LITTLE BY LITTLE.

Little by little the time goes by—
Short if you sing through it, long if you sigh;
Little by little—an hour, a day,
Gone with the years that have vanished away;
Little by little the race is run,
Trouble and waiting and toil are done.

Little by little the skies grow clear;
Little by little the sun comes near;
Little by little the days smile out
Gladder and brighter on pain and doubt;
Little by little the seed we sow
Into a beautiful field will grow.

Little by little the world grows strong,
Fighting the battle of Right and Wrong
Little by little the Wrong gives way,
Little by little the Right has sway,
Little by little all longing souls,
Struggle up nearer the shining goals!

Little by little the good in men
Blossoms to beauty for human ken;
Little by little the angels see
Prophecies better of good to be;
Little by little the God of all
Lifts the world nearer his pleading call!

A MISTAKE IN THE ADDRESS.

"Is this house coming down?" asked Mr. Merriman, looking up from his sermon-like paper despairingly.

For there was a hurrying to and fro from all quarters of the old mansion, a running up and down stairs, a subdued bustle, a murmur of excitement, and finally a gust of laughter, in many keys of elation, sounding as if it came from the subterranean recesses of the kitchen.

"No papa," cried little Lottie breathlessly; "but Minnie's bread has come out of that oven, and it's a success."

"Oh!" said Mr. Merriman, abstractedly staring out of the window and scratching his bald head, "is that all?"

"That all, indeed!" said Minnie, herself a very blooming girl, with short flaxen hair curling all over her head, light blue eyes and a pretty pug nose with just the proper up snape. And she ran into the room with a big apron enveloping her slim figure, and a fresh color deepening on her cheek, while by means of a stout kitchen towel she held up a tin baking pan containing a puffy, snow white loaf of new bread. "That's all, papa; when it's the first bread I ever made, and when it's to be sent to the hospital fair to be cut into sandwiches and sold for the sick poor at 10 cents apiece! Look at it papa! smell of it! see how deliciously light it is! And then tell me if you ever expected to have your little Minnie turn into such a stupendous housekeeper."

And Miss Minnie Merriman kissed her father on the tip of his nose and looked at him with pretty girlish triumph.

"Very nice—very creditable!" said the clergyman, beaming on his daughter. "I dare say you'll make a famous cook one of these days."

"I only hope," put in Penny, the second daughter, (whose baptismal name was Penelope Dorcas), "that Mr. Ayton will come to the fair and buy some of Minnie's sandwiches, and—"

Minnie turned short round, flushing pink to the roots of her pretty hair.

"Penny," said she, "what nonsense you are talking, when you know very well that Mr. Ayton is sick with pneumonia. And of course he has sent a liberal subscription to the fair; and what can it possibly matter who buys the bread?"

Penny subsided rather abashed, and Minnie ran down stairs again to wrap the white-spongy loaf in a snowy napkin and send Jerusha, the bound girl, to the rooms of the fair committee with it.

"Now remember, Jerusha," she uttered impressively, as she held up one finger to add force to her words, "it is No, 19—19, do you hear? Saville street."

"Yes'm," said Jerusha, who was so demoralized at the prospect of a temporary reprieve from her dish-washing that she could hardly stand still long enough to tie on her bonnet.

And away she went, gamboling down the street like a half grown elephant, with a carefully wrapped up loaf of bread in a basket on her arm.

"My first loaf of bread!" said Minnie to herself, as she leaned against the window casing. "Oh, I'm so glad it has turned out a success!"

And then her thoughts wandered to Mr. Harry Ayton. Would he be well enough to come to the fair that evening? Would he patronize the refreshment hall? Would he think her little pink-ribboned apron with the bib front becoming? Would he—Oh, pshaw, this would never do! Here it was 10 o'clock and the parlors not dusted nor Billy's Sunday suit mended and brushed ready for service.

While Jerusha, after giving her impartial attention to a hand organ, scissors grinder, and a street scuffle between two belligerently minded little boys, finally trudged up the steps of 90 saville street.

"Please, with Miss Minnie Merriman's kind compliments," said she. "Please, and it's the first bread she ever made; please, and she hopes you'll like it."

And Lois Jenkins, Mr. Harry Ayton's faithful old nurse and housekeeper, carried the loaf of bread up stairs to the room where the convalescent sat in the sunshine.

"And very kind of the minister's daughter," she said, setting the parcel upon the table. "And it's as beautiful light bread as ever I see! And how thoughtful of 'em, Mr. Harry, to remember you now, ain't it? But Miss Minnie was always one for doing kind things to sick folks ever since she was knee high to a grasshopper—bless her dear little soul!"

"Yes," said Harry, slowly, "it is very kind, indeed. couldn't I have a little of that fresh bread with my beef tea at noon, Lois?"

"We'll see what the doctor says. Mr. Harry," said the old woman, cheerfully. "And anyhow, if you can't have it to-day, you shall have it to-morrow."

An hour afterwards Mr. Merriman himself came in—bald-headed, spectacled and kindly-eyed—to make a pastoral call. And Harry Ayton broke abruptly into the good man's rather prosy platitudes to ask the question nearest to his heart.

"Mr. Merriman, do you think it possible that your daughter Minnie could ever care for me?"

Mr. Merriman pushed his spectacles higher upon his forehead.

"My daughter Minnie?" he repeated. "Why, she's only a baby! Seventeen last fall, my dear Harry."

"My mother was married at seventeen sir," said Ayton, smiling.

"Bless me," said the good pastor. "And now I come to think of it, my wife was not eighteen who she and I determined to try life together, on a salary of $500 per annum. Dear! dear! how time does slip along, to be sure! My daughter Minnie, eh?"

"Because," said Mr. Ayton, bravely, "I love her. And of all the women that ever I saw, she is the only one whom I would care to make my wife."

Mr. Merriman rubbed his nose.

"My dear young friend," he said, "if I was my daughter Minnie I should say yes. But I'm not. And I don't pretend to understand the ins and outs of a woman's heart. So perhaps you'd better ask her about it."

"I will," said Mr. Ayton. "But I may take it for granted that I have your sanction?"

"By all means," said the old gentleman, "by all means."

"And you will prepare her mind for a visit from me when I am a little stronger?"

"Oh, certainly," said Mr, Merriman.

And absent minded as usual he went home and forgot all about it.

At 3 o'clock pretty Miss Minnie put on her blue velvet capote and neat little sack and went to No. 19 Saville street to help prepare the refreshments for the hospital fair.

"How do you like my bread?" she asked of the lady superintendent, who stood at a big table with a dozen white aproned girls gliding around her in various directions. "The first I ever made."

"What bread?" said Mrs. Raymond, lifting her eyebrows, "We have received no bread from you, Minnie."

"Goodness, gracious me!" cried the minister's daughter, clasping her hands, "what has become of it, then? For I sent Jerusha with it at 10 o'clock, and she came back and declared that she had delivered it all right."

"There has been some mistake, evidently," said Mrs. Raymond. "And I am sorry, for we are in great need of real nice home-made bread."

Minnie hurried back home and sternly confronted Jerusha, who was surreptitiously buying a penny ballad of a boy at the rear door.

"Jerusha," said she, you told me that you delivered my bread all right."

"So I did, Miss Minnie," whispered Jerusha. "At No. 90 Saville street, And as you told me, Miss Minnie."

Minnie's cheek grew scarlet and then grew pale. She sat hopelessly down on the edge of the kitchen table,

"Jerusha," she cried, despairingly, "you have been and carried my bread and compliments to Mr. Ayton, instead of to the hospital fair! Oh, Jerusha how could you make such a dreadful blunder?"

And she ran up stairs to her father in a sort of desperation.

"Papa," she cried, "such a dreadful thing has happened! Oh, don't you think you could help us out of it some way?"

And she related the complication with tears in her eyes.

"Hum! hum! ha?" said Mr. Merriman, apparently hoisting his memory out of the time of Herodotus with some unseen variety of mental apparatus. "Yes, I see. But you don't grudge poor Mr. Ayton the bread, Minnie, my dear, do you?"

"Oh, no, no," cried Minnie.

"You don't dislike him?"

"No, papa," said the innocent girl, "I think he is ever so nice!"

"Well, then," said this wily diplomatist, "Suppose we both go around there together and it can all be explained satisfactorily; and we know, my dear, that in the Good Book we are commanded to visit the sick."

So Miss Merriman and her father went to No. 90 Saville street, where Harry Ayton lay on a sofa, looking very pale and interesting, and just exactly as a lover ought to do. His face brightened up at the sight of Minnie.

"Did you tell her, sir?" he demanded of the minister.

"N-no," confessed that worthy old gentleman. "I thought perhaps you could tell her better yourself. So I just contrived this little opportunity—or rather, it contrived itself. And I'll go down stairs now and talk with Miss Jenkins about that passage in Revelations that always bothers her so."

"What does it mean?" said Minnie, in bewilderment, as her father shuffled out of the room.

"It means," said Mr. Ayton, promptly, "that I love you. Dear, sweet little Minnie, I have been longing for you in my heart all these months, but until your sweet message to-day—"

"But I sent no message," said Minnie, blushing 'celestial rosy red,' "and no bread either. It was all a mistake. They were both intended for the hospital fair."

"But it isn't a mistake that I love you, said Mr. Ayton; "and if you cannot teach yourself to care for me after all—"

"Oh, but I didn't say that!" confessed Minnie. "At least—I thought—I understood—"

And when Mr. Merriman, having quieted Miss Jenkins's mind as to the obscure passage in Revelations, came back, Minnie was engaged to Harry Ayton.

"But you'll let the fair have the loaf of bread, Haray?" coaxed Minnie.

"Not a crumb!" said the lover. "Do you suppose I would let any one but myself eat the bread—the first you ever made, my darling? I'll send them a check for $50 and let 'em buy their own bread with it."

And so the hospital fair didn't get Minnie Merriman's loaf of bread at all.

The Performance is Closed.

The facts connected with the miserable experience of young Symonds as an actor were these: He was hired to play in a stock company, and one night was called upon almost at an hour's notice to take part in a play he had never seen, his services being required in consequence of the illness of the man playing it. So little time did he have to prepare for the performance that a rehearsal was impossible. The part given him to study was in manuscript. The man who had previously played it was an eccentric person and had written in a lot of ridiculous stage directions. Symonds was amazed to find them in a serious part, but supposed them all right, and at evening appeared with his lines and business pretty well learned. A large and fashionable audience assembled in the theatre. The curtain was rung up and the play commenced. Soon Symonds went on. His first speech described the misery of the poverty-stricken mother at home. After it he danced a little break down. The audience were amazed, and the other actors on the stage dumb-founded. But Symonds knew he was to follow his stage directions. Presently he had to refuse a proposition to commit crime. He did so in grand style, and then took off his hat and jumped on it. This extraordinary proceeding created a sensation. The manager came and stood in the wings and suffered anguish. After his next speech, a defiance to his tempter, he crawled under the sofa. That just set everybody wild, and the manager danced up and down in the wings, and swore he'd kill Symonds when he came off. After a touching love scene with the heroine, Symonds proceeded to stand on his head and howl, and the audience howled too, and the manager shrieked to him to come off. But Symonds didn't hear, and proceeded. He spoke his next speech with such impressiveness and magnificence of manner that the audience was, in spite of itself, hushed into respectful silence, and at its close was about to applaud, when Symonds panked off a boot and hurled it viciously at the head of the orchestra. That settled it. The leader, who was badly hurt on the jaw by the boot, came up over the footlights, and the manager rushed on from the wings, and the way they bounced Symonds about was fearful. He made a big fight, and was still at it when the curtain was rung down. After they were parted, Symonds explained, and showed his part as a justification for his conduct. But the manager would accept no excuse, and, going before the curtain, said: "Ladies and gentlemen, occasionally a natural-born idiot, with a phenomenal faculty for making an ass of himself, is sent into the world. Such a one has inflicted himself upon us tonight. For my part, I have endured the agony of the damned while watching him, and I presume you've had enough of his donkeyism. Therefore the performance is closed."

Wild Flowers.

It is impossible, in most parts of the country, to make a beautiful garden without the outlay of $1 for plants. Could the persons referred to visit European gardens, or even see European catalogues, they would find that the common plants around them are elsewhere highly valued. Aside from the trees there are many shrubs that may find a place in the garden, and a host of herbaceous plants from which a proper selection will keep a garden gay the whole growing season. Make the possible practicable.

OFF: "You will find the painting looks better a little way off," said the artist. And Fogg asked, quite innocently, "Would half a mile be far enough off, do you think?"

Modern Vienna.

The famous letter-writer "Gath," recently said: Although Vienna is one of the most popular cities in Europe, it is very far inferior to Paris in the regularity and importance of its street architecture and the brightness of its shops. There are some rather handsome women in Vienna—particularly Hungarian women—and the Viennese often possess the amiable countenances of the French, and are, perhaps, better modeled in bodily form, but they seem to me to be dirtier people, and with but slight taste in dress. The public life of Vienna around the cafes, etc., is very languid and phlegmatic, compared to that of Paris. The large suburbs of Vienna remind me of the Bowery side of New York. The city is improving, and the great street called the Ring Strasse has noble buildings of not very pure architecture to celebrate the creation of the element of popular Government in this old absolute despotism. The great palace, around which the city clings like a set of old Southern cabins close to the planter's mansion, was a subject of somewhat horrid mystery to me, considering the evil influence it has exercised on modern times for more than three hundred years. I went through the imperial stables, where were many Spanish barbs for riding purposes, and saw some of the Princes exercising in their riding school; and went down into the crypt of the old church, where a monotomous number of great, lumbering bronze coffins of the imperialists lie—Maria Theresa in the middle, her husband at her feet, the second wife of Napoleon off at one side, with Napoleon's Hapsburg son silent beside her, and at the far end Maximilian, of Mexico, his big casket-shell covered with silver offerings and faded flowers, and in a darker part of the crypt, behind higher railings, lay the long, high coffins of a series of miserable rulers who fashioned an empire out of the sufferings and humiliation of discordant races, and have but recently surrendered any portion of it, in obedience to the iron will of Bismark. Yet this surrender has made all of Austria that is pleasing at the present moment, and her sovereigns, at last throwing themselves upon the populace, begin to recognize a joy their fathers never knew.

I went to the celebrated Turkish bath of Vienna, which would be the noblest in the modern world if there was any patronage in Vienna to keep it up. But it is rapidly tumbling into dirt and decay for the want of money. Built for the needs of the Vienna Exhibition several years ago, it had a brief period of success, and still is a reminder of the old Roman baths, in its huge halls, large swimming pools and proficiency of space; but I find no bath in Europe more acceptable than are those in Lafayette Place, New York, though the Hammam in Paris is admirable for its economy of space and architectural nicety. The Turkish baths in London are too public and have too many parasites hanging around. Nowhere in Europe did I get the manipulation in these baths that one receives in New York.

In Vienna I went to hear Edward Strauss, one of the three noted Jewish brothers who have composed dance music, lead his orchestra at the Volksgarden, near by the palace. This is a flat, enclosed piece of ground, shaded with horse chestnut and other trees, with pretty walks and hedges, and with two music stands opposite each other, one of which has attached to it a sort of restaurant hotel for balls and suppers. At this latter music stand Strauss led his fiddlers to his own tunes and those of his brothers, John and Joseph, and about half the music played was of the Strauss family's composition. Edward is a fine-looking man with a dramatic address; rich Jewish eyes and black hair; his clothes are carefully made. He leads his orchestra in a dance fashion, moving his feet and knees as if he could scarcely keep from waltzing while he handles the baton. The music of the Strausses is valuptuous, confidential, insinuating, coquetting and pretty, but tolerably shallow and made altogether for the feet and fingers. The audience, as a matter of politeness, always applaud the Strauss compositions. A military band in the other stand alternated with the string music, and seemed to me, like military bands everywhere, to have a great deal of brass clattering and din of drums. There were some gentle, graceful people in the audience, which toward nine o'clock numbered nearly one thousand; but the cyprians, in considerable number, paraded up and down the walks in pairs and threes and singly, and lurked around the environs, tasting their beer and waiting to be addressed. I think I paid sixty cents to go into this concert, which was listened to outside by several thousand free-list patrons, who could hear the music just as well as we within.

Ailments of the Horse.

The term forging is an expression used among horsemen to denote a peculiar unpleasant sound, produced when an animal is trotting slowly or walking, and sometimes even when they are going at a good, sharp trot. It is the clicking noise caused by the toes of the hind shoes striking against the heels of the front ones. In some instances this is so annoying as to depreciate the value of the animal, especially in those horses which carry it to such a degree as to injure the back of the coronet, sometimes causing lameness, and often a wound of a more or less serious nature. The fault is generally termed over-reaching or grabbing. The term over-reaching or grabbing and forging, although very different in many respects, can only be considered as modifications of one another, over-reaching or grabbing being the more serious. The causes are various. In some instances it is the result of debility, as is often noticed during convalescence from some depleting disease. We also find colts which have not fully matured addicted to this vice, especially those which have, as it were, outgrown themselves. The muscles of progression are not sufficiently strong to sustain the weight and propel the body in a proper manner, hence the awkward gait. Now and then we meet with cases where the condition is remitent the animal going perfectly sound one day; possibly on the next the clicking noise is heard every few steps, while on the following day he will go all right, and remain so for a time, when the noise will be again heard. This can only be accounted for by the presence of temporary muscular debility, the result of some constitutional disturbance, not sufficient, however, to cause any noticeable illness. Again, in some animals it seems to be a natural way of going, and is best relieved by judicious shoeing. The aggravated condition, over-reach or grab, is the result of what might be termed an accident, such as is liable to occur when an animal is struggling through deep snow, or traveling upon a very rough or soft muddy road. It also often occurs in trotting horses when they are forced to a gait beyond their natural speed, or when they are suddenly checked by a rough hand during the act of breaking from the trot to the gallop. It of course occurs at other times, but these are occasions when it is common.

The treatment of these conditions, of course, depends upon the cause. In forging the unpleasantness can generally be removed at once by preventive measures, such as allowing the wall of the hind foot to project about say one quarter of an inch beyond the shoe, and to prevent the shoe from being too easily wrenched from its proper situation a small clip should be turned up on each side and in front of the quarters. The animal should be shod in this way until it has regained its strength, or for an indefinite period, and to obviate the possibility of grabbing the front of the shoe should be bevelled from the fore backwards. The treatment of over-reach or grab must, of course, depend upon the size and condition of the wound. If it is a deep cut, and recently made, the edges should be brought together and retained there by sutures, and the whole covered with flexible collodion or something which will protect the wound from the injurious effects of the air. If the wound is only slight it should be treated as such, viz., by keeping it thoroughly clean and applying healing lotions or ointments. If there is much inflammation it may be kept in subjection by hot or cold applications in the shape of poultices or stuping, but nothing is better at this season of the year than showering the part with water from an ordinary hose.

Over Wild Mountains.

The detachment which was sent under command of Captain H. H. Pierce, of the Twenty-First Infantry, to explore the northern part of Washington Territory and report on its topographical aspect, reached Vancouver on the 17th of September after an absence of six weeks. During the trip the officers and men experienced much hardship and privation. The commander left Fort Colville, W. T., on August 1st and pushed in a westerly line for the Cascade Mountains. The ascent was so steep that only three horses could be got over the summit. One of the pack mules went over the precipice head over heels, and after making about fifty revolutions per minute, soon landed at the bottom of the canyon, a distance of 400 feet. Another horse was lost in the same manner, and a valuable mule was bitten by a rattlesnake and died shortly afterward. Most of the animals and a number of the men were sent back to Fort Colville.

The party that remained traveled over a region which is supposed to have been never trod by the feet of white man. Lieutenant G. B. Backus, of the Third Cavalry, than whom perhaps there is no man better versed in woodcraft in the service, was second in command. After being out some weeks the provisions began to give out and for five days the party subsisted on quarter rations. Part of the country traveled over is reported to be exceedingly rich in mineral deposits. The territory traversed by the party was fearfully rough consisting of steep declivities, and in some places the ascent was perilous. After reaching the Skagit river they fell in with a party of Indians, who carried them in a canoe as far as Stirling, where the soldiers procured supplies of food, etc. Captain Pierce part of the time suffered from a bad cold, but notwithstanding his ill-health he conducted the expedition to a successful close. Knowledge gleaned from this expedition will be of great advantage in the event of an Indian war in that locality.

Eating Meat and Nervousness.

Nervous disease and weakness increase in a country as the population comes to live on the flesh of the warm-blooded animals. 'Meat' using the term in its popular sense is highly stimulating, and supplies proportionally more exciting than actually nourishing pabulum to the nervous system. The meat-eater lives at high pressure and is, or ought to be, a peculiarly active organism, like a predatory animal always on the alert, walking rapidly, and consuming large quantities of oxygen. In practice, we find that the meat-eater does not live up to the level of his food, and as a consequence he cannot or does not take in enough oxygen to satisfy the exigencies of his mode of life. Thereupon follow many, if not most, of the ills to which highly civilized and luxurious meat-eating classes are liable.

Killed by his Bride.

Several months ago, two of the most dashing belles of Huntsville were the Misses Merriwether, daughters of Colonel Merriwether, a prominent citizen of Huntsville, Alabama, and the former Chief Engineer of the Memphis and Charlestown Railroad. Their most ardent admirers were Captain Belts and Lon. Davis, son of Colonel Davis, who was once one of the most prominent men of North Alabama, and nephew of Zeb. Davis, who was Mayor of Huntsville for many years. Young Davis was considered fast, and Mrs. Merriwether objected to his attentions to her daughter. The girl appeared to love him, and finally an elopement was agreed on, and one night, when the young couple had engagements to attend a concert, they instead boarded a train for this city, where they were married.

Their honeymoon passed happily, but soon Davis' character began to assert itself and his wife discovered the awful fact that he was addicted to the use of opium and was an incessant gambler. This discovery created dissensions and he began to make her life unhappy by his profligate habits. She endured this as long as possible, but finally left his roof and sought protection in the home of her childhood. The excitement incident to this brought on brain fever and for a while her life was despaired of, and when she recovered, her mind was partially deranged. The physician advised her husband to keep aloof from her for some months and on this advice, he agreed that she should be taken to Rhea Spring, promising not to annoy her by his presence until he was sent for. Her mother accompanied her and they arrived at the Springs about three months ago. She recuperated rapidly and her intellect was soon restored and the husband visited the springs but did not see her. He visited the springs a second time and saw her but a few moments, she still refusing to return to him until he reformed. But he again visited the springs, but was denied seeing her. Several stormy interviews passed between the mother and him, and for several days he was seen hanging about his wife's room, but he was denied admittance. Sunday he procured a pistol and demanded admittance or threatened to kill the mother. He was finally quieted and gave the pistol to her. Monday he was heard to say that his wife should return to him or a murder would follow. Tuesday night Mrs. Davis stepped from her room to go to the toilet room. He was near at hand and followed. They met some distance from the hotel, and he, pointing to a pistol he carried in his hand, demanded that she return to him. She had the pistol he gave her mother in her pocket at the time and quietly slipped it from her pocket, placed it against his body and fired, the ball passing through his bowels. She then walked deliberately to the hotel, informed the proprietor of what she had done as coolly as if she were relating some trivial incident and left for her room.

She exhibited not the least excitement, although many ladies were in hysterics from excitement. She related the circumstances as calmly as if telling an anecdote and at midnight inquired after the patient and slept soundly until morning. Mr. Davis was found to be rapidly failing. He stated that his wife shot him in self-defence and he deserved it; that he had brought it on himself and no one but himself was to blame. He begged that she would not be arrested, adding that she acted in self-defense only. At 9 p. m., Mr. Davis was thought to be dying. A number of prominent citizens of Huntsville passed through the city yesterday to Rhea Springs. The young wife is but a mere girl of very handsome appearance.

Chewing-Gum Season.

It is a fact of some consequence to dealers in certain goods that the chewing-gum season begins with school. There is some demand during the summer, but boys and girls generally have other means of diversion and recreation, but when the school-room door opens and the year's toil begins there is something necessary in study hours. Taffy and other candies leave marks on fingers and faces, but the hardy gum can be rolled away snugly in the corner of the desk, mouth or pocket and reproduced whenever the pedagogue has his back turned.

Very little pure spruce gum is in the market. Packages are received that look like pure gum at first sight, but the lumps are supposed to be formed by the fingers after a little gum, rosin and other things have been added. If a dealer is in doubt about the genuineness of this spruce gum, he applies to a Canadian, who can tell at once. It must not be inferred from this that the regular diet of the Canadian is spruce gum. No; he gets something more on holidays occasionally.

The amount of chewing-gum manufactured is enormous. There is a factory in Philadelphia. The gum sold by confectioners is chiefly paraffine wax. Spruce-gum is fifty cents per pound for the best in Maine, hence the use of cheaper things gives profit. The gum makers follow the toy seasons in the form of chewing gum—that is to say, when tops are the toys gum is in the shape of tops, at other seasons other forms attract pennies. Chewing-gum may seem insignificant as a trade commodity, but it is not. There are large houses in the country engaged solely in the preparation of chewing-gum.

Fiat Currency.

Japan is offering an instructive spectacle to the advocates of a paper and "fiat" currency. About six years ago that country decided to imitate Eastern nations in an irredeemable paper currency, and the result of this experiment has been unfortunate. The latest information from Japan is that the paper money is now at a discount of 70 per cent. It has depreciated in value almost from the start, though subject to the quick fluctuations which invest this unstable currency with one of its charms to a speculative people. For a time the farmers in the interior preferred the new paper money to silver, and as a result there has been much suffering among them. No one knows the amount in circulation, and the country is suffering sadly from this worthless substitute for money.

For Congress---7th District,

GEN. WM. H. FORNEY.

OF CALHOUN.

The editor has gone to Atlanta on business this week.

We return thanks to Mr. J. W. Whiteside for some very large Scuppernong grapes.

Prof. Borden has a cat at his house that lost her kittens, and she has substituted in their stead a couple of huge rats.

The concert given by Miss Mamie Montgomery's school at the female academy came off last Friday night, and we learn, the pupils did well.

Capt. Savage served notice on Mr. Hammond that he would take testimonoy in regard to the Anniston box and the official return, in the case of Savage vs. Hammond —contest to a seat in the Legislature.

See dissolution notice of A. L. Stewart & Co.

We will take this occasion to say that our terms for all local notices is ten cents a line for each insertion. Those wishing to use our local columns will bear in mind that no deviation will be made from this rule.

President Morehead of the Mississippi Valley Planter's Association made a sensible speech before the Association at its recent meeting. The Montgomery Advertiser, noticing his speech, says:

"In regard to the loan agencies which foreign capitalists have recently established in the South, it strikes us Mr. Morehead takes a very proper view. One in Atlanta has loaned out a million dollars to farmers in twelve months, and is now letting out more at the rate of $100,000 per month. Farm mortgages piling up at that rate seems a terrible condition of affairs, yet if the farmers don't borrow from the loan agencies they must from somebody else and often at a higher rate of interest. The more capital comes the lower is bound to be its cost. Capital is our great need and the more comes the better. Says Mr. Morehead:

A number of loan agencies have been started in the South in the past two years for the purpose of loaning money on plantations, attracted by the security of such investments and the prevailing high rate of interest. Wherever two or more such companies are operating the interest rate has been decreased and the general terms given to planters much ameliorated.

A practical illustration of this was afforded less than a year ago in Selma."

Negroes Rising.

BY RICHARD BELL, COLORED.

CHOCCOLOCCO, ALA., Oct 19, '82.

MR. EDITOR, Dear Sir: I wish you would give place in your valuable paper to this communication, which is intended as a slight vindication of the Negro as a citizen. We wish to have the public to know that the shameful stigma attempted upon the character of the Negro race, known as "Negroes rising on the 16th, 17th and 18th Oct. 1882" is untrue. It seems the white people were induced to believe that the negroes were going to rise in revolt and attempt to slay all the whites but the young girls. We wish to say to the public that it was all a false and malicious report. We regard it as an attempt to place a stigma upon us as a race, and is calculated to do us great injury. We can't see the object or understand the design of the person or persons starting it. But we are astonished at our white friends for being so excitable on such slight cause.

Under the law the negro man is the equal of the white man. For what, then, could he rise? And what would he gain by rising? Why should a handful of negroes rise up in barbarous array against an armful of white people—the whites well equipped with all the requisites of war and the negro empty handed? No, sir! The negroes have got some sense under those knotty kinks which you look upon. I can't see how the intelligent white people could be so excited as to import arms and amunition to kill the few negroes in the country?

If you will give the negro a chance and learn him, he will be a good citizen. We are not Indians, lurking around all day and come in at night and massacre without mercy. We work all day and lie down and rest. On the night the white people were standing guard around negro huts and on the road side watching the negroes, and the women and children almost crazy with fright, the negro was in his humble home in repose and rest, knowing nothing of what was going on. We are proud the thing went off as it did and all turned out to be nothing, the negroes knowing nothing of the excitement. Now, we claim to be law-abiding citizens, as true as any in America—as true as our humble qualifications will permit us to be, and we claim equal protection under the law, and demand that the author of this vile slander, which has so excited the people of the county, be found and rigidly punished.

There seems to be a pique at the negro that has existed ever since his emancipation, and we do not know for what. Is it because he is black? He did not make himself. Is it because he had been a slave? He is not responsible for that—he did not make himself a slave. Is it because he is ignorant? The shame is on our white friends of the South—the negro served them last. We are right here in their midst—help to educate and enlight us. God will bless you for it in all your inheritance. Pity the heathen at your door and try to enlighten him. It is true there are two distinct races in this nation, but there is but one God to provide for all. The God that protects the white man sends His blessing upon the black man. Then let the Government extend its protection to all alike. Give us a chance to build up our reputation. The negro's chance in this country is difficult. Why should it be? Why cannot we live together as a free people in harmony? We claim to be christians and all worship the same God. Assuredly, then, it is a duty incumbent upon all to live in peace and charity.

I know whereof I speak, for I have used it extensively. I regard Parker's Ginger Tonic a most excellent remedy for kidney, lung and stomach disorders. It invigorates without intoxicating. J. Francis, Religio Philos. Journal, Chicago.

NOTICE.—On Friday last I took up a Dark Bay Horse Mule—white mouth. 14 to 15 hands high and from 8 to 10 years old. Owner will please call for him at once. W. H. COOPER, Alexandria, Ala.

We return thanks to those of our patrons who have settled up. Many of those, on our books, however, are not coming up to settlement as promptly as we expected. We had hoped to collect enough to pay outstanding obligations of the office before leaving for Montgomery.

DeARMANVILLE LOCALS.

DEARMANVILLE, Oct. 24th.

The first car load of cotton was shipped over the Georgia Pacific Railroad to day by Mr. R. Jenkins to Rome, Ga.

The work on the Railroad is being pushed rapidly on, and from good authority we will have through trains to Atlanta by the 15th of Nov. next.

Center, the former name of this place, was so called from the concentration of several roads to this point. DeArmanville is located five miles North-east of Oxford in the Choccolocco valley which is 4 miles wide and 30 miles long, bounded on either side by lofty mountains laden with as good iron ore as can be found anywhere.

Streets and business lots are being surveyed out to-day. We have, five stores and no groceries. We expect to ship a car load of cotton every week.

OUR MOTTO.

We sell goods cheap. They will sell,
And honest trade and low prices will tell.
Welcome everybody to Germania Tanning Company's Store.

We have just bought 100 Ladies' hats, very cheap, and received them yesterday by express. We will sell them all trimmed, all colors, all styles, including "Æsthetic" hat from 50 cents to $5.00. We will sell them cheap, and the prettiest, the neatest, and the most fastidious can wear them with pleasure and pride.

Read our previous advertisements.

Advertising like talk we know is cheap, but we forfeit honor and money if we do not do all that we advertise.

Why Does Germania Sell So Cheap?

This is the answer. People say, you pay as much, gentlemen, for goods as other houses do. Well, we don't intend to argue that point, though we claim buying for large stores, we buy more goods than anybody else, and as to whether we get them cheaper or not we don't care to say. But we do say this, our main business profit is our Tannery. For this we bought the property.

Our total store expense is comparitively nothing. We do say that we will sell you goods cheaper than you can buy them elsewhere; and remember we don't force anybody to buy

We tell you the truth and nothing but the truth, and ask your inspection free of charge and see for yourselves.

We are strangers among you, but we have come to stay and make high prices pass away.

GERMANIA TANNING CO.

SHIPWRECK! TERRIBLE LOSS OF LIFE!!

Mother and daughter go down together. A lovely maiden leaps into eternity! Wives and husbands, sons and daughters are wrecked and lost. Many sad hearts are left to mourn the loss. A husband lost his wife and daughter, a young man lost his betrothed.

A contemplation of these horrible "wrecks" work wonderfully upon the mind. The thought makes one feel sad. The strain upon delicate female nerves is too great. A married lady of our acquaintance was so wrought upon mentally that she became low-spirited and sad, lost her appetite, refused food, became feeble and emaciated, nervous and fretful. Her friends insisted that she should not think of these "wrecks" so much, but she insisted that she was sick in reality, and took to her bed. She soon had aches and pains, and worked herself into a net-work of female troubles, which eventually ended in chronic female weaknesses and excesses and death.

Another case in point was that of a young lady. She had lost a friend and soon became melancholy and nervous, could not sleep soundly, her memory began to fail her, she lost all desire for company, her brain lost its brilliancy, her eye its lustre, her cheeks became pale, complained of constant headache, and finally fell a victim to a list of female troubles, hysterics, palpitations, delirium, convulsions, and death.

These cases are of every day occurrence, and these "wrecks" upon female society are frightful. They should be remedied, and there is a remedy within the reach of all, and it is your duty to apply it.

No one need complain, for dr. dromgoole's english female bitters will cure all such. A book is published giving details of all these "wrecks." Send your name to j. p. dromgoole and co., louisville, ky., and get one free.

Try BAILEY'S SALINE APERIENT for headache and constipation—pleasant and effectual.

INSURRECTION.

Insurrection is now being made by Commission Merchants on badly cut, knapped and trashy ginned cotton. The undersigned owns the right to make and use Walker's Patent in Calhoun, Cleburne and Talladega counties. It is a certain fact that cotton will be closely classed and that it will be sold on its merits, hence I would honestly recommend the use of the above Brush for with it, it is impossible to knap cotton. It keeps the gin saws free of cotton as it is taken off the seed. No cotton passes through the Gin Role on the saws. It makes a better sample especially in ginning green, damp or yellow late cotton. It blows and knocks nearly all the trash out. With it the gin will gin faster, as each tooth is always free of cotton when it enters the Gin Role. Less danger of fire, and cutting ginners hands in cleaning the gin saws. It is much cheaper than any other brush. The leather and tacks will not cost exceeding $1.50, and any farmer can make and put it on in a few hours time. I charge Five dollars for the right for each gin that gins less than 50 bales in a season; Ten dollars for a gin that gins over 50 and less than 150 bales, and Fifteen dollars for any gin that gins over 150 bales. No payment required until its merits are proven satisfactorily. I have put this brush on 25 or 30 gins and have, in every instance, given satisfaction and express themselves more than pleased. I have used one two years and would not exchange it for any brush and $100. I refer to a few who are using it in this county:

Berry Nunnelly, Martins X Roads; George Loyd, Alexandria; D. A. Weaver, Weavers Station; Ott Smith, Middleton; T. H. Arnett, 7 miles east of Jacksonville, Jenkins P. O.; John Davis, Davistown; Martin Webster, Eastaboga; Rev. Bartlet Bynum, Coldwater; and all others who have it in use.

J. C. McDaniel of Davistown and Joseph Hubbard, of Talladega, are acting agents for me. Either of them or myself will sell the right to use or will put them on if required on short notice.

I say what I mean and mean what I say; a trial is all I want. The gin owner is on the safe side as no pay will be required or expected until he is satisfied as heretofore stated. Address,

ALEXANDRIA LOCALS.

Since our last locals, Mr. A. S. Timberlake, of Lynchburg, Va., has visited our city. Mr. Timberlake is a fine declaimer; and while here, he recited one of his favorite selections to the teacher and pupils of Alexandria Institute. At their next meeting, the society of seekers after the golden prize of oratory will have a discussion on the famous subject of Prohibition. This subject should engage the attention of every christian in the bounds of America. And this is the appropriate time for our nation to blot out, by legislation, the awful curse, which is continually staining the archives of our nation and destroying the souls of our chosen sons—the pride of Alabama. Very respectfully,
E. D. ACKER.

GERMANIA DOTS.

With the kind assurance that your humble correspondent proposes to give you a few notes each week. He will perform his part of the duty with much pleasure and kindly asks our neighboring friends to give any news at any time.

Germania gladly, proudly realizes the fact that "there is life in the old land yet," and having undergone a series of changes and reform, she boasts of attempting to rival her sister towns in point of activity, progress, and above all, in sobriety and good behavior of its people.

Mr. Geo. C. Morgan of the old Company graces our city every day and we are glad to behold his pleasant countenance, and, while she shall miss his genial face, we are glad to know that the new company are gentlemen of the highest stamp, and Germania bids them "God speed," and a cordial welcome from their (our) sister State.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Smith, Julius Franklin Smith came to town last week. He weighs 10 pounds, and all happy. In a modest spirit, we hope he may be worthy of his name-sake.

We are happy to chronicle the complete recovery of Miss Sallie Rowland and brother, George, who have chilled with fever.

Mr. C F. Glaser, President of the Germania Tanning Company, will arrive with family next week. He will live in the house on the hill, which is now undergoing thorough and effective repairs under the skillful hand of Mr. Klapp of Atlanta.

Pending the action of the Legislature upon the temperance question, I am promised, by a friend, a rich letter on the subject of the "use and abuse of drink." This will view both sides of the question, and take no side on either.

Assuring all, with out malice, or favor to please,
We shall give you the news, with no one to tease,
If you will kindly pass our failings by,
We will see you next week, in the meantime, good bye.

Ears FOR THE Million.

Foo Shoo's Balsam of Shark's Oil

Positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness Known.

This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Seas known as Carcharodon Rondelettii. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing was discovered by a Buddhist Priest about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1.00 per bottle.

Hear What the Deaf Say!

It has performed a miracle in my case.
I have no unearthly noises in my head and much better.

AGRICULTURE.

SETTING OUT BLACKBERRIES.—Blackberries can be set out in the fall as well as in the spring, but always when in a dormant state. Nearly all late planting in the spring are failures. But if late planting is unavoidable, the sets must be shaded and kept continuously moist until all danger of wilting and shriveling is over. They do best on light soils and in sunny exposures. With partial shade on moist, heavy land, the canes are apt to grow too late, and the heavy frosts find them unripened and unable to endure the winter. Warm, well drained, but not dry, compost soil is the best. On dry, hard soil the fruit often either perishes before maturity, or is only a bunch of tasteless seeds. In the preparation of the soil, plow deep, thoroughly loosening, if possible, the subsoil. If an opportunity is given, the roots of the blackberry are great foragers. It demands mellowness rather than richness. With the latter it grows too rank. In field culture the rows of blackberries should be from six to eight feet apart, and the plants set three feet apart in the rows. It will take about 1,800 plants for an acre. It is best to give the canes support. This can be done by posts and fence wire, and grown in a continuous bushy row. In May and June the roots send up vigorous sprouts, which grow with amazing rapidity, attaining from five to ten feet high. The blackberry requires and will amply repay for management and culture, both of which it needs. If the canes are allowed to grow tall, and then cut off with shears, they have few, if any lateral branches and produce meager crops. The best way is, when in rapid growth and about three or four feet high, pinch off with the fingers the terminal bud. Then lateral branches will start out. They, too, must be watched and pinched so soon as long enough. In this way good, safe, stocky canes can be had which will support themselves in winds and storms. Blackberries sprout, but those which come up between the rows can be removed if taken in time, as easily as weeds. But if left to their wild impulses the farmer or gardener will soon find a bramble wilderness in the midst of his premises, which will require strength and patience. They can become very easily a very unruly and disagreeable tenant. With care and watchfulness they are a source of pleasure and profit.

POULTRY FOOD AND FEEDING.—There is some little art, if we may so style it, in feeding young chicks to make a beautiful and vigorous growth while young. Fully nine-tenths of the mortality amongst poultry, from sickness or disease, occurs while the chicks are still in the "downy" state, and the majority of this loss occurs from improper food, and careless or improper feeding. Cornmeal, which is far too generally used, is unfit for young chicks, being too heating for their tender and immature digestive organs. Corn-meal has killed more chicks than rats. The best food we have ever found for young birds is stale bread, either crumbled up and fed dry, scalded and fed when cool, or else merely moistened in fresh milk. Where milk is abundant, it should always be used, and if the young birds get plenty of milk, in some form, they will grow so rapidly as to astonish those who have never given milk liberally to their poultry. We know of one breeder, a large dairyman, in Chester County, Pennsylvania, who feeds the principal part of his refuse milk to his poultry old and young, and his birds are not only singularly free from disease, but large, and finely developed in body and feathering. This breeder gives milk the credit of it all but it may be due in part to excellent care.

CROPS are subject to diseases, and on this subject Professor Scott, of the Royal Agricultural College, England, states that clover sickness is sometimes due to "clover fungus," though there are other causes. Beet sickness has been traced to parasites in the soil. The club-root in turnips is a parasite vegetable which feeds on the starch granules of the roots, and as it empties the cells of their starchy contents fills them with a mass of spore-like bodies, which, by further contaminating the cellular tissue, ultimately produce the club-root. The fungus belongs to an order which is generally held to live upon decaying vegetable matter, but some botanists assert that it is one will only live on the healthy tissue of cruciferous plants. The remedy is good cultivation and a complete change of cropping.

PROFESSOR W. J. BEAL, in the Farmers' Friend, claims that an acre of good clover will make 5000 pounds of good hay containing 282½ pounds of mineral matter or ash. In this ash will be 97½ pounds potash, 96 pounds lime, 34½ pounds magnesia and 28 pounds phosphoric acid, and the hay will contain 168 pounds combined nitrogen. These are the stores of wealth which an acre of red clover offers to succeeding crops when it is ploughed under, and the scythe leaves in the field as much material as it removes, which is stored in the roots and stubbles. This is enough phosphoric acid for double an average crop of grain, nitrogen for four crops and potash for six crops. He says that with such figures before them it is no wonder that farmers are surprised at the large crops they can raise in a clover sod.

ON almost every farm there are some corners where the bushes have secured a foothold, now is the time to cut them, and in cutting them it is best to make thorough work of it by cutting them close, making the land smoother and sowing a liberal quantity of grass seed, then covering the land with a good dressing of ground bone and ashes, mixed together a few days before applying, or a liberal quantity of compost manure made fine by pitching over. Unless the land is quite dry and poor this treatment will so increase the growth of grass as to choke out the bushes to a great extent.

THE Mensury barley is a new variety, and likely to become popular. It is six-rowed, and was sent out by the Department of Agriculture four or five years ago. It originated in Canada. It has long, heavy heads which hang down when filling, but its straw is so strong that it does not fall down, even on the richest land. It has been tested for malting and pronounced superior for that purpose. In ripening it is a little later than the common six rowed and is easily distinguished from that when growing by a slightly reddish tinge to the beard when the heads appear.

SQUEALING hogs do not fatten as readily as those that are quiet. Sometimes the fault is in the breed, but regular feeding three times a day, and enough of it, will keep them contented and in good growing and fattening condition.

EXPERIENCE shows that the farmer who raises his wheat, his corn, his mules and pork at home succeeds better than the one who raises only one article.

OATS grown on clay land make the best meal, keep longest and bring the highest price.

IT is said that if food is kept from sheep twenty-four hours before killing, the mutton will have a better flavor.

DOMESTIC.

TAPIOCA CREAM SOUP.—Put a knuckle of veal—cracked into pieces—and two pounds of beef (from the neck) into four quarts of cold water; bring to a boil, then skim carefully and set the kettle on the back of the stove where it will simmer until the veal is very tender, but not until it cooks to pieces. Cut off the meat; put it in a dish and cover with a little of the strained liquor. This, with the addition of some seasoning, thickening and lemon juice, will make a very palatable side-dish for lunch or breakfast. Put the veal bones back into the kettle and cook them with the beef until the liquor is reduced to three pints. Three-quarters of an hour before taking it up, season the broth to taste with pepper and salt, and put in a stalk of celery, half a small onion, a sprig of parsley and two slices of carrot. Strain the soup, when done, through a hair sieve or a thin cloth, (without pressing) and set it away to cool. It will form a firm, clear jelly and every particle of fat must be removed from the surface before reheating. Pour half a teacupful of boiling water onto two tablespoons of tapioca, and let soak for an hour, then turn it into a saucepan with the soup and set where it will boil, after which move to the back of the stove and let simmer until the tapioca looks clear. Beat the yolks of three eggs in a bowl; add four tablespoons of sweet cream, and when well mixed put in four tablespoons of stock, first taking the saucepan from the fire. Return this mixture to the saucepan and set back on the stove to heat, but be careful that it does not boil, as too long or rapid cooking would curdle it,

PICKLED SHEEP TONGUES.—Boil the tongues in salted water, and when done—which will be in about two hours—skin them while still hot. For fifty tongues put a tablespoon each of whole allspice and pepper-corns and half as many cloves into a small bag. Steep for fifteen minutes in hot vinegar, then pack the tongues, with the bag of spice in the centre, in a stone jar; pour over the hot vinegar and add enough more cold to cover them. They are very good eaten plain, or may be served with sauce tartare. Beat the yolk of a raw egg with a mustard spoonful of mixed mustard; add nice salad oil very slowly and stir constantly until the sauce grows thick and smooth. If put in drop by drop, the egg will absorb half a teacup of oil and become so thick that a teaspoon will stand upright in it. When thick enough put in a teaspoonful of powdered sugar, two of lemon juice and two of vinegar. Many would use double or even triple the above amount of oil and increase the other seasonings accordingly. This is the simple mayonnaise sauce, which can be bottled and kept for any length of time. If too thick, thin with vinegar, unless already sour enough, when sweet cream can be used instead. This is the foundation for sauce tartare, which is made by the addition of some cucumber pickles, parsley and a scrap of onion, chopped fine, and a few capers.

BEEF BOILED WITH ROBERT SAUCE.—A piece of cold beef, which has been previously used for soup, should be cut into fillets. Then make the Robert sauce as follows: Cut up very fine a large onion, add to it one tablespoonful of butter; fry until brown; take out all the onions, add to the butter a small spoonful of flour and half a pint of gravy stock; let it boil for a few moments; now cut into small pieces half a pickled cucumber; put it into the pan with the rest, and add all the onions that you fried; this completes the Robert sauce; now place the fillets of beef in the sauce; should the sauce be too thick add more of your gravy stock; drop a little burned sugar to give the liquid a nice brown color, and simmer the whole gently for twenty minutes. This will be found an economical and palatable mode of serving up cold beef.

JUNIATA OMELET.—Beat six eggs separately; mix with the yolks one and a half cups sweet milk, a little salt, and one tablespoonful of flour well mixed with a little milk, lastly, add the whites beaten to a stiff froth, then pour all into a heated buttered or larded pan and let it boil, stirring constantly until it thickens, then pour into an omelet or baking dish, and bake in a quick oven.

To make pearl barley pudding, which is cheaper and better than rice, soak the barley over night, having first washed it thoroughly. Boil it in the same water it was soaked in, in a covered tin vessel, set inside a kettle of water, to prevent the barley burning. When cooked soft, add eggs, sugar, currants, raisins and nutmeg in the same proportions as for a rice pudding.

FRENCH PICKLES.—One-half peck of green tomatoes, six green peppers, six onions, one large head of cabbage; chop all well together, add one-half pound of white mustard seed, one-half ounce of cloves, one-half ounce of allspice and mace, four tablespoonfuls of salt; put all in a kettle, cover with cold vinegar and boil two hours; add brown sugar to your taste.

POP CORN BALLS.—These are easily made. To one gallon of pop corn take half a pint of molasses or sugar; put into a skillet and let it boil up once; pour it over the corn; grease your hands with sweet butter and make the whole into balls of such size as you please. They are ready for use at once.

MINCE PIE.—One cracker and a half, three spoonfuls of melted butter, a cup of molasses, a cup of vinegar, raisins and spice to your taste. Melt the butter and vinegar, then add the rest, and fill your paste. Cover as usual. This, if well made, can hardly be distinguished from a minced pie of meat and apples.

INDIAN BANNOCK.—One pint of meal thoroughly scalded in one quart of milk; when cool stir in four well beaten eggs; a little sugar and salt, and bake in a quick oven. It is very nice.

INDIAN MEAL MUFFINS.—One cupful and a half of meal, scalded in one pint of milk; butter the size of an egg; one tablespoonful of sugar; salt; one egg; half a cupful of yeast, and flour enough to make a rather stiff batter. Let stand an hour. Bake in a quick oven.

KEEPING HORSERADISH.—The very best way to keep horseradish for winter use is this: Dig the roots, put them in dry sand, put them in the cellar, and you will have good, tender and nice horseradish any time you choose.

INDIAN CAKE.—Three cupfuls of meal one cupful of flour; one pint of sour milk; soda to sweeten it; two eggs; two large spoonfuls of butter; half cupful of sugar.

FRIED POTATOES.—Potatoes, sliced very thin, should be cooked in a deep skillet; the lard or butter must be boiling hot. If placed in a wire sieve, much time is saved and trouble spared.

HUMOROUS.

SOMEWHAT off: Gilhooly strolled into Mose Schaumburg's store on Austin avenue, and after looking around, he said to Mose, who, rubbing his hands, asked him what he wanted: "Will you be kind enough to bring me a glass of beer, some fried beefsteak with onions, some fried potatoes and some boiled cabbage?" replied Gilhooly. "Mishter Gilhooly, mine store vash not a restaurant." "What the deyil have I got to do with that? You have got up a sign there that reads: "If you don't see what you want ask for it." I want some grub. I don't see it, so I ask for it, and instead of bringing on the grub you go to telling me what your occupation is, as if I cared a cent. Why don't you take down your sign?" When last seen Mose was standing in a thoughtful attitude in front of that sign, absorbed in profound contemplation.

ASHBURNHAM, MASS., Jan. 14, 1880.

I have been very sick for two years. They all gave me up as past cure. I tried the most skillful physicians but they did not reach the worst part. The lungs and heart would fill up every night and distress me, and my throat was very bad. I told my children I never should die in peace until I had tried Hop Bitters. I have taken two bottles. They have helped me very much indeed. I am now well. There was a lot of sick folks here who have seen how they helped me, and they used them and are cured, and feel as thankful as I do that there is so valuable a medicine made.
MRS. JULIA G. CUSHING.

AN old letter: EDONIA, December, Year Two.—Dear Eve: I have been on the rampage now one month, prospecting for our new home, and have seen some ranches that will do pretty well, but none of them just the ticket. The old garden is a hard place to beat, but we have lost that and are turned out now to root hog or die. We will fight it out now on this line if it takes all summer. Eating that apple was a great blunder, but, my dear girl, let bygones be bygones; there is hope for us yet. Just as soon as I strike a good claim I will come back to you. Watch over Cain closely; he is a brick. The weather is raw and cold: I feel that I am too thinly clad. No more now; from your loving ADAM. P. S.—Has Cain cut another tooth yet?

Liquid or Dry.

Some people prefer to purchase medicines in the dry state so that they can see for themselves that they are purely vegetable. Others have not the time or desire to prepare the medicine, and wish it already to use.

To accommodate each class the proprietors of Kidney-Wort now offer that well-known remedy in both Liquid and dry forms.

Sold by druggists everywhere.—Truth.

"As that poor man in New Hampshire died of smoking, I don't know as I ought to press you to take this cigar," said a visitor to a reporter. "I can accept it," said the scribe, as he reached for the Victoria, a stranger to newspaper offices, adding: "A fellow who has written up deaths from arsenic in wall paper, from chicory in coffee, from eating canned articles, and from inhaling sewer gas, will die a natural death."

AN EXTRAORDINARY CASE.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, February 20, 1881.

To Mr. J. W. Graham, Druggist:

Dear Sir—My case was an acute form of Bronchitis, and was of one and a half year's duration. I employed the best medical aid possible, but failed rapidly, until the doctors said I would die—that my case was incurable. Thrown upon my own resources, I got a bottle of DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, and in six hours felt a decided relief. In three days the cough almost disappeared. Now that my chances of life are good for many years, I earnestly recommend the above to every sufferer of throat or lung disease. C. G. LATHROP.

A YOUNG would-be wit in Lewistown, Me., who attempted to chaff a half-intoxicated lumberman, was greeted with: "I mind my own business. I know what you are. We make No. 2 clothespins out of such stock as you up our way. You git!"

For dyspepsia, indigestion, depression of spirits and general debility, in their various forms; also as a preventive against fever and ague and other intermittent fevers, the "Ferro-Phosphorated Elixir of Calisaya," made by Caswell, Hazard & Co, New York, sold by all Druggists, is the best tonic; and for patients recovering from fever or other sickness, it has no equal.

"THIRTY years ago I was a poor boy," he proudly observed to the reporter—"a poor boy at two dollars a week. Step by step I rose from the menial position until I became a member of the Legislature—and here I am at last!" The interview was held at the gentleman's place of residence—the State prison at Auburn.

Pimples and Humors on the Face.—In this condition of the skin, the "Vegetine" is the great remedy, as it acts directly upon the cause. It cleanses and purifies the blood, thereby causing humors of all kinds to disappear.

THE father of an elderly damsel to marriageable young man:—"On the day that I give you my daughter Adele, I will deposit 100,000 francs with M. Lafitte." Francois:—"Thanks, dear sir, but suppose you give me the 100,000 francs, and deposite Mlle. Adele with M. Lafiitte."

We can insure any person having a bald head or troubled with dandruff, that Carboline, a deodorized extract of petroleum, will do all that is claimed for it. It will not stain the most delicate fabric and is delightfully perfumed.

MR. BEECHER thinks that ninety-five men in every hundred will lie. He has the right idea, but his proportion is not exactly correct. Now, there's Mr. Beecher won't lie for one; and there's "us," that makes two. And you'll have to advertise to find the other three, and they will probably lie to get the reward.

"Female complaints," are the result of impure blood. Use "Dr. Lindsey's Blood Searcher." Sure cure.

"I MET a lovely woman from Rome, Ga., and she said:—"I've been at summer resorts, for a month, and all I want now is to be in my back porch at home in a loose wrapper and my face buried in a Georgia watermelon."

WHY are the Germans like quinine and gentian? Because they are two tonics.

THE ONE GREAT MEDICINE.

Without doubt there are now, and have been for years past, several medicines of remarkable merit before the public—medicines which have been used, in very many cases, with excellent success. The names of these will readily recur to our readers, and they are the names of preparations whose worth, for certain purposes, no one is supposed to deny. But we are fully justified, by undeniable and notorious facts, in saying, and we do unhesitatingly say, that the one great medicine of the present day—the medicine, we mean, which now stands pre-eminent above all others—is the famous VEGETINE of Mr. H. R. Stevens of Boston. Some of the undeniable facts respecting this famous medicine are these:

First, it is astonishingly efficient in really curing the various diseases for which it is especially compounded and intended.

Second, it acts with a celerity which is generally very surprising. A single bottle has often either cured the user of a serious difficulty, or brought about a most agreeable change, while a very few bottles have in thousands of instances effected the complete cure of a long standing disease which had previously baffled the skill of the best physicians.

Third, it acts directly upon the blood, of which it is the only powerful and thorough purifier.

Fourth, the testimonials in support of these facts and the extraordinary worth of this medicine are from well-known and most respectable men and women, and, in many instances, from persons holding the highest social positions. They are not certificates from unknown and irresponsible individuals. We, ourselves, know the very high estimation in which Vegetine is held in one of the best families in the city.

There is, in short, and can be, no doubt or mistake whatever about the unprecedented and surprising efficacy, value and success of the Vegetine. As a purifier of the blood and a quick renovator and invigorator of the human system, physical and mental, no medicine, as is now generally conceded, has ever been devised and compounded at all equal to it; and, as a speedy and thorough cure for such complaints as catarrh, cough, stomach weakness and faintness, loss of appetite, dyspepsia, cancerous humors, scrofula, rheumatism, kidney and some other equally serious complaints, Vegetine altogether surpasses any and all other known medicinal preparations. The rapidity with which this great medicine has won its way into all parts of this country and various foreign ones since its discovery and introduction, not many years ago, is something alike surprising and confirmatory of its intrinsic excellence.—Providence, (R. I.) Gazette.

"PA, what is a pessimist, and what is an optimist?" "A pessimist, my son, is one who takes the surplus kittens, just after they are born, and chloroforms them. The optimist is one who lets the kittens grow up, to live a wretched, starving life; to be tortured continually by boys and other thoughtless animals, and to be finally killed with brickbats and left to rot on the streets.

A Fortune

may be made by hard work, but can neither be made nor enjoyed without health. To those leading sedentary lives Dr. R. V. Pierce's 'Golden Medical Discovery" is a real friend. It stimulates the liver, purifies the blood, and is the best remedy for consumption, which is scrofulous disease of the lungs. By all druggists.

"JOHN, what is that peculiar smell?" asked a man's wife as he was trying to steal in bed without waking her, about 2 o'clock A. M. "That is the incense we use in the lodge-room, my dear, it exales—it exales—" "Yes, I know now," she interrupted; "I recognize the odor—XX ales."

Being entirely vegetable, no particular care is required while using Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets." They operate without disturbance to the constitution, diet, or occupation. For sick headache, constipation, impure blood, dizziness, sour eructations from the stomach, bad taste in the mouth, billious attacks, pain in region of kidney, internal fever, bloated feeling about the stomach, rush of blood to head, take Dr. Pierce's "pellets." By druggists.

DISRAELI said: "Ignorance never settles a question." There is where the great premier was wrong. If it is a question as to a man's fitness to serve on a jury, ignorance always settles the question, and in the ignorant man's favor.

always becomes the favorite remedy of those who try it. It is a specific for all female "weakness" and derangements, bringing strength to the limbs and back, and color to the face. Of all druggists.

Torpid kidneys, and constipated bowels, are the great cause of chronic diseases. Kidney-Wort has cured thousands. Try it and you will add one more to their number. Habitual costiveness afflicts millions of the American people. Kidney-Wort will cure it. Kidney-Wort has cured kidney complaints of thirty years standing. Try it. See adv.

"WHAT a nice-looking young man?" simpered a lady to her friend, as a youth in the omnibus deposited her nickel in the safety-box. "Yes," was the reply, "I see he is passing fare."

GENTS—I desire to express to you my thanks for your wonderful Hop Bitters. I was troubled with dyspepsia for five years previous to commencing the use of your Hop Bitters some six months ago. My cure has been wonderful. I am the pastor of the first Methodist Church of this place, and my whole congregation can testify to the great virtues of your bitters.

It is the common observation that the standard of natural health and normal activity, among American women, is being lowered by the influence of false ideas and habits of life, engendered by fashionable ignorance and luxurious living. It is a happy circumstance that Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham has come to the front to instruct and cure the sufferers of her sex.

FIND YOUR PLACE.

In this world, so great and mighty,
There's a place for every one,
And each one must find his corner,
Ere life's battle can be won.
If you meet with stern rebuff,
Do not stop to mind it:
Search with all your heart and soul
For your place, and—find it!

Set to work with care and patience,
And a firmly-settled mind,
That with pluck and perseverance,
You your place will surely find.
Pause a moment then and think
What line must prefer you,
This decided, go your way,
And let naught deter you.

One is born to be a merchant,
One towards law with longing turns,
One to sea, and one to physic,
One with poet's fire burns.
One is made to grind the grain,
One to sow and reap it—
Every mortal has his place,
Find yours, then, and keep it.

While you go to school or college,
Keep your end always in view,
Learn all that you can about it,
Know your business through and through,
When your place at length awaits,
With a strong heart take it,
Do your duty, hold your fort,
And do not forsake it!

HER DANGER.

Blanche usually spent her evenings alone of late, unless some of her oldtime friends dropped in for an hour or so, so that to-night, sitting all by herself in the dainty little sitting-room, just off the nursery, where baby Theo was sleeping in her cradle, she was no more lonesome than usual.

And yet there were traces of tears on her face, for somehow she had been thinking it all over, and it seemed to her very strange and pitiful that, before she had been two years married, her husband should prefer to leave her alone every evening as regularly as evening came.

Theo St Guest was a handsome fellow, and Blanche had loved him with all her heart and soul when she married him.

She was so proud, and justly proud of him, and they had begun their new life under no dullness on their happiness.

Then baby came—so like handsome father, with his curling brown hair, and bright hazel eyes, and beautiful mouth, that Blanche, in a little ecstasy, had said there was but one name in the world for her—Theo—for her papa, and after that—very, very gradually, the shadow began to fall on the lovely home.

Sitting to-night in her sitting-room, making such a fair picture in her pink lawn dress, with her fair golden hair rippling off her forehead her dark eyes bright with unshed tears, Blanche was busy thinking it all over, with a desperate little ache in her heart.

"He has not spent one evening home with me since baby Theo was three months old. Every night, or regularly as night comes, he says he must go back to the office—and he never used to go."

Her lovely mouth quivered with the distressing thoughts of her heart, and she leaned her head back against the cushions, the tears dropping slowly, great diamond drops.

"Before we were married he often used to tell me he neglected his business many a time to be with me, and now——"

A little despairing look gloomed over her face.

"Now—he goes out every evening, not knowing or caring how I feel, or how I get along."

A little lusty cry from the blue silk and lace-canopied crib in the nursery momentarily scattered her thoughts, as she went and took the baby up in her loving arms, and cooed and hushed it, with its velvety cheek against her white breast.

"Mother's little comfort," she thought, "but what a sad difference in everything your coming has made, little Theo.

"Before I was gay, and strong and well, and could ride and dance, and go wherever I chose without stopping to consider if it would hurt me.

"But now, baby mine, it is all so changed and papa doesn't love me any more because I cannot amuse and entertain him.

"If it were he who was weak and wretched, and suffering in any way for my sake, I would love him better than ever; but, men are—men."

A tear, dropped on baby's beautiful head, and just that minute a maid stepped quietly in with a card for Mrs. St. Guest, that bore a name that sent a swift little flush all over her face—Ransom Pierce, to whom she had been engaged for a year, whom she had never seen since they parted at the time of the misunderstanding that resulted so fatefully.

She laid baby carefully down in its blue and white nest, before she turned to the girl.

"You may stay by Miss Theo, Annie until I come back."

Then she went into her dressing-room, and stood a moment in indecision.

Should she go down? Ought she to go down?

For a second the question came to her, then as suddenly, the ridiculousness of questioning her duty as a lady and a hostess occurred to her, and, not knowing the brief hesitation was the warning voice of her good angel, this lonely, heart-sore little woman went down-stairs to see Ransom Pierce, who had been Fate-ordered to choose this especial time for seeing her.

She was more delicately lovely than ever, and a great throb of the old love thrilled all through him as she entered the parlor, in her sweet, grave way he remembered so well.

While he—with his eager face, his reverential manner, somehow made her feel that, after all, she was not wholly deserted by friends.

He took her hand in his, and looked straight down in her eyes.

"When I saw you last I did not expect to meet you the next time like this. But if you are happy——"

She smiled—thoroughly loyal little husband lover that she was.

"Oh, yes, indeed—and very glad to see you, Ransom.

"I was just a little lonely to-night for Mr. St. Guest is busy at his office quite often now."

That was the keynote to all that followed—those few innocent words of hers, on the subject lying nearest her heart, told Ransom Pierce the whole story, and he exerted himself as he had not done in many a day to make himself pleasant to this woman, who had once thought she loved him.

And he succeeded in it.

It was—oh, pity!—it was quite a novelty to Blanche to enjoy an evening, and she brightened and bloomed under the excitement, so that when he went away, in an hour's time, Mr. Pierce ventured to take her hand in a close clasp, and ask her if he might be permitted to do what he could towards enlivening her lonesome hours.

And in pure, glad gratitude she said yes.

And in one week's time she discovered that instead of gratitude being the motive, it was a spirit of coquetry suddenly developed in her, whose object was—not to reward this friend, but to punish her husband.

Only St. Guest would not be punished. Once or twice he said he was sorry he was obliged to leave her alone so much, but that it would not always be so, he hoped.

Every day he kissed her, and said he was so, so sorry she did not feel well—but all the same, as soon as dinner was over and Theo-girl had had her romp with him, he took his departure, and Blanche knew it would be twelve, maybe one o'clock before he would come in.

At the first, Blanche had been unable to sleep, knowing he was away, but latterly, she was beginning to be so indifferent, that when at length he did come, he found her sleeping.

"That is right," he would say to her, next morning, and Blanche would smile frigidly, and wish she only could do something—anything, almost, to pique him into the old attention.

In these days, when Ransom Pierce came often, always fascinating, and kind, and devoted, Blanche St. Guest did not know whether she was more miserable or glad, until one special day when an October sun was shining brightly, almost warmly, and she was sitting in her room, just where her husband had left her two days before, when he kissed her good-bye, and told her he would not be home for two days, but to try and not be lonesome while he was gone if she could help it.

It had been the bitterest trial for her to endure—this long absence from him, and all the more, as he offered no explanatory word as to why he was going.

"He has ceased to care for me—I know that," she had tortured herself with thinking all those miserable hours.

"He bids me not to be lonesome—'if I can help it,'—it is a shame I ever married him, to be neglected so!"

And for the first time, Blanche felt a mutinous uprising in her heart for her husband to whom she would have so gladly given all her love and confidence—only he did not want it!

At that very moment Ransom Pierce came in, just as Satan's own always steps in at the right moment.

"What—not in the Slough of Despond this beautiful day?" he said, as she went in the parlor.

Then, going up to her, and extending his hand, he looked down in her eyes as no man but a husband or lover has the right to look.

"What is the matter, Blanche? Is it anything I can relieve?"

His low, caressing tones were infinitely soothing to her overstrained nerves, and the tears came to her eyes

"I am a little lonely, only. Theo has been gone two days——"

"Two days—away from you! Blanche, Blanche, how could he or any man leave you so long? If I had you for my wife—oh, my darling, why——"

A little gasp of amazed horror was on her lips—Ransom talking so to her—to her!

He, in his blind passion, went on—

"I cannot bear to see you so unhappy—Blanche!

"I have watched you—I know just how it is—St. Guest is not worthy of you——"

"Allow me to say I differ with you, Pierce, and to suggest that you are both insulting and terrifying my wife.

"I think we can excuse you—can't we Blanche?"

Blanche had flown to her husbands arms, as he entered the room just in time to hear Pierce's words, and to see the horror on his wife's face, as the crumbling edge of the precipice suddenly became visible to her.

There were few words, very few, between the two men, and then when Pierce had gone, never to cross their threshold again, St. Guest took his wife in his arms.

"You have been so cold, so cruel of late, dear," he said, "that I was almost afraid to venture on any demonstration. But may I not make my peace with you know?"

She lay sobbing, with her head on his breast.

"You have left me so much alone, you made me think you had grown tired of me, Theo," she said, between her sobs.

"It was for your own sake," he explained, tenderly.

"I may have been to blame for keeping my plans a secret from you, but I wanted to surprise you, Blanche.

"If I have seemed cold to you Heaven knows it was because I thought you preferred to keep aloof from me. But I was mistaken, was I, darling?"

"Oh Theo, Theo, you don't know how much I love you!"

He kissed her tenderly.

"You will never blame me for—for what he said?" she asked, almost timidly.

"We will never think about it. You are my wife Blanche—if I could not trust you, you never would have been.

"Come here, dear," and the gravity in his tone changed to gay pleasantness, as he arose, and linked her arm in his, and escorted her to the window, where, at the door, stood an exquisite basket-phaeton, with blue-lined and silk-fringed canopy top, a pair of beautiful coal-black ponies, glittering harness, and gay robes.

"Why I worked over hours, my darling," he said.

"These are for you, a gift from me to my little girl's mother, who has sacrificed so much of her health and strength in giving me my child.

"Will you accept it, wife?"

She threw her arms around his neck, kissed him over and over.

"Oh, how wicked I have been, how unworthy I am of the least of your goodness!

"Theo, darling, I will never doubt you again!"

He pushed the hair off her white brow, and looked gravely in her tearful, penitent, happy eyes,

"Did you doubt me, Blanche? Then, there was danger. But—remember this, dear—never again doubt, or fear, or question my love for you."

And she never did.

Iron That India Has.

It is officially intimated that the Government of India have for some time past had under their special consideration the importance of developing the iron industry in India. In Assam, Kuch Behar, Burmah, and the Kumaon ranges the prospects are promising to a greater or less extent. In Lower Bengal, the Raniguni district, Sonthalia, and Chutia Nagpur; in the central Provinces, Sumbalpur, and Chanda; in Central India, the ranges near Gwalior, and in the Punjab numerous localities are found to be specially endowed with all the requisites for successful production. In recalling these facts and inviting the consideration of capitalists, the Viceregal Government state that in quality the ores are mostly found to be extremely pure, and where the proportion of impurities is large recently invented processes have removed all obstacles to their successful elimination. It appears, therefore, that India possesses the means of supplying all her wants in respect of cast iron, wrought iron, and steel, and the supply could be produced remuneratively on a strictly commercial basis. Nothing appears to be necessary in order to attract private enterprise to so eligible an opening except the collection and diffusion of sufficient information and the grant of such facilities as the State may legitimately and reasonably afford to a young and growing industry. The Indian Government points out, however, that private enterprise in this matter must evidently be on a large scale, and not confined to one locality alone. The distances in India are so great and the railway system now so extended that the cost of conveying material to the spot where it is needed is an important factor in every calculation. It has been proved that unless works were established in four different localities the cost of sending old rails and tires to be worked up afresh would exceed that of obtaining new ones from England. Toward the development of the industry in the Raniguni district the attention of the Government has in the first instance been directed in consequence of the fact that a private company was established a few years ago, but after a short time it fell into difficulties. After carefully investigating the causes of failure the Government of India came to the conclusion that the only way in which the works could be at an early date placed in the hands of experienced persons having an adequate demand of capital was by an intermediate purchase on the part of the State. The Bengal Ironworks have, therefore, been purchased for the sum of 430,761 rupees, and the Viceroy now announces that his Council will be ready to transfer them for that sum, together with any further indispensable outlay, to any parties who may establish satisfactorily that they are in possession of sufficient skill and resources, and who are prepared to carry on the manufacture of iron and steel upon a scale commensurate with the probable needs of that portion of British India which is within a reasonable distance of the works. The Governor-General in Council will be further prepared to enter into an engagement for 10 years at fixed prices to be agreed upon.

Twenty Miles by Ladies.

A twenty mile race, riden by ladies, recently took place in Minnesota. The race was called shortly after 4 o'clock, Miss Peek making her appearance first, from the inclosure just back of the judges' stand, mounted on Luhrie. She was dressed in a black habit trimmed with a broad collar of white lace. Little Cricket appeared shortly after from the enclosure in which her horses were kept, half way down the first quarter and round the turn. She was mounted on Resumption, and entered the contest with the horses which had not participated in the race, and which, with one or two exceptions, had been brought to Minneapolis by her for the contest. The riders were nearly of a size, both of them weighing less than ninety pounds, and both rode with exception grace and without a sign of fear.

Little Crickett, the Kansas girl, was dressed in a suit of blue velvet, and as she passed the grand stand was greeted with applause, to which she responded with a wave of the whip. She sat almost erect in the saddle, well poised and graceful, with rather more of dash in her style than her competitor, the Michigan girl. It didn't take long to get them off, Crickett leading and Peek close after her. A blanket would have covered both horses for the first quarter mile, but the little Michigan girl gradually went to the front, and led two lengths at the half mile post, and came down the home stretch like the wind, determined to take a fresh horse. Her misfortunes commenced with the change, for it was slowly made, so far as hurring the horses together was concerned, but once in the saddle she stuck to it with the tenacity of a fly to a pane of glass. She mounted for the second mile Lightning, while Crickett contented herself with the horse she rode and went down the back stretch fully an eighth of a mile in the lead. Lightning proved a two-mile horse, and while Crickett was making a lightning change to the back of Gen. Rowett, she succeeded in overhauling her adversary, and the two went down the track very nearly together. Crickett took a fresh horse, and the two got off on the third mile at Cricket's changing place neck and neck, with the sympathies of the crowd about equally divided. But while Peek changed to Ollie Baker for the fourth mile, Little Crickett stuck tenaciously to the General, not only seuding him for the second, but the third mile, finishing the fifth mile by her little coup nearly three-eighths of a mile in the lead. Cricket made a change to her third horse for the sixth mile with admirable speed, and went away on a fresh horse, while Peek followed a quarter of a mile behind on a weary horse, the Kansas Girl gradually increasing this gap, which was widened still more by her horse for the second mile while Miss Peek took a gray horse with her opponent nearly half a mile in front of her. For the eighth mile Cricket made a change—the slowest of her ride, Peek taking the horse that had narrowed the distance down from a half mile to a quarter before the ninth was entered, for which Cricket made no change while the Michigan girl took a fresh horse at the loss of only a second or two and was off like the wind, still determined to win. Cricket made a change on the tenth mile and Peek clung to her animal reducing the distance to about a quarter, the fleeter and fresher animal of her opponent widening it toward the finish. It was evident from the first that the determined little lady in black was not so cleverly handled as her competitor, and never more so than when the eleventh mile was entered, both riders changing slowly, and Peek losing all she had gained by her horse shying to the side of the track. But her ill luck did not end here. While Cricket was flying along for her second mile on Gen. Rowett, Peek's horse refused to run under the wire, there was a rapid leading of an animal down the track and a leap to its back, with the horse making for the quarter stretch. This all took time, the sympathies of the crowd went out to her in her mistortune, and she got a round of applause as she finished the thirteenth mile fully three-eighths of a mile behind. As the riders went away on the thirteenth mile, after rapid changes, there was more than half a mile between them, Cricket taking the opportunity on the fourteenth to change leisurely, while Peek made a clever one without being able to cut down that half. Misfortunes followed the little girl in black, and as she came in on the fifteenth mile a sudden turn of the horse, a misplaced hand or something threw her to the ground under the heels of her horse. The crowd rose in horror at an impending calamity, but vented their enthusiasm in cheers as she picked herself up, ran a rod, was thrown into the saddle, and was off, followed by the cheers of 10,000 people for her pluck. An inventory of stock made later showed that her injuries did not extend beyond a few bruises, but the disaster had given her opponent still more advantage, and it was clearly Little Crickett's race from that out. There was more than a half a mile between the riders on the sixteenth mile, and the admirable handling which Little Cricket enjoyed, her fresh horses and good horsemanship rendered this even more; a loose saddle girth on the horse ridden by Miss Peek on the nineteenth mile aggravating her defeat and threatening her with disaster for the second time, but she stuck heroically to her task and made a bold dash, at the finish, coming in fully seven-eighths of a mile behind, amid the shouts of applause, Little Ceicket having covered the twenty miles in the remarkable time of forty minutes and fifty-nine seconds, the fastest time on record. The race lacked the exciting interest of its predecessor of the day before but was a remarkable exhibition of equestrianship by the little women.

Little Cricket, the winner, is from Beloit, Kansas, has ridden in a great many races, and it is claimed for her that she has never lost one of them, save through accident. She is sixteen years old, was the winner of the famous race in Rochester, and her backers believe she can beat any woman riding in the country.

OBSTINATE and vicious horses, by having their attention removed from the object on which their mind is bent, can be made much more tractable than they otherwise would be. Some are very difficult to shoe showing a dispesition to bite and kick whenever the shoer touches them. A few grains of the ethereal oil of parsley dropped on a handkerchief and placed before the nose of the horse, it is said never fails to quiet his irritable disposition and make him for the time being perfectly manageable.

Tokay and Its Wine.

Nearly due north of Debreczin is the district to which the little town (2,000 inhabitants) of Tokay gives its name. The train carried us through thousands of acres of fine maize, interspersed with sunflowers, which grow to a height of 8 or 9 feet and are used as sources of oil. We passed occasionally shallow salt lakes, which increased in the neighborhood of Nyiregyhaza, where there is a large lake containing various chlorides and iodides and much used for medicinal purposes. Presently the line trended to the northeast, and the vine-clad sides of the Tokay Mountains came into view. At various points between Debreczin and Tokay we saw multitudes of fine cream-colored oxen, something like those of the Maremma, and in one large field 14 plows, each drawn by two of these oxen, were at work almost side by side. The Tokay wines are grown on a range of hills called the Hegyallya, which are of a volcanic origin, and the soil consists of decomposed tufa and felspathic rocks. The district has been carefully mapped by Joseph Szabo, Professor of Geology in the University of Buda-Presth. The vineyards extend far beyond the town of Tokay, and have an area of nearly 70,000 acres, while the yield sometimes exceeds 12,000,000 gallons. Of course, a great deal of this is common Tischwein, a very light table wine, only the best qualities of which possess any trace of the peculiar Tokay bouquet. The rarest of the Hegyallya wines, is the Essentia, which is made from the juice of slightly dried grapes, which flows naturally from the grapes while in the vat, by their own pressure. Very small quantities of this wine are made, and it never appears in the market. In a large cellar of Tokay wines only one or two small casks of Essentia will be found. It appeared to us scarcely to differ in flavor or character from the fine Ausbruch, made from the same grapes in a similar condition, but from juice expressed by artificial means. Ausbruch is the wine commonly called Tokay, finely fermented and with delicate bouquet. That which we tasted in the Tokay cellars was less sweet and possessed far more character than the wine usually sold in England under the name. It is said that not more than 50,000 gallons of Ausbruch are made annually. Maslas is made by mixing fresh grapes with slightly dried grapes, (we mean, of course, grapes exposed to the sun after being gathered, so as to develop sugar in them). It is drier than Ausbruch, with almost the same bouquet, and is a fine wine. Of course, in this extensive district there are a great variety of wines; the above are simply prominent types. One host gave us an exquisite dry Tokay after the soup. In Count Degenfeld's cellars we tasted an admirable wine of the Maslas type, several years in cask and of great character, which cost a little more than one Austrian florin per litre. We do not know whether such wines stand shipment well, but the wine would certainly be a great boon to this country at double the price. No wine is sent directly from Tokay to England. Our informant said he believed there was a merchant in Pressburg (many miles away and quite out of the Hegyallya district) who communicated directly with England. Of course, Fiume would be the port, and if the cask could be sent direct from Tokay and closed in a second cask there might be some chance of our getting the true Ausbruch and Maslas. The chief trade is with Prussia.

The Best-Known of all Pictures.

Taking the entire product of the painters' art, the work most widely known is, without doubt, "The Last Supper" by Leonardo da Vinci. Certainly no picture has been reproduced by engraving to the like extent. It is, perhaps, not asserting too much to say there are few within the limits of civilization under whose observation, in some form or other, it has not fallen. This, the most popular of pictures, is held by painters and professors of art to embody the highest of qualities of expression and invention, and, in its original state, the most consummate command of executive skill yet attained in painting—a duplication in pictorial art of a similar phenomenon in the dramatic art, where "Hamlet," the most philosophical and poetical of plays, is the most lastingly popular with the theatre-going public. To the vast majority of those for whom Leonardo may be said to have given form to their conception of the most pathetic incident in history, his individuality is absolutely unknown, though, perhaps, a stray anecdote of him may have penetrated into regions where the literature of fine art is as yet a blank. Who does not know the reply of Leonardo to Duke Ludovico respecting the Prior's complaint of the slow progress of "The Last Supper"—how the painter, despairing of finding a model sufficiently villainous-looking for the head of Judas, said that, as a last resource, if no better was to be found, there would always remain that of a troublesome and impertinent Prior to fall back upon.

The Finny Tribes.

Fishermen who live along the Mediterranean shores say the digging of the Panama and Corinth Canals is likely to influence the future character of the finny tribes in the waters which those canals will join. They point to their own experience since the Suez undertaking was completed. Not a single shark was formerly known in the Mediterranean, a fact which made the fish supply of that sea inexhaustible, but sharks now migrate into it freely from the Red Sea and Indian Ocean, and make sad havoc of fish that have a market value.

Khedive Ismail's Extravagance.

The ex-Khedive found, on succeeding his uncle, a flock of geese that laid golden eggs, on which he had not counted. Manchester had to look for a cotton supply to Egypt while the civil war in the United States was raging. Ismail, intelligent as he was, could not understand that liberated blacks would work in cotton fields. He accordingly reckoned upon the new sources of revenue becoming permanent, and rushed into every kind of extravagance. He was not satisfied with real power and the title of Viceroy. A mint of money was spent in buying of the Sultan the right to style himself Khedive, and to implant in the Valley of the Nile the Frankish law of primogeniture. Verdi was engaged to compose a national Egyptian opera, and produced "Aida," which was brought out at Cairo at his highness's expense. Though profuse and luxurious, he was a hard ruler, and held the reins of Government with a tight hand. Ismail was not a man to waste words. Ministers who displeased him were quietly sent away, and if they gave further trouble as quietly disappeared. With his sons he was a severe disciplinarian, but very kind to all the women of his family. Ismail, as Khedive, liked to dazzle influential foreigners, and nothing gratified him more than to read accounts of his profuseness in the European journals. He exercised a watchful surveillance over the telegraphic bureaus. The clerk who allowed anything to pass which showed the Khedive in a bad light was remorselessly broken. If he were not, Baron Reuter know that his privilege would be taken from him. Showy hospitality was extended to literary people, savants, and artists. M. Viollet le Duc was taken up the Nile to the Cataracts in royal state. Pretty actresses and bouffe singers were not the worst treated. English Viceroys and Generals, going to India, found Cairo an earthly paradise. They were lodged sumptuously, their dinners being prepared by French chefs, and the bills all being paid by his Highness. If they went with parties to climb the pyramids a lunch which he had sent awaited them when they descended. Lord Napier, of Magdala, once turned aside from the route he intended following to pass a few days in the Egyptian capital. The Khedive got wind of his project through a telegram sent to the manager of Shepherd's hotel which found its way into the papers. All his numerous palaces were occupied by relatives and distinguished foreigners. But he was determined that Lord Napier should be his guest, so he ordered a residence to be bought and furnished within 12 hours. When the General arrived he was taken to the improvised lodging, which was made ready at an expense of £30,000. Blood horses and carriages were in the mews. Dozens of servants were in attendance. They were ordered, under pain of flogging, not to ask for backshish. This willful waste has not been followed by woful want. Ismail closed with full hands. He rides, it is true, at Vichy and at Naples in hack carriages, but this is because he spends a deal of money in keeping up the military party in Egypt. The wealth of Ismail is the explanation of Arabi's persevering boldness. This soldier of fortune is prompted by the ex-Khedive, who has not abandoned the hope of getting back to Cairo and there setting up again in business as a Pharaoh.

French Gardening.

An American market-gardener divides his ground into many lots, and plants nearly every variety of truck known to the market. The French gardener gives himself up to the cultivation of a special class or succession of fruits or vegetables, and by long study and practice, by experimenting with various manures, soils and modes of culture, arrives at perfection. He is also much more economical of space and more prodigal of labor than we are, or, in fact, than we need be. He seldom suffers his ground to lie fallow; crop succeeds crop in endless rotation; the cauliflower is set among the slow hills, ready to spread as soon as the melons are gathered. Between the rows of asparagus are planted early potatoes, lettuce, etc., in such a manner as to keep the ground constantly fruitful, and when the weather becomes frosty and the sun loses a goodly share of its forcing power, large bell glasses are employed, one of which is placed over each plant—especially in the case of salads and heat is then concentrated upon it until its full growth is fairly attained. The enormous size of the French asparagus is chiefly due to the manner of planting. Instead of setting the plants closely together, as we do, a space of at least six inches square is allowed to each "stool," which enables it to suck a large amount of nutriment from the soil and become a strong and solid plant. Each "stool" is also manured repeatedly every season, the soil being carefully scraped away down to the roots, the compost being placed around them, and the earth put back again. The French system of cultivating the apple, pear and peach is also peculiar. The trees are all grafted and dwarfed. A strong wire is stretched along in front of each row, about three feet above the ground. Upon this wire a single branch of each tree is trained, and as soon as well started this branch is made, by heavy pruning, the only fruit-bearing one on the tree. The consequence is that the entire strength of the tree goes to the nourishing of the fruit upon this branch, and the fruit becomes large and fair in proportion. This process, by the by, is borrowed from the Chinese.

Slate for roofs, of the best quality, has a glistening, semi-metallic appearance, something like that of paper rubbed with black lead pencil. That of a dull, earthy aspect is softer, more absorbent, and consequently more liable to yield to atmospheric influences, rain and frost. Of two qualities of slate, that which absorbs the least weight of water when pieces of equal size are soaked for an hour or two, is generally the best, being least liable to split by frost, and become weather-worn.

THE ELECTIONS.

VICTORY EVERYWHERE.

The Avalanche Democracy.

We wish we had about two dozen cuts of game roosters to plant at the heads of our columns to express by symbol our exultant feelings over the glorious result of Tuesday's elections in two thirds of the States of the Union.

Alabama sends a soldid Democratic delegation to Congress. The 8th District is redeemed and Luke Pryor is Congressman. Shelley was too small for Lowe's shoes. Forney goes in by the "Usual Majority." Herndon makes it in the Mobile District by a rather close shave. Shelley in the Dallas District ditto. Herbert laid over Sam Rice handsomely in the Montgomery District. Williams and Hewett walked over their Independent opponents without trouble. Oats went in practically without opposition. Forney beat Bingham in Talladega Beat, and this is the first time it has gone Democratic since the war. Forney beat Bingham everywhere, thus fulfilling the prophecies of Bingham and McAfee. The Democrats or Alabama rejoice. Do those men who didn't go to the polls feel as good as those who did go and fought the fight? Suppose every Democrat had stayed away from the polls? The Radicals would have been throwing up their hats now. But in the hour of victory there is no place for rebuke. It is the season when man can be generous. Let us pass on to Georgia.

There they too have a soldid Democratic delegation in Congress. Felton and Speer, both Independents, are beaten bounds into the Democratic column to the tune of a hundred thousand majority.

New York

Connecticut

follows suit and sends old Eaton back to Congress.

Pennsylvania

walks from under the yoke of the Camerons into the Democratic household.

Massachusetts

elects Ben Butler, the Democratic nominee for Governor by a large majority. We used to say down here that Governor Butler stole spoons We take it all back. Uncle Ben, as he is now familiarly and affectionately termed, joined the Democratic party some few years ago and washed all his political sins away. Uncle Ben knows a cat when he sees it, and it is said can tell how it will jump. Massachusetts gives the Democrats a gain in Congress also, as indeed do most of the States.

New Hampshire

also joins the band. In short, in the language of the Noble Headline Poet of the Selma Times: "Everywhere the people have spoken, and from Massachusetts to California the mighty weapon of American Freemen has spoken and quietly the ballot box tells the tale New York, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, New Hampshire throw off the yoke and elect good and true men. A Democratic House is assured by an overwhelming majority and Fraud and Bossism stands rebuked."

Many other States too numerous to mention, always Democratic repeat the story with emphasis. Enough is known to enable us to say it is a phenomenal and tidal wave victory of Democracy. There isn't enough Radicals and Independents left to bury their dead. Let a Democratic Congress proceed to put the corpse in the ground.

The miserable little route agents who cabbage daily papers for the benefit of friends whenever there is an important event in the daily press may perhaps play their pranks a couple of years longer, but after then the Democratic party is going to kick them so high they will not light during the period of their natural lives After every election of importance the people of Jacksonville miss their daily paper mail. As on such occasions there are usually no Selma or Montgomery papers on the trains for sale, the conclusion is they are cabbaged en route.

One of the most brutal crimes ever committed is reported from Danville, Va. A little negro boy, aged eight years, had a silver dollar, which Dave Mills, a colored man, coveted. The boy refused to give it up, and Mills, in order to coerce him into compliance with his demand, caught him and held him over the escape pipe of a steam engine until the little fellow was nearly cooked.

Augusta Chronicle:

A SCANDAL OF THE AGE.—It is a scandal of the age that the punishment so quickly and summarily visited upon negroes who commit manslaughter is not so zealously and alertly meted out to white men who often know better and have less excuse.

Temperance in Vermont.

Vermont may claim to be the banner State of legislative temperance. She has now a stringent liquor law, but the temperance people, not satisfied with that, have got before the Legislature a constitutional amendment by which the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, other than cider and wine made from fruits of that State, are forever prohibited; and providing also that the sale of the said cider and wine shall be so regulated as to prevent drunkenness. But even this is not enough. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union says that another amendment will be presented at the earliest possible date to abolish even the native wine and cider.

A hypocrite is a man who pretends to be what he is not. It is not necessary that a man shall talk and pray in meeting in order to be a hypocrite. Religion has no monopoly in the line of hypocricy. Any man, whether he be a professed christian or not, who pretends that he is an honest man when he is not, is a hypocrite. The young man who passes himself off in the family or in the social circle as temperate or chaste when he is not is a hypocrite. It is not necessary for them to join the church to be a hypocrite. Lots of people are priding themselves on not being pypocrites because they are not in the church when, in fact, they are among the rankest hypocrites to be found anywhere.—Golden Rule.

THE LONGEST BEARD IN THE WORLD.—Adam Kirpen, of Chicago, who possesses the longest beard in the world, is at present sojourning with relatives in this city. The beard which he at present wears has attained the wonderful length of nearly 12 feet. He disposes of this rather unwieldly appendage when walking on the street by rolling it around in a leather belt suspended about his neck. The length of the board is such that he can place both feet upon it and the other end upon being lifted up reaches a few inches above his head. The beard, which is a dull gray color, is quite thick and is the result of 22 years' uninterrupted growth.

The condition as above indicated, exists in almost every family. With some the troubles are of recent standing, while many have become chronic and difficult to overcome. Old and young females are constant victims. Dr. Dromgoole's English Female Bitters makes positive and unmistakable cures of all lingering female weaknesses, excesses, irregularities and periodical obstructions; imparts strength and vigor to the feeble and emaciated; builds up and re-animates flagging, broken-down and worn-out constitutions; repairs damages inflicted by years of painful suffering; regulates, comforts and consoles the troubled maiden, and is a fast friend to mothers all along the troubled pathway of their married lives.

It cures ovarian diseases, uterine displacements and ulcerations, hysterics, leucorrhœa, chlorosis, weakness of the kidneys and back, revives the drooping, despondent and melancholy, calms the excitable and nervous. It is a never-failing iron tonic female regulator. $1.00. Sold every-where. Family Medical Adviser mailed free to any address.

At the bedside, the physician's first question is, "How are your bowels?" proving that they must in all cases be properly attended to at once, by the use of some medicine that will cleanse the stomach, excite the liver, cause a free flow of bile and carry off these disease-making secretions. Pills, oils and other strong medicines, produce pain, griping, sick stomach, and often cause the loss of time.

Bailey's Saline Aperient is relieved of all these unpleasant effects; it acts mildly upon the bowels, causes a free flow of bile, relieves constipation, biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach, heartburn, colic, indigestion, etc.

It is a white powder, and is as cooling and pleasant as a glass of soda water. Large Bottles 50 cents.

Mrs. Cawthon of Selma, formerly one of the belles of Jacksonville society, is the guest of Mrs. Jno. M. Wyly.

Owing to the absence of Mr. Menko at Selma last week, on a visit to relatives, the usual locals of his choice stock of goods did not appear. He promises more and a surprise next week. Look out for Germania Tanning Co. locals.

Notice the advertisement of new store of C. D. Harper. His line of goods will be general, and prices low. He comes to our midst well recommended as a deserving man and we hope he may share the patronage of the public.

Messrs Thos. P. Renfro, E. G. Caldwell and Alex Woods left for Florida Friday. They go for the purpose of planting orange groves. Some of these gentlemen have already acquired lands in Florida. They are of the best citizens of our county and the Florida people need not be afraid to welcome them.

Mrs. Hamilton, and other of the Mobile ladies who have spent the summer here, loth to leave our delightful scenery and climate, still linger. If a genial clime could keep them, we could wish it might ever be spring here, despite the assurance of the bard who tells us,

"Spring would be but gloomy weather,
If we had nothing else but spring."

But our desires cannot change the seasons. Winter will come and they will go to their more southern homes and warmer skies. But when spring again comes smiling over our "misty mountain tops," let us hope that, like the swallows, they may come again.

MARRIED, at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Jno. M. Wyly, Esq., in this place, Nov. 7th, by Rev. Father Rewatus Isedoreus Holiand, David F. Lowe, of Montgomery, and Miss Annie Wyly, of Jacksonville.

Quite a large gathering of the friends and relatives of the young couple from Montgomery, Selma, and this place met at the residence of Major Wyly at 11 o'clock, a. m. to witness the interesting and impressive marriage service as conducted by Father Holiand. After the service a rich collation was spread. This over, the wedding party took the train for the future home of the bride, followed by the kind wishes of our towns-people, who, without exception, loved and esteemed the beautiful young bride. The collection of wedding presents were costly, appropriate and tasteful. The marriage was quite an event in society circles here.

Ears FOR THE Million.

Foo Shoo's Balsam of Shark's Oil

Positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness Known.

This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Seas known as Carcharodon Rondelettii. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing was discovered by a Buddhist Priest about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1.00 per bottle.

Hear What the Deaf Say!

It has performed a miracle in my case.
I have no unearthly noises in my head and much better.
I have been greatly benefitted.
My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.

"Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to HAYLOCK & JENNEY, 7 Dey Street, New-York, enclosing $1.00, and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. ### Corn Shucking in the South.

The farmer who proposes to give a corn-shucking selects a level spot in his lot, conveniently near the crib, rakes away all trash, and sweeps the place clean with a brush broom. The corn is then pulled off the stalks, thrown into wagons, hauled to the lot, and thrown out on the spot selected; all in one pile. If it has been previously "norated" through the neighborhood that there is to be plenty to eat and drink at the corn-shucking, and if the night is auspicious, there will certainly be a crowd. Soon after dark the negroes begin to come in, and before long the place will be alive with them,—men, women, and children. After the crowd has gathered and been moderately warmed up, two "gin'rls" are chosen from among the most famous corn-shuckers on the ground, and these proceed to divide the shuckers into two parties, later comers reporting alternately to one side or the other, so as to keep the forces equally divided. The next step, which is one of great importance, is to divide the corn-pile. This is done by laying a fence-rail across the top of the corn-pile, so that the vertical plane, passing through the rail, will divide the pile into two equal portions. Laying the rail is of great importance, since upon this depends the accuracy, of the division; it is accompanied with much argument, not to say wrangling. The position of the rail being determined, the two generals mount the corn-pile, and the work begins. The necessity for the "gin'r'ls to occupy the most conspicuous position accessible, from which to cheer their followers, is one reason why they get up on top of the corn; but there is another, equally important, which is to keep the rail from being moved, it being no uncommon thing for one side to change the position of the rail, and thus throw an undue portion of the work upon their adversaries. The position of the "gin'r'l" in a corn-shucker differs from that of the soldier, in that the former is in greater danger than any of his followers; for the chances are that, should his side seem to be gaining, one of their opponents will knock the leader off the corn-pile, and thus cause a momentary panic, which is eagerly taken advantage of. This proceeding, however, is considered fair only in extreme cases, and not unfrequently leads to a general row. If it is possible, imagine a negro man standing up on a pile of corn, holding in his hand an ear of corn, and shouting the words of a song below, and you will have pictured the "corn gin'r'l." It is a prime requisite that he should be ready in his improvisations and have a good voice, so that he may lead in the corn-song. The corn-song is almost always a song with a chorus, or to use the language of corn-shuckers, the "gin'r'ls give out," and the shuckers "drone." These songs are kept up continuously during the entire time the work is going on, and though extremely tiring to, yet, when sung by fifty pairs of lusty lungs, there are few things more exciting.

New Cooking Articles.

It is refreshing to see a gray teakettle actually singing the same old song of its brass predecessor. A gray teapot keeps it company. What is this red affair on the dresser? That is the new coffee mill, that somewhat resembles a boy's velocipede, having two wheels, with the funnel and box between. The cook turns a crank attached to one of the wheels and it flies around quickly and much easier than the old one, standing unsteadily between the knees. The large spoons in the dresser drawer are all of agate ware, like the pots. The new nutmeg grater turns with a little crank, and there is a lemon shaker, of tin, like the less innocent barroom implement. Lemon squeezers are of various shapes; a nice one has metal bowls for holding the lemon or orange.

The frying-basket is of woven wire, or of iron pierced with many holes. It is for plunging fritters, croquets, oysters, doughnuts or pan fish, a number at a time, into the pan of hot oil or lard, enabling you to put in a number at precisely the right moment and to lift them out again at the "nick of time" without breaking. It save the frying fat in two ways, by letting it all drain out of the basket as it is lifted, and keeping the broken bits of fried articles well out of the fat. This is then ready to be set aside and used again. Instead of piercing each separate oyster, croquet or pan fish with a fork to take it up, the whole "fry" is lifted out entire. The new beefsteak, with its two sides punched out in small holes to let the heat in, with a channel grooved round each for preserving the gravy. It is designed to prevent the flaring up of the flame from the dripping juices falling into the fire, which scorches many a beefsteak. There is a difference of opinion over the gridiron. Some housekeepers, knowing that the rapid cooking of the steak on the old-fashioned bar gridiron keeps nearly all its juices within, complain that the new method suffers the juices to drain slowly out, and leaves the steak itself dry and tasteless, with its saved gravy outside. The double broiler should be heated very hot, before the steak is put into it, which will probably obviate the difficulty, as everybody prefers the gravy kept in the steak to having it in the dish. What is needed is to char the outer surface as soon as possible. Pretty gray waiters and gray coal scuttles of galvanized iron have replaced the black; kitchens seem to have reached the half-mourning stage at present. A meat "roaster" aims now for baking meats outside the oven. It is not like the old tin kitchen, which really roasts, and can never be replaced for the delightful flavor imparted to the meats. In the new roaster the meat is covered with a sheet-iron cover the size of a small inverted foot-tub, which fits into the dripping-pan. It is more properly a "braizing" arrangement, and very suitable for cooking the tougher portions of the meat, which stews within, while a shovel full of coals applied to the lid will furnish the necessary browning on top. Its place is on the stove or range.

The Suez Canal.

The London Times in a leader on the Suez Canal, declares that in an age when the control of nations over arms of the sea passing through or commanded by their territory, is being everywhere abolished, it is impossible that we can allow the direction of a company to arrogate powers as extensive as were ever claimed by Denmark over the Sound. The neutralization of the Suez Canal, in its reasonable sense, is understood to mean that it shall be regarded as an arm of the sea. The same paper points out that the canal is practically open now. There is now a question of its enlargement, or of the construction of a new one. M. De Lesseps, it says perfectly understands that there is room for such a scheme, though he may not be prepared to carry it out. The scheme, however, is merely one of the engineering possibilities of the future. Were a new canal begun to-morrow, English interests could not be left in abeyance pending its completion. The practical question just now, it says, is how to secure ourselves, in case of a complication which may possibly arise, against being thwarted by M. De Lesseps. The subject of the canal will, we believe, seriously engage the attention of Her Majesty's Government.

AGRICULTURE.

Shallow Cultivation for Fruits.—Fruit growers must be reminded that their hoes, cultivators and ploughs may do more damage to plants than good, if not used with discretion. The small fruits—berries, currants, grapes, also dwarf peas, quinces, etc.,—root near the surface. Here are found the best roots, those that provide the most nourishment. Nature designed these to be mulched by the dead leaves, and in our fields mulching would be the best treatment, if it were possible. As it is, the best we can do is to give frequent but shallow cultivation. I have seen intelligent men ploughing deep furrows alongside of their raspberries, currants, and grapes, well satisfied that they were doing thorough work that would secure an abundant harvest. Let such men dig up one plant before thus ploughing and one after, and see what butchery they have committed. There are no tap-roots stretching far down into the subsoil, but simply a few laterals branching out, say from two to four inches below the surface, and more than half of them have been sacrificed to the ploughshare. When we set green hands hoeing strawberries and newly-set raspberries, we know what they will do if not watched. They will destroy half these roots and loosen the hold for life that the struggling peas have secured by chopping close about them.

Fruit Evaporation.—Many may now be considering the subject of fruit evaporation, and wonder if it will pay. Two or three things are to be considered. If you have plenty of fruit, if you will work industriously, and if you will have only a first-class product for the market, it will pay. A thousand bushels of good apples will yield 4000 pounds of evaporated fruit which, according to the present market quotations, would bring about twelve cents per pound. It is more profitable than to sell the green fruit for an average of say twenty five cents per bushel. Berries, sweet corn and green fruits of every kind can be evaporated, and when we consider how much goes to waste every year when fruit is plentiful we shall see that there is money in it. Evaporated fruit always brings a better price in market than that dried in the old style, and it costs but little to run the evaporator. Evaporators costs from $50 to $600. The former will cure about ten bushels, and the latter from one hundred to 150 bushels, per day of twenty-four hours. What could be saved in fruit that now is wasted would in a short time buy an evaporator.

Major Ben Perley Poore, of Massachusetts, who has bred poultry for twenty-five years, says: "Fancy fowl farmers assert that any owner of land can keep a hundred fowls. From 200 birds may be obtained annually 2300 dozen eggs and, if inclined 1500 pounds marketable chickens before the close of August in each year. The product will pay from $450 to $500, and leave the original stock for next year. The expenses will not be over $200 to $250, thus furnishing an equal sum of profit from every 200 fowls. The cost of keeping them in such quantities as alluded to, would not exceed 65 cents per head, if all their food is produced and rated at 70 cents a bushel. With the run of the farm the cost would be lessened. This leaves a handsome profit for the investment."

Common coal ashes, well distributed, about roots of currants, is one of their best promoters. This should be done by loosening the soil about their roots and placing the ashes near them; cover firmly with earth above and the bushes will bear such clusters as will speak the beneficial effects of this application of material too commonly thrown aside as of no use. Cherry trees also gratefully accept this renovator, and, if carefully bedded about the roots with coal ashes in the fall, the yield of fruit the following year will surprise the cultivator. Especially is this effect produced in the black loam of Illinois. We have in our mind one fruit garden there where all the small fruit was treated in this way, and have never seen their yield excelled.

Farmers hold different opinions about the propriety of placing salt within reach of cattle at all times, but so many of our best class of farmers have practiced and approved of this plan, that it must be considered safe. Cattle must gradually become used to it, by having a little given them every day, for a month or so, and then placing it in a little box attached to the manger in the stable, where they can reach it at any time, or in a trough in the pasture. If the animal has it always within reach it will eat no more than is good for it. The gastric juice is supposed to get its chlorine from common salt, and it therefore plays an important part in digestion.

The Duchess Pear.—Everyone who wishes to have pears, should get this valuable variety. After an experience of twenty-five years in growing pears, I have seldom known a tree of this variety die from blight, while nearly all of the others suffer very seriously. The Gloutmorceau, Bartlett, Beurre Diel, Louise Bonne de Jersey and others have proven a failure. This old and excellent fruit has alone stood the test and brought annual returns of the finest fruit. I find it lives as well on quince as standard stock; but as it bears easily on pear stock, I would advise persons to try the standard, as the tree grows larger and bears more fruit.

The importance of compacting or "firming" the soil about the roots of newly-set plants or over seeds cannot be too strongly insisted upon. When seeds are sown, the soil should be well patted down with a spade or rolled, so that the earth will come into close contact with the seed. In setting out garden plants, such as celery, cabbage, &c., the soil should be pressed firmly about the roots with the foot; and the same course should be pursued with trees and shrubs, the soil being first carefully worked in among the roots.

For a profitable dairy, do not buy cows, but raise them. Keep a careful record of every milking, and make frequent tests of the butter quality of every cow's milk. Raise the heifers of only the best third of the herd, not the favorite cows but those of the best record. Use only good bulls—the bull is half the herd. Dispose of two or three cows, or, preferably, of one-fourth of the herd, selecting the poorest cow by the record every year. This is the vital point—to make the dairy pay, cull the herd!

Where slate can be secured at reasonable cost and is well put on, it makes the best roof for barns. In these days, when steam threshing machines are superseding horse power, it is more important than ever that roofs should be of the non-inflammable material.

Farmers would do well at this season of the year to carefully look over the live stock they have and determine what animals and fowls are profitable to keep over another winter.

Prof. Townsend says: "the Jersey is the gentleman's cow, the Ayrshire the poor man's cow, and the short-horn the farmer's cow."

DOMESTIC.

Removing Spots From Clothing.—The following recipes are well recommended: Grease—On white goods, soap, water or alkalies; on colored goods, hot soap water; on colored woolen goods, soap water or ammonia; on silk, benzine, ether, ammonia, magnesia, chalk or whites of egg; lay the goods on clean bibulous paper and rub on the detergent with a clean sponge. Wine and fruit stains, red ink—On white goods, moisten the spot and expose it to the fumes of burning sulphur, hot, weak solution of chloride of lime or bleaching powder; on colored goods of cotton and wool, warm water or ammonia; same for silk; rub carefully. Vinegar, fruits, acids, mold—On white goods, a weak, hot solution of bleaching powder; on colored goods of cotton and wool and silk, ammonia. Rust, black ink—On white goods, solution of oxalic acid, or weak muriatic acid; on colored goods, either cotton or wool, wash repeatedly with lemon juice; no remedy for silk. Tar, wagon grease—Soap, turpentine, jet of water, alternately; use benzine for silk instead of turpentine.

Curing Meat.—Meat should remain in pickle from four to six weeks, according to the size of the pieces. After taken out they should be hung up until perfectly dry before smoking. Almost any kind of wood will do for smoking meat. Corn-cobs will also do very well. Pine, poplar, and other woods with strong odor should not be used, as they might impart a taste to the meat. Good sawdust, chips, etc., will do. The best place to keep hams and smoked meat generally is in a perfectly dark smoke-house. No insect will attack them, and we have known them to have been kept there in the best condition for two years. We have kept them free from insects by covering with wood ashes, and headed up in barrels. They also keep well in muslin bags covered with whitewash. These bags may be used for several years.

Beef Cakes.—Take some cold roast beef, that which is underdone is the best, and mince it very fine; mix with it grated bread crumbs and a little chopped onion and parsley; season it with pepper and salt, and moisten it with some beef dripping and walnut sauce; some scraped cold tongue or grated ham will be found an improvement; form it into broad flat cakes, and spread a layer of mashed potato thinly on the top and bottom of each; lay a small bit of butter on the top of every cake; place them on a dish, and set them in an oven to brown.

Pommes de Terre Forcees.—Mince finely some cold meat, and season; pick out your largest potatoes, peel and core them, only be careful not to core them through; fill as full as you can with minced meat, and put into a dish to bake, with about a cupful of water, and a little butter or good dripping of beef. If large an hour is required to bake them; if not, one-half that time does.

Soft Soap.—Three quarters of a pound of washing soda and a pound of brown soap cut in small pieces; put them in a large stone jar on the back of the range, when the range is not very hot, and pour over it a pailful of cold water; stir it once in a while, and after some hours, when thoroughly dissolved, put it away to cool. It forms a sort of jelly, and is excellent to remove grease on floors or shelves.

For washing silver put a half teaspoonful of hartshorn down into the suds in which the silver is washed; have the water hot, wash quickly, using a small brush; rinse in hot water and dry with a clean linen towel; then rub very dry with a chamois skin. Washed in this manner, silver becomes very brilliant, and requires no polishing with any of the powders or whiting usually employed, and the silver does not wear out.

Hot Slaw.—3 spoonfuls of sugar, 1 of salt, 1 cup of vinegar, 1 spoonful of mustard; mix well together. Chop the cabbage very fine; put it in the pan with a tablespoonful of water; let it get well heated through, and then pour the above ingredients over it.

Prune Pies.—Take a pound of prunes and soak them over night, so that the stones will slip out easily; stew in some water with as many raisins as you wish, and sweeten; use less water than for sauce; when both are soft grate in the rind of 2 lemons and fill the pie, allowing 2 crusts.

About one pound of copperas (sulphate of iron,) at a cost of a few cents put into a water-closet, will entirely deodorize it; five pounds in a bucket of water, thrown down a cesspool, will have the same effect. There is no unpleasant odor from it as there is from chloride of lime or carbolic acid. This is worth knowing.

Brown Betty.—Put a layer of sweetened apple sauce in a buttered dish, add a few lumps of butter, then a layer of cracker crumbs, sprinkled with a little cinnamon, then a layer of sauce, etc., making the last a layer of crumbs; bake in oven, and eat hot, with cold sweetened cream.

Fried Cakes.—1 teacup of cream, 1 egg, well beaten, piece of saleratus the size of a hickory nut, teaspoonful of salt, and flour enough to make them roll out thin. Fry in hot lard until of a light brown.

Nice Breakfast Dish.—Cold mashed potatoes, made into little balls and slightly flattened; dip them into an egg slightly, so as to mix the yelk and white; roll them in cracker crumbs. Fry them in hot lard or butter. Send to the table hot.

Good food, properly cooked, gives us good blood, sound bones, healthy brain, strong nerves and firm flesh, to say nothing of good tempers and kind hearts. These are surely worth a little something to secure.

Sauce.—One teaspoonful of made mustard, two tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce, three tablespoonfuls of vinegar. Boil all together and pour it over the chicken. This dish is generally served on the Cunard Steamers for supper.

Okra Soup.—To five quarts of water and a shin of beef add four dozen okras, sliced thin, and a few tomatoes; boil from six to seven hours, and add salt and red pepper to taste.

Cabbage, when cooked by boiling, should be boiled in two waters. This destroys the "essential oil," which is unwholesome.

When about to poach eggs, grease the vessel before putting in the water, and they will not stick.

Put a bit of butter in a dish in which milk is to be cooked, and it will be less liable to burn.

HUMOROUS.

She was a shrewish looking woman and the Magistrate eyed her suspiciously as he said:

"You are charged, madam, with violence toward your husband."

"Am I a worm," she responded, "that won't turn when it's trod on? I guess not!" and she glanced round the Court-room as if to discover the individual bold enough to challenge the veracity of that declaration.

"Did he give you any provocation?" continued his Honor in a lower and more conciliatory tone.

"Plenty of it. He called me his shattered idol Judge, and as I never take no sass from no man, I licked him."

The Court gently observed that the case would have to go over.

Suffering Women.

There is but a very small proportion of the women of this nation that do not suffer from some of the diseases for which Kidney-Wort is a specific. When the bowels have become costive, headache torments, kidneys out of fix, or piles distress, take a package and its wonderful tonic and renovating power will cure you and give new life.—Watchman.

He blushed up to the tips of his ears as he stepped up to the society editor's table. "Good morning. What is it, sir?" was the affable greeting. "You made a little mistake in your announcement yesterday, sir." "Very likely. It is almost impossible not to make a mistake sometimes. What was it?" "You said me and Lizzie Pipkins were bothered, when we are not bothered at all. We are betrothed, sir. Quite a difference." "Ah! I presume you see the difference now more than you will in the future. However, I will smooth the matter out. Good morning, sir."

Answer this.—Is there a person living who ever saw a case of ague, biliousness, nervousness, or neuralgia, or any disease of the stomach, liver, or kidneys that Hop Bitters will not cure?

On her wedding day, an Indiana girl wrote something, sealed it in an envelope, and gave it to a personal friend. "If I am alive six months from now," she said, "give this back to me unopened. If I am dead, read it." On the day that the half year expired, the bride committed suicide, and the enclosure was found to be a statement that she expected no joy from the marriage, but was willing to give it a trial before deciding to take her life.

Mother Shipton's prophecy is supposed to be about four hundred years old, and every phrophecy has been fulfilled except the last—the end of the world in 1881. Buy your Carboline, a deodorized extract of petroleum, the great natural hair restorer, before the world comes to an end.

The Hon. Mr. Sullivan: "Well, I think it is a shame," said Mrs. Shuttle as she threw down the newspaper. "Here is Mr. Sullivan, who wrote such beautiful 'Pinafore' music, fighting right in public and he lost the fight too." "Why, bless your heart, woman," said Job, "it isn't the same Sullivan at all." "Well, what Sullivan is it." "Why, don't you know? It is Yankee Sullivan, a man who has been fighting these years and years." And with all this misinformation on hand the conversation took a turn.

Pure cod liver oil, from selected livers, on the seashore, by Caswell, Hazard & Co., N. Y. Absolutely pure and sweet. Patients who have once taken it prefer it to all others. Physicians declare it superior to all other oils.

Chapped hands, face, pimples and rough skin cured by using Juniper Soap, made by Caswell, Hazard & Co., New York.

A question of front door: "Oh, good morning. I'm so delighted to see you. Where are you going—to the mountains or the seashore?" "Do you know I haven't given it a thought yet, Cicely, my dear. It is such a bore to climb mountains and so ruinous to starched skirts at the seashore. Really, I don't know but I shall stay at home." "But, of course—" "Oh, yes, I shall keep the front door locked and live in the back room, getting my sewing done up for the fall." This is a true picture.

Women that have been bedridden for years have been completely cured by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

An official in the water board of a western city having departed this life, the city government, who esteemed him as a faithful employee, sent his salary for the remainder of the year with a letter of condolence to the widow. A friend of the latter, in speaking of her loss, remarked that the action of the city had been very considerate, etc. "Yes," said the bereaved one, "but it seems they might have shut off the water for half a day at least as a mark of respect for John."

Catarrh of the Bladder.

Stinging, smarting, irritation of the urinary passages, diseased discharges, cured by Buchupaiba $1 at druggists. Prepaid by express, $1.25, 6 for $5. E. S. Wells, Jersey City, N. J.

A debtor who was sued by his creditor acknowledged that he had borrowed the money, but declared that the plaintiff knew at the time that it was a Kathleen Mavourneen loan. "A Kathleen Mavourneen loan?" repeated the court with a puzzled look. "That's it, Judge. One of the 'it may be for years and it may be forever' sort."

Pimples and Humors on the Face.—In this condition of the skin, the "Vegetine" is the great remedy, as it acts directly upon the cause. It cleanses and purifies the blood, thereby causing humors of all kinds to disappear.

"Yes, we are going to move in the first circles of society from now on," said a lady to her companion.

"Why, how so?"

"It's this way: Paul, you know, our youngest son, has been given a heifer calf by his uncle who runs a model farm down near Kankakee. With the present price of beef it will make us all rich."

For a little lady of two and a half years this will do: She had picked up a cane in the corner of the room and was playing with it—a plain stick bent at the end. Papa asked, "What are you doing with the cane?" "It isn't a cane." "What is it, then?" "It's an umbrella without any clothes on it."

THE ONE GREAT MEDICINE.

Without doubt there are now, and have been for years past, several medicines of remarkable merit before the public—medicines which have been used, in very many cases, with excellent success. The names of these will readily recur to our readers, and they are the names of preparations whose worth, for certain purposes, no one is supposed to deny. But we are fully justified, by undeniable and notorious facts, in saying, and we do unhesitatingly say, that the one great medicine of the present day—the medicine, we mean, which now stands pre-eminent above all others—is the famous Vegetine of Mr. H. R. Stevens of Boston. Some of the undeniable facts respecting this famous medicine are these:

First, it is astonishingly efficient in really curing the various diseases for which it is especially compounded and intended.

Second, it acts with a celerity which is generally very surprising. A single bottle has often either cured the user of a serious difficulty, or brought about a most agreeable change, while a very few bottles have in thousands of instances affected the complete cure of a long standing disease which had previously baffled the skill of the best physicians.

Third, it acts directly upon the blood, of which it is the only powerful and thorough purifier.

Fourth, the testimonials in support of these facts and the extraordinary worth of this medicine are from well-known and most respectable men and women, and, in many instances, from persons holding the highest social positions. They are not certificates from unknown and irresponsible individuals. We, ourselves, know the very high estimation in which Vegetine is held in one of the best families in the city.

There is, in short, and can be, no doubt or mistake whatever about the unprecedented and surprising efficacy, value and success of the Vegetine. As a purifier of the blood and a quick renovator and invigorator of the human system, physical and mental, no medicine, as is now generally conceded, has ever been devised and compounded at all equal to it; and, as a speedy and thorough cure for such complaints as catarrh, cough, stomach weakness and faintness, loss of appetite, dyspepsia, cancerous humors, scrofula, rheumatism, kidney and some other equally serious complaints, Vegetine altogether surpasses any and all other known medicinal preparations. The rapidity with which this great medicine has won its way into all parts of this country and various foreign ones since its discovery and introduction, not many years ago, is something alike surprising and confirmatory of its intrinsic excellence.—Providence, (R. I.) Gazette.

Vegetine is Sold by all Druggists.

Courage: Suffering sisters," exclaimed the speaker, energetically shaking the hair pins from her head in her excitement, "women will never obtain their rights until they display more courage. Let me say to you, in the words of a famous French orator, 'Courage! courage! courage!'" At this stage of the proceedings somebody threw a box of caterpillars upon the platform and the meeting broke up in great terror and confusion.

A Smart Man

is one who does his work quickly and well. This is what Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" does as a blood-purifier and strengthener. It arouses the torpid liver, purifies the blood, and is the best remedy for consumption, which is scrofulous disease of the lungs.

A little girl who saw a balloon for the first time on the Fourth of July was much astonished to find that it remained in the air, and plied her nurse with all kinds of questions. None of the answers, however seemed to satisfy her, and the statement that it floated because it was filled with gas she treated with the utmost infantile disdain. "No, Anna," she said with a very sedate expression on her young brows, "it is kept up there by poweration."

Extravagance

is a crime; and ladies can not afford to do without Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription," which by preserving and restoring health preserves and restores that beauty which depends upon health.

A young Irish girl in Milwaukee who had eloped with a colored man was captured, brought back and arraigned before her father.

"Yer no daughther of moine, Mary," exclaimed the broken-hearted parent, "to be runnin' away wid a naygur,"

"Aisy now, father," returned Mary; "how could I tell he was a naygur? Shure, we were married in the dark."

Beautiful Women

are made pallid and unattractive by functional irregularities, which Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" will infallibly cure. Thousands of testimonials. By druggists.

A little girl was asked by her mother on her return from Church how she liked the preacher. "Didn't like him at all," was the reply. "Why?" asked her mother. "'Cause he preached till he made me sleepy, and then hollered so loud that he wouldn't let me go to sleep."

New Bloomfield Miss., Jan 2, 1880.

I wish to say to you that I have been suffering for the last five years with a severe itching all over. I have heard of Hop Bitters and have tried it. I have used up four bottles, and it has done me more good than all the doctors and medicines that they could use on or with me. I am old and poor but feel to bless you for such a relief by your medicine and from torment of the doctors. I have had fifteen doctors at me. One gave me seven ounces of solution of arsenic; another took four quarts of blood from me. All they could tell was that it was skin sickness. Now, after these four bottles of your medicine, my skin is well, clean and smooth as ever. HENRY KNOCHE.

A Chicago woman recently told her husband that she put her foot right down on his going to the club. He glanced at the foot, sighed, and sent in his resignation.

Kidney-Wort moves the bowels regularly, cleanses the blood, and radically cures kidney disease, gravel, piles, bilious headache, and pains which are caused by disordered liver and kidneys. Thousands have been cured—why should you not try it? Your druggist will tell you that it is one of the most successful medicines ever known. It is sold in both Dry and Liquid form, and its action is positive and sure in either.—Dallas, Tex., Herald.

One of Chicago's redeeming traits is the fact that its birth-lists show a great majority of girls. No city can have too much of a good thing.

RESCUED FROM DEATH.

William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass., says: In the fall of 1876, I was taken with bleeding of the lungs, followed by a severe cough. I lost my appetite and flesh, and was confined to my bed. In 1877 I was admitted to the Hospital. The doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half dollar. At one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR. WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I got a bottle, when to my surprise, I commenced to feel better, and to-day I feel better than for three years past.

ONE DAY.

The mists rolled back, at dawn of day,
And all the sky grew rosy gray—
The soft, sweet-scented morning air
Just waved the penciled tree-tops bare—
And over fields and pastures dun
Gleamed the bright lances of the sun.

The hours went on—the day grew older—
The sunshine paled—the wind blew colder;
And round the ancient, storm-worn dwelling
Sad tones came on the breezes swelling,
And mingled with the fitful blast
The solemn voices of the past

Voices that in the years long gone
Echoed around the wide hearthstone,
Filled the low chambers, now so drear,
With pleasant sounds of household cheer—
So long ago, their memories seem
Like the dim visions of a dream.

The voice of youth, forever fled—
The voice of hope, that's long been dead—
Voices of happy days, all o'er—
Ambition's voice that calls no more—
Sad wind! thy secret I have found—
All these are in thy hollow sound.

Upon thy rushing wings they come—
The memories of a distant home;
Sunny and breezy, fair and wide,
Spread the green fields on every side—
And toward the sunset, rising dim,
The folding hillside's purple rim.

All gone! All dead the winds repeat;
Life's hardest lesson is complete,
Within the quiet graveyard rest
The tender hearts that loved me best;
Foreboding voice! at last be still,
Nor mourn to me of farther ill.

MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

A lovelier evening could not well be imagined, and Mrs. Clarence congratulated herself over and over again that her moonlight lawn dansante and autumn fete was crowned with such brilliant success.

It had been her own idea, this unique entertainment she was giving this lovely October night.

She had selected the full of the hunter's moon for the time, and kind fate had accompanied the bright moonlight with a balmy wind, that made it a positive luxury to wander among the illuminated walks in the park, and listen to the band playing in the big marquee, where dancing was vigorously prosecuted; or best of all, to very many of Mrs. Clarence's guests, to lounge in and out of the refreshment tent, where white vested servants dispensed all kinds of delicious hospitality.

A beautiful night, a faultless company, her own toilette unexceptionable—Mrs. Clarence seemed to have nothing to annoy or vex her—not even when her ten-year-old boy, handsome, imperious, rushed up to her, his golden hair pushed off his fair flushed face, his blue eyes shining with excitement and indignation.

"Mamma, I want to dance with Elsie, and Willie Kirk says I shan't I want you to come and make him let her alone."

Mrs. Clarence smiled indulgently in the boy's handsome angry face.

"Why, Bertie, my dear, I believe young gentleman usually settle such matters between themselves. Can't you wait until the next set for Elsie?"

"No I can't. I want to dance with her now. Come, make him let me have her, mamma."

Mrs. Clarence laughed this time at the boy's clamoring earnestness.

"I don't really know what to do," she said to Mrs. Newcome, standing grave, and just a little contemptuous, listening to the demands of the spoiled child.

"I should do nothing whatever," she answered. "Look yonder, Bertie," she went on, in a quiet attempt at diverting the boy; "who are they?"

"They" were a picturesque couple emerging from the shadow into the light in which the ladies and Bertie stood.

A tall slender woman, with a sad dark face, and big pathetic eyes, with a gay, shabby shawl tied over her dress, and big silver rings in her ears, and massive coils of jetty hair twisted around her head.

And beside her, a lithe active child, in a ragged dress, and bare feet and legs, with the same big dark eyes, and jetty hair hanging in tangled masses over her brown shoulders.

"Let me tell your fortunes, ladies, pretty ladies, pretty boy," the woman began. "Cross my palm with silver, and I'll tell you the prettiest fortune for the little gentleman that ever the stars told me."

Mrs. Newcome drew haughtily back, while Mrs. Clarence looked highly indignant.

"Where did these horrid creatures come from?" she said. "Where could Jones have been that he allowed them to pass through the gate?"

"We don't mean any harm, lady; we came in the hope of earning a penny. Let me play a tune, and Lena will sing and dance for you. Come, Lena."

Obedient as a slave, the child sprang forward, struck a graceful position, and began a low sweet bar of some gliding Italian melody, to the accompaniment of the twanging guitar the woman touched, as she threw her gay tattered head-shawl on the grass beside her.

"Where can some one be to put them out?" Mrs Clarence said angrily. "Bertie, yonder is Williams; bring him to me at once."

The sharp merciless voice arrested the song, the weird melody, and the woman turned her big sad eyes beseechingly to Mrs. Clarence's cold, haughty face.

"Only a penny lady; give us only a crust, a crumb——"

Bertie interrupted her with a malicious delight in his voice.

"Mamma, she's got your vinaigrette and Indian scarf—see! she's hid 'em under her shawl; I see 'em."

The woman straightened suddenly.

"I did not know they were on the ground where I threw my shawl. I am no thief; I am honest as you. I do not steal; I earn my crust right and fair."

Mrs. Newcome's thin lips curled scornfully as she looked at her hostess.

"An exceedingly plausible story," said Mrs Clarence, as Bertie darted off after the man-servant, "but I don't intend to be imposed upon by it. Williams," to the man who had stepped up, and was respectfully waiting his orders—"I wish these people taken in charge for trespass and stealing. There are policemen in the grounds somewhere. Will you see they are taken to the jail?"

A moan of wild agony burst from the woman's quivering lips, and she turned beseechingly to Mrs. Clarence, clasping her hands in pleading.

"Oh, you don't mean that—you don't mean to send us to jail—we never stole a cup of cold water in our lives! Lady—lady, you wouldn't shut us up in prison when we've never harmed a hair of your pretty head? You've a heart in your bosom—you won't put me and my little one in the cell?"

"I certainly would and certainly shall. Ah—officer!"—to the policeman Bertie had spied and brought to the scene—"here is your party, charged by me with trespass and theft. Remove them as quietly as possible—it is really a shameful affair."

And then five minutes afterwards Mrs. Clarence and Bertie went calmly on their way to coax coquettish little Elsie Thornton to be master Bertie's partner.

While, with set teeth and laboring breath, and a dumb horror and bewilderment in her great dusky eyes, the woman and her child went along the quiet country road, through the lovely October night, to the village jail, while little Lena clung piteously to the cold hand she held, and looked up in the face above her.

"Mamma—mamma, what did she mean? Where are we going? What is the matter with you, mamma?"

An exquisite room with lofty ceilings, frescoed in warm rose-color and vivid gold, and a rose-colored velvet carpet on the floor, with costly works of art here and there, and on an oval malachite and gilt table, in front of a big velvet chair, piles of notes, bouquets, and baskets of flowers.

And in the chair a radiant young creature, with eyes like midnight, and lustrous dusky hair piled in rich masses on her proud little head—with a complexion warmly olive-and-rose—a bewitching dazzling creature, who had turned as many heads by her exquisite beauty as by her wonderful talent on the stage.

Just now she was slowly turning over and over a magnificient diamond bracelet that sparkled dazzlingly in the gaslight, and then repeated aloud the name on the card attached to it.

"Albert Clarence."

"Yes, I remember the name perfectly well."

"I heard it for the first time just sixteen years ago to-night."

She smiled as she twisted the costly souvenir round and round, and then picked up the elegantly-written daintily-perfumed note that had accompanied it when flung on the stage the evening previous.

This was the note Lena Wilford read, with her eyes and lips smiling thoughtfully—

"If you will condescend to accept and wear the accompanying, you will make A. C. the happiest man in the world. I shall look for it to-morrow night. If it is on your beautiful arm, I shall take hope."

Lena laid the note down, and leaned her head back against the cushion.

"How well I remember it all.

"Sixteen years ago; oh, mother, mother!"

And Mrs. Dixon, Lena's friend and "sheep dog," looked up from her novel in surprise at the sudden storm of tears into which Lena burst.

"Why, my dear, what can have happened?"

And then Lena crested her beautiful little dusky head suddenly, and dashed away the tears, and laughed a little hysterically.

"What has happened to me, dear friend?

"Not the least thing in the world.

"See here—isn't this superb?

"The symbol of another conquest.

"Albert Clarence is his name.

"You've heard of the Clarences of Clarence Grange?

"So have I.

"I'll wear the bracelet—it is too lovely to refuse."

That night Albert Clarence, sitting in his box in the theatre, saw the glitter of his princely gift on the beautiful popular young tragedienne's arm, and his blue eyes lighted up with the passionate fire of delight and hope.

A month later, and as when he was a lad of ten, he went to enlist his mother's aid to secure his childish partner for a dance, so now Albert Clarence, a tall handsome man, went to her with the burden he had carried for many days, and found growing heavier with every one.

"She refuses to have me, mother. What shall I do?"

The same arrogant selfish spirit that had been his as a child's added to a maturer impatience of restraint.

Mrs. Clarence lifted her handsome eyebrows as imperiously at fifty years of age as when she was a blooming matron of thirty-five.

"It is absolutely impossible that she should refuse you, Bertie—absolutely impossible.

"Why it is an unheard-of honor you offer her—to become your wife, mistress of Clarence Grange, and she an actress."

"It's all very well for you to talk so, mother, but she won't have me.

"And if she persists I'll blow my brains out or emigrate to Africa or somewhere.

"I tell you, unless Lena Wilford will be my wife my life will not be worth the trouble of living."

And his moody passionate face, flushed with dissipation yet strikingly handsome withal, his feverish blue eyes, struck cold dismay to his mother's heart.

"Don't talk so cruelly, Bertie.

"Can't you ever understand that we cannot always have everything in the world we want?"

"I have had everything I wanted until this, and I'll have Lena or you'll not have me.

"That's all there is of it."

Mrs. Clarence looked piteously at him, thinking perhaps that added to all her other miseries about him—his gaming debts, his dissipated habits, his general undutifulness, this was a peculiarly cruel burden.

"Have you let her see you were in desperate earnest?

"These pretty famous actresses are usually exacting in their homage."

"You go to her and tell her," he said suddenly.

"Tell her you want her for your daughter—tell her how I worship her.

"She won't dare laugh in your face as she does in mine when I swear to her how wretched I am without her promise.

"She'll believe you,"

Never in all her life had Mrs. Clarence refused a favor to her darling.

"Yes.

"I'll go down on my knees if I can make you happy, my boy.

"I'll plead with her, and if one woman can touch another woman's heart, I'll win your wife for you, Bertie."

Lena Wilford was just dressed for her noon drive, when Mrs. Clarence was ushered into the elegant little reception-room—dazzled and bewildered by the royal magnificence of the girl's beauty—this girl, this actress, who had refused her darling.

"I am Mrs. Clarence," she said cordially.

"I presume you recognize the name?"

"Beyond doubt, madam.

"Will you be seated?" Lena said, in a haughty little way,

And then Mr. Clarence said her say, told her eager story with thrilling, pleading eloquence.

"He will die unless you take pity on him, Miss Wilford.

"His happiness is not alone in your hands, his life is there.

"For his sake, consent to be his wife, for my sake, be my daughter."

Lena had stood still, her lovely hands clasped and hanging down at arm's length, listening in cold courtesy to the suppliant's prayer, until the ardent words ceased.

Then she smiled.

"Your arguments do not interest me, nor have your persuasions the least effect.

"I would not marry your son to save his life.

"But I lured him on, with all my power, so that I might have my revenge.

"Do you remember the night of your lawn party sixteen years ago, when you drove me and my mother to prison on a charge that was false and cruel?

"My mother died in that prison cell, you and your boy were her murderers.

"I swore revenge, child though I was; my gipsy blood boiled hot against you and yours.

"I have kept my oath, you suffer a tithe of what we suffered, and I believe my mother approves.

"Go home, and tell your son your mission is hopeless.

And with a smile like moonlight on a sword blade, cold and glittering, she bowed Mrs. Clarence away.

And before night of the same day Albert Clarence went away, cursing his luck, cursing his mother, cursing the beautiful woman who had been so just in her relentlessness, and his mother never saw him again.

American Farms.

The facts and publications by the Census Office of the United States will constitute a veritable Doomsday Book—such a book, in fact, as would have made William the conqueor's famous production look to be rather a meagre and puny affair. "Census Bulletin No. 279" deals with the number and size of farms in certain States and territories, and shows also the tenure of them. It certainly affords a very impressive idea of the wonderful development of the Western world. California, for instance, which in 1850 contained 872 farmsteads, in ten years increased the number to 10,000, and in 1880 showed a total of 35,934. Minnesota is far more remarkable in this respect. It had in 1850 but 157 farms within its borders. It has now, or it had in 1880—since when no doupt it has further increased its number—over 92,000 farms established. Oregon, again, which had bit about 1,100 in 1850, had at the date of the last census over 16,000 farms. The larges tnumber in any one State is presented by Illinois, which had, a generation ago, 76,208 farmsteads, and now has 255,741. It will astonish those who know nothing of American agricultural affairs to glance down the columns of the table showing the tenure upon which farms are held in the United States. A fixed money rental may be said to be quite the exceptional arrangement. A far more common arrangement is for the owner to take a share of produce. But still more common than both these arrangements combined in the case in which the occupiers of farms are owners also. Thus in California, as we have said, there are altogether 35,934 farms, of which 3,209 are held on a money rental tenure, 3 915 rented for shares of produce, and 28,810 occupied by the owners. This is not at all exceptional. In Illinois, of the 255,741 farms, only 20,620 are rented in what we in this country would call the ordinary way, while 59,624 are held for a share of the produce, and no fewer than 175,497 occupied by the owners. In Dakota, out of nearly 17,000 farms there are only 72 of them rented, and 606 on a share of produce tenure, all the farms in the State, except these 678, being in the occupation of the owners.

DANBURY PUDDING.—Scald one quart of milk, add the yolks of four eggs, four tablespoonfuls of corn starch, four of sugar, beat together, flavor with lemon. Take the whites of the eggs, four tablespoonfuls sugar, spread over the pudding when cold and brown.

Keel-Hauling.

Three Arab porters returning from a looting expedition fell out, and two of them endeavored to murder the third. The two men were sentenced by the court-martial to be keel-hauled in accordance with Article 2 of the Egyptian Naval Code. The sentences was carried out in the following manner: The crew were divided, half of them put to each rope, and the two wretches, being led to the side, were shoved overboard. They both screamed as they fell into the water, and as the distance from the gangway to the surface was quite fourteen feet, they must have been more or less hurt. But this was only the beginning of their miseries. The men on one side hauled taut the rope underneath the ship, and then the order to "walk away" was given. The band played a solemn tune, something like the "Carnival of Venice" in movement, except the tune was changed, and stamp, stamp, went the men. We saw the two wretches go under, and then the only movement was the ropes going through their blocks, one side paying out, the other coming in, but slowly. We had no measurement of the ship, but as the rope acted directly—that is, there were no moving blocks—the distance around the bottom was exactly that covered by the men as they walked the deck drawing the rope behind them. Thus we were able to make some estimate of the distance, and we calculated it at fifty feet from surface to surface. Presently the two victims appeared on the other side. They were hauled quite out of the water, and the rope by which they were hoisted was made fast and coiled up ready to pay out again. An officer—probably a doctor—went down and examined them. The one upon whom the strain of the rope had fallen was apparently lifeless. His face was turned towards us; it was bleeding and torn; his clothes were hanging in shreds, and his hands were dripping with blood. His eyes were open, but they seemed to be filled with blood. The ship's bottom, covered with barnacles, rasped upon the poor devils like nails. The other man seemed to be conscious. His back, as he hung in the air, was towards us, but he moved his head, we thought, and apparently to beg for mercy. Evidently the officer reported them still alive, for when he had come on deck again the two men were lowered into the water, and the crew manning the rope that led up from the other side marched with it, and once more the victims disappeared. From the time they went under the surface of the water until they reappeared on the other side of the ship was just twenty-four seconds. It seemed to us to have been an hour. The first frightful journey had terminated by their being scratched and torn; at the end of the second they were mutilated. The nose of one wretch was torn almost away, one ear gone, and the shreds of the clothing he had worn clung to him only where they were held by his bonds. He was blood, literally, from head to foot. His companion's condition was equally horrible. This time they were hoisted up to the rail and swung on board. Then we could see something of the action of this barbarous punishment, for they were not held off the side, but were scraped up along the ship, striking against the ringbolts, the chains, and every cruel obstruction until they swung in free over the deck. Then they were lowered down and released. They were both unconscious, probably even then dead. It may be hoped they were. Death must have been a welcome release.

Men Wearing Bracelets.

For some time past the quaint old pagan fashion that bracelets should be worn by men as well as by women has been gaining ground upon the Continent, chiefly, it would seem, in countries where the prevaient creed is Roman Catholicism. The porte-bonheur is an old-established institution in the Austrian and Italian cavalry, and, indeed, the majority of Austrian noblemen, being addicted to field sports, are accustomed to wear St. George's medals, set in silvera bracelets, upon one of the other arm, the subduer of the dragon being generally recognized by equestrians as their patron saint. Archduke Rudolph, the Austrian crown prince, wears upon his left wrist a bracelet of chain mail, visible in a photograph taken immediately after his marriage, and representing him arm-in-arm with the Archduchess Stephanie. The late King Victor Emmanuel, a mighty hunter in his day, always wore a massive bracelet containing a medallion of St. Hubert, the same that is now worn in memory of him by his son, Italy's actual sovereign. Austrian naval officers are addicted to the wearing of the porte-bonheurs in which are medals bearing the effigy of St. Peter, while the bracelets of imperial and royal artillery officers are invariable commemorative of St. Barbara's piety and personal attractions. Rossi and Salvini, the two great Italian tragedians, being also excellent horsemen, have caused broad bands of silver, framing medals of St. George, to be riveted upon their upper right arms. It is believed that this bracelet-wearing fashion has spread to England, and has been adopted by more than one distinguished personage.

A Difficult Gate.

There was quite an affecting scene at the Central depot last week, which gave lasting evidence of the trustworthy qualities of the official railroad mind and the tender capabilities of the official heart. Two women, who looked as if they had stood in the front rank of the battle of life, approached the gate which opens out to the Canada Southern cars, and both essayed to go through, but the St. Peter in charge stopped the second one.

"Present arms. I mean show your ticket, madam," he said sternly.

"I haint got enny," said the woman. "I aint goin' on your old road, either. My sister's goin' to Bosting and I want to see her off safe and say good bye on the keers!"

"Very sorry indeed, ma'am, but it's against the rules to allow any one through this gate unless they have their railroad ticket, marriage certificate, register of birth and a diploma from the company. We should be robbed of millions of dollars if we once broke that rule. You must see Mr. Clark."

"Who is Mr. Clark?" asked the angry woman.

"He's the depot superintendent. If he wants you to go through he'll say so."

"All right. Come along, Sue," and she dragged the woman with the ticket after her, and they sought the official in his den.

The said official was much surprised a few moments later to find himself interviewed by two weeping women who could hardly speaks for sobs. It is well-known that the heart of the average railroad man is as tender as an infant's and as the blue-robed officer heard the melancholy sounds he too broke down and wept aloud.

"W-w-hat ca-an I do for you?" he sobbed.

"We-wa-a-n-t to kn-o-w-w if you're the the kinder-sorter ma-a-n to see tew fond s-s-s-isters pa-rt in public this way. I w-a-n-t to see my-my dear s-sister onto the keers!"

Then Mr. Clark dried his eyes with a blue silk handkerchief, and rose to the sublime height of duty.

"My dear madam, I see you want to go through the fatal gate. Alas! it is impossible! There are dangers down that track, that you must not meet; women as young and fair as you have perished there!"

"Dew tell," exclaimed the flustered woman, "but then what's to become of Sue?"

"Passengers are exempt," answered the superintendent, fixing his eyes dreamily on an esthetic cobweb in the corner of his cell. Then the two women fell on each other's necks and wept anew.

"Good-bye, Sue, I s'pose he means well. Write me as soon as you get to Bosting; don't forget to tell John's wife to send me that Martha Washington geranium slip, hev you got yer checks all right; hang on to yer pocket-book! Good-bye; don't sit next to ennybody yer ain't acquainted with."

"Good-bye, Hannah! Ain't it mean you can't see me off? I don't believe there's a bit of danger! Don't forget to save a Malty kitten for me—oh! where's my satchel? Here it is. Good-bye, Hannah, good-bye!"

During this affecting scene the superintendent was looking out of the window, mopping his eyes, and wishing he had an easier position, where his feelings wouldn't trouble him so. Five minutes later when the train had gone he heard the woman who was left talking to an acquaintance:

"An' she had to go on the car alone 'cost it isn't safe for folks who aint goin' nowhere to go in there!"

"Stuff and nonsense," said the other, "do as I do! buy a ticket to the Junction and carry it in your pocket. It only costs 10 cents and takes you through that gate every time. I'd like to see them keep me out!"

Then the superintendent was mad!

The Insect Population.

In 1849 Alexander von Humboldt estimated the number of species of insects preserved in collections at between 150,000 and 170,000; Europe alone being represented by more than three times as many species of insects as of phanerogamous plants. Ten years ago Dr. Gerstacker estimated the number of species of insects to be 225,000, five-times as many as the known species of all other classes of animals together. If we assume that there exist in the whole world only three times as many insects as there are phanerogamous plants—the latest estimate of which approaches 225,000—we arrive at the startling sum of about 750,000. Bewildering as this estimate appears, it is probably too low. The oak alone gives shelter and support to 450 species of insects, and the pine to more than 200, and one moth alone has 35 different species of parasites! Without going further in our calculations we may safely assert that if the number of species of all other classes of animals should be doubled by new discoveries (which is rather improbable for some classes, and impossible for the vertebrates), the number of species of insects would be more than five times that of all other animals taken together.

People in Constantinople.

The lowly orders proper live very much like their brethren in Christian countries. Both men and women work. The wife helps her lord and master in the daily toil, washes, cleans and keeps the house in order; she has neither time nor opportunity for frivolous amusements, consequently she is more respected both by husband and children, and knows not the heart-sickness and weariness of the harem. But even here women do not eat with the men, and never stir outside of their domicile unveild. There is no middle class among the Turks. There are the rich (or easy) and the poor. These two orders are constantly changing places. The rich man of to-day may be the poor one to-morrow. You will know him by his shabby, greasy coat and unbrushed shoes. He will make no effort to keep up an appearance. You may see him buy some simple fare and eat it in the street on his way to business or home. He has lost his place. He is poor. He is neglected. Meeting him thus you might suppose him a shoe-mender or a low class coffee-house keeper, yet he has only just missed being a Pasha, and a few months more will probably reinstate him in the position he has lost.

The men and women of the country are naturally all on a par. There is no genius, no talent, no eminence of virtue among them, or if there be, it is banished as soon as it dares lift its head. One man is as good as another. A fair address, a smattering of French and "good luck," are all that are wanted to make a nobody first minister; but the same fortune grown fickle may hurl him from his post, and he sinks lower than what we understand by the "poorest gentleman." One fact baffles European would-be reformers. We are always meeting with surprises. There is nothing solid anywhere. There is no public spirit, no landed interest, no trade interest, no no personal authority—nothing to grapple with. Everything slips through your fingers. The laws exist, but are not enforced. It is nobody's business to enforce them. Property is yours to-day, mine to-morrow, and a week hence it may be Mahmoud's or Safnet's or Ahmed's. The one thing permanent among us is the watchful jealousy of the various nationalities. It is the different Consuls that keep order here, not Turks; and were it not for this protection Europeans could not live in Turkey. The Turks are indifferent tradesmen. Nearly all the shops in Galata, and the whole of those in Pera, are kept by Europeans. The Greeks are the chief traders, though a smart business is done by the Levantines. The most fashionable shops are French, but there are a few first-rate English and American ones. A large class of the Turks hawk their wares in the street. They are for the most part fine, stalwart, civil-spoken men. They shoulder enormous baskets containing cheeses, creams, fruits, vegetables and many other comestibles, and furnish more than half the alimentation of the city. The habits of these men are very simple; they live chiefly upon bread and fruit; but they also know the secret of the pot au feu, and often I have seen a knot of them after their day's work, grouped under a shed, or on a green spot of earth, mixing the "savory mess"—you will perhaps be shocked to hear the pot contains vegetables (of onions a large share) stewed in oil! A somewhat strong tasted mutton called Karamani is the favorite food of the Turkish upper classes. Pilaff is also an every-day dish wherein Europeans also delight. The chief fault of the Turkish cooking is the enormous quantity of grease and fat consumed, and the excessive sweetness of many of the dishes.

The Vocalion.

Vocalion, is the name given to a new musical instrument. It resembles a small organ in form, and is constructed so as to approximate in tone to the human voice. Some patterns have one key-board, others two, with accompanying pedals. The sound is caused by the blast from a bellows impinging on parallel bands of brass, of which there are sometimes three to each note. The sound is still further enriched and regulated by metal ligatures attached to the bands, and capable of being constrained. The likeness to the human voice is also assisted by the form given to the resonant cavities and mouthpieces from which the notes are omitted. The tone has a peculiar sweetness and pathos, which grows upon the listener, and is particularly adapted to sacred music

Statistics.

The Chief of the Bureau of Statistics reports that the values of the imports of merchandise into the United States during the twelve months ended August 31, 1882, were $741,983,917; and for the corresponding months of the preceding year, $643,248,555, being an increase of $98,735,362 for the year ended August 31st, 1882. The values of the exports of domestic and foreign merchandise from the United States during the twelve months ended August 31st, 1882, were $737,033,772, and for the twelve months ended August 31st, 1881, $894,717,454, a decrease of $157,678,682 for the twelve months ended August 31st, 1882.

MONTGOMERY LETTER.

The two Houses organized Wednesday the 15th. The caucuses of both Houses were held the day previous and all Independents, as well as Radicals and other kinds of people distinct from the Regular Democracy, were excluded.

After a protracted struggle of more than a day, in which there was but one real vote difference between Brooks and Harrison for President of the Senate, Harrison was elected. He is one of the coming men of Alabama, and, although your correspondent supported Brooks first, last and all the time, he can cheerfully bear record to Mr. Harrison's ability, worth and patriotism. Under his hand the Senate will glide smoothly to business and continue in calm waters. both he and Mr. Brooks are accomplished parliamentarians and with either in the chair, the country will or would have been safe.

In the House Mr. Foster had no opposition for speaker. He is another of the comtng men of the State. In fact we might say he had already arrived. He is on hand. He stands in the succession as regards the Governorship, and the State would profit if he should succeed.

Beyond the organization of the two Houses little was done. Will let you have a more detailed letter next week.

Touching Inquiry from a Connecticut Democrat.

Hartford Times.

Do you know of

"A lodge in some vast wilderness,
Some boundless contiguity of shade," where a good Christian republican can go and work off a reverential, soul-reviving, heart-satisfying "d—n it?"

A friend of ours recently wrote to a certain country newspaper office in this State, asking for a position as local and news editor, etc, and a few days since received the following reply:

"One editor is about as much as this one-horse paper will stand. He has to run all the pages, set type, do 'devil's' work, lead in prayer meetings, sing in the choir, use up the free whisky, and do other things too numerous to mention—and I generallly do it."

For the last forty years we've known these duties of a country editor, and performed them to the utmost of our full ability—but we hardly think it right to "tell tales out of school."—Lowndes Citizen.

Jesso. "Forty years!—free whisky!! —full ability!!!" Good heavens, what a man! Notthing short of Dynamite will send him to the gate of St. Peter.

Stock Sales at Meridian.

Livingston Journal.

The fourth annual fair of "the Mississippi Stock Breeders' Fair Association," held at Meridian last week, was a decided success as regards horses and Jersey cattle, and pecuniarily.

The stock sales inaugurated by the association last year, so successfully, were equally successful this year; and the uninitiated were astonished at the prices obtained for pure blood Jerseys We note a few sales:

A bull, the property of Hon. James Crook, Jacksonville Ala., who begun breeding Jersey cattle but a few years ago, sold privately for $800. Mr. Crook bought at auction another bull for which he paid $500. A heifer sold for $395, another for $400 and another for $410. Lauderdale Belle, 3 months old, the property of Mr. M. L. Jenkins, sold for $200.

The foregoing brief report of sales will indicate the interest being developed in the production of a superior butter stock, in which respect the Jerseys are unexcelled.

'Rapid Transit Lager Beer Saloon.'

Such are the words which are placed above a down-town saloon in this city. What a terrible significance they have. "Rapid Transit" indeed, from respectability to ruin, from health and happiness to disease and death, from what might be a heaven here to a hell hereafter. Easy travel is it along the downward road with a swift and pleasant gliding motion, but what a terminus! Could the end be seen how few would the passengers along the sin-stained way! One is reminded of the dreamer, who saw a bridge stretching over a broad, dark stream, with here and there a trap-door, down through which ever and anon the unheeding passenger fell—fell from the bridge of life into the rapidly rolling river not of death alone, but eternity. Surely this is one of the largest traps. Never are its hinges still, but one victim after another falls through, struggles hopelessly with the roaring torrents, and is swept away to join thousands of unwary ones who have preceeded him.—Ex.

A Good Work.—A correspondent furnishes the following relative to the effects of the prohibition law that went into effect in this county January 1st

Editor Examiner:—Solicitor Pitts and Sheriffs Graves and Brinson were talking in a company of several last Friday night. "You see," said the Solicitor, "this prohibition law has cut the criminal docket down to nothing almost." "Is that so?" was eagerly asked. "Why, certainly it is. The grand jury have only found 21 true bills this week, and we only expect to get four or five more, whereas heretofore we have ranged from 60 to 100. "Yes," put in the sheriffs, "we used to have 75 to 90 cases on the county court docket every month, and now they hard y average 5 or 6."

What a magnificent result! What better evidence of the benefits of this law could be adduced? Murder, manslaughter, arson, robbery, "wounds without cause," and all manner of crimes with their burthen of costs, and their far greater burthen of sorrow to the hearts of fair women and tender children—these come no longer to destroy the happiness, and clog the prosperity of this people.—[Hayneville Examiner.

No more touching compliment could be paid than that of the child who had overheard a conversation at the table on the qualities of a wife. As he stooped over to kiss his mother he remarked: "Mamma, when I get big I'm going to mary a lady just 'zactly like you.

I know whereof I speak, for I have used it extensively. I regard Parker's Ginger Tonic a most excellent remedy for kidney, lung and stomach disorders. It invigorates without intoxicating. J. Francis, Religio Philos. Journal, Chicago.

Southern Cultivator for November.

Truly we can say each visit of this standard Southern agricultural journal gives increased pleasure. We emphasize the fact of its being a Southern publication, because the prosperous North sustains many valuable agricultural papers, and it is meet and proper that Southern farmers should not only have a journal devoted to their interests, but should have one that is first class in every respect. Aside from the fact that its columns, richly laden with information on all subjects connected with agriculture, is invaluable to the progressive farmer, it should be maintained because it is the exponent and representative of the Southern farmer.

The November number contains an interesting description of Col. Peters' Jersey herd and his "Thirty Years' Experience on a North Georgia Stock Farm." His success demonstrates that such ventures will pay South as well as North, and every farmer should read the article. "Green Manuring" or how to renew a run down farm, is an article alone worth the price of subscription. "Economy in Feeding," by the Hon. T. J. Moore, of South Carolina; "Plantation Life in the South," by Prof. D. C. Barrow, of Athens; "The Fence and Stock Laws of Georgia," are only a few of the intsresting articles.

Dr. Jones' "Thoughts for the Month" and his two full pages of answers to inquiries are inestimable value.

The publishers have shown enterprise ahead of anything ever attempted in the South—illustrating the letters of their correspondents. "J. O. A," of Charlotte, N. C., contributes an article on "Hillside Ditching," and the publishers have made designs to illustrate his methods. Mr. Louis Dubose, of Vicksburg, Mississippi, has written another article on "Straw and Fodder Barracks," and Messrs. Harrison & Co., had their artist to draw sketches to illustrate the cheap building employed. And so it is to the the end. Improvement is the watchword of the publishers? As a matter of course. Now, they say, they print three times as many papers as was done a year ago and the volume is constantly swelling. Every farmer, not a subscriber, should send $1.50 to Jas. P. Harrison & Co., Atlanta Ga., for a year's subscription.

Now that Jacksonville unfortunately misses the big shows this year there will be a genuine old fashioned turnout to see Miles Orton's celebrated menagerie and circus, that is positively announced to exhibit at Oxford, Tuesday, November 21st, and at Alexandria Wednesday, Nov, 22nd inst. Citizens and families who have not seen a circus in 20 years, in fact everybody is going to be on hand this time. There is something novel about wagon shows that always draws a crowd.

At the August term of the Chancery Court for the 8th District of the Eastern Chancery division of Alabama, composed of the county of Calhoun, the following decree was rendered in the above suit then and now pending in said Chancery Court, by his Hon N. Stranger—"I say, Mister Big Head, you seem to be a little 'off.' What ails you?"
Big Head—"Well, yes; you see I was out with the boys last night, and got kinder mixed."
Stranger—"It appears so from the looks of your head."
Big Head—"It don't feel exactly like my head; 'pears to be kinder 'swelled up,' and as if it had a notion to 'bust,' and the pain is terrible."
Stranger—"If you will get a bottle of Bailey's Saline Aperient, one or two doses will put a head on you, that your friends would recognize."
Big Head—"I'll do any thing to get rid of all this pain and suffering."
This marvelous remedy cures those terrible headaches, cleanses the stomach, unloads the bowels, unlocks the liver, relieves constipation at once, and gives the bile a chance to go. It has become the popular and standard remedy for constipation, biliousness, sick headache, heartburn, acid stomach, and all diseases requiring a real nice and pleasant purgative or physic.
It never nauseates nor gripes, acts in one or two hours, and is just so delightful and refreshing a drink, that everybody likes it.
It unclouds and cools the brain, quiets the nerves, and is a sine qua non for the headache of ladies.
It mitigates the pangs of rheumatism and gout, relieves kidney and urinary troubles, and pain in the back. For dyspeptics it acts like a charm, and has no equal in curing a constipated habit. It is highly recommended for persons who travel, for merchants, clerks, mechanics, factory hands, students, teachers and all persons who lead a closely confined life and are subject to headache, dizziness and torpid bowels. If you are troubled with a coated tongue, foul breath, loss of appetite or general sluggishness, Bailey's Saline Aperient will cure you. It performs better work than pills, is more pleasant and palatable, and is much cheaper, in fact it is a regular family medicine chest within itself.
It sparkles and foams just like a glass of soda water, and is just as pleasant. 60 cents and sold every-where. J. P. DROMGOOLE & Co.,

A WOMAN'S REMEDY.
At certain ages and periods of woman's life, there comes certain troubles, aches, pains and sufferings. These complaints and irregularities jeopardize the girl's life at sixteen, and follow up and haunt the married woman until after the "turn of life."
Some have headaches, swimming of the head, mental and nervous prostration, blanched cheeks, bloodless lips, lifeless eyes, clouded brain; while others suffer with painful irregularities, uterine displacements and ulcers, hysterical spasms, physical prostration, chronic leucorrhœa, chlorosis, suppressions, loss of appetite, ovarian diseases, kidney affections, etc., which in numerous cases end in epileptic fits, convulsions, insanity and death. These are generally the result of inattention. All females know the cause of complaints we allude to. Now, ladies, all these troubles can be averted and cured. We have proof from thousands.
Dr. Dromgoole's English Female Bitters will cure you sound and well—will make you healthy and happy—will make you feel like a new woman and no mistake. Sold by all Druggists at $1.00. Send your address for a copy of Dr. Dromgoole's Family Medical Adviser, free to the afflicted.

CHILDREN'S CHANCES OF LIFE.—An English writer on vital statistics calculates that of ten children born in Norway, a little over seven reach their 20th year; that in England and Germany seven reach that age, in France only five reach it, and in Ireland less than five. It is also ascertained that Norway, out of ten thousand born, rather more than one out of three reaches the age of seventy; in England, one out of four; in the United States, if both sexes be computed, less than one out of four; in France, less than one out of eight; and in Ireland less than one out of eleven. Further, it appears that in Norway the average length of life of the effective population is thirty-nine; in England, thirty-five and a half; in France, not quite twenty-nine.

If a man means what he says he will be deliberate in his speech, and state his purpose in plain, simple fashion. Intending suicide, he will not make motions at himself with a razor in the presence of his family five or six times a day. Mr. Micawber's style of speech is associated with his style of action. All difficult, vaporing, tragic, superlative words exhaust the speaker. His strength all goes out through his mouth, and he is thus left helpless to do anything. Lyman Beecher said that when he had not much of a sermon he always thumped the pulpit and "hollered."

Columbus (Ga.) Enquirer: The best indication of what is being done for the colored people in the South is in the fact that in the sixteen Southern States the white school population is is 3,899,961 and colored 1,803,257. There are 16,669 colored public schools, forty-four normal schools, thirty-six colored institutions of secondary instruction, fifteen colored universities and colleges, twenty two colored schools of theology, three colored law schools, two medical schools and two colored deaf and dumb and blind institutions

An association of printers in Atlanta have social and religious meetings every Sunday, which are largely attended by both ladies and gentlemen. The Post Appeal says: "The idea of these meetings is of local origin, there being nothing of a similar nature in the United States This new departure of the craft is meeting with the hearty approval of all good citizens, and it is to be hoped that they will continue to meet with the moral support of the public."

THE CIRCUS.

Miles Orton and His Show.

Hartford (Ky) Herald.

Orton's circus and menagerie gave an exhibition at this place last Saturday. To say that it was an excellent performance is only to repeat the general verdict of those who were fortunate enough to attend. We have not space to give a detailed account of the performance, but we feel that would not be doing justice to ourself if mention were not made of the bareback riding of Mr. Orton himself, and of the trapez performance of the two midgets, Allie and Bernard, who are said to be the two smallest trapezists in the world, and who certainly are the smallest ever seen by us. Their feats on the swinging bar were marvels of infantile daring and skill, and seldom equaled by grown up artists. Their acts can only be appreciated by being seen. Words of course are incapable of expressing our admiration for the little gymnasts.

Mr. Orton's feats of horsemanship we have never seen excelled—in fact, never equaled, and they called forth storms of applause from a delighted audience. To see Orton alone is well worth the price of admission, not to say anything of the many other attractions, conspicuous among which looms up the clown, Al. Field, who is the clown par excellence of his day. His many good hits and side splitting jokes were met by the most uproarious laughter by all in the audience who could laugh, which those who could not envied the cachinnatory propensities of their jocund neighbors.

The above is but one of many similar press comments written of the celebrated Orton shows, and the public can rest assured of seeing this monster and reliable organization entire when it spreads its acres of tents at Oxford Tuesday, Nov. 21st, and at Alexandria Nov. 22nd.

Read our previous advertisements.

Advertising like talk we know is cheap, but we forfeit honor and money if we do not do all that we advertise.

Why Does Germania Sell So Cheap?

This is the answer. People say, you pay as much, gentlemen, for goods as other houses do Well, we don't intend to argue that point, though we claim buying for large stores, we buy more goods than anybody else, and as to whether we get them cheaper or not we don't care to say. But we do say this, our main business profit is our Tannery. For this we bought the property.

Our total store expense is comparitively nothing. We do say that we will sell you goods cheaper than you can buy them elsewhere; and remember we don't force anybody to buy

We tell you the truth and nothing but the truth and ask your inspection free of charge and see for yourselves.

We are strangers among you, but we have come to stay and make high prices pass away.

Ears FOR THE Million.

Foo Shoo's Balsam of Shark's Oil

Positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness Known.

This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Seas known as Carcharodon Rondelettii. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing was discovered by a Buddhist Priest about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1.00 per bottle.

Hear What the Deaf Say!

It has performed a miracle in my case. I have no unearthly noises in my head and much better.

I have been greatly benefitted.

My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.

"Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to HAYLOCK & JENNEY, 7 Dey Street. ## INVISIBLE POISON.

HOW IT WORKS ITS WAY INTO THE BODY AND HOW TO COUNTERACT IT.

One of the great scourges of the present year in all parts of America has been malaria. This is a trouble so treacherous in its nature and so dangerous in its results as to justly cause apprehension wherever it has appeared. But there are so many erroneous ideas upon the subject that a few words are in order at a time when people are subject to malarial influences.

Malaria, which means simply bad air, is the common name of a class of diseases which arise from spores of decaying vegetable matter, thrown off from stagnant pools or piles of vegetation undergoing decomposition. These spores when inhaled with the breath or taken into the system with water soon enter the blood and germinating there find a foothold, whereby the whole system is poisoned and the various functions disordered. When the germ theory of disease was first advanced it was supposed that these spores were of animal nature, and like the bacteria in diphtheria were propagated in the blood, but they are now conceived to be of vegetable origin, like the fungi found on decaying wood or in cellars. The source of this state of the air is generally swamps or stagnant pools, which partially dried by the hot sun, send forth vapors loaded with this malarial poison. These vapors descend to the earth in the night, cooled by the loss of temperature, and breathed by sleepers are readily inhaled. Hence persons living near stagnant pools or marshes are liable to be afflicted with chills and fever, and such localities are never healthy, though they are more so when the streams flowing into them are pure, and also when the water is high. Again the drainage of houses, slaughter houses, barns, etc., area fertile source of malaria. One will often notice in coming into the neighborhood of one of these sluggish streams that pass through almost every village a most villainous smell caused by the offensive refuse which communicates its bad odor to the atmosphere, especially on hot days. This absorbed into the system by the lungs or taken in through water, which also absorbs it from the air, poisons the blood and deranges the whole system. This poison is also developed in force in wells and springs when they become low, and the result of drinking these is the same as breathing the poisonous air. In a time of drouth the great quantity of vegetation that dries up in the meadows stubble fields and forest leaves produces the same effluvia. On the prairies when large tracts of prairie ground are turned over, the decaying vegetation is a widespread cause of malaria.

The evils which follow malarial poisoning are almost infinite. Disease of a malignant and dangerous nature, accompanied by symptoms the most distressing are certain to manifest themselves and life is a burden so long as this poison remains in the system. The indications of malarial poisoning are loss of appetite, shortness of breath, pains about the heart, wasting of flesh and strength, despondency, nervousness, chilly sensations, unaccountable lassitude, dull pains in various parts of the body, headaches, dizziness, a coated tongue and dry mouth, night sweats, muscular debility, puffing under the eyes, an unusual color, ordor or sediment about the fluids passed from the system, etc. Any one of the above symptoms may be an indication of malarial poison in the body which necessitates immediate and careful attention.

But if malarial poison could not find a lodgment in the human body, it would be just as harmless as the oxygen of the air. The great difficulty is that, after being absorbed into the system, it produces obstructions in the stomach and lungs, clogs the circulation of the blood, affects the kidneys, liver and other organs, and brings on diseases of a most dangerous character. There is only one known way by which these diseases may be avoided or cured after they have once made their appearance, and that is by keeping the great purifying organs of the body in perfect health. These organs are the kidneys and liver. No one whose kidneys or liver are in a perfect condition was ever afflicted by malarial poison. And when these organs are disordered, they not only permit, but invite, these diseases to make their inroads into the body. It is now admitted by physicians, scientists and the majority of the general public that one medicine, and only one whose power has been tested and proven, has absolute control of, and keeps the kidneys and liver in constant health, and hence prevents malarial sickness. This remedy is Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, the most popular medicine before the American people, and sold by every druggist in the land. It fully counteracts the evil effect of malarial poison in the system, and not only banishes it, but restores the members which that poison has weakened. How well it does this can be learned from the following:

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 26, 1882.—Moving from the state of New York to the western country, I was attacked with malaria and general debility. I had lost all appetite and was hardly able to move about. I had tried a great many remedies but nothing bettered my condition until I began using Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver cure, which seemed to help me right away, and I feel as well as I ever have in my life. It is a blessing to people in this malarious country.

C. F. WILLIAM,
1412 Grand Ave., of William & Co., Hardware.

This grand remedy has proven its power in innumerable cases, and is to-day more extensively used in malarial districts, whether in cities or in the country, than any or all other remedies for the cure of the same class of disease. No one can afford to trifle with the first symptoms of malaria, but instant care should be taken to check it on the start before its evil influences overshadow the life.

The Orograph.—The Orograph is a new instrument adapted to topographic work by Professor Thompson. It is so constructed that by moving the optical axis of a telescope along the outline of a landscape, a pencil below constructs a sketch of the same. As the tracing is done mechanically, it is exact; and on it mathematical comparisons and estimates may be based. An improved plane table has also been devised by Professor Thompson. It consists of a series of slats fastened parallel to one another on canvas, and capable of being rolled into small compass for transportation; but, when necessary, by means of cross-pieces and screws it may be converted into a smooth unyielding drawing board. Armed with these improved scientific weapons, the topographer extends his operations in a single field-season over an area of about five thousand square miles, with all the accuracy necessary for the proposed physical atlas of the Rocky Mountain region, the scale of which was fixed by the Interior Department at four miles to the inch. If the surface of Belgium was partly mountainous and cut in places by deep canon gorges, it could be surveyed and mapped at this rate in a little over two seasons.

You cannot do wrong without suffering wrong.

AGRICULTURE.

ADAPT THE STOCK TO THE FARM.—The character of the soil, crops and other arrangements of the farm, such as quarters, method of preparing feed and water supply, should be considered before attempting a change in the breeding of animals. It is useless to advise farmers to improve with blooded stock, except with such as may be suitable for some special purpose. Not that it is claimed here that good stock may not give satisfaction, but the point to be kept in view is that some kinds of stock will not thrive unless under certain conditions. For instance, let us notice our common sheep. They are often turned loose to gather the stray herbage here and there, and often do well with a little care, even when the pickings and pasture supply is limited. To cross such flocks with a first-class Cotswold under the unfavorable conditions mentioned would be a useless venture, for the cross would be too violent for such a farm. The Cotswold sheep are large in size, and are heavy feeders for sheep. They delight in rich, luxurious pastures, and are not adapted to those that are inferior. They transmit their characteristics very strongly on common flocks, and the young stock cannot thrive and do well if not bountifully fed. The proper method in such cases is to commence with a Southdown before trying the Cotswold, and even then the pasture should be up to the average. The same may be said of hogs. He who wishes to breed up a grade of hogs that have been accustomed to subsisting on the mast of the woods, with the Berkshire, Essex, or Suffolk, should make up his mind in the beginning that the trough must be brought into service. Even the Chester Whites, Jersey Reds and Cheshires—all hardy hogs—demand care and attention. The moment a cross is made on the dairy cows, for better results in butter and milk, the fertilizer and seed must go in the soil for the establishment of a better supply of food. The Shorthorn reaches its prime on the rich limestone soils, where the blue grass springs up spontaneously and furnishes both summer and winter pasturage. Such cattle call for the greatest care, feeding and management at the hands of farmers who do not possess advantages of that nature. For limestone sections the short-horns are well adapted, but on the prairies the Herefords serve a better purpose. In our own section, where great markets are near, and beef, butter and milk are combined objects, the Holsteins are more suitable. It should not be inferred, however, that we cannot raise Shorthorns or Herefords, for there are hundreds of farms that are suitable for any class of stock, but there are farms on which the placing of certain kinds of stock may be an error, owning to the lack of that which may be best for the natural development of the breed used.

SAVE THE MANURE.—Hundreds of dollars annually go to waste on many farms, owing to the carelessness of the farmers in not having suitable places or appliances for saving and storing the manure. The rains wash out valuable matter from the manure in the barnyard, carrying it away to the gutters or runs and to places where it cannot be or is not of any use to the farmer. The sun bleaches it during the warm weather in the barnyard, and still further robs it. Every barnyard of any size should have a pit or cistern, into which all the liquid manure is forced to run. By having an ordinary pump rigged in the well or cistern, and by having a hogshead rigged on a pair of old cart or wagon wheels, this manure water can be from time to time sprinkled over the grass lands, making the grass grow with a vigor which will astonish any one. The most expensive part of the apparatus as it cannot usually be made by the farmer himself, is the sprinkling detachment, though this need not cost many dollars, if simply constructed, and will last for many years with proper care. The whole rig will pay for itself many times over.

Much manure is made and saved by affording all of the stock plenty of bedding, and especially is this the case in pig styes, for the swine require plenty of bedding, which they will work over and convert into strong and rich manure. Where a woods is conveniently near, leaves can be gathered during the off days as soon as they commence to fall fast, and stored away for use. They make most excellent and cheap bedding for all kinds of stock, from horses on down, and the manure is not only good, but is short and readily and quickly handled. It can be used either broadcast or in the rows, and never interferes with the plough. If farmers would pay more attention to their poultry house there would not be the scarcity of "shovelings" which occurs on most farms in the spring, when fine and good fertilizing matter is wanted to put in or on the corn and other hills. The poultry house should be thoroughly cleaned out every month, and the droppings put in barrels or boxes in some dry place until needed. After each cleaning a little clean, dry sand or road dust should be sprinkled over the floor to facilitate the cleaning next time. If farmers will follow this plan they will be surprised to find what an amount of droppings they will have in a single season from a flock of fifty or a hundred hens if all the poultry have been regularly housed.

DAMPNESS undoubtedly favors the growth of the potato disease; therefore, if there is any chance at all of disease existing in the roots they ought to be stored as dry as possible, especially seed potatoes. Since the beetle came among us we have had the best results from early planting and early varieties, but the early kinds are more easily affected by warmth than the late ones, as they sprout easily. Some people think it makes no difference to tear off lone sprouts; but, while they sometimes grow again, there is little doubt that they are constitutionally weaker, and much more liable to disease than those which do not sprout until ready to go in the ground.

SEPTEMBER is the most trying month of the entire year for dairy cows. Insects are numerous and very troublesome. The supply of water is liable to be short, and the quality of that afforded poor. That in small lakes and streams will be warm and often contaminated by decaying vegetable matter. The feed in pastures is generally short and its quality inferior. Many of the grasses will be producing seed, and the stalks will be hard and tough. Cows often suffer from neglect during this month for the reason that their owners are busy in securing the grain and grass crops. They should however, receive the best attention. Pains should be taken to render them as comfortable as possible.

How to select or know a good stock of bees: After the sun has gone down, go to your hives and give a quick but general rap on the side of the hive; and if they possess a good, healthy queen you will hear the bees respond with a quick and unmistakable sounding buzz.

PATIENCE and good treatment are the only means by which both horses and cattle can be trained satisfactorily to the work allotted to them.

THERE is always a demand for superior animals of every kind.

DOMESTIC.

KEEPING BUTTER.—Professor Arnold is undoubtedly right in assuming that butter made from milk set in refrigerators will not keep as well as if the cream was raised in an atmosphere of nearly the same temperature as that in which the butter is kept. Such butter should be sold as soon as made, unless the dairyman has a cellar of unusual coolness, which is not the case with the average cellar. If a strong brine is put on top of the package it will help to lower the temperature a degree or two, and to preserve the contents. If the package is placed on a stone it will be cooler than if set on the ground. Shutting the hot air out of the cellar and keeping it free from dirt and decaying vegetables are most important things to be looked after. We had a half bushel of onions removed from our cellar this season because of the strong odor from them, which would, no doubt, have affected the butter. Butter is so very sensitive in these respects that every one of these little things must be considered if it is kept sweet and good.

SULPHUR FOR DIPTHERIA.—Mr. John S. Wiles, a surgeon of Thorncombe, Dorset, writes to the London Times that after two cases of malignant diptheria out of some nine or ten he had been called to attend had proved fatal, the mother of a sick child showed him an extract from an American paper concerning a practitioner who used sulphur to cure the disease. Accordingly he used milk of sulphur for infants and flowers of sulphur for other children and adults, brought to a creamy consistence with glycerine; dose—a teaspoonful or more, according to age, three or four times a day, swallowed slowly, and application of the same to the nostrils with a sponge. Result, he did not lose a case there or elsewhere, and he succeeded in saving life when the affection had almost blocked the throat.

"To rejuvenate my husband's old and faded coat I took some benzine and cleaned the collar; then with a sponge I dampened the coat thoroughly with water, into which I had previously dissolved a tablespoonful of copperas. I dipped a dark woolen cloth into a dye made by dissolving about five cents' worth of extract of logwood, taking care to put it on evenly and not wet the coat through; after drying, I washed it thoroughly with soapsuds by dipping a cloth in it, and rubbing to get the dye off, so that it would not blacken; by adding a new binding and buttons, the coat looked nearly as well as new."

ALL surfaces to be painted should first be thoroughly dry and free from dust. If on wood, all plane marks, and other slight irregularities, should first be smoothed off by dry sand-paper, when the neatest finish is required. Also all heads of nails must be punched below the surface. To prevent knots from showing through the finished work, they must first be killed, as it is termed. A usual and effective way of doing this is by covering them with two coats of shellac varnish, which, when dry, should be smoothed by sand-paper. Another mode, not quite so certain, is by one or two coats of white lead, mixed with thin glue-water or size, as it is called.

FISH AND POTATO PUDDING.—Wash and peel one quart of potatoes, (cost 3 cents,) peel and slice about six ounces of onions, (cost 1 cent,) skin and bone 2 bloasters or large herrings, (cost 5 cents,) put all these ingredients into a baking dish in layers, seasoning them with a dessertspoonful of salt and a saltspoonful of pepper; pour over them any cold gravy you have on hand, or add two or three ounces of drippings; if you have neither of these, water will answer; bake the pudding an hour and a half, serve hot, with bread. If you use drippings or milk the entire seasoning will cost you less than 5 cents, and the whole dinner, which is excellent, not cost more than 15 cents.

DRIED CELERY AND PARSLEY.—If you ever use celery, wash the leaves, stalks, roots, and trimmings, and put them in a cool oven to dry thoroughly; then grate the root, and rub the leaves and stalks through a sieve, and put all into a tightly-corked bottle, or tin can with close cover; this makes a most delicious seasoning for soups, stews, and stuffing. When you use parsley, save every bit of leaf, stalk or root you do not need, and treat them in the same way as the celery. Remember in using parsley that the root has even a stronger flavor than the leaves, and does not waste a bit.

SUET PUDDING.—One cupful stoned and chopped raisins, one cupful finely chopped suet, one cupful sugar, one of sour milk, one teaspoonful soda, flour enough to make it stiff as bread dough; steam or boil three hours.

PLAIN FRUIT CAKE.—One cup butter, one cup sugar, one cup molasses, four eggs, three cups flour, one and one-half teaspoonfuls cream tartar, one teaspoonful soda, citron and raisins, one teaspoonful cloves, one of cinnamon, and one of allspice, one small nutmeg.

QUINCE SEED.—Quince seed is good for sore or inflamed eyes. Take about one-half dozen quince seeds, put about a tablespoonful of scalding water on them; let it stand till cool, and bathe the eyes just before going to bed and in the morning.

THE best remedy for bleeding at the nose, is in the vigorous motion of the jaw, as if in the act of mastication. In case of a child, a wad of paper should be placed in its mouth, and the child should be instructed to chew it hard. It is the motion of the jaw that stops the flow of blood.

TEETH DENTIFRICE.—Honey mixed with pure pulverized charcoal is said to be excellent to cleanse the teeth and make them white. Limestone water is very good to be occasionally used by those who have defective teeth or an offensive breath.

TO CLEAN PEARLS.—In order to preserve their beauty they should be carefully kept from dampness. A piece of paper torn off and rolled up so as to present a soft, ragged edge, is the best thing to cleanse them with.

TO RID A HOUSE OF INSECTS.—If two or three bottles of ammonia, left unstoppered, are put in prominent places in a room, they will soon leave. No insects can tolerate it.

TO REMOVE OIL FROM THE HANDS.—Oil may be removed from the hands by rubbing them well with dry mustard and then washing them with cold water.

TO CORN BEEF OR HAM.—Eight pounds of salt to one hundred pounds of meat, four pounds of sugar, one-half ounce saltpetre, one of saleratus, to which add four gallons of water.

LINIMENT.—A good liniment for cuts, bruises, etc., can be made by soaking common Maywood leaves in alcohol.

HUMOROUS.

"HAVE you any second-hand ancestors for sale?" asked a gaudily dressed woman, with a shrill voice, of a well known art dealer.

"Ancestors?" echoed the bewildered man, "I do not think I quite understand you."

"Don't catch on, hey? You must be as stupid as you look, then; but it's hard to believe. I've got a new house, and it's all fixed up tip-top, and now I want to buy some ancestors to hang up in it."

"I'm sorry, ma'am," explained the dealer, civilly, "but my ancestors are hung. Here's a holy family by Murrillo, I will sell you cheap, if it will suit."

"Thank you. I don't want another family by Murrillo or any other man; one family in a house is enough. If you've got an aboriginal by Chromo I dunno but what I might take it; but there's a heap more style in a gallery of ancestors, and I'll look around."

The last seen of her she was punching the eye of "The Portrait of a Lady," in oil, with her parasol at another art store, and asking the dazed clerk "what that woman was worth."

How to Get Well.

Thousands of persons are constantly troubled with a combination of diseases. Diseased kidneys and costive bowels are tormentors. They should know that Kidney-Wort acts on these organs at the same time, causing them to throw off the poisons that have clogged them, and so renewing the whole man. Hundreds testify to this.—Pittsburg Post.

TIDE by the forelock: We were very much shocked yesterday at seeing Colouel Percy Yerger, one of the most influential citizens of Austin, in an advanced state of intoxication. "Why, Colonel, what is the matter with you?" asked several of his friends, whereupon the Colonel steadied himself on a lamp post and asked them in a broken voice if they did not read the papers, to which they replied that they did. "Well, then, didn't you (hic) read that Asiatic cholera's comin' this way? Be here in leshs two years (hic). Brandish and whiskish only sure remedy. I'm ready for Asiatic cholera right (hic) now."

That poor bedridden, invalid wife, sister mother, or daughter, can be made the picture of health by a few bottles of Hop Bitters. Will you let them suffer? when so easily cured!

DANGEROUS resemblance: Mr. and Mrs. Samuelson attended a social gathering on Austin avenue last week, and the conversation turned on hunting jack-rabbits. Somebody remarked that at a short distance they resembled small donkeys. Mr. Samuelson, who is a very small man, remarked that he and a number of firends expected to go out shooting jack-rabbits. "No you are not," said Mrs. Samuelson, "you might get accidentally shot." There was a general smile.

TWENTY-FOUR HOURS TO LIVE.

From John Kuhn, Lafayette, Ind., who announces that he is now in "perfect health," we have the following: "One year ago I was, to all appearance, in the last stages of Consumption. Our best physicians gave my case up. I finally got so low that our doctor said I could not live twenty-four hours. My friends then purchased a bottle of DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, which considerably benefited me. I continued until I took nine bottles. I am now in perfect health, having used no other medicine.

DR. DEWITT C. KELLINGER'S LINIMENT is an infallible cure for Rheumatism, Sprains, Lameness and Diseases of the Scalp, and for preventing the growth of the Hair.

THE poor heathen: A good Austin father gave his son a nickel and sent him to church, and after he came home, asked him what the text was. He said he did not know. "Did you forget everything?" asked the parent. "No," said the boy carefully, "I remembered not to put the nickel in the plate." "Why, you heathen!" "If I'm a heathen it's all right. I know for once that the poor heathen got the nickel that was intended for him. I bought me some peaches with that nickel."

Mensman's Peptonized beef tonic, the only preparation of beef containing its entire nutritious properties. It contains blood-making, force generating and life-sustaining properties; invaluable for indigestion, dyspepsia, nervous prostration, and all forms of general debility; also, in all enfeebled conditions, whether the result of exhaustion, nervous prostration, overwork or acute disease, particularly if resulting from pulmonary complaints. Caswell, Hazard & Co., proprietors, New York. Sold by all druggists.

"NO, SIR-EE," remarked the old resident, "my wife didn't bring me a cent But it's all my fault. I wouldn't have it. The morning of the day we were married, I says to her, says I: 'Maria, how much money have you got?' Says she: 'John, I've got just twenty-five cents.' Then, says I, 'Come with me,' and I took her down to the canal and had her throw that quarter into the drink. I wasn't going to have no woman twitting me about spreadin' around on her money."

A LAD who had been bathing was in the act of dressing himself when one of his shoes rolled down the rocks and disappeared in the water. In attempting to rescue it he lost the other one also, whereupon, contemplating his feet with a most melancholly expression, he apostrophized:

"Well, you are a nice pair of orphans, ain't you?"

AN editor asserts that "chickens cannot be raised from egg plants," but just let him plant a dozen eggs under an experienced hen and see.

Who has not seen the fair, fresh young girl transformed in a few months into the pale, haggard, dispirited woman? The sparkling eyes are dimmed, and the ringing laugh heard no more. Too often the causes are disorders of the system which Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" would remedy in a short time. Remember, that the "Favorite Prescription" will unfailingly cure all "female weaknesses," and restore health and beauty. By all druggists. Send three stamps for Dr. Pierce's treatise on Women (96 pages). Address World's Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

ONE was carrying home a cent's worth of yeast in a pitcher, and the other was going to the store for a bar of soap in bulk. "Family you live in going away this summer!" asked the girl with the yeast. "Well, they did talk of it," replied the other, "but the dressmaker disappointed them. Are your folks going?" "They were going, but the milk bill came in this morning and I guess they will have to put off the trip. Dear me, but the rich have their troubles as well as us poor folks. Good-bye."

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes bad, poor appetite, tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver, or "biliousness." Nothing will cure so speedily and permanently as Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." By all druggists.

HE was showing his friend, a western merchant, around the city, and as he pointed to the Stock Exchange he proudly said: "That is our Ras-el-Tin palace, so to speak." Fifteen minutes later they were in a busy, crowded, fashionable restaurant, and the friend remarked: —"This, I suppose, is your Ras-el-Hash palace?" The future remarks concerned something plain.

The Bilious.

dyspeptic or constipated, should address, with two stamps for pamphlet, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, New York.

AN old citizen of Brooklyn, returning to his home from a banquet, met another old citizen coming from the opposite direction.—"Is this the avenue?" asked No. 1. "How should I know? I was at the banquet myself."

An Enthusiastic Endorsement.

GORHAM, N. H., JULY 14, 1879.

GENTS—Whoever you are, I don't know; but I thank the Lord and feel grateful to you to know that in this world of adulterated medicines there is one compound that proves and does all it advertises to do, and more. Four years ago I had a slight shock of palsy, which unnerved me to such an extent that the least excitement would make me shake like the ague. Last May I was induced to try Hop Bitters. I used one bottle, but did not see any change; another did so change my nerves that they are now as steady as they ever were. It used to take both hands to write, but now my good right hand writes this. Now, if you continue to manufacture as honest and good an article as you do, you will accumulate an honest fortune, and confer the greatest blessing on your fellow-men that was ever conferred on mankind.

TIM BURCH.

ALL attempts to invent a spark arrester for locomotives have failed, simply because no genius has thought of tying a pretty woman on top of the smokestack.

Regulate the Secretions.

In our endeavors to preserve health it is of the utmost importance that we keep the secretory system in perfect condition. The well-known remedy Kidney-Wort, has specific action on the kidneys, liver and bowels. Use it instead of dosing with vile bitters or drastic pills. It is purely vegetable, and is prompt but mild in action. It is prepared in both dry and liquid form and sold by druggists everywhere.—Reading Eagle.

"No, sir," said the rich man; "I'm not going to build a costly mansion. I don't want to give folks the idea that I'm getting ready to die."

Vegetine—When the blood becomes lifeless and stagnant, either from change of weather or of climate, want of exercise, irregular diet, or from any other cause, the Vegetine will renew the blood, carry off the putrid humors, cleanse the stomach, regulate the bowels, and impart a tone of vigor to the whole body.

"WHERE'S the nearest place for me to get shaved, boy?" "Over to the broker's, yonder," replied the boy, pointing to three gilt balls over a door-way.

What is beautiful? Why, Carboline, a deodorized extract of petroleum, as now improved and perfected. Clear as spring water, delightfully perfumed and will not soil the finest linen fabric—a perfect toilet preparation and absolutely makes the hair grow on bald heads.

DAWN.

I hear the clarions of the day:
Night's mighty veil is upward drawn,
And with its golden fringes play
The jewelry fingers of the dawn.

The curling vapors one by one
Are shot with opalescent gleams,
And now the almost risen sun
Darts up a thousand crimson streams.

From heaven to earth the splendor steals,
Down glided vanes to windowed towers,
The conscious bells break out in peals,
God! what a wondrous world is ours!

The fiery colors slowly fade,
In sapphire depth they pass away;
The sun begins his grand parade;
From pole to pole 'tis perfect day.

Earth's children feel their mother warm;
From drowsy beds they wake and start,
And forth, through streets and alleys swarm
In myriads to the noisy mart.

O happy toil! O blessed fate!
To no one thought too close confined,
That, with each motion, drops a date,
And shifts the pictures of the mind,

I envy you your changing strife,
Your weary hours, your evening rest,
When all the little cares of life
Are lulled to slumber in the breast.

For my poor soul, that still will float
Near one idea of stern device,
Drifts on, like the Laplander's boat,
Close moored beside its berg of ice.

THROUGH THE TWILIGHT.

Lily Vennor was late home from her work on this particular night.

A dismal February night it was, with a grey fog above, through which the lamps shone like yellow dots of sickly flame.

But Lily was used to all sorts of weather.

Lily Vennor was a milliner.

All day long she sat, with seven and twenty other girls, in a long low-ceiled room on the upper floor of a monster building in one of the narrow streets of the West End, working until she vaguely wondered within herself if there were women enough in all the world to wear out the dresses she and her companions made.

It was hard work, and it was poorly paid; but Lily Vennor had known what it was to be without employment for weeks at a time, and she was thankful even for Mr. Murex's four shillings a day, with the stipulation that, in case of extra haste, an hour or so overtime should not be objected to.

The poor are generally worsted in their bargains, nor was our little heroine an exception to the rule.

But the work was over at last, and Lily was in the outer room, tying her curls under the brown felt hat, whose tasteful loops of ribbon had been sponged and turned so often, and folding her worn shawl across her shoulders.

And as she took up her dinner-basket, she heard the gay voice of Mary Reid, one of her fellow-workers, saying merrily—

"St. Valentine's Eve!

"You don't mean that you have forgotten it, Ida?"

"Why I expect a dozen valentines at least to-morrow."

Lily Vennor glanced up at Mary Reid as she spoke.

A dozen valentines?

Yes, there was every probability that she would receive as many as that,

She was a dark-eyed brilliant-complexioned young beauty, with a pretty Greek nose, a dimple on the left cheek, and teeth as white as sliced cocoanut.

She would be one to marry early, and escape from this bondage of toil and poverty; and for a moment Lily wished that she too were beautiful.

And then came a second thought.

St. Valentine's Eve—and she had promised Midge and Edith, the two little twin sisters at home, a valentine for this year, when Midge had submitted to the ordeal of vaccination, and Edith had been so docile at the task of learning to make stockings.

For Lily Vennor, girl though she was, had already been burdened with the cares of life.

Her father had married a second time, and lost his wife, leaving Lily at his own death with the charge of these two little ones, Edith and Margaret, commonly known as "Midge."

It was a hard, hard task, but Lily never quailed.

She had accepted it simply as she would have accepted any other decree of Providence, and the two little orphans had learned to love her with all their innocent hearts.

And now she paused in front of the brilliant show-windows, with her worn purse in her hand, trying to decide upon some particular style of valentine which would be pretty enough to suit the children, and which would not be too dear.

So she went into the shop, humbly awaiting her turn, and bought two sixpenny valentines, which the clerk superciliously tossed toward her.

"I should like two postage stamps," said she meekly.

"Stamps!" echoed the clerk. "This ain't a post-office!"

Lily pointed to a printed placard in the window—"Stamps for Sale Here"—and the clerk, grumbling under his breath, gave her the two stamps.

The next morning however little Midge and Edith danced up and down with joy when the postman left the two valentines at their door.

"And here's a valentine for you, Lily," said Midge.

"Only the envelope hasn't got such pretty gilt roses on as mine and Edith's have."

Lily was standing with her hat on as the child ran up to her.

"A valentine," said she, "for me?

"But I think you are mistaken, little Midge."

She opened the letter with a sensation of wonder as to whom it possibly could be from.

For she got so few letters, this gentle drudging little creature, that the very sight of an envelope in a strange hand was a circumstance to startle her.

"From Doctor Ingraham," she said to herself.

"He will call here to see me this evening.

"Oh dear, dear! I knew how it would be.

"He thinks it's so strange that I haven't said anything about paying him for his attendance on Midge and Edie when they had the scarlet fever.

"But he doesn't know how poor we are!

"And he doesn't know—how should he?—that I was going to his office this very week; to ask him for the bill, and try and save up the amount, little by little, until I had got enough.

"Oh dear! oh dear!

"What am I to do?"

She laid out the children's rations on the table—a bowl of milk, and two liberal slices of bread for each—and cautioning them not to go near the fire—which smouldered in a little cast-iron stove—went to her daily work with a heart which felt like lead within her bosom.

Mary Reid was talking in her high, soprano voice, about the valentine she received.

Leila Payne and Sarah Howell were giggling over gilt and tasselled epistles, directed in masculine hands, but Lily went straight to the forewoman.

"Mrs. Dobbs," said she, "can you lend me ten dollars?"

"I?" said the forewoman, in sour surprise,

"I need it very, very much!" said poor Lily; "and if you will give it to me to-day—this very afternoon, I mean—I will pay you my next two weeks entire wages as they come in."

Mrs. Dobbs did a little mental arithmetic in the recesses of her brain as she stood there staring with fishy eyes on Lily Vennor.

Yes, the interest was not so bad.

She thought it might "pay;" and so she lent the ten dollars for a term of fourteen days, Sundays and holidays included.

And Lily, mustering up what courage she could, stopped at Doctor Ingraham's office on her way home from work.

"I won't give him the trouble to call," said she to herself; "for, of course, it will be a disappointment to him to know that he can't get his whole bill

"But I will tell him I will pay the rest as soon as ever I can.

"And I hope he won't be very much vexed; for, oh, he was so good to me when the little ones were sick."

Poor Lily Vennor!

Dr. Ingraham's pretty little brougham was at the door when Lily went into his office, and Dr. Ingraham himself stood at the table, in his fur-trimmed coat, pouring some mixture from one vial into another—a tall, dark man, with eyes as black as sloes, and a beard as long and soft as floss silk.

He glanced up with a smile as Lily entered, and something like a flush of color crossed his dark cheek for a moment.

"Sit down, Miss Vennor," said he.

"I have just finished my visits for the present.

"In five minutes I shall be ready for home practice."

Lily had turned pink and white, by turns, as she clasped the ten dollars tightly in the palm of her hand within her worn little muff.

"I—I will not detain you long," said she; and she waited until he had prepared the compound and sent it off by his man.

"And now?" he is standing opposite to her, with folded arms, and a height that seemed to her positively commanding.

"I received a note from you, she said, "this morning."

"Yes, and why did you not wait for me to call?" he asked quietly.

"I was ashamed to put you to the trouble," said Lily, in a low voice.

"I knew, of course, the object of your call."

"Did you?"

He elevated his brows slightly.

"And I know very well that I had not the money for you," she added in desperation,

"But here is ten dollars, and if you will please let me know the whole amount, I will endeavor to pay it by instalments as best I can."

"You are mistaken, Miss Vennor," said the Doctor.

"My motive in calling, had nothing whatever to do with the collection of my bill."

Lily looked at him with innocent surprise.

She did not understand him.

"I had a question to ask you," said the Doctor.

"About the children?"

"No; about yourself."

"Yes," he said, "and I will ask it now, Miss Vennor.

"In those weeks when I came daily to your house, and saw you stand like a little angel at the bedside of those little ones, I made up my mind that you, of all women, came nearest my ideal of sweet, womanly perfection.

"And I vowed within myself to ask you to be my wife.

"So now, Miss Vennor—Lily—you know why I was coming!"

It seemed like a dream of unreal bliss to Lily Vennor, that homeward walk through the twilight, with Bruce Ingraham's arm to support her, his beloved presence so near to her.

She had been a toiler in life's shadow ever since she could remember; but she was coming into her heritage of happiness at last.

Little Midge and Edith were looking out for her, over the stairway, as she came home.

"It's Lily," cried Midge, in an audible stage whisper.

"Our Lily!

"But she isn't alone.

"There's some one with her.

"Oh, Edie, I guess it's her valentine!

"Old Mrs. Norris says that everyone has a valentine to-day."

"You dear little prophet," cried Doctor Ingraham, catching up the little child in his arms.

"You are right.

"It is Lily's valentine!"

Doctor Ingraham!" exclaimed Edith, slowly.

"Well, if I was to chose a valentine out of all the world for Lily, I should say Doctor Ingraham!"

And Lily, in a voice that was almost a whisper, added—

"So should I!"

Children's Eyes.

Dr. Mittendorf, of New York, recently said that myopia, or shortsightedness has been called a disease of civilization, and, unless prompt measures were taken to counteract the injurious influences which led to the development of the disease, it must more and more be regarded as a disease of civilized life. The cause of the disease, he explained, were debility of the sclerotic, hereditary predisposition, long continued use of the eyes on small objects and an increase of intercular pressure by interference with the circulation of the interior of the eye. The disease was incurable, but could be successfully arrested by the application of proper glasses. The most dangerous period of myopia to set in was from the ages of 5 to 15 years, and an examination of the pupils attending schools of New York led to the following discoveries; Out of 203 scholars attending the Thirteenth street grammar school only 6 were nearsighted. At grammer school No. 58 698 children were examined, of whom 8½ per cent. were suffering from myopia. This included 425 American children, among whom there were 34 cases of myopia, and 273 Germans, of whom 26 were suffering from myopia. At grammar school No. 35, of 630 Americans 10 per cent. were myopic, and of 266 Germans 17½ per cent. were afflicted with disease. At Columbia College 201 students were examined, and of these 69, or 35 per cent., were found to be nearsighted, the percentage being greater in the academical department than in the school of mines. Further investigation, with a veiw to testing the hereditary nature of the disease, showed that, of 45 Jews, 40 per cent. came from myopic families; of 82 German myopics, 29, or 35 per cent., came from myopic families, and of 160 American children, only 49, or 31 per cent., had myopia in their families. In all cases it was found myopia increased with the length of school life. Very serious complications arose in this disease by neglecting the use of glasses, and frequently total blindness resulted from this neglect. He advocated, as a means of relieving the disease, rest and application of suitable glasses, which, in many instances, should be tinted blue, in order to avoid irritation from bright lights The popular prejudice of the poorer classes led to very mischievous results, and often to hopeless blindness.

A Large Private Library.

The owner of one of the largest private libraries in the country died recently at his home in Albany, N. Y. His name was Royal Woodward, and he was not an author, a professional man or a rich connoisseur, but a pedler of sewing silk For many years he had invested the greater part of his earnings, which were considerable, in books, and is supposed to have left," says the Troy Times, "more than 30,000 volumes. His tastes ran in the direction of theology, genealogies and town histories. His library was never arranged, but was stowed from garret to cellar, in parlor and woodshed. He also owned large collections of engravings and autographs. Mr. Woodward was an honorary member of a number of antiquarian and literary societies in this country and Europe."

TRUE benevolence: Fogg says he never finishes a cigar but he thinks, "Another temptation removed from the young men of America!"

Ready Wit.

History is full of examples of the success attained by quick-witted men. De Grammont, when a young man, waited on Cardinal Richelieu, and surprised the great minister in a somewhat undignified amusement of leaping on a wall. The cardinal looked annoyed—a less ready-witted man would have apologized and retired. But De Grammont was wiser, and exclaimed, "I will wager that I can leap higher than your eminence." The challenge was accepted. De Grammont was courtier enough to allow himself to be surpassed, and the cardinal was his friend for the future. This readiness is confined to no rank of life. Horace Walpole gives an instance of it in a Paris fishwoman. The dauphin having recovered from a serious illness, the "dames de la Halle" waited on the King (Louis XV) to offer their congratulations. "What would have become of us had our dauphin died?" said the spokeswoman: "we should have lost our all." "Yes," put in a second fishwoman, who observed the King's brow darken at this somewhat equivocal compliment to himself," we should, indeed, have lost our all, for our good King would never have survived his son's death." It was ready wit that enabled William the Conqueror to persuade his followers that his fall on stepping ashore in England, was an omen of good instead of evil fortune. "I have taken 'seisin' of this land," he exclaimed, rising with his hands full of earth; and the ready turn dispelled the superstitious fears which the accident had occasioned. The lower orders often possess great readiness at repartee. Few retorts are better than that of the paver to Sydenham the great seventeenth-century physician. The doctor was complaining of the bad manner in which the pavement was laid in front of his house, adding, "And now you throw down earth to hide your bad work." "Well doctor," said the man quietly, "mine is not the only bad work that the earth hides." Old biographers are fond of including "a ready wit" among the virtues of the subject of their memoirs; indeed, dull folks appear to have been looked upon in former days with extreme contempt. Dr. Johnson was very outspoken in his opinion regarding stupid people. Inveighing against a worthy but extremely foolish female acquaintance, a lady present reminded him that she was a very good woman, "and I trust that we shall meet her in paradise." "Madam," roared the exasperated doctor, "I never desire to meet fools anywhere."

Judging Women by their Mode of Walking.

Female gaits are just as much the subject of fashion's caprices as are bonnets and bustles. Of necessity, they must be, for the width and length of skirt, whether it be bouffant or serpentine, and a dozen other things, which are regulated solely by the prevailing mode, determine the proper caper in pedestrianism. The conventional girl has to bring her adaptability into play just as much when she selects her style of walk as she does in deciding upon the style of her hat or the stuff for her gown. Congruity, too, plays an important part in her street appearance and is an important factor in her success. The plump girl, who is all rich, ripe, round curves and massiveness, can bound along with a quick, elastic step that would be ridiculously out of place in her lank and sweetly-æsthetic sister. The first can travel with that easy, springing sway that is as suggestive of physical luxury and solid comfort as a pineapple-fiber hammock under an apple tree; the other must glide—her very appearance suggests the frailties of her structure and the possibilities of her being jarred out of shape in the bounding process. Between these two extremes of gait there is the happy mean, that is much less obtrusive, as it is more graceful, than either of the others; it is, too, much more rare. These three constitute the generic gaits; the specific ones are as numerous as the girls who go them

Every woman has a peculiarity of gait essentially her own—a sort of warping of the general principle to her idiosyncrasies. It may result from almost anything, from a bow leg to a splayed foot, but it will give a clew to her character, from which much may be gathered with proper observation. To one who watches the crowd it becomes a question whether, with a proper description of the steps and motions of the body, it would not be possible to classify each girl with a tolerable degree of accuracy. The matter-of-fact girl brings down her feet with such prosaic force that she is readily distinguished. So, too, is the romantic young lady, whose step in itself is suggestive of rope ladders and mysterious moonlight. There is a go-out-among-the-heathen goodness of gait that will mark the evangelist damsel ten blocks from a prayer meeting, and the step of the literary woman has an onomatopœia about it that proclaims her at once. So it is throughout the whole catalogue of female traits, and no one who studies the subject with any degree of care can help being convinced that a woman's walk is not an obscure factor in the grand results of her street victories.

A Poem Written on a Grain of Rice.

A Chinese teacher has just presented quite a curiosity to the City Hall Museum. Many of our readers have doubtless seen specimens of printing compressed within very small limits, such for instance as the whole of the Lord's Prayer contained within a circle the size of a finger ring. This, however, is not a specimen of minute typography, but of caligraphy, for it consists of a stanza of poetry, composed by the teacher himself, which contains thirty-three distinct and well formed Chinese characters written out in full style without any contractions, though the most complicated characters are not introduced into the little poem. It seems almost incredible, but it is a fact that the whole of these thirty-three characters are inscribed on one grain of unhulled rice. It is only another instance of the patient toil which a Chinaman will spend over apparently unremunerative work. The grain of paddy in enclosed under a magnifying glass, in a silver locket. Accompanying it is a wooden box containing a sort of discourse, of which the grain of paddy is the text. There are also other papers with it, some relating to the presentation of this curiosity to the Royal Princess, Prince Albert Victor, and George, of Wales, for whom it was originally intended, but owing to the hitch which occurred in the whole of the arrangements at that time, and the intending donor was never able to accomplish his object, though he used every means in his power to do so.

Diamond Thieves.

A New York diamond thief worked the following plan all over the country with great success. He would, in company with a lady, enter any "marked" jewelry house and select a lot of valuable gems. With the utmost suavity he would order them sent to his hotel, C. O. D., immediately, and with the lady would quit the store, enter a hack and drive to the hotel. The messenger arrived at the hotel, would be directed up to the purchaser's room, the latter having previously left word with the clerk to send him up immediately upon his arrival.

The messenger upon knocking at the pretended purchaser's door, would be invited in, and very politely requested to produce the diamonds and receive his money. Immediately upon the diamonds being handed to him, the sharper would by a cough give a signal to his accomplice in the next room. She would then call him and ask him to come into her room, just for a minute, immediately. The knave would thereupon place the jewels in a cabinet that stood in the room, and excusing himself, would withdraw for a moment. The messenger would wait a reasonable time for his reappearance, and then, becoming weary, would go to the cabinet to take possession of the jewels, when voila they would be non est. The cabinet has been made in such a manner that its drawers pull out from the back. It has been placed against a door connecting with the next room, a part of which has been cut out. The thieves from the other room have abstracted the jewels and fled.

Another scheme that is very often worked is for the thief to enter a diamond establishment and look over certain diamonds. After making a minute examination of them he will leave, promising to call the next day. He will call at the appointed time and again ask to be shown the "sparks." After examining them he will request the clerk to hand him an envelope. Upon receiving it he places the gems in the envelope, in the presence of the clerk, puts his name on the envelope, pays a small amount deposit and asks that they be kept for him until the morrow, when he will call and pay the balance. To this the salesman gladly consents, and lays the envelope one side from the customer. The next day and the next arrives and going without the appearance of the purchaser, the envelope is opened and to the astonishment of the unlucky seller, counterfeits of the genuine articles are found enclosed. The thief's mode of operation is as follows; Upon calling at the store the first time he takes away in his mind a minute description of the diamonds he has examined. Repairing to some "crooked" jeweler he has duplicate paste ones made with the same setting. Placing these in the palm of his hand so as to conceal them from the party who is to wait on him, he re-enters the jewelry house at the appointed time. Upon being handed the stones he dexterously lets the counterfeits fall from the palm of his hand to the ends of his fingers, at the same time rapidly carrying the genuines to his palm. This feat, as a matter of course, is akin to egerdemain, and requires a vast amount of practice, combined with a wonderful control of the facial muscles. Having changed the articles in the position desired, it is a very easy matter to deceive the clerk into a belief that the "bonas" are being placed in the envelope. A Philadelpoia expert was amassing a fortune at this game, when becoming too bold or reckless, he either by accident or intent attempted to "walk" the same establishment twice, and was caught.

The plan executed by the gang in Louisville recently was the oldest known to crooks, that is of employing a "stool" to attract the attention of the "main guy" while one or more men do the work. The proprietor in the case hardly deserves sympathy for his loss, as robberies of the same nature are reported in the press almost daily, together with a description of how the work is done.

Perhaps the latest and most unique manner of purloining diamonds is as follows:

An apparently old decrepit old man, accompanied by his wife or daughter will enter a first class jewelry store and ask to be shown some loose diamonds, or, in other words, diamonds that have been removed from their settings and placed together on a paper, which are all exhibited to the purchaser together. The old man in enacting his part, is very near sighted and partially blind, and in order to obtain a good view of the diamonds) places his head in close proximity to them. At this instant the lady will point to some other articles in the case and ask their price. The condescending clerk, thinking he is sure to make a good sale, diverts his attention for a moment from the old gentleman and reaches in the case to produce for inspection whatever the lady has asked to be shown. Now is the opportunity, and with the rapidity almost of thought, the old man darts his tongue into the midst of the loose diamonds. As many of them as touch that member, adhere to it, and are drawn back into the possessor's mouth. The few that are taken are not missed for the time being, as the stones are never counted, but weighed. Ordering some article to be sent to a given address for a blind, the pair take their departure from the store and a hundred chances to one are never detected. Once obtained, the thieves easily dispose of the diamonds to any jeweler, first, of course, removing them from their settings, so they cannot be identified.

While not belonging strictly to the branch of diamond thievery, a great deal of money is realized by sharpers in the following way.

They get off to some provincial town and stop at its best hotel. After having cultivated the acquaintance of the proprietor, they, in a plausible strain, set forth that ill-fortune has overtaken them, been unlucky at gambling, or something of that sort. However, they have a diamond pin left which they would pawn to pay their bill if there was only a pawn shop in the town, which, of course, there is not. Would the landlord accommodate them with the loan of $50 on it until they received money by express, which was on the way. The unsophisticated landlord sends the pin to the best jeweler in the berg, who pronounces it to be worth not a cent less than $500, Such is really the fact, the sharpers having tendered a genuine diamond pin. When the ornament is brought back from the jeweler, who has declared it genuine, the knaves undertake to show the landlord some peculiarity about it. While so doing, right under the victim's eyes, they change in for a duplicate paste one, which has been concealed in the palm of one or the other's hand. The accommodating host carefully locks the bogus pin in the "gopher," and hands over the stipulated amount, only to find out in time that he has been "done."

Monks and Mastiffs.

A variety is given to the little streets immediately adjoining the college and the abbey by the frequent appearance of a couple of monks, accompanied by a dozen or more splendid specimens of the St. Bernard mastiff. The race of this fine dog is kept vigorous and pure, though all throughout the canton I notice a number of these animals which evidently have strains of other blood. In fact, excepting from the monastery itself, the Valaisians say you cannot procure a thoroughbred dog, and not always even there, Their peculiar training for the assistance of wayfarers begins, of course, only on the mountains, and it was from the monastery on the St. Bernard that the Prince of Wales obtained, when passing there, the fine canine specimens which are the ornaments of his kingly kennel at Sandringham.

These dogs are fed three times a day with vegetable and animal food. The Christian dog here, contrary to some "dogs of Christians" elsewhere, observes the monastic regime, and is limited, on fast days and days of abstinence, in his food. Next to London joint stock companies, I never saw canine creatures with so much "limited liability." There are about two hundred dogs held here in training orders for the final lessons in humanitarian seeking and finding on St. Bernard's bleak top.

These dogs have most attractive names, and respond to them as intelligently as a corporal's guard on roll-call. A sort of of stud-book is kept, which, for its detail and accuracy, would draw tears of envy from the racing authorities at Newmarket, and which I look over with an interest in dog pedigree that would amaze and amuse a Darwin in a Herald's College. The first family of dogs here are proud of their lineage as if they belonged to the blue blood of all dogdom, chronicled in the "Bow-wow Peerage" or the canine "Who's Who"

One old family traces its origin to the dog days of the celebrated Bishop Leon, who was hurled from his palace windows in the fourteenth century by a spendthrift nephew, who was the roue cur of this canton.

I may mention, on the subject of these dogs and their sense of smell, that it is keener than in dogs of the smaller and more domestic type. It is by the smell that they are guided in their chief works. It has been said that "pet dogs," lap dogs, and dogs undogged, if I may use the term, by silly fondling and female nursing, are less strong in their sense of smell than the natural dog pure and simple. A dog deprived of smelling powers ceases to be a dog. Schiff, in his treatise on dogs and their faculties, says the dog with a loss of smell loses its faculty of faithfulness toward its master, whom it recognizes and loves simply on account of his individual perfume. He caused some other dogs to be deolfactorized, and forever after they forget their cunning, and knew no master, be he ever so kind. The olefactory nerve in the Mount St. Bernard mastiff is particularly large, liberally containing sinuses for increasing the olfactory surface, and you do not discover it so developed in small dogs.

Fisheries at Cancale.

The fishing fleet of Cancale, both for dredging oysters and catching fish, numbers more than 200 lugger-ribbed craft of small tonnage. These boats are owned partly by single individuals, partly by their crews, who have clubbed together for copartnership. Their tackle and gear cost as much as the boats and sails; the nets, which are chiefly made at Nantes, being the great item of expense. The seine is never used; the trawl, which is fitted with a huge head-bag or receptacle, being the sort of snare generally adopted. Each boat has a functionary called a "mistress:" that is, a woman who has contracted, under certain conditions, for the sale of the take of the craft. The crew have, therefore, nothing to do with the disposal of the fish. The produce of the sale effected by the "mistress" is generally divided into five parts—two to the owner or owners of the boat, one to the skipper and two to the crew, the woman having previously deducted her legitimate profits. The life of a "Cancalais", as these fishermen dub themselves, is one even more rife with danger than that of others of their calling. The Bay of Mont St. Michel is one of the most perilous seas in the world. Equatorial tides rise in it to the height of fifty feet, and ordinary tides to thirty-five feet. The distance between high and low water marks is more than six miles in some places, and the rapidity of the currents, especially on a stormy day, maelstrom-like. Quicksands, too, are numerous, and a boat sealed on one of them during ebb-tide has little chance of its crew being saved; as regards itself, none. In calm weather the boats fish in the shallowest waters, their keels occasionally heeling in the mud; and here they take soles, turbot, doree, brill and skate in considerable quantities. Government forbids fishing within a mile of the shore; but so soon as night sets in and screens the fishermen and their fleets from the lookouts of the steam gunboat at Granville and the coast guard sailing schooner at Cancale, the boats are run within the prescribed limits, and the forbidden fruit tasted. Oysters are allowed to be taken only on certain days at certain times of the year, a strict watch being kept by the two vessels above mentioned, from which signals are made when dredging is to commence and to cease. Fishing proper, however, goes on all the year, the only restriction, with the exception of the fixed distance from the shore, as already mentioned, being that of mailage, or size of the meshes of the nets. Meshes wider by the fraction of an inch only, having been ordered by the Government to be used and their use continued for a few years, brought the population of Cancale to the verge of starvation, fishes that were entangled before escaping now. In fact, so momentous a question is this one of mailage among a class of individuals who earn their living from the depths of the sea that candidates for State or municipal offices invariably promise the electors to obtain for them the privilege of smaller meshes for the fishing nets, that promise, whether carried out or not, being the only safe "card" for securing success. Mailage is the bug-bear of Cancalais.

W. P. Cheney, a somewhat prominent minister of the Baptist church in Georgia, publishes a card in the last Christian Index and South West Baptist, severing his connection with the church as a minister of the gospel. He says: "My present convictions do not allow me to believe or preach the fundamental doctrines of the Christian system."

A HIT.—Dan Voorhees, of Indiana, during the late campaign, was making a strong argument against prohibition, and asked "what is to become of the surplus corn, if prohibition prevails?"

A sturdy farmer asked him if he really wanted an answer to that question.

Dan said if you please.

"We will have more pork and less hell," said the farmer to the amazement of the stateman.

In the East Indies, electricity has been applied to a strange use. A platinum wire, connected with the poles of a battery, is stretched around a tree, and, as it becomes immediately red-hot, it is gently see-sawed, with the requsite pressure against the tree, and rapidly burns its way through. It is said a tree can be cut down, without any waste of timber, in about fifteen minutes that would require two hours to fell in the ordinary way.

A Druuken Man Afire

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 18.—Alvin Gurman last night while intoxicated and on his way home fell in the road, after putting his lighted pipe in his pocket, and dropped asleep. His clothing took fire and he was burned so badly that he will probably die. He presented himself this morning at the house of a neighbor in a terrible condition, his clothing being all burned off except the wristbands of his shirt and five or six inches of his pantaloons, which were tucked in his boots.

Preparation for Another Cotton Exposition.

VICKSBURG, Nov. 18.—Formal invitations were forwarded to-day by the National Cotton Planters' Association of America to the cities of New Orleans, Galveston, Mobile, Savannah, Charleston, Richmond, Augusta, Montgomery, Nashville, Memphis, Louisville, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Baltimore to compete for the location of the World's Cotton Centennial Exposition, to be held under the auspices of the above association in 1884. It is contemplated to raise $2,000,000 for this exposition, $500,000 of which is expected from the city securing the location, which will be decided on January 1st, 1883, by the executive committee of the association.

MONTGOMERY LETTER.

MONTGOMERY, Nov. 22, 1882.

The General Assembly has not yet done sufficient work to indicate entirely the character of legislation that will distinguish the session.

The convict question and the general road laws of the State will certainly receive attention, and members from the Black belt will doubtless push for a repeal of the crop lien law.

The question of prohibition will also receive due attention, but I think the sentiment is against any legislation on that head for the entire State. So far there has been as many bills to repeal prohibitory statutes introduced as for prohibition. The tendency is to leave these matters to the people under local option laws. After the adjournment of the Senate to-day I went to the Prohibition Convention now in session in this city and listened to the proceedings for an hour. A resolution to memorialize the Legislature to submit a constitutional amendment prohibiting the sale of liquors in or their importation into the State to the people to be voted on at the next general election, was voted down in the Convention with almost entire unanimity, as also a resolution that the Temperance Alliance of the State would support no man of intemperate habits for office. The idea seemed to be with the Convention to keep the question out of politics. The petitions for prohibitory legislation for Calhoun have not yet arrived.

The election of U. S. Senator comes off Tuesday next. General Morgan, Gov. Watts and Hon. Peter Hamilton are understood to be candidates. A most bitter and relentless war has been made on Gen. Morgan on the ground of his alledged habits, but so far it seems he has not been hurt by it. He will doubtless succeed himself.

From present appearances the old Railroad Commission will be retained.

The contest between Mr. Hammond the sitting member and Capt. Savage has not been decided. The committee have allowed Capt. S. further time in which to get his papers here. The committee will meet to-night and probably submit their report to-morrow.

Gen. Forney, Jno. M. Caldwell, Capt. Savage, Mr. Walter Dean, Mr. Jno. M. Crook, Mr. Joe Mathis and Mr Wallace Woodward of Calhoun have been here since the commencement of the session, some of whom have returned. Revs. Messrs. Kirk and Brandon, as also Mr. D. P. Gunnels passed through the city Tuesday, en route for the Conference of the M. E. Church at Lafayette. L. W. G.

Reports from Prohibition Counties.

The proceedings of Temperance Convention recently assembled in Montgomery are very interesting—particularly the reports of delegates from the prohibition counties as to the effect upon the morals of the people, and the decrease of crime. We publish them for the information of our readers in Calhoun in case the question should ever be subraitted to a vote of the people:

Dr. Smith or Autauga, said the work is progressing very satisfactorily in that county, except in one Beat, and nobody lives up there. His report was very favorable to the cause.

Col. G. N. Gilmer, of Lowndes, gave some statistics of criminal proceedings, showing a wonderful decrease in crime since the act went into effect.

Rev. Z. A. Parker, of Etowah, illustrated the effect of prohibition in that county. Where there had been thirty-eight arrests for violations of law during a certain length of time previous, there had been only seven during the same period since. The morality of the county and its prosperity had largely increased. Understanding that a bill would probably be introduced to repeal the existing law, he informed the representative from that county in the Legislature that a repeal of that law would not represent the sentiment and wishes of the people.

Hon J. C. Orr, Senator from Morgan, said that county hadn't done much for prohibition, but it was represented at Montgomery by two men in full sympathy with the object of the convention.

Dr. Robinson of Conecuh, stated that as an effect in his county, there are numbers of men who signed counter petitions and now favor abolition first in the county, then in the State.

Gen. F. P. Randle of Randolph, said prohibition had been carried twice by the popular vote in his county, and the second time by double the vote cast at the first election. All the young men favored prohibition while singular to state, the older ones opposed it. Large numbers of colored men voted for it. Since it went into effect there had been more improvement every way than for five years previous.

Rev. J. O. Hixson, of Bullock, reported that partial prohibition in that county had produced a wonderful diminution of crime, and the feeling is growing in favor of making it general. He was instructed to say that the proposition to repeal the act would not be endorsed by the people.

Gen. Bulger, of Tallapoosa, was called for and stated that as representative of that county two years ago he succeeded in procuring the passage of an act prohibiting the sale of liquor in the county. In the spring of 1881, the first four months, seven deaths had occurred, five of which were outright murders, and three from casualties, and whiskey was the sole cause of all. Meetings were interrupted by drunken men; there were no Sabbath schools or literary schools worth the name. Since the passage of this law not a drop of blood has been shed in anger. It formerly required more than a week to dispose of the criminal docket, and at the last term it was cleared by Wednesday afternoon. Dadeville has now three prosperous churches and two elegant schools, male and female. Yet there are advocates of the whiskey traffic, and a bill has been introduced to repeal the prohibition act and allow drug stores to sell it on a physician's prescription. The other representative has introduced a bill to strike out the drug store provision. He, (Gen. B.) had the pleasure to present a petition signed by 1,400 names against the repeal of the law. Four out every five in his county are in favor of prohibition. A citizen who had become a convert to prohibition, had told him that 2,000 more bushels of corn had been made in his precinct for families than before.

A number of others made similar statements, all of which were listened to with interest and greeted with general applause.

The movement for an exposition of mineral, agricultural and mechanical products of the south to be held at this city not later than 1884, has taken definite shape. It is in the hands of men who are certain not to fail. No enterprise undertaken in this portion of the south can promise so great benefits as this. Let every one stand ready to assist.—Chattanooga Times.

Brother Gardner on the Cyclone.

Detroit Free Press

A communication from a state official of the state of Ohio inquired if Brother Gardner could explain the recent overwhelming change in the political situation, and the old man motioned for the janitor to put more wood in the stove and replied:

"Jist for once I will broke ober our rule an' answer dat query as best I kin. While de American people am great pollytishuns, dey nebber forgit dat dey am also free citizens. You can lead 'em about so fur in pollyticks, religun, charity, or debiltry. De dimocratic party led de people to a sartin pint an' den lost its hold. Dimocrats let go of de party to become citizens. De republicans have led de people to a sartin pint, and de reackshun has sot in. Suspishun, fear an' disgust am takin' hold of de people. Let me say to you—

"1. An American lubs his kentry mo' dan his party."

"2. Pollytishuns will be blindly followed to a sartin turn in de road an' den de party will halt and scatter."

"3. No matter what strength a party has, corrupshun will scatter it in time."

"4. Bigotry, avarice, selfishness, knavery and open fraud, are ele ments of pollyticks. Dey will bring success fur a time, but dey am also sartin to bring defeat."

"De kentry has got tired of de present rule an' its evils an' am gwine to make a change. When de president of de United States becomes a ward pollytishun an' senators rob de kentry at large to pave de way to a second or third nominashun de honest republican will let go on party ties to look out fur de kentry.

"An' now one word to the cull'd people. We has woted solid an' has bin left. In dis country we had our candidates on boaf tickets, an' dey war' buried outer sight. De dimocrats owed us nuffin', an' dey paid us off. De republicans owed us de last sixteen y'ars of rule, an' yet republican wotes beat our candydates on de republican ticket. Dat's all. Figger it out fur yerselves."

Almost a Mile a Minute.

Knoxville Chronicle.

Engineer Matt Franklin, with his new Rogers locomotive 121, one of the lot of heavy passenger engines recently purchased by the E. T. V. & G. R. R., pulled the party of railroad officials to Cleveland and return last Monday. By directions of the officials he put her out and made her do her prettiest, making a run of 54 miles to the hour going down. On the return trip, at some points, for a short distance, where the road was good, he made at the rate of 59 miles to the hour. Those new engines are capital pieces of machinery, and, with a track in the right condition, there is no telling what time could be made by them.

New Railway Company.

The Montgomery Advertiser of the 18th says, "Articles of incorporation were filed in the office of the Secretary of State last week, and commissions issued to Samuel Thomas, C. C. Brice; Samuel Shethar, H. L. Terrell, L. M. Schwan, and A. O. Beebe, of New York, and D. W. Caldwell, of Cleveland, Ohio, to incorporate the "Alabama Coal and Iron Railway Company," to run from Birmingham to Mobile Junction, in Clark county; and to the same persons to incorporate the "Selma, Mobile and New Orleans Railway Company," from Selma to Mobile.

Mother—"Nonsense! I'll do no such thing, but will send for our Doctor."
Daughter—"Our Doctor keeps one in bed a long time and pours down a vast quantity of medicine, besides making daily changes."

Mother—"Doctor, is she dangerous and what is her affliction?"
Doctor—"Yes, madam, she is dangerously ill. The ventricular and auricular forces are not in equilibrium, there is an increased centripetal action about the cerebrum and medulla oblongata, the portal circulation vascillates, suspended Nature seems hesitating, and I—"
Mother—"Stop, for heaven's sake stop and go to work at once."
Doctor—"I will do all I can."
Mother, after two weeks have expired—"Daughter, our Doctor shall be discarded at once. Two weeks and no relief. I will procure that which you desired at first."
Daughter, in a low tone—"I am glad, and think it the only thing that will restore me to health."

Mother—"Get out of my house, you old humbug!"
Daughter—"Well, mother, you see how rapidly I have improved since discharging 'our Doctor' and I commenced the use of that which I so much needed. The effect has been most wonderful. The one relieved my head, cured the constipation, while the other imparted strength, came to the help of Nature and made me feel new."

EDWIN F. GLOVER.

There died in Calhoun county, Alabama, at the residence of his father, Dr. Wyly Glover, on the afternoon of November 16th 1882, in the 26th year of his age, the young man whose name heads this notice, and I feel it a sad duty incumbent on me to pay a short tribute to his sterling worth as a true man in all that makes a man good and noble—religion, integrity, morality, amiability and great manliness of character. For two years past he has been associated with me in business at Anniston, Alabama, as one of my most trusted salesmen in the Dry Goods Department of the Woodstock Iron Company's store; and I can truly say that in all my business career, I have never had with me a young man of greater worth. Attentive, polite, accommodating, reliable, never saying aught against any one, he had won the respect and confidence of all who came in contact with him; and no greater evidence could be given as to his worth, popularity and the high esteem in which he was held by all classes of customers, than their daily expressions of sad regret that he will no more attend to their wants.

While I can easily obtain another salesman, it is a great tribute to his business worth to say it will be a difficult matter to find one to equal in every respect, him who has left us forever.

Solomon has said: "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches," and in these latter days of rush and struggle for wealth, too frequently without regard to name and character, it is a great consolation, not only to the relatives of Edwin F. Glover, but, also to his associates and friends, to know that he not only left a good and unsullied name, but a life's record as a loving and dutiful son, a true friend, and a character for honesty, integrity, amiability and morality, that is worthy the emulation of the young men of Calhoun county.

"After life's fitful fever, he sleeps well."

The Narrow Gague Railroad.

For the Jacksonville Republican.

This road, known as the East & West Ala. Railroad, commenced surveying and locating on the East bank of the Coosa River some ten days ago. Maj. Calahan is the contractor from the E. T. V. & G. R. R. to the coal fields in St. Clair county, embracing some 43 miles. He is on the grounds with about 160 mules and 200 hands, with headquarters on Mr. Ott Smith's place, where he is erecting his necessary shanties for the hands, and also building a storehouse, which will soon be well stocked with supplies. Under the Major's skillful management, all will soon be in readiness to move on with the work. He is pushing to get his cribs in the Coosa before the winter rains set in. Col. Postell, the supervisor, says the cars will be running to the Coosa river by first of May. This road runs from Cartersville, Ga., via Cedartown to Birmingham, crossing the E. T. V. & G. R. R. near Cross Plains, and the Coosa river about 5 miles below Greensport. It passes through a large territory of fine timbered lands, as well as vast quantities of mineral and slate deposits, and taps the finest coal beds in the state. It will no doubt bring to the surface the hidden resources of a large and fine scope of country.

Yours respectfully,
ROGER.

FACTS ABOUT MILK.—Cream cannot rise through a great depth of milk. If milk is therefore, desired to retain cream for a time, it should be put in a deep narrow dish; and if it be desired to free it most completely of cream, it should be poured into a broad, flat dish, not exceeding one inch in depth. The evolution of cream is facilitated by a rise, and retarded by a depression of temperature. In wet and cold weather the milk is less rich than in dry and warm; and on that account more cheese is obtained in cold than in warm, though not in thundery weather. The season has its effects. The milk in the spring is supposed to be best for calves, in summer it is best suited for cheese, and in autumn the butter keeping better than that of summer. Cows less frequently milked than others gives rich milk, and consequently much butter. The morning's milk is richer than the evening's. The last drawn milk of each milking, at all times and seasons, is richer than the first drawn, which is the poorest.

If you want a quiet game of pool you will find it only a few steps from the hotel back of the bar rom of Robertson & Co.Sep 9tf

We have just bought 100 Ladies' hats, very cheap, and received them yesterday by express. We will sell them all trimmed, all colors, all styles, including "Æsthetic" hat from 50 cents to $5.00. We will sell them cheap, and the prettiest, the neatest, and the most fastidious can wear them with pleasure and pride.

Read our previous advertisements.

Advertising like talk we know is cheap, but we forfeit honor and money if we do not do all that we advertise.

Why Does Germania Sell So Cheap?

This is the answer. People say, you pay as much, gentlemen, for goods as other houses do. Well, we don't intend to argue that point, though we claim buying for large stores, we buy more goods than anybody else, and as to whether we get them cheaper or not we don't care to say. But we do say this, our main business profit is our Tannery. For this we bought the property.

Our total store expense is comparitively nothing. We do say that we will sell you goods cheaper than you can buy them elsewhere; and remember we don't force anybody to buy

We tell you the truth and nothing but the truth, and ask your inspection free of charge and see for yourselves.

We are strangers among you, but we have come to stay and make high prices pass away.

Sure Cure for WORMS. MOTHER'S It Has No BAD TASTE MOTHER'S

Is far superior to all other preparations as a worm-destroyer, being composed entirely of vegetable ingredients and free from all nauseous taste that vermifuge has. It is a pleasant Syrup that children will gladly take, or it can be eaten with bread. Thousands of children die annually of worms when by the use of the Mother's Worm Syrup their precious little lives might be saved. It expels the Round Worm, Thread Worm and the Huge Tape Worm. It never fails. It clears up the skin and sweetens the temper of the little sufferer, secures sleep, and brings back the appetite. It restores the roses to the check and saves the teeth. By its use the child is safe from Convulsions, Spasms, and St. Vitus' Dance, which are usually caused by Worms.

A FATAL MISTAKE.

HOW A BLUNDERING JUDGEMENT MAY BE RESPONSIBLE FOR THE MOST SERIOUS RESULTS.

Mr. Edwin Booth said recently that he supposed his lungs were affected. having a persistent cough until he saw Dr. Mackenzie, of London, who found that his symptom arose from a disturbance of the liver.—N. Y. Herald.

The above item, which has been going the rounds of the Press, is of no special significance other than to the personal friends of Mr. Booth, except that it brings to light a truth of the greatest importance to the world. Few people pass through life without the affliction of a cough at some point in their career. In most cases this is considered the result of a cold or the beginning of consumption, and thousands have become terrified at this revelation and have sought by a change of air and the use of cough medicines to avert the impending disaster. It may safely be said that more than half the coughs which are afflicting the world to-day do not have their origin in the lungs but are the result of more serious troubles in other organs of the body. "Liver coughs" are exceedingly common and yet are almost wholly misunderstood. Arising from a disordered state of the liver they show their results by congesting the lungs. In fact, the efforts of the liver to throw off the disease, produce coughing even when the lungs themselves are in a healthy state.

But it is a mistake to suppose that such delicate tissues as the lungs can long remain in a healthy condition when they are being constantly agitated by coughing. Such a theory would be absurd. Consumption, which was feared at first, is certain to take place unless something is done to check the cause. This must be plain to every thoughtful mind. It stands to reason, therefore, that the only way in which "liver coughs" can be removed is by restoring the liver to health.

In this connection, another fact of great importance becomes known, which can best be explained by the relation of an actual event. Mr. W——, a wealthy cattle dealer of Colorado, became greatly reduced in health and came east to Chicago for the purpose of being cured. He consulted Dr. J——, one of the leading physicians of the country on pulmonic subjects and began treatment for the cure of his lungs. But his cough increased while his strength decreased. Finally he determined to consult another physician and applied to Dr. B——. After a careful examination he was informed that his lungs was perfectly sound, while his kidneys were in a most terrible condition. He had all the apparent symptoms of consumption but he was suffering from the terrible Bright's disease. The symptoms of consumption are often the sure indication of Bright's disease.

The above truths regarding coughs have been known by the leading physicians for several years but the public have never been informed of them. They are serious facts, however, and should be understood by all, so that dangers which might otherwise prove fatal may be avoided. They clearly prove one great truth which is, that the kidneys and liver are such vital organs that their health should be constantly guarded. The distressing, hacking cough, which is often dreaded as the forerunner of consumption and the wasting strength which accompanies it, in all probability may arise from weakened or diseased kidneys or liver, to restore which would cause returning health. How this most desirable end may be attained has long been a problem, but few people of intelligence at the present day have longer any doubts that the popular remedy known as Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver cure has done more to correct, relieve and restore these organs than any other preparation ever before known. There are hundreds of instances which have occurred within the past three months where individuals have believed themselves the victims of consumption, when, in reality it was deranged kidneys and liver which this remarkable medicine has completely cured, as witness the following statement:

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 6, 1882.—I believe it to be a fact that thousands of cases of so-called consumption can be successfully treated by simply using Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver cure as directed. I was one of the "given up to die" persons—had every symptom of the last stage of consumption—bad cough of four years standing, night sweats, chills, etc. etc. A season South did no good, and the fact was the case looked discouraging. I took Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, and in three months I regained over twenty pounds, and my health was fully restored.

W. C. BEACH,
Foreman Buffalo Rubber Type Foundry.

There are thousands of people in America to-day who believe they are the victims of consumption and destined to an early grave and who are trying to save themselves by the use of consumption cures but are growing worse each hour. Let all such persons stop, and calmly consider whether they are not seeking to check a disease in the lungs when it is located in the kidneys and liver. Let them then treat the disease in its original stronghold and by the remedy which has proven to be the most effective and then look for the return of health and happiness which such treatment is sure to bring.

It is not generally known that boiled carrots, when properly prepared, form an excellent substitute for eggs in puddings. They must, for this purpose, be boiled and mashed, and passed through a coarse cloth or hair sieve strainer. The pulp is then introduced among the other ingredients of the pudding, to the total omission of eggs. A pudding made up in this way is much lighter than where eggs are used, and is much more palatable.

HERMITS.—Two eggs, one and one-half cups sugar, two-thirds cup butter or lard, one cup currants, one teaspoon each of cloves, nutmeg and cinnamon, one teaspoon of soda. Roll out like cookies. Roll the currants in flour to prevent their sinking. Sprinkle sugar on top before baking.

DARK CAKE.—Three eggs, two cups of sugar, one cup of butter, one cup of milk. If the milk is sour, leave out cream of tartar; one teaspoonful soda, two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar; three and one-half cups of flour, one teaspoonful different spices, two cups of raisins, one of the cups chopped fine.

GEMS.—One pint milk, two eggs, one pinch salt; flour enough to make a good batter; bake in little pans in hot oven.

QUEEN'S CAKE.—One pound of flour, one pound of sugar, one pound of butter, eight eggs. Beat separately; add essence of lemon.

A Connecticut mechanic has made a trial of rotary files for finishing planed surfaces. He is of the opinion that quicker and truer work can be done with these than with hand files, and than that the surface is in better shape for trueing with the scraper. His experiments have been confined to the planer; but he believes that his device may be properly and economically adapted to the lathe and milling machine.

AGRICULTURE.

PROPERTIES OF CHARCOAL.—As a top dressing for a meadow or a lawn it is excellent. It is so good an absorbent of moisture and grasses that it will keep a lawn green in a drought when the undressed fields are brown and parched. As a basis for compost there is nothing superior. Every good housewife knows that if she has any tainted meat charcoal will take out its taints if anything can. A piece as big as one's fist put into the pot with boiling corned beef that has passed its prime will absorb the bad odors and restore it to sweetness if the putrefaction process has not gone too far. In like manner charcoal acts in the compost heap. An effluvia even from a dead horse, will be absorbed and stored up for the use of corn, grass or any crop to which it may be applied. As a top dressing for grass or grain it is particularly beneficial, as when the rich gases have once been extracted it is in a position to absorb more from the dews, snows and rains. Ploughed under a thick sod its absorbing power is comparatively limited. We must not omit to mention the aerating effect which fine charcoal has on stiff clay lands. It renders them friable and permeable to air and moisture—a result which can hardly be overestimated. Muck has something of the same effect, but muck does not last as does charcoal. On sandy lands charcoal does good, as it is such an absorbent of moisture that thin lands dressed with it will remain fresh when the undressed are parched. The only place where charcoal seems to exert little or no ameliorating influence is on low, cold, wet lands, and here even stable manure has comparatively little effect.

UTILISE YOUR BONES.—Not the bones of your own body, merely, but any and all bones, beef and mutton and chicken, and even fish bones. The American Garden says they constitute the very best food for fruit-trees and grape vines if the fragments are only placed where the roots can lay hold on them, and adds: "Instead of allowing pieces of bone to be cast into the back-yard, as food for stray dogs and strange cats, domestics should be directed to deposit everything of the sort in a small tub provided with a lid. As soon as a few pounds have accumulated we take the tub to some grape vine or fruit tree, dig a hole three or more feet long, a foot or two wide, and less than a foot deep, into which the bones are dumped; spread over the bottom of the excavation, and cover with the soil. The more the fragments can be spread around, the better. But they should be buried so deep that a plow or spade will not reach them. The roots of growing vines or fruit trees will soon find the valuable mine of rich fertility, and will feed on the elements that will greatly promote the growth of strong and healthy wood and the development of fair and luscious fruit."

CLEAN CIDER BARRELS.—Cider making is now close at hand, and old barrels must have become very mouldy and wholly unfit to use without a thorough fumigation. A scientific journal gives the following receipts for effecting this, which we hope may do. "To clean cider barrels, pour in lime water, and then insert a trace chain through the bung-hole, remembering to fasten a strong cord on the chain so as to pull it out again. Shake the barrel until all the mould, insides is rubbed off. Rinse with water, and finally pour in a little whisky." This is simple enough and would seem to meet the requirements. Really fine cider cannot be expected when the barrels are not perfectly sweet and clean. Is it if any of our cider-makers have a better or other methods than this, we shall be pleased to find them; and to be of use this season they should be communicated at once.

---

FATTENING SMALL PIGS.—Corn at seventy cents a bushel is still the cheapest fattening food for pigs; but when corn is so dear it is best to study the most economical manner of feeding; corn in the ear boiled with small potatoes, will be worth twice as much dry as corn and raw potatoes. Indeed raw potatoes will scarcely do more than support life, and may often be injurious, being indigestible and drastic, in their effects upon the bowels. Corn-meal boiled to a thick mush and mixed with skim milk and fed when nearly cold, will make the cheapest pork. A bushel of corn fed in this way has made twenty-four pounds of pork. Corn meal steeped in water is about as good as boiled whole corn and the latter is the cheaper of the two. Pigs do not thrive well upon warm feed, and they do better with four light meals a day than with two heavy ones.

---

A LADY, writing to an exchange, says: Never give up a choice but decaying rosebush till you have tried watering it two or three times with soot tea. Take soot from a chimney or stove with which wood is burned and make a tea of it. When cold, water the rosebush with it. When all is used pour boiling water a second time on the soot. The shrub will quickly send out thrifty shoots, the leaves will become large and thick and the blossoms will be larger and more richly tinted than before. To keep the plants clear of insects syringe them with quassia tea. Quassia chips can be obtained from the apothecaries.

---

TURNIPS.—When turnips placed in the cellar begin to sprout they are usually thrown away, but a bushel of turnips will furnish a family with salad all winter, and very good one if properly prepared. Place the bushel of turnips in a dark, warm cellar to sprout, and when the sprouts are three or four inches long cut them off, pick the leaves from the stems and pour on hot water a moment; place the sprouts in the colander to drain off all the water, and send to table with a plain dressing poured over them.

---

EVERY farmer who has to contend with stony land will thank us for saying that when the small ones are to be picked two men with dung forks will do more work, and do its easier, than four will with their hands. We got the idea from an exchange, and put it into practical execution the other day, to our own advantage and the great gratification of the men we put at the job.

---

SPRUCE butter tubs are the best; while hemlock makes a sweet tub; acids from the oak color the butter and injure its appearance; white ash gives the butter a strong flavor if kept long and increases the liability to mould; maple smells and cracks badly. Soak all tubs four to six days in brine before using.

---

GIVE fattening cattle as much as they will eat, and often—five times a day. Never give rapid changes of food, but change often. A good guide for a safe quantity of grain per day to maturing cattle is 1 pound to every hundred of their weight; thus an animal weighing one thousand may receive ten pounds.

---

OVER $8 000 000 worth of cotton-seed meal is imported into Great Britain annually to feed cattle, and the London Agricultural Gazette styles it "the very best food imported, and by its use English graziers can compete with the American."

---

COMPOST.—Compost heaps are in order now, and, in making them, remember that potash, nitrogen and phosphoric acid are great fertilizers.

DOMESTIC.

GUMBO.—Gumbo is the name of soup; Okra is the plant. Okra is cultivated in every vegetable garden in Texas. The tender pods are boiled and dressed with salt, pepper and butter, and always called Okra. Soup, made by boiling beef, chicken, or duck until the meat will part from the bone, which is then chopped fine as for mince meat and put back into the soup, and young Okra pods cut up thin across the pod are put into the soup and simmered for an hour, red and black pepper are added, and when done it is called "Gumbo," and persons accustomed to the dish are very fond of it. The Creoles often add Sassafras leaves cut fine to give the Gumbo a flavor and add to the mucilaginous qualities of the Gumbo. Okra is much used in all soups with other vegetables. It should not be cooked in an iron kettle, as it turns the Okra black. The test for Okra is to break the pod from the plant; if it will not break it has passed the edible state. Okra, Tomatoes and Green Corn, in equal quantities, seasoned with butter, pepper and salt, and baked for two hours, is a favorite Southern dish.

EVERYBODY should send 25 cents to Strawbridge & Clothier and receive their Fashion Quarterly for six months. Nearly 1000 illustrations and four pages of new music in each issue.

WEARING FLANNEL.—Put it on at once. Winter or summer, nothing better can be worn next to the skin than a loose, red, woolen flannel shirt; "loose," for it has room to move on the skin, thus causing a titillation which draws the blood to the surface and keeps it there; and, when this is the case, no one can take cold; "red," for white fulls up, mats together and becomes stiff, heavy and impervious; "woolen," the product of a sheep and not of a gentleman of color, not of cotton wool, because that merely absorbs the moisture from the surface, while woolen flannel conveys it from the skin and deposits it in drops on the outside of the shirt, from which the ordinary cotton shirt absorbs it, and, by its nearer exposure to the exterior air, it is soon dried without injury to the body. Having these properties, red woolen flannel is worn by sailors even in the midsummer of the hottest countries. Wear a thinner material in summer.

For dyspepsia, indigestion, depression of spirits and general debility, in their various forms; also as a preventive against fever and ague and other intermittent fevers, the "Ferro-Phosphorated Elixir of Calisaya," made by Caswell, Hazard & Co, New York, sold by all Druggists, is the best tonic; and for patients recovering from fever or other sickness, it has no equal.

TO MAKE POTATOES MEALY.—A Canada paper says: "In our kitchen we overcome the soggy disposition of these valuable vegetables by soaking them a few hours in cold water, and putting them into hot water to boil, without salt; then when they are tender nearly all the way through, turn the water off and refill the saucepan with cold water. Put in salt and boil till they are quite done; drain off that water also, cover as tightly as possible, and set on the back of the range to steam, lifting the cover for an instant once or twice; then with one hand holding down the lid, shake the saucepan gently, quickly, and steadily for a moment and serve your potatoes hot. If rightly managed they will be like snowballs."

---

No poisonous drugs enter into the composition of Carboline, a deodorized extract of petroleum, the natural hair restorer and dressing as now improved and perfected. It is the perfection of the chemist's art, and will, beyond a peradventure, restore the hair on bald heads.

---

TO STRAIGHTEN WARPED BOARDS.—If the wood is in a large piece, the convex or hollow side should be steamed or moistened a little, and then laid on a dry floor, holding it down with a smooth, flat board, upon which weights are placed. When quite dry it will be found to have regained its original shape. If the wood is in small pieces, it can be easily straightened by gently steaming the convex side over a tea-kettle, and then holding the other side toward the heat until it becomes straight, when it can be left in a press or under weights for a few hours. Almost any warped woods will yield under this treatment.

---

Vegetine.—For eradicating all impurities of the blood from the system, it has no equal. It has never failed to effect a cure, giving tone and strength to the system debilitated by disease.

---

SOOT TEA FOR ROSES.—Get some soot from a chimney or stove where wood is used for fuel, put into an old pitcher and pour hot water upon it. When cool use it to water your plants every few days. When it is all used, fill up the pitcher with hot water. The effect upon plants, especially upon roses that have almost hopelessly deteriorated, is wonderful in procuring a growth of thrifty shoots, with large thick leaves and a great number of richly-tinted roses. Never despair of a decayed rose bush until this has been tried.

---

SPECIFIC FOR BRONCHITIS AND ASTHMA.—Mr. G. A., Sala states that an unfailing source of relief from the agonies of bronchitis and spasmodic asthma will be found in the following specific: The juice of 2 lemons, which have been warmed in the oven to dry the skins, ¼ ounces of the best honey, 2 spoonfuls of the very best Florence oil. Mix carefully, put in an earthen jar, which keep covered, and swallow a spoonful when you feel the fit coming on you.

---

KEEPING FRUIT IN SAND.—A writer in the London Garden says that he keeps fruit in this way all the year round. He has had French crabs two years old. The Catillac pear has remained sound twelve months. The fruit must be sound when stored, and the sand must be quite dry. The chief advantages of packing in sand are, the exclusion of air currents, the preservation from changes of temperature, and the absorption of moisture which favors decay. Much will depend on the apartment in which the experiment is tried, a dry or cool one being best.

---

A HOT lemonade is one of the best remedies for a cold, as it acts promptly and efficiently, and has no unpleasant after effects. One lemon should be properly squeezed, cut in slices, put with sugar and covered with half a pint of boiling water. Drink just before going to bed, and do not expose yourself on the following day. The remedy will ward off an attack of chills and fever if it is used promptly.

HUMOROUS.

THE upper hold in Nevada: When he said he had lived in Nevada several years a man who looked some thing like a church deacon stepped forward and asked: "My friend, is the Bible respected in that State?" "Oh, yes." "Do they have churches?" "Plenty of 'em." "And the Lord rules there as well as in New Jersey?" "Well, I don't know about that," was the doubtful answer. "When I bought mining stocks for twenty per cent. of their face value and saw them jump to fifty above par I thought the Lord had a firm grip on the State; but again, when I struck a silver mine worth millions in digging fish bait and sold the whole for a gallon of whiskey which burnt the soles off my boots, I had a dim suspicion that the devil and Nevada were partners in stocking the cards."

Foote replied: "And so you would if you could sell the timber."

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Dear Sir—My case was an acute form of Bronchitis, and was of one and a half year's duration. I employed the best medical aid possible, but failed rapidly, until the doctors said I would die—that my case was incurable. Thrown upon my own resources, I got a bottle of DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, and in six hours felt a decided relief. In three days the cough almost disappeared. Now that my chances of life are good for many years, I earnestly recommend the above to every sufferer of throat or lung disease. C. G. LATHROP.

Vegetine.

Purifies the Blood and Gives Strength.

DU QUOIN, ILL, Jan. 21, 1878.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir,—Your "Vegetine" has been doing wonders for me. Have been having the Chills and Fever, contracted in the swamps of the South, nothing giving me relief until I began the use of your Vegetine, it giving me immediate relief, toning up my system, purifying my blood, giving strength; whereas all other medicines weakened me, and filled my system with poison; and I am satisfied that if families that live in the ague districts of the South and West would take Vegetine two or three times a week, they would not be troubled with the "Chills," or the malignant "Fevers," that prevail at certain times of the year, save doctors' bills, and live to a good old age.

Respectfully yours,
J. E MITCHELL,
Agent Henderson's Looms, St. Louis, Mo.

ALL DISEASES OF THE BLOOD. If Vegetine will relieve pain, cleanse, purify and cure such diseases, restoring the patient to perfect health, after trying different physicians, many remedies, suffering for years, is it not conclusive proof, if you are a sufferer, you can be cured? Why is this medicine performing such great cures? It works in the blood, in the circulating fluid. It can truly be called the Great Blood Purifier. The great source of disease originates in the blood; and no medicine that does not act directly upon it, to purify and renovate, has any just claim upon public attention.

Humor in the Blood Cured.

BALTIMORE, MD., April 25, 1879.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir,—I have been afflicted with Humor in the Blood for some time, which gave me considerable annoyance, and after trying several blood remedies, recommended for similar affections, I was induced to try two bottles of Vegetine, which benefited me so much that I concluded to continue taking it, and after six bottles were taken, I found the annoyance had ceased, and up to this date I am not in the least troubled by it, and am enjoying the best of health. I can cheerfully recommend it to all persons suffering from any humor in the blood. Respectfully,
MARY E. LAMBDIN.

Vegetine thoroughly eradicates every kind of humor, and restores the entire system to a healthy condition.

Our Progress.

As stages are quickly abandoned with the completion of railroads, so the huge, drastic, cathartic pills, composed of crude and bulky medicines, are quickly abandoned with the introduction of Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," which are sugar coated, and little larger than mustard seeds, but composed of highly concentrated vegetable extracts. THE new reporter was sent to the school exhibition. His reports read pretty well; but there were a few things in it which did not meet the approval of the local editor—such, for instance, as these: "The essays of the graduating were good, whoever wrote them;" "the floral offerings were excessive, and from the number received by Miss Simplegush we judge her father owns a first-class greenhouse;" "the young lady who read the valedictory to the teachers has in her the making of a fine actress. She simulated sorrow so accurately that the writer might have been misled had he not subsequently heard the young lady speak of this same 'dear teacher' as 'a hateful old thing.'"

Who knows that if the beautiful girl who died so young had been blessed with Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" she might have reigned on many another bright May-day. The "Favorite Prescription" is a certain cure for all those disorders to which females are liable. By druggists.

A DILEMMA: An Austin boy had the bad habit of reading after he went to bed, and leaving the candle burning, much to the alarm of his parents, who were afraid he would set the house on fire. As the boy did pretty much as he pleased, his father told the colored boy who waited on the table to go up into the son's room after he had gone to sleep and put out the light, which programme was carried out for several months. One night, however, the parents of the boy were aroused from a sound slumber by the calling out: "Boss, oh Boss! what am I ter do?" "Merciful Moses! what has happened?" "De boy has done—" "Merciful heavens! has he set the house on fire?" "No, but he put de light out hisself. I want ter know what I'm gwine ter do about hit?"

"YES," said the bartender in a western mining camp, "I water my liquor, and have good reason for it, too. I don't wan't to refuse a man a drink when he is drunk, because he will get mad and break things. So I water the liquor so it won't make him any worse. As for the sober ones, I water their liquor so they won't get drunk at all, and consequently I save a fight both ways."

"Men are but sorry witnesses in their own cause." The praise of Kidney-Wort comes from the mouth of those who have been made strong and healthy by it. Listen: "It is curing everybody," writes a druggist. "Kidney-Wort is the most popular medicine we sell." It should be by right, for no other medicine has such specific action on the liver, bowels and kidneys.

A FRENCH scientist has made some experiments recently which go to show that all classes of insects, in proportion to their size, are from fifteen to forty times as strong as a horse. If you don't believe in the strength of insect life, watch the velvety little bumble-bee, with the tropical polonaise, and see him lift a two-hundred pound picnic man out of the grass.

A METHODIST custom: The full term of three years had nearly expired, and they were discussing at the breakfast table the certainty that they must move and the uncertainty as to where, when the young miss of the parsonage drew a heavy sigh.
