the managers, you understand. Come, the cake will all be taken if you don't hurry."

She almost dragged him over to one of the middle tables, and then said:

"There, now, only fifty cents for a slice, and you may get a real gold ring. You had better take three or four slices. It will increase your chances you know."

"You're very good," he stammered, "but I'm not fond of cake—that is, I haven't any use for the ring—I—I"

"Ah, that will be ever so nice," said the young lady, "for now if you get the ring, you can give it back, and we'll put it in another cake."

"Y-e-s," said the young man with a sickly smile, "to be sure, but, but—"

"Oh, there isn't any 'but' about it," said the young lady smiling sweetly. "You know you promised?"

"Promised!"

"Well, no, not exactly that, but you will take just one slice?" and she looked her soul into his eyes.

"Well, I suppose—"

"To be sure. To be sure. There is your cake" and she slipped a great slice into his delicately gloved hands as he handed her a dollar bill.

"Oh, that is too nice," added the young lady, as she swiftly slapped another slice of cake on top of the one he was holding in his hand. "I knew you would take two chances;" and his dollar bill disappeared across the table, and then she called to a companion:

"Oh, Miss Larkins, here is a gentleman who wishes to have his fortune told."

"Oh, does he? Send him right over," answered Miss Larkins.

"I beg your pardon, but I'm afraid you are mistaken. I don't remember saying anything about—"

"Oh, but you will," said the first young lady, tugging at the youth's arm. 'Its for the good of the cause, and you won't refuse—will you?" and once more the beautiful eyes looked soulfully into his.

He was soon, but quite against his will, at the "fortune teller's table.

"Here we are!" Miss Larkins bluntly blurted out, as she thrust an envelope towards him. "That'll tell you all about it," He took it and opened it hesitatingly; Miss Larkins turned him around to the light and he read;

"You are going to be married in a year!"

"Oh, isn't that jolly! And all that good news for seventy five cents?"

And the poor youth came down with another dollar note, which Miss Larkins instantly crumpled up and stuffed into her pocket, remarking nonchalantly, but in quite a business way to the waiting young man—"No change here you know."

"Oh, come, let's try our weight," said the first young lady, once more tugging at the bashful youth's coat sleeve, and before he knew where he was, he was standing on the platform of the scales.

"One hundred and thirty-two," said the lady. "Oh, how I should like to be a great heavy man like you," and she stepped on the scales as lightly as a bird. "One hundred and eighteen," she called out. "Well, that is light. One dollar please!"

"What!" said the youth, "One dollar! isn't that pretty steep? I mean—"

"Oh! but you know," said the young lady, "it is for charity;" and another dollar was added to the treasury of the fair.

"I think I'll have to go. I have an engagement at——'

"Oh! but first you must buy me a bouquet, for taking you all around," said the lady. "Right over here,' and a few steps brought them in front of the flower table. "Here is just what I want," and the young lady picked up a basket of roses and violets. "Seven dollars, please."

"Oh, Jack, is that you?" cried the poor youth's cousin, from behind the flower counter, "and buying flowers for Miss Gaggle, too? Oh, I shall be terribly jealous unless you buy me a basket, too," and she picked up an elaborate affair.

"Twelve dollars please, Jack," and the youth put down the money looking terribly confused, as much as though he didn't know whether to make a bolt for the door, and give up all hope and settle down in despair.

"You'll excuse me, ladies," he stammered, "but I must go. I have—"

"Here, let me pin this in your button hole." interrupted his cousin. "Fifty cents, please," and the youth broke away and made a straight line for the door.

"Well, if I ever visit another fair may I be—be—" he ejaculated, as he counted over his cash to see if he had the car fare to ride home.

What the Girls Should Learn.

By all means let the girls learn how to cook. What right has a girl to marry and go into a house of her own unless she knows how to superintend every branch of housekeeping, and she cannot properly superintend unless she has some practical knowledge of herself. Most men marry without thinking whether the woman of his choice is capable of cooking him a meal, and it is a pity he is so shortsighted, and his health, his cheerfulness, and indeed his success in life depends in a very great degree upon the kind of food he eats; in fact, the whole household is influenced by their diet. Feed them on fried cakes, fried meats, hot bread, and other indigestible viands, day after day, and they will need medicine to make them well. A man will take alcohol to counteract the evil effects of such food, and the wife and children must be physicked.

Let all the girls have a share in the housekeeping at home before they marry; let each superintend some department by turns. It need not occupy half the time to see that the house has been properly swept, dusted and put in order, or to prepare puddings and make dishes, that many young ladies spend in reading novels that enervate both mind and body and unfit them for every-day life. Women do not, as a general rule, get pale faces by doing housework. Their sedentary habits, in overheated rooms, combined with ill-chosen food, are to blame for their bad health. Our mothers used to pride themseves on their housekeeping and fine needle work. Why should not we?

Lacustrine Relics.

Recently further finds of lacustrine relics have occured at Steckborn, on Lake Constance. Among them are two vases in perfect condition, quartzite ornaments, carved boars' teeth arrows, and other weapons. A new lacustrine station has been discovered at Arbon, in the same neighborhood; but except the piles on which the houses were built, no relics of importance have come to light. On the other hand, the sinking of the lake has laid bare the foundation of a Roman watch tower and the paved road that connected it with the mainland, a circumstance from which it is inferred that the level of Lake Comstance is now considerably higher than it was 1,600 or 1,800 years ago. The watch-tower, paved way, and lacustrine station are all near the landing-place at Arbon. At another lacustrine village near Boerhausen a number of relics similar to those collected at Steckborn have been found.

Claret.

The phylloxera has desolated the Gironde, and has not left unscarred French vineyards elsewhere. French vines have been yielding little liquor and bad. Wine drinkers are scarcely conscious of the disaster. They are resolved to have their claret, and Bordeaux is too courteous not to gratify them. Xeres sends full hogsheads of sherry. Oporto supplies its natural port. Zante contributes its currants, and Crete its malmsey. Australia itself helps to fill up the void which the malignant blight has created. Sherry, port, malvoisie, Christmas currants, broglio, and Marsala, all flow into hospitable Bordeaux, rough and smooth, sweet and sour; they issue from it veritabble claret, and are bought and imbibed with undoubted faith by the unsuspicious.

Much of the pleasure which Englishmen have enjoyed in drinking claret has been derived from the belief that they were drinking a wine absolutely pure. Port and sherry and champagne are manufactured. Claret and Burgundy have been supposed to be the mere juice of the grapes of the vineyards in the vicinity in which they are made. In one sense all wine is a manufacture, and a very elaborate manufacture. It may, however, manufacture itself, and this is what Bordeaux and Burgundy have been credited with doing. In reality, they have at all times been liable to a certain amount of composition. The stronger wines of the Rhone have for ages been blended with the weaker vintages of the Garonne. An occasional practice has, through the devastations of the recent pest, been converted into a settled habit. Bordeaux, to judge from the statistics of its importation of alien materials, would seem to have been for several years past in process of transformation from a manufactory of French wine into a laboratory for the introduction into wines from every part of the world of a French flavor and French qualities. So long as only grape juice is borrowed for the mixture the counterfeit is comparatively innocent. The danger is that chemical ingenuity, when Levant currants fail or the price of Spanish, and Italian and Portuguese grapes rises, may dispense with grapes altogether.

A Boy's Game of Circus.

Not long ago, an old woman named Lutetia Perkins, residing at Macon, locked up her two grandchildren, one a boy about ten and a little girl about three yers of age. The children were locked up in the house, but the window was opened, out of which they looked upon a frightful sight. In the adjoining lot lives Sol Clemens and wife. In this yard from the limb of a tree is suspended a single rope, at the end of which is a large knot, and the boys used this to swing upon. Aunt Lutetia had in her employ a boy named John Henry Calvin. He went to the house, and then into the next lot where hung the swing, and told the children who were watching from the window that he was going to play circus. After swinging awhile in the usual way, he got upon a piece of scantling that was laid upon the fence and the tree, and then put the rope around his neck. Having done this he told the children that he was going to play circus and hang himself off. The children saw his convulsions, but could not get to him, and could not have helped in any way, as they were too small, though they might have called assistance.

Aunt Lutetia returned from the funeral about half-past four o'clock. As soon as the children saw her from the window they called to her to hurry up, as John had hung himself. She repaired at once to the swing, but the boy had been dead some time. The boy evidently miscalculated the distance when he swung off. He was found in a sitting posture, his feet touching the ground and his body about six inches from it.

Corsets or No Corsets.

Fred Troves of London who has paid great attention to the matter of ladies costume says the notion that women need the support of stays is an entirely erroneous one; nevertheless, the eye of the present generation is so accustomed to the sight of the female form as it appears in stays that a woman who dispenses with this adjunct of the toilet is sure to be curiously commented on. Our favorite contralto, Madame Antoinette Sterling, prides herself on the fact that she has never worn stays and never will do so; but I suppose she is unaware of the remarks which her appearance sometimes calls forth in a miscellaneous audience. Often I have heard the question pass from lip to lip in a concert hall where she was singing: "What a frightful figure she has!" "How badly her dress fits!" And these remarks come from men as well as women. Ellen Terry dispenses with stays and all her gowns in Juliet are mere shapeless wrappers of different degrees of splendor. But Ellen Terry has the figure of a slim girl of thirteen — bustless, high shouldered, square-waisted; in fact, that of the model æsthete. Fred Treves says no woman could live an instant if her waist were no bigger than those represented in the French fashion plates; but there is an actress Kate Vaughan, whose waist is for thinness a sight to behold. It is so small, round column, like a section of little stove pipe, and it seems not very much bigger than her own neck. Yet Kate Vaughan lives, dances, sings and turns the heads of her crutch-and-toothpick adorers.

All sorts of makers of hygienic apparel put in a commercial appearance at the Health Exhibition. A staymaker exhibits corsets whose entire front is elastic webbing, which yields at every movement and only expands the more with lacing. It was especially designed for the use of women during a season when tight lacing would be more than injudicious, it would take the proportions of a crime. But there is no time when women might not use with advantage stays thus fashioned. The simple truth is that very frequently women are overlaced when they really do not know it. The internal organs are so easily compressible that, as Mr. Treves said, a women who has not the slightest idea or intention of tight lacing, may be unduly compressed by a matter of two inches, while a really tightly-laced woman reduces her moral waist-size some eight or ten. The diagrams hanging around the walls of the room in which the exhibition is held show the female form divine as it should be, with the size and location of the interior organs distinctly defined. These pictures must give the nightmare to some of the fashionable girls and woman who attend the exhibition. Nevertheless must I alas confess that, to the eye of the modern, the ladies so attired at present at dainty frou-frou appearance with which those habited in the new hygienic apparatus sadly contrast. It is this quality of concealing defects and exaggerating beauties in the wearer which forms the stronghold of modern fashionable attire.

A New Submarine Vessel.

A young Roumanian engineer, M. Trajan Theodoresco, has constructed a submarine vessel which quite puts al that has been made hitherto in the shade. The ship, if it does not exceed certain dimensions, can be navigated for twelve hours at 100 feet under water without being raised to the surface. The working at the surface is similar to that of an ordinary steamship. The speed is not so great as that of some steamers, but it is nevertheless superior to that of sail boats. The immersion is effected by screws. Once under water, enough light is supplied to be able to see obstacles at a distance of one hundred and thirty feet, and the movement is so regulated as to avoid them. The supply of air for the crew will last twelve hours, and can be renewed without coming to the surface by means of telescopic tubes. The propulsion and immersion are arranged to cause no noise. If all these claimed advantages are confirmed in practice, the new vessel will be a most formidable submarine offensive weapon. But it can also be used for more profitable purposes. In the Matchin Canal near Bralia, there has lain since May, 1877, the wreck of Lutfi Djeit, on board of which was the coffer of the Turkish Flotilla on the Danube, containing the treasure of the fleet, which it will perhaps be possible to recover by means of the new submarine boat.

Justice Late but Sure.

Socrates was a stone-cutter by trade, but too lazy to follow so honest a calling. He loved to talk too well, and spent his time lounging on street corners and gathering young men as idle as himself around him. His personal appearance was disgusting in the extreme, and one has but to gaze upon the Louvre cast in the gallery of which we are so justly proud, to straightway sympathize with poor, abused Xantippe. He had a flat nose, thick lips, prominent eyes, low, broad figure, and awkward gait, went barefooted and half-clad, was a bitter enemy to cleanliness, and a mountebank in manners. He married a woman to whom he was attracted by her singular conversational powers, and although he believed he himself excelled all his contemporaries in that respect, yet, he found that she far excelled him in the command of language. He cared nothing for the welfare of his wife or children, left them to support themselves as best they might, while he spent the time he could spare from the curbstone seances, and wasted the treasures of his thought at the feet of Aspasia and Theodote, whom he pretended to desire to convert, that he might thereby add lustre to his own name—sly old dog—and in addition to all this, he would invite the lazy creatures who surrounded him to dine with him when there was nothing in the house to entertain them with.

It is natural that this would be very irritating to a proud-spirited woman who was struggling for herself and little ones. What woman in existence could have borne her soul in patience under such provocation?

Three Dogs.

Those about the White House say that when Hayes was President, a strange, lean, gray dog stood watch at the house both day and night, and could not be driven away. That when Garfield became President, a yellow terrier put in an appearance, the Hayes dog disappearing. The yellow dog was first seen on the day of inauguration. It followed Garfield's carriage from the capitol to the White House, and persistently remained until the day of the assassination, when it mysteriously disappeared. When Arthur donned the Executive robe a large brindle dog of a mongrel species took up his home in a clump of a shrubbery directly in front of the north door. The attendants at the President's house positively aver that this Presidential dog story is the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

WE are all as God made us, and oftentimes a great deal worse.

DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

FOR GOVERNOR,
EDWAND A. O'NEAL,
Of Lauderdrle,

FOR SECRETARY OF STATE,
ELLIS PHELAN,
Of Jefferson.

FOR ATTORNEY GENERAL,
HENRY C. TOMPKINS,
Of Montgomery.

FOR TREASURER,
ISAAC H. VINCENT,
Of Chambers.

FOR AUDITOR,
JESSE M. CARMICHAEL,
Of Dale.

HENRY C. ARMSTRONG,
Of Macon.

We are authorized to announce J. D. HAMMOND as a candidate for re-election to represent Calhoun county in the next Legislature.

SENATOR McSPADDEN.

The Democratic Disteict Convention, which met at Gadsden last week, nominated by acclamation, Chancellor McSpadden, of Cherokee, to succeed Senator Cunninghaṁ, whose term expired with the last session of the legislature. The Convention never did a better work than in the nomination it made. Chancellor McSpadden will reflect honor and credit on the district that he will represent, and be very useful to the State. Aside from the fact that the public good will be subserved in his election, we are glad of his nomination, for we like and esteem him. We pr sume he will have no Independent opposition.

Both the Centre papers have experienced change in editorial management of late. Mr. Burnett has assumed editorial control of the News in common with Mr. Shropshire and is making the paper sparkle. Messrs. Walden and Leath have leased of Mr. Stiff the Cherokee Advertiser, and are making it an excellent paper as a vehicle of news and general editorial comment. We do not like the attitude of the Advertiser as regards the nomination of Mr. Swan. Grant that the Convention was not fully representative. If Mr. Swan is a good man and the editors of the Advertiser have no weightier objection to him than his nomination by that Convention, we think, for the public good, they should have passed over the immaterial objection to the Convention and have supported him for the sake of harmony in the Democratic ranks. The editors must know the dangerous tendency of Independentism in this day and time. and should have "suffered much" rather than contribute, in the slightest degree, to the growth of a sentiment in the South, whose tendency is not only dangerous to the Democratic party, but to the highest interests of the Souther people as well. We know the editors of the Advertiser to be patriotic men, and we hope they will reconsider their attitude as respects the nominee of the Democratic party of Cherokee county for the next legislature,

Gadsden had a great fire last week, which destroyed more than twenty houses and fifty thousand dollars worth of property. An eye witness says that there was no organized fight against the fire, with the exception of a small gang of mill men controlled by Mr. Elliott, and that the flames had their way. Gadsden has no fire department. As superior as she is to Jacksonville in point of population, she could well take a lesson from us both in the matter of waterworks and a fire department. At one time we had three distinct fire organizations—the hose reel company which used the fire plugs of the water works, the bucket brigade of boys and the colored hook and ladder company. The hose reel and hook and ladder companies are still alive, though not as attentive to drill as they should be. This thorough organization has enabled us to fight fire successfully every time it has broken out of late years. We hope Gadsden will not delay longer the organization of a first-class fire company. The business men of the town will save money in insurance by it. We like Gadsden, and it is painful to us to hear of such calamities to her.

CHEERING.

If one wants to get rid of the blue devils, let him take a trip into the country and see the fair prospect of full fruitage of the fields this year. We can never tire looking at it. It speaks of hope and encouragement to a people against whom fortune, fate and the seasons have all fought. It speaks of independence for the future. It speaks of freedom from the bondage of debt. It means better living at home, cheerful contemplation of the future, and gratitude to God who has been good to us, notwithstanding all our transgressions.

The Wide awake Sentinel, a Greenback paper published at Courtland, calls upon the Greenback Executive Committee, to meet and put out an opposition ticket in the State, and the Republican Executive Committee have called a Convention of that party to meet soon. So it seems that the Democratic State ticket is likely to meet with opposition. This should lead Democrats in all the counties of the State to preserve strict organization and shun local issues calculated to divide the party in any way.

We beg of the Jasper Eagle not to get frightened as to the effect of the discussion of the convict question on the Democratic party. It won't hurt it. The Democratic party is not so exceedingly frail as that.

Officeas of the Democratic State Convention.

The committee on permanent organization, through its chairman, Hon. F. W. Sykes, made the following report, which was adopted:

For permanent President, Hon. L. P. Walker, of Madison; 1st Vice President Col. N. N. Clements, of Tuscaloosa; 2d V. P., Hon C. C. Langdon, Mobile; 3d V. P., Col. John H. Caldwell, of Calhoun. Secretary, James M. Wright, of Russell; Assistant Sec, L. H. Grubbs, of Morgan, A. D. Sayre, of Montgomery; Doorkeeper, Albert Taylor of Montgomery.

The Macon Telegraph and Messenger does not like Alexander Stephens, but it seems to worship Ben Hill as a hero. Impressed with the fact that Senator Hill has come home to die, it felingly remarks: "The sun has never lighted up a grander way than that he travelled, and the stars will never shine upon a nobler grave. The monument that he has built for himself will be 'more enduring than brass.' Through all the vicissitudes of triumph and defeat that have marked his brilliant career he has borne himself like a knight of the olden time. He has never ridden down the weak. He has never turned his back upon the strong. He has never forgotten or forsaken the defenceless. Why should he not live yet for years to bless his people with kindly counsel and untiring service, God knows; but sure it is the sorrowing, bewilderment that possesses a million Georgia hearts at the mere mention of his departure sets the seal of popular approbation upon his glorious career. All honor to the great man that sits now amid the gathering shadows, awaiting his summons."

Speeches of O'Neal and McElroy.

After the nomination of Gen. O'Neal for Governor, the President of the Convention said:

Gentlemen of the Convention—Allow me to introduce to you the next Governor of Alabama.

[Cheers]

Gen. O'Neal returned his profound thanks for the distinguished honor conferred. He paid an eloquent tribute to the Democratic party, on whose success depends our free institutions. With its death they will die. But he did not think it was an occasion to make a speech. He could give no better pledge of his intention to endeavor to merit the confidence reposed in him than his past record attested by a devotion of thirty years to the best interest of the State. He could find no words to voice his grateful recollection of the kindness of friends when a poor boy struggling for a place among men; to the noble body of men with whom he had shared the privations and dangers of camp and the battle field, and to all the great family of the Democracy everywhere in the State. With kindness to all and malllice towards none, he would know no section in administering the affairs of the State.

Gen. O'Neal's speech was as eloquent as it was patriotic, and he concluded amidst great applause and enthusiasm,

Col. McElroy, in response to loud calls, rose in his seat, and made a speech that was filled from beginning to end with the truest patriotism. He made a deep impression upon the convention which will not be forgotten. His defeat was gracefully accepted and his assurance of acquiescence in the defeat and his pledge of hearty support of the ticket was both eloquent and sincere. He closed amidst great and continuous applause.—Montgomery Adv.

Platform and Resolutions Passed By the State Convention.

Resolved by the democratic and conservative party of Alabama, in convention assembled:

That we reaffirm our devotion to the time honored principles of the democratic party; a strict construction of the federal constitution, obedience to the laws of the general government within its constitutional limits, and maintain the right of the state to regulate its local affairs by its own authority.

We are unalterably opposed to the continued acts of the federal authorities tending to centralization of all power in the general government to the destruction of local self government.

We present the record of the administration of the state's affairs while in control of the democratic party as an earnest of the fidelity of the party to the principles of economy and good government. We invite immigration and capital to our state, and pledge full and perfect protection to all such as may come among us.

That public education should be fostered and encouraged by the state as far as the means of the state will allow, having at the same time due regard to the preservation of the puplic credit.

We recognize the necessity of protecting and preserving the purity of the ballot box as the safeguard of free institutions, and condemn any attempt to interfere with the free and full exercise of the elective franchise.

What the executive committee be requested to prepare and issue an address to the people of the state.

What we need is not the blaze of a few powerful electric lights in certain conspicuous places, but the steady shining of every lamp in the whole Church of Christ over the land. Brooklyn is not lighted by two or three calcium burners in its public squares, but by innumerable lamps distributed into every street and alley. A genuine revival means a trimming of personal lamps.—Theodore L. Cuyler.

At the Gettysburg reunion, held on Wednesday of last week, Gen. W. H. Forney and Col H. A Herbert were present. The Philadelphia Times says:

"The courtesies shown the southern officers were so constant and so marked as to cause Gen. Forney, a member of Congress from Alabama, to say that the warmth of the present greeting almost outdid that of nineteen years ago, when he lay so sorely wounded that he did not hear the historic cannonade that shook the hills and jarred the stony bottom of the Susquehanna. Gen. D. W. Aiken and Gen. H. A. Herbert, both Representatives in the National House, who led Alabama and South Carolina troops in assaults against Sickles, were prominent among the Confederate officers.

GREAT SILVER MINE IN ALABAMA.

An Old Indian Legend Proves to be a Veritable Story.

The earliest settler of Cherokee county, Ala., used to hear strange and marvelous stories from the Indians of a great silver mine, which was said to be located on the banks of Chattooga river, in the vicinity of Gaylesville, but they could never be induced to point out its exact locality. Few believed the story, though the Indians displayed many roughly carved ornaments of silver, which they said were taken from the mine in solid blocks. Several years ago, Mr. James Callan, a prospective bonanza king, in some way received information that the mine was located on his farm, and he immediately set to work to discover it, and has spent much time, labor and money in his vain search. Learning these facts, Col. Shorter, Capt Turner, Lawyer Clemons, and others, of Rome, Ga, sent to the Indian Nation for an Indian named Holland who was supposed to know all about it. He soon arrived, and with the party of Rome gentlemen came down to Mr Callan's. Holland says that there is a vein of silver, three feet in diameter, running through Mr. Callan's farm and extending several miles, worth, at the lowest computation, ten millions of dollars. The company proposed to Mr. Callan to point out the locality and extract the silver and give him a fourth interest. Mr. Callan does not accept the proposition.

The city of Texarcana is a phenomenal city. It lies in the two States of Texas and Arkansas; hence its name. The State line runs through the centre of its chief street, and on each side of the street is a population of three thousand. It is considered the gateway of the Southwest. It is only eight years old, but has all the airs of a city of twenty-five years. Four railroad lines center there. It has an Italian like climate, tramps are not tolerated, the Sunday law is enforced, money is plenty and the people are prosperous.

To Keep Things Fresh.

Prof. Barff of New York recently gave a very interesting account of a new antiseptic, which will, according to the evidence, preserve animal or vegetable food perfectly fresh for many months together, so that no one who tastes it thus preserved is in the least aware that it is not quite fresh. This antiseptic is a compound of boracic acid with glycerine from which the water has been expelled, a compound which the Professor calls boroglycerine. It is as hard as ice at ordinary temperature, but when warmed becomes partially fluid, and then is easily dissolved in hot water. Cream thus preserved has been sent all the way to Jamaica and Zanziber, arriving perfectly fresh and sweet; and oysters opened and preserved in the solution for many months were tasted by the audience, and pronounced as fresh as if they had been only just opened. The same result has been obtained with meat, fowl, fruits and all sorts of food. If the boroglycerine is cheap enough— and it seems to be very cheap—it may revolutionize the price of food all over the world, and materially alter the distribution of the areas devoted to the production of food.

Some of the testimony taken before the Senate committee on civil service and retrenchment is of an interesting character. Mr. Gray, of the Treasury Department, who has served as a member of the Board of Examiners of the Department under the civil service rules, testified that in his experience of many years in the Treasury Department he had very rarely known a person to be selected because he was the fittest person for the place. This consideration is entirely disregarded, and the only question is, what is the pressure behind him?

A little story about the President: Chapter, I.—When Gen. Arthur was Vice President he wrote to Postmaster Pearson, of New York, requesting an appointment for a political friend. The Postmaster wrote on the back of the request that polititions had no influence in that office. Chapter II—The letter has since come into President Arthur's posession. Chapter III. is not quite ready to be written, but will probably read something like this:— has been appointed for Postmaster at New York, Vice Pearson, removed. The New York Tribune prints the story.

The Saufrancisco Post says that the curious spectacle of a man suing his wife to foreclose a mortgage is presented in Oakland, Cal., in the case of Alfred Scott, against Mary. Scott, his wife, to foreclose a two thousand two hundred and ninety-seven dollar mortgage made by her when she was the widow of Charles G. Osgood.

George Washington's will is on file in the office of Clerk of Fairfax county, Va. Hitherto the document has been without protection, and curious persons in handling it have subjected it to a great deal of wear and tear. Now, however, the will is in a glass case, where it may be seen but not touched. It is written on heavy unruled paper about note size and every side is covered. There are twenty seven pages, all of which have Washington's name attached except the 23rd, which ended with the words City of Washington, and it is supposed in looking over it Washington mistook the words for his signature and therefore, failed to sign the page.

Learning a Lesson.

How South Carolina Will Protect Herself.

WASHINGTON, June 19.—It is pretty well settled that the Legislature of South Carolina at the extra session this month will "gerrymander" the State in the interest of he Democratic party. Nobody need be afraid of the word. It is of New England origin, and the Republicans have made it very popular and very significant in the North. The white people of South Carolina are commonly styled by the organs of Radicals through out the country "Bourbons." It is said that "Bourbons" never learn anything. Very well. We will disprove that. We will take lessons from our Northern Republican brethren in at least one respect. We will follow their example and begin "gerrymandering." It is a pity that we did not do so before.

"If a multitude of young and vigorous men could be persuaded to forsake the field of speculation and business of uncertain promise," thinks the Chicago Inter Ocean, "and settle down upon the rich acres offered in Dakota and elsewhere, it would be well for them in the future, and well for the nation. The nations wealth lies in its soil, and not in its mineral beds, however rich, or railroads, however managed."

Salt as a Fertilizer.

After many experiments and discussions the Massachusetts Aericultural Society has put to record the following conclusions with reference to salt as a fertilizer

1 That it has the property of hastening the maturing of all grain crops.

2. Wheat on salted land will ripen six to 10 days earlier than on unsalted land, all other conditions being equal.

3. It increases the yield from twenty to fifty per cent.

4 It stiffens the straw and prevents rust and smut.

5. It checks, if it does not entirely prevent, the ravages of the chintz bug.

6. There is no danger of a man's pocket permitting him to put too much salt upon his land, as two barrels per acre will injure no grain crop.

The best time to sow salt is in the spring, they conclude, and it ought to be the first thing done on either fall or spring plowing, as all after stirring of land assists in its equal distribution through the soil. The best and easiest method of sowing salt, and in the absence of a machine for that puapose, is to sow from out the rear end of a wagon, the sower using both hands while the team is moving at a slow walk. In this way thirty or forty acres can be sown in one day. The quantity sown may be from 150 to 300 pounds per acre, but the larger quantity is the better.

PAIN KILLER

A Never-Failing Cure for Burns, Scalds, Bruises, Cuts, Sores, etc.

After forty years of trial, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER stands unrivaled. It is safe! It acts immediately! It never fails!

Editor of the St. John (N.B.) News, says:
In flesh wounds, aches, pains, sores, etc., it is the most effectual remedy we know of. No family should be without a bottle of it for a single hour.

From the Cincinnati Dispatch:
We have seen its magic effects, and know it to be a good article.

From I. S. Potter, U. S. Consul at Crefeld, Rhenish Prussia:
After long years of use, I am satisfied it is positively efficient as a healing remedy for wounds, bruises, and sprains.

W. W. Sharper, Valdosta, Ga., says:
It is a panacea for all bruises and burns.

From R. W. Adams, Saco, Me.:
It gave me immediate relief.

R. Lewis says:
In forty years' use it never has failed me.

W. W. Lum, Nicholville, N. Y., says:
I use your PAIN KILLER frequently. It relieves pain and soreness, and heals wounds like magic.

J. W. Dee says:
For scalds and burns it has no equal.

PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER is not a new untried remedy. For forty years it has been in constant use; and those who have used it the longest are its best friends.

Its success is entirely because of its merit. Every family should have a bottle ready for use. Much pain and heavy doctors' bills may often be saved by prompt application of the PAIN KILLER. Unlike most medicines, it is perfectly safe even in the hands of a child. Try it once thoroughly, and it will prove its value. Your druggist has it at 25c., 50c., and $1.00 per bottle. An ice house is badly needed in Jacksonville.

Mr. T. Gardner Foster, Montgomery, was in town Tuesday, working up a lodge of the Knights of Honor. He succeeded in getting up more than a sufficient number to organize a lodge.

Mr. Harvey Easterwood sent us Tuesday the first cotton bloom of the season. He is said to be one of the very best cotton farmers in the State.

In Etowah county Hon. J. R. Nowlin has been renominated for the Legislature. This looks as if the people of Etowah county endorsed the temperance legislation for that county, which Mr. Nowlin was largely instrumental in procuring.

Mr. Henry Graham, of Montgomery, has been visiting Jacksonville, as also Mr C. H. Francis of the same city. Capt. Jas. Francis of Augusta has also been here some time for his health and is still here

Work on the Baptist church progresses. It will soon present a very handsome appearance. The Presbyterian and Methodist churches come next. A few hundred dollars would greatly improve the Methodist church. By throwing a heavy porch and spire in front it could be made to look quite well.

The proposition to work the roads by contract meets with quite general approval in this county. If this kind of a road law is adopted, the question of disposal of the county convicts will no longer be troublesome.

The State Convention endorsed the the Railroad Commission and a few opponents of the Commission in the State are greatly exercised thereat. The next Legislature will continue the Commission all the same. It has been of great benefit to the people.

Oats have all been harvested and the yield is unprecedentedly large. Wheat so far has not turned out as well as appearances promised, but still may be considered a good crop. The seasons have been favorable and corn looks splendid. There is a largely increased acreage of this food crop in Calhoun. Cotton does not look well. The cold nights set cotton back very much.

A protracted meeting has been in progress at the Presbyterian church this week, Rev. Mr. McDonald, an evangelist of the Cumberland Presbyterian church, preaching a series of sermons calculated to revive the church and bring it up to higher standard of duty. It is as he says: The "world" can only be reached through the church. If the church be dead, how can men expect to see sinners made alive by preaching? A dead church, in which the service of God seems an irksome task, presents to the world but an uninviting type of the kingdom of heaven.

Owing to the protracted services at the Presbyterian church this week the lawn party at the residence of Geo. C. Morgan, for the benefit of the Episcopal church, is postponed till Tuesday night, June 28th. Come one, come all.

We learn that Mr. Dolph Harbour, who merchandized at this place a short while some two year ago, and who shot a man in Cherokee county some weeks ago, is in jail, the man having died from the effect of the shot. He will be brought out on writ of habeas corpus before Judge Box, and the case heard.

MARRIED—On the 20th inst., by Rev. V. O Hawkins, Mr. Robert M. Alexander, of Talladega county, and Miss Mary Alice Marion, of Jacksonville.

After the marriage ceremony the bridal party bid adieu to friends here and started for the home of the bridegroom. Thus is transplanted to Talladega soil another of Calhoun's fair flowers We congratulate Mr Alexander upon the acquisition of one possessed, not only of beauty and sprightliness of mind, but all the domestic graces and accomplishments as well. May both live long and happily together.

The examination exercises of Calhoun college have been going on all the week. We will endeavor to give a synopsis of the exercises next issue, and note the reception of prizes and honors on the part of pupils

It now seems as if Col. Herbert will be nominated to be his own successor on the first ballot. Crenshaw and Pike county conventions instructed for him, Butler convention indorsed him, and the other counties will also send Herbert delegations to the Congressional convention. So it can safely be said that his nomination is a foregone conclusion. That is good. The district could not possibly do better than return him; and it will do it.—Greenville Advocate.

The State Sunday School convention divided the State into seven districts, and propose to have a convention in each district in addition to the State convention.

Mr. Jonah Richardson can get a letter by calling at this office.

CROSS PLAINS LOCALS.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Johnson and Mrs. S. D. Johnson, of Atlanta, are visiting relatives and friends here

Prof. Godby, a very worthy son of the venerable Rev O. Godby, is spending his vacation with his parents.

Capt. and Mrs. John T. A. Hughes, of Oxford, are also visiting relatives in town.

We were also glad to meet our friend, John W. Hughes, of Atlanta, last Wednesday. He will spend a short time with us. We wish all our visitors a pleasant time while here.

Mr. R. P. Morgan has all his mills in full blast and is now turning out as good flour and meal as can be had anywhere. All the arrangements of his mills are perfect and the machinery first class. We hope the people will patronize this important and indispensable home enterprise; especially, as Mr Morgan has incurred great expense in fitting up his mills, and has succeeded in supplying a long felt want.

The closing exercises of Prof Stark's popular school will embrace the 27th and 28th, of this month. Rev. V. O. Hawkins will preach the commencement sermon Tuesday night. Capt. Jno. M Caldwell, of Jacksonville, will deliver the literary address Wednesday morning, at 11 o'clock. An interesting feature will be the speeches by the boys and young men between the recitations of the different classes. The exercises will close Wednesday night with a grand Concert—Exhibition. We hope to see a large attendance. The session just closing has been a highly prosperous one, and Prof. Stark deserves the thanks of our people for his untiring efforts to build up a first class school in our midst. The next session promises to be more prosperous than the present one.

You reporter has sharpened a new pencil to jot down some new marriage notices, so look out for them soon.

OCCASIONAL.

A Woman's Ruse.

A Nashville husband was sitting in his store the other day when a letter in familiar hand-writing was handed in to him. It was from his wife whom he had left at home that morning with every assurance of her affection and devotion. But the very first sentence startled him, and as he read on the most horrible suspicions seized him. "I am forced to tell you something that I know will trouble you, but it is my duty to do so, I am determined you shall know it, let the result be what it may. I have known for a week that this trial was coming, but kept it to myself until to day, when it has reached a crisis and I cannot keep it any longer. You must not censure me too hashly, for you must reap the results as well as myself I do hope it wont crush you. The flour is all out. Please send me some this afternoon. I thought by this method you would not forget it." She was right. He did'nt

AN ESSAY—Johnnie's essay on a monkey: A monkey is a blame funny insek—he begins lookin' like people, but he runs his other eye too far out to remind you of his bein' twins. You can't tell how many feet he has, cause he haint made up his mind yet whether his front feet is hands or feets' an' he uses em' both waze. When he smiles his feechers work hard enuff to pan out out somethin' ginowine, but the real flavor don't seem to be fetched out. Monkeys hang on a tree just like a grape vine, but there's more meat on 'em. Monkeys don't dress muff to suit mos' folks, an' besides their close is made of such thin stuff that wares off wen they sit down.—Exchange.

An Escumbia county farmer planted half an acre of ground with parched goobers, and is mad because they haven't sprouted.

The agricultural liar is abroad in the land. A West Alabama man reports a duck which laid three thousand eggs.

This is a pen picture of the modern New York damsel by a writer on the Graphic. This is a being fearfully and wonderfully "made up." What is being pinned on in front is hair. That which is being fastened on behind is more hair. That die going on under the eye is more eyelash. That paint on the cheek is more of the bloom of health. That armor going over the waist is more shape. No man with any work to do could endure one of those things on a hot day. But she can, yet she belongs to the "weaker sex." The gown or gowns she wears fetter her stride by two or three inches. She may only take two-for-a-cent steps, when she might just as well take three-cent steps. Now she buckles herself tightly in her armor That is for fear she might fall to pieces on the side walk The last aids to nature are the shoes. The feet are first melted, and then poured into them, and lastly stuck on two stilts behind called heels. Now she is ready for a walking match or any other kind of exercise. Perchance this is the wife or daughter of the doctor who tells other women they musn't lace so tightly. Can he cure tight lacing or shoeing in his own camp? Oh, no. There is no prescription in all the pharmacopias put together which can cure it when it so rages in the doctor's family. There is only one dress worn without the corsets or French heels. It is a shroud.

Rev A. W. McGaha will preach a sermon especially for the young men the first Sunday in July Hope all will attend especially young men.

Mr Ed Acker, a graduate of Oxford College, visited our town last week and our good fathers made him up a school of about twenty six scholars.

He will open his school the first Monday in July.

Hope that he may have success with his school. There is no reason why we cannot have a good school in Alexandria, as the country is full of young people.

Dr. P. P. Lnider's family have returned home from Oxford where they have been living the last ten months to their former residence near Alexandria.

Miss Alice Cooper has returned home from Chattanooga where she has been visiting relations.

Miss Carry Green, daughter of S. L. Green, returned home last week from home, where she has been attending Shorter College.

Miss Ida Draper has returned home after having a pleasant visit to friends in Talladega.

TATE SPRINGS.

Health and Pleasure for Alabamians.

Already fourteen States are represented by the guests in attendance at Tate Springs, East Tennessee. A good company has been there all winter and has rapidly increased since the 1st of March. The demand for the water has doubled in the past six months, and is being shipped now to all points of the union at the rate of 2,000 bbls. per. annum. We have seen no natural mineral water so strongly endorsed as a remedial agent for dyspepsia and diseases of the liver, stomach, bowels and kidneys. Our doctors prescribe it and hundreds in Alabama are daily drinking the water at home and can attest its power over disease. When the summer travel sets in, more of our Alabama "summer resorters" will be found at Tate Springs than at any other resort outside of the State. Dr. J. S. Weatherly of Montgomery, is resident physician. The new building is all complete and furnished Send for for large 40 page pamphlet containing full information on all points. Messrs. A Light House Story.

The Ship Shoal light at the mouth of the Atchafalaya, sixty miles south of Brasher, La., is under the charge of Ed. Dunn. He has three assistants. The light overlooks a dreary waste of swamps and salt water, and is entirely isolated. On February 15th, two of the assistants started for Morgan City in a small sailboat to buy supplies. As they did not return Mr. Dunn supposed that they had been lost in a storm. On Washington's birthday, however, while his third assistant, Mr. Leach, and himself were coal-tarring the roof of their dwelling, they sighted a small boat three miles south of the light. There was a dead calm. It was about three o'clock in the afternoon. After scanning the sail through a glass, they were positive that it was the light house boat. It contained, however, only one man. Dunn directed Leach to pull out to the boat and see what was the matter. Leach did so. He found a stranger at the helm. The man said that he had bought the boat from three men in Morgan City for $100. He was bound for Pascagoula. Leach told him that the boat belonged to the light house, and demanded her return. At first the man refused to give her up. After ascertaining that Leach and Dunn were the only persons at the light house, he said that Leach might tow her in and he would steer her. Thereupon Leach fastened a line to the sail boat, and as the water was smooth and there was not a breath of wind, he towed her to the light without difficulty. They got there about 6 P. M. Dunn closely questioned the stranger, and as there were neither provisions nor clothing in the boat, he felt satisfied that he had stolen it. He says that he would have sent Leach to Morgan City with the fellow if he could have handled the light alone. As it was he determined to await the arrival of his missing assistants, fancying that they would charter some other boat at Morgan City and return. He fed the fellow, who seemed willing to work and made no effort to escape.

On the night of February 25, Dunn had the watch from 6 o'clock to midnight. He had wound up the revolving machine at 9 o'clock, when he was startled by pistol shots, and repeated cries of "Help!" and "Murder!" He flew down stairs and found every thing quiet. It was very dark. Groping his way to his valise, he got a revolver, and started for the room where the small lamps are kept, to get a light. On the way his form was outlined against a window. There was a flash, and as quick as thought a pistol ball was buried in his shoulder. Dunn fired at the flash, and again received a bullet in the shoulder. He fired three times in succession. The fire was returned, and a bullet struck him in the side. Then all was still. Dunn reached the lamp room and struck a light. On descending to the ground floor he met Leach coming in from the gallery. One side of his face was cut away, exposing his jaw and teeth. He was covered with blood. He said that the stranger had assaulted him with a hatchet. he also had three pistol balls in his body. Dunn made a search for the assailant. He could not find him in the dwelling. Presently they heard an iron trap door fall. The desperado had fastened himself in the watch room in the light house. Dunn then dressed Leach's wounds as best he could and put him to bed. The rest of the night he stood watch at the foot of the stairs. As he had no more cartriges he armed himself with a carving knife and ship scraper. The screen stopped revolving at 12,30 but the light kept burning until morning, giving no light except at eight different points of the compass.

All the next day and all the next night Dunn stood watch at the foot of the stairway. The desperado remained quiet. Had he known that Dunn's ammunition had given out, he would undoubtedly have descended and renewed the fight. Leach suffered terribly from his wounds. He was excessively weak from loss of blood. There was no light on the night of the 26th as the assassin maintained his blockade. At 1 P. M of the 27th a steamship bound for New Orleans hove in sight. Dunn swung out the American colors union down, but the vessel did not stop. She acknowledged the signal with three whistles and went on her way.

After she had passed, the desperado called for a parley. He was faint and hungry. He had been shot in the knee joint. The pain was so great that he asked for mercy. By this time Leach had comparatively regained his strength. In the morning he had made some coffee and shared it with Dunn. They asked the assassin to surrender his arms. He passed the pistol and hatchet through the trap door and surrendered. After his descent, Leach and Dunn locked him in one of the bedrooms and nailed the shutters tight. Here he was kept until March 2, when a vessel was hailed and he was sent to New Orleans, accompanied by Leach, who sought surgical assistance. In New Orleans the prisoner was recognized as Jim Woods, a notorious desperado.

Take that Risk.

"Also to hire for funeral and other occasions, dress suits of the finest quality," is a line at the bottom of a recent advertisement by a Brooklyn tailor.

"Do many people borrow suits for funerals?" we asked.

"Do they? Well I wish you would stop a minute or two and see them come along," said he, adding: "Why I thought it would suit a public demand, having in view only those who are included in what are called 'the masses,' but even I was astonished when I found well-to-do people, merchants, officials, politicians, and, in short, every sorts of people, applying for overcoats, coats, trousers, or whole suits in which to attend funerals. Very often a poor man finds the cost of the burial of a relative leaves him no money for his mourning suit, which after all, he would wear only one day. Quite as often men in better circumstances decide to attend a funeral almost at the last moment. Again, there are a great many men who are so careful about their money that they hire suits for all imaginable occasions rather than buy them outright."

"What do you charge?"

"Oh, we will loan a satin-lined doeskin overcoat for a deposit of $20, and when it is returned we will keep $2. Here's a black beaver suit for the same money, and here's a common, though very genteel suit that we will loan for $1. We have a hundred suits for all sizes ages and styles of persons. We inquire about the persons we loan them to, but sometimes they fail to return the clothes. We are obliged to take that risk."

Snow Shoes For Horses.

Stages began running regularly into the Yosemite Valley by way of Miltou in May. Sleds drawn by horses are used in traveling over the snow. The animals are provided with snow shoes, consisting of blocks about thirteen inches square and one inch in thickness, to which suitable attachments are fixed on the upper side for the purpose of securing the foot. The horses readily learn to manipulate these apparently clumsy appendages, and make excellent progress over the snow.

AGRICULTURE.

A PECULIAR FENCE.—There is a kind of fence in use in some of the districts in Queensland which are infested with marsupials, of which an account is given in a recent number of the Queenslander. The fence is made of wire and saplings, the latter being used in the same way as paling. There are various ways of constructing this fence, but the most popular method may be described as follows: Round sapling posts are procured of durable timber from seven to eight inches in diameter and nine to ten feet long. Three auger holes are bored in them, one about four feet above the ground and the other two within a foot of each other at the uppermost end of the post, beginning about six or nine inches from the top. These posts are inserted in the ground from two to three feet, according to the nature of the soil, and at twelve feet distance asunder. One wire of No. 6 gauge is then run through the lowest holes and tightened. Next saplings of brigalow, iron-wood, ti tree or iron bark are procured, and if too stout for use as cut, are split into two, three or more pieces, until light enough to answer as palings. They are generally cut from six to seven feet in length, so as to allow from six to nine inches for insertion in the soil, and to leave no less than five or six feet above. A second wire of No. 10 gauge is then run through the same hole as contains No. 6, and is left slack. After making the trench for the foot of the palings in lines between each post, these are placed in position along the trench and against the tightened wire, as close as posible, and the smaller slack wire is passed around each paling and round the tight wire, proceeding thus until the whole space between each post is filled up snug and close. The earth thrown out in forming the trench is then put back against the foot of the palings and pressed or rammed in. In the remaining auger-holes above the palings wires of No. 8 gauge are next passed and properly tightened, and a marsupial or dingo-proof fence is the result.

GOOD POINTS OF A HORSE.—In buying a horse, look first to his head and eyes for signs of intelligence, temper, courage and honesty. Unless a horse has brains you cannot teach him to do anything well. If bad qualities predominate in a horse, education only serves to enlarge and intensify them. The head is the true indicator of disposition in the horse. A square muzzle with large nostrils evidences an ample breathing apparatus and great lung power. Next, see that he is well cut under the jaw bones broad and wide apart under the throttle. Breadth and fullness between the ears and eyes is always desirable. The eye should be full and hazel in color; ears small and thin, and thrown well forward. The horse that turns his ears back until they almost meet at the points is not to be trusted. He is a biter or a kicker, and is sure to be vicious in other respects. A horse with a dishing face is cowardly, and a cowardly brute, besides being naturally vicious, can never be trained to do anything well. A horse with a rounding nose, tapering foreward and a broad, full place below the eyes, is always treacherous and mischievous. Avoid a long-legged, stilty horse. Select one with a short, straight back and rump, withers high and shoulders sloping, well set back and broad, with good depth of chest, forelegs short, hind legs straight, with the hock low down, short pastern joints, and a round, unlush foot. By observing the above hints a horse may be selected that is graceful, good natured, serviceable, and a prize to the owner.

THE FARMER'S WORK. Every warm, sunshiny day makes the farmer nervous and fidgety, as it reminds him of the early coming of the time when his spring and summer work will crowd him and demand all his bodily strength to accomplish it. The good farmer maps out his plans, assigns for each field a certain crop, gets all his tools, implements and appliances ready so that when the proper time arrives he can strike in without delay. His stock from now till grass comes requires extra care and shelter from the cold spring storms, and the relaxing influence of spring weather, which effect alike the dumb animal and the human one.

CORN AND PORK.—Experienced porkraisers in the West have determined on the following ratio as to the relative value of corn and pork: When corn is 30 cents per bushel, pork can be sold at $3 per 100 pounds net; when corn is 40 cents, pork must bring $4; and so on at the rate of an advance of $1 for every advance of 10 cents in the price of corn. If pork sells at a price below this ratio, it is made at a loss—if above, the excess is clear gain.

THE common practice is to keep hogs in a growing and fattening state without forced exercise. An exception by way of an experiment, was recently made with a boar on a Pennsylvania farm. He was well and liberally fed, but was forced to take a good run in front of a boy every day. His offspring were much more vigorous of constitution than were pigs from boars that were confined all the time.

A SECOND early crop of potatoes fully matured is more profitable than a very early one, as the latter are dug before completing their growth, and the price received is not equal to the value of a full grown crop. The Early Rose and Beauty of Hebron can be dug in July and the ground put in turnips, giving two crops the same year.

"DON'T go chopping away at the branches," said an old woodman to his son. "Lay your ax at the root of the tree." And, like a dutiful boy, he did as he was told. He laid the ax at the foot of the tree and then went off for a day's fishing.

A UTICA clergyman had occasion to refer in a sermon to the prophet Jonah, and the report says that he delicately spoke of him as having "passed three days and three nights in the whale's—ahem—society."

"I AM going to tell you a true story," said Colonel Bragger, "and truth you know is stranger than fiction."

"Yes, the kind that you put in your true stories beats fiction blind," remarked a by stander.

"Goods at half price," said the sign. "How much is that tea pot?" asked an old lady.

"Fifty cents, mum," was the response.

"Guess I'll take it," she said, throwing down a quarter. The sign was taken in.

"WHAT I should like to know," said a School Board official the other day, "is how the mouths of rivers can be larger than their heads.

"CHEESE it," said the rat to the trap. "I will," said the trap, "and with baited breath I await your coming."

"All right," responded the rat, "and I'll wire you the result."

"JOHN," said the teacher, "I'm very sorry to have to punish you."

"Then don't; I'll let you off this time," responded John.

WHAT is better than a "promising young man?" A paying one.

DOMESTIC.

REMOVAL OF GREASE SPOTS.—Fatty oils have a greater surface tension than oil of turpentine, benzole or ether. Hence if a grease spot on a piece of cloth be moistened on the reverse side with one of these solvents the tension on the greasy side is larger, and therefore the mixture of benzole and fat or grease will tend to move toward the main grease spot. If we were to moisten the centre of this spot with benzole we should not remove it, but drive the grease upon the clean portion of the cloth. It is therefore necessary to distribute the benzole first over a circle surrounding the grease spot, to approach the grease gradually, and at the same time having blotting paper in contact with the spot to absorb the fat immediately. Another method, namely, to apply a hot iron on one side, while blotting paper is applied to the other, depends upon the fact that the surface tension of a substance diminishes with a rise of temperature. If therefore the temperature of different portions or sides of the cloth is different, the fat acquires a tendency to move from the hotter parts toward the cooler.

Uncle Sam's Men.

Uncle Sam's letter-carriers are a hard working set of men, and are liable to contract rheumatism because of the constant exposure to which they are subjected. Calling at the post-office the reporter had a pleasant conversation with Mr. J. H. Mattern, one of the most popular and clever letter-carriers in Indianapolis. Mr. Mattern said that, while in the army during the civil war, he sprained one of his ankles, which was always worse in the spring during the period of the rapid changes in the weather. He did not find much relief from the several remedies he applied. But two years ago he hit upon St. Jacob's Oil, and experienced wonderful relief from its use. Several applications of the Great German Remedy relieved him entirely. The reporter talked with others among the letter carriers and found that the great German Remedy was popular in the post-office. They use it for sore feet, rheumatism, etc., and praise it highly.—Indianapolis (Ind.) News.

HOW TO MAKE PENCIL WRITING INEFFACEABLE.—It is said that pencil drawings may be rendered ineffaceable by this simple process; slightly warm a sheet of ordinary drawing paper, then place it carefully on the surface of a solution of white rosin in alcohol, leaving it there long enough to become thoroughly moistened. Afterward dry it in a current of air. Paper prepared in this way has a very smooth surface. In order to fix the drawing, the paper is to be warmed for a few minutes. This method may prove useful for the preservation of plans or designs, when the want of time or any other cause will not allow the draughtsman reproducing them in ink. A simpler plan than the above however, is to brush over the back of the paper containing the charcoal or pencil sketch a weak solution of white shellac in alcohol.

We see in the New York Spirit of the Times mention of the cure of Mr. George Drake, 46 Fifth street, Indianapolis, Ind., of a severe case of water rheumatism, by the use of St Jacob's Oil.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

BITS of toilet soap that are too small to keep in a soap dish, and yet too good to throw away, can be saved until a sufficient amount has accumulated to pay for utilizing them. Then put them in a little tin basin and place on a stove until the soap is melted. Next stir in enough powdered pomice stone to give the mixture a grayish tinge, and pour the melted mass into a wet cup or other vessel that will serve as a mold, and set in a cool place to harden. This will turn out in a hard cake that will be found first rate for cleaning the hands when they are stained with fruit, etc.

MANY oilcloth mats last but one winter, when if properly cared for they would last much longer. The reason is that as a general rule too many tacks are put in them when they are first laid on the floor. It is a good plan to let the oilcloth lie without any tacking for two or three days until it is flat and the danger of wrinkles forming is over. If it is bound with carpet binding, this should be sewed on with a stout linen thread, with long stitches. Then a very few tacks will serve to keep it in its place.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a remarkable remedy for all those painful complaints and weaknesses so common to our best female population. Send to Lydia E. Pinkham, 233 Western Avenue, Lynn, Mass., for pamphlets.

A TIME and trouble saving invention is to have a piece of sheet iron nearly the size of the bottom of the oven; a trifle smaller, so that it will slide in and out without difficulty; have the edges turned down so that the iron will be slightly raised from the bottom of the oven. On this nearly the whole of an ordinary quantity of cookies can be baked at once. It is nice also to use when baking cream puffs, kisses, or lady fingers. When baking the two latter put a white paper on the iron. Have a small hole cut in one side of the iron so that it can be hung up.

The Chinese must go, and all Americans should go—and buy a bottle of Carboline, the deodorized petroleum hair renewer and dresser. Since the recent improvement, no preparation ever had such a sale or gave such general satisfaction as Carboline. Sold by all druggists.

WE should make it our aim to lighten our daily toil every way possible—doing all things well. All the work possible should be done in a sitting posture. Save your feet. The high stool cannot be praised or recommended too highly for this purpose. Furniture and cooking utensils should be light but strong. Chairs with perforated seats are an improvement on the solid ones, and granite iron ware ahead of all other ware. Make the best of everything, and be happy while you may.

VEGETINE.—No medicine has attained such a great reputation as this justly celebrated compound.

THE yolk of a hard boiled egg cut in bits with a sharp knife makes a pleasing addition to the sauce made of butter, flour and water for baked or boiled fish.

TO GIVE glass great brilliancy, wash with a damp sponge dipped in spirits, then dust with powdered blue or whiting (tied in a thin muslin bag) and polish with a chamois skin.

IN a late paper, Dr. James Geikie shows the great size of the Gulf stream and its vast influence upon northern climates, and concludes that the opening of the proposed canal across the Isthmus of Panama will have as much effect upon the Gulf stream and the climate of Northwestern Europe as the emptying of a teapotful of boiling water into the Arctic Ocean would have in raising the annual temperature in Greenland.

Why are you Bilious.

Because you have allowed your bowels to become costive, and liver torpid. Use Kidney-Wort to produce a free state of the bowels, and it will stimulate the liver to proper action, cleanse the skin of its yellowness, cure bilious headache, and cause new life in the blood. Druggists have it, both dry and liquid—Zion's Herald.

SLICED sweet potatoe pie will be a new and and welcome dish to some cooks. Steam the potatoes till tender, not soft; then cut in thin slices. Make an upper and under crust for the pie; season with ginger and spice the same as you do a squash pie. If you prefer, you may mash the potatoes and cook with milk and eggs, and then you will have a mock squash pie.

GINGER pound cake, if made with care, is excellent with coffee for breakfast. Take one cup and a half of sugar, one cup of New Orleans molasses, three cups of flour, four eggs, one tablespoonful of ginger and of cinnamon, one tea spoonful of soda dissolved in a little hot water. Bake in shallow pans, in a moderate oven, for half an hour.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Jan., 31, 1879.

GENTLEMEN—Having been afflicted for a number of years with indigestion and general debility, by the advice of my doctor I used Hop Bitters, and must say they afforded me almost instant relief. I am glad to be able to testify in their behalf. THOS. G. KNOX.

A GOOD way to prepare apples at this season of the year, when they are almost tasteless, is to pare them, cut them in quarters and steam until they are tender; then put them in an earthen dish and pour over the sauce a little weak vinegar, just enough to flavor them a trifle. In this put some unground alspice and a little sugar.

"Since taking 'Dr. Lindsey's Blood Searcher,' that old running sore of mine is entirely healed up. It's a sure cure.

FRITTER BATTER.—One pint of flour, half a pint of milk, one tablespoonful of salad oil or butter, one teaspoonful of salt, two eggs. Beat the eggs light. Add the milk and salt to them. Pour half of this mixture on the flour, and when beaten light and smooth add the remainder and the oil. Fry in boiling fat.

Don't Die in the House.

Ask Druggists for "Rough on Rats." It clears out rats, mice, bed-bugs, roaches, vermin, flies, ants, insects. 15c. per box.

STEAMED JOHNNYCAKE.—Beat one desert spoonful of sugar with two eggs, add two teaspoonfuls of buttermilk, half a teacuptul of soda, or enough to sweeten the buttermilk, a little salt, one cuptul of flour and meal to thicken. Steam from one and a half to two hours.

POUND CAKE.—One pound of butter, one pound of sugar, one pound of flour, twelve eggs; work the butter to a very light cream, add the pulverized sugar and beat thoroughly; now add the well beaten yolks, and beat well again; stir in the well-beaten whites, and the flour very lightly. Bake in a large mould, in a slow but steady oven, about an hour.

HUMOROUS.

SHE was a real sweet looking lady, with a sealskin sacque and a big plush hat, and she stood on the steps of an uptown residence, and just pulled the bell. "I called to see," said she to the lady of the house, who was very red in the face from frying doughnuts over the kitchen fire, "if you wished to give anything to the heathen to day."

"No, I don't want to give anything to the heathen to-day. I just gave the woman next door a piece of mind about her scalawag of a boy that broke down my plants. That's all I can afford for the heathen just now."

"On a Decline."

DR R. V. PIERCE: Dear Sir—Last fall my daughter was in a decline and every body thought she was going into the consumption. I got her a bottle of your "Favorite Prescription," and it cured her. Of all druggists. MRS. MARY HINSON.

DOWN at Old Bridge, in New Jersey a woman got a forlorn man so drunk he couldn't stand, and then she sent for a Justice of the Peace, and while some of the neighbors held the unhappy and limber jointed bacchanaleau up, she married him. That's the kind of a hairpin a New Jersey woman is. When she has once made her "mash," no cold conventionalities of our false and much veneered social institutions may stand between her love if the applejack only holds out.

PARIS lodging house keepers do not insure—fires shall die on their hands, if they can help it. An honest gentleman, past the meridian of life, was recently refused a lease for which he was anxious to pay handsomely, for the simple reason that the person incharge judged by his appearance that his life would not be a long one and the proprietor "could not afford to have a funeral on the premises."

The New World's Dispensary and Invalid's Hotel at Buffalo, N. Y., is now completed and ready to receive patients.

"ANNIE," asked an ardent swain of a pretty girl. "Do you love your mother?" "Oh, indeed I do!" was the answer. "Well, then, will you give me a kiss for her sake?" the lover asked. "No, John, I can't do that; but you may kiss me for your mother's sake." And the young man did.

IN London a lady prosecuted a handsome gentleman for kissing her at a railway station, although he explained that he had mistaken her for some one else, and had at the same time apologized. He got seven days hard labor. What made her mad was probably the fact that the handsome gentleman had not kissed her for herself.

Nature's Sluice-Way.

The kidneys are nature's sluice-way to wash out the debris of our constantly changing bodies. If they do not work properly the trouble is felt everywhere. Then be wise and as soon as you see signs of disorder get a package of Kidney-Wort and take it faithfully. It will clean the sluice-way of sand, gravel or slime and purify the whole system. Druggists sell it, both liquid and dry, and it is efficient in either form —Independent.

A FINELY dressed lady slipped and fell near the post office recently, and the gentleman who helped her to rise inquired, "Did you break any bones, madame?"

"No, I guess not," she replied, "but I am just as mad as if I had broken a dozen of 'em."

MOTHERS DON'T KNOW—How many children are punished for being uncouth, wilful, and indifferent to instructions or rewards, simply because they are out of health! An intelligent lady said of a child of this kind: "Mothers should know that if they would give their little ones moderate doses of Hop Bitters for two or three weeks, the children would be all a parent could desire."

AN aged Scotch lady, knowing the habits of her old and spoilt servant, when she wished a note taken without loss of time held it open and read it over to him, saying, "There, noo, Andrew, ye ken a'thats in it; noo dinna stop to open it, but just send it off.

H. H. WARNER & Co.: Sirs—Your Safe Kidney and Liver Cure made me feel like a new man after the doctors had given me up. HENRY GERAU.

HE had owned a setter dog, and this was the story he told: "Yes, sir; the way that dog was devoted to me was just amazing. Why, he heard me say to my wife that I was pressed for money, and he went and died the day before the dog tax was assessed."

"Can I go to the circus, dear mamma?" "No, my sweet darling; but, if you will be good, I will take you to see your grandmother's grave."

Those unhappy persons who suffer from nervousness, headache, and dyspepsia, should use only "Sellers' Liver Pills."

WHAT State is high in the middle and round at both ends? O-hi-o.

IF we were to "give the devil his due," what would become of us?

As now improved Dr. Holman's pads well deserve Professor Loomis' high endorsement. They are nearer a Universal Panacea than anything in medicine.
