A SONG OF LONG AGO.

Sing it lightly—sing it low—
Sing it softly—like the lisping of the lips we used to know
When our baby—laughter spilled
From the hearts forever filled
With a music sweet as robin ever trilled.

Let the fragrant summer breeze,
And the leaves of locust trees,
And the apple-buds and blossoms, and the wings of honey-bees,
All palpitate with glee,
Till the happy harmony
Brings back each childish joy to you and me.

Let the eyes of fancy turn
Where the tumbled pippins burn
Like embers in the orchard's lap of tousled grass and fern;
And let the wayward wind,
Still singing, plod behind
The cider-press—the good old-fashioned kind!

Blend in the song the moan
Of the dove that grieves alone,
And the wild whirr of the locust, and the bumble's drowsy drone;
And the low of cows that call
Through the pasture-bars when all
The landscape faints away at even fall,

Then, far away and clear,
Through the dusky atmosphere,
Let the wailing of the Killdee be the only sound you hear;
O sweet and sad and low
As the memory may know
Is the glad—pathetic song of Long Ago!

KATIE'S LANTERN.

Truth to tell, the comfortable, old-fashioned farm-house, at the foot of the narrow and rocky ledge, had a most picturesque position. Away to the southward wound and smiled the fertile valley, a goodly proportion of whose acres appertained to Grandfather Crowninshield, and along the edge thereof swept the curves of the railway after what seemed its birth in the cloven ledge so very near to Katie Crowninshield's home. As for Kate herself, with her sweet, fresh face and her merry brown eyes, the little valley and her nestling home were all the world to her, indeed, that she had ever known, for she had been but a wee thing when Grandfather and Grandmother Crowninshield became father and mother to her, in place of those whose faces she could now hardly remember. Neither did it ever occur to her that she was in any sense an heiress, for she seemed rather to belong to the valley than the valley to her; while the idea, if anything had brought it to her mind, that her good old grandparents were not to live forever, would have turned the brightest June day to the gloomiest December.

But, in these latter years, one great entity had painfully struggled into Kate's world, with an apparent mission to unite the valley with that great unknown, which lay beyond the hills and ledges. Kate had seen the ragged rift cloven in the granite wall, watching it curiously from door or window, and listening for the dull reports of the blasting charges, until the barrier was parted and the railway crept out and found its way down through the valley; and, ever since the trains began to run, she had connected with them the idea of a life that was almost human. She had waved her handkerchief enthusiastically to the very first train, and had been liberally responded to by passengers and conductor; and, although she had been then a little girl and was now a young lady, she had never yet dreamed of any unmaidenly boldness in giving the same white signal of welcome, at times, when the great railway mystery came rushing out of the cloven wall There was one train in particular to which Katie's attentions were at last pretty well restricted—a through-express, which went by at eight o'clock in the morning, and there was another from the same direction again at eight o'clock at night. From the former, just as easily as her own dainty "good-morning!" fluttered above the garden-gate, so certainly would there be a fleeting flash of white to answer her from the platform of one of the cars, or even from the engine itself, for that, too, had happened. And Katie knew very well that, in these latter days, at least, her answer had always come from the same hand. A tall, erect, manly fellow he was, dressed in dark-blue cloth; and Katie had been well aware, for a good while, that he was the conductor of the train, but she had never yet been near enough to speak to him, or get any clearer notion of his face and its meaning than might be given her in those swift but almost daily glimpses. When or how he found his way back to the beginning of his perpetual journey, was a question that Katie never asked even of herself. It was enough that every morning the swift train brought him out of the unknown country beyond the hills; and added a something that had grown to be very pleasant to the peace and quiet of her day.

There was something very noteworthy even to railway men, about the manner in which the road broke in upon that valley. A deep cut, a sharp curve and a heavy down-grade, combined to make the precise point where the conductor had learned to look for Katie's greeting an interesting one; and her white kerchief may even have seemed to wave a species of congratulation at his repeated safe passage of what might at any time have shaped itself into a danger.

But that as it may, the railway "cut" had brought to Katie Crowninshield, among other results, a shorter and easier path to the home of her aunt, her mother's sister, who lived just a little way beyond the ledge, and who was never satisfied if too many days passed by without bringing the sunlight of Katie's face across her threshold. And so Katie had gone and returned, many and many a time, by the narrow path between the granite walls. Nobody in that peaceful region dreamed of fear at being out after dark; and again and again had good Aunt Betsy detained her pet until night had fallen, although her only companion homeward was her little star of a lantern.

There came a day when Katie's handkerchief fluttered in vain, and then another, when even the reply she received from the train convinced her that there had been a change of some kind, and that she would receive no more signals from the same hand. And so she sadly prepared to give it up, in the first fit of genuine blues she had ever indulged in; but, a few evenings afterward, she lingered at the garden-gate a little after her return from Aunt Betsey's, to see the night-express go flashing by. It was a grand sight when it came, incomparably more interesting and mysterious in the darkness than ever in the day, and Katie wondered she had never thought so before; but she almost unconsciously raised her little lantern, and swung it around her head as she had used to wave her handkerchief.

Could she believe her eyes?

She almost refused to give them any faith at first, but then there followed a quick flush in her cheek and a warm glow at her heart; for she was sure there had been an answering light, and she could almost picture a tall form in dark-blue clothing, standing on the platform between the two cars.

And now, while the October days grew cooler and glorious evenings longer, Grandmother Crowninshield began to grumble a little at the disposition her darling evinced to pay so many visits to Aunt Betsy.

"It's a long walk for you, child," she said, "and it's through the cut, too. What if a railway train should come along before you get out?"

"O grandmamma, that'll never happen," laughed Katie; "the railroad and I are very good friends."

"You ought to be," said grandmother. "I never saw any living being care more for a dumb thing than you've always done for that there train."

But grandmother was nearer right than Katie; for only a night or so after that—it must have been that Aunt Betsy's clock was slow—for Katie was in the very middle of the cut when her ears was suddenly filled with the shriek and roar with which the train dashed in at the upper end.

Her heart beat quickly for a moment but not with fear; for, as she sprang lightly upon a projecting rock that she had often before noted as a very available perch, she gathered her fluttering dress more closely about her and exclaimed:

"There, I'm safe enough; but to think of its coming so near!"

Near enough, indeed, and Katie leaned back hard against the crag behind her; for it seemed as if she could feel the breath of the iron monster on her cheek. In one hand she clutched more tightly the folds of her shawl, and in the other she raised the lantern, as if its feeble star could be of some protection, and then her grasp of it grew suddenly very tight, indeed; for leaning out a little from the platform of a car, and looking forward, as if impatient for the train to clear the cut, stood a tall, handsome, bearded man, in dark-blue clothes, with a lantern in his hand and his eager, watching, expectant face, came so very close to her own!

It was like a flash of lightning; but Katie knew the face, and she knew also that she herself had been seen, and she had even marked the swift paling of the bronzed visage as it recognized her and then swept on into the darkness beyond.

"He was afraid I would be hurt," she thought; and then she said aloud: "But he must have seen how safe I was, up here on the rock. I don't believe he swung his lantern at our garden-gate to night."

Aunt Betsey's house was some little distance from the upper entrance, and the approach to the latter was gloomy enough, the next night of her visit, even for one who knew every inch of the way as well as Katie did; but her little lantern shone out cheerily against its bright reflector, throwing its radiance ahead, as if it were trying to tell her: "There, dear, that's it; don't be afraid, now, I'll show you the track!" She had not gone far, however, before the granite walls brought to her ears, all the way from the lower end and round the curve, as if the cut had been a speaking-tube, the sound of voices that were evidently meant to be low and guarded. There were other sounds mingled with the voices, and Katie could not make out more than a word or so here and there, but there was something about it all that startled and frightened her. At first she was half inclined to turn and make the best of her way back to Aunt Betsy's; but that seemed foolish, and Katie was really a courageous little soul. She hid her lantern under her shawl, however, and stepped very lightly and swiftly forward, trying to remember if there were not a rock or hollow where she would be as safe from men as she had been from the passing train. She was very nearly through, herself, before she could anyway make out what it all meant; but, as she paused in the deep shadows of the rocks and peered timidly out toward the now dull and muffled sounds, with which the voices were no longer mingled, a broad quick gleam, as from a lantern suddenly shaded or extinguished, shot across the track not many yards below, and then all was darkness and silence.

But that one moment of illumination had revealed extraordinary things to the keen, excited vision of Kate Crowninshield.

There were men, three or four, she could not say just how many, but rough, fierce, wild, and anxious-looking and before them on the railway track, from which the rails had been pried away just there, was a confused heap of heavy granite boulders and fragments. Katie understood it as clearly as if those men had taken her into their confidence and had told her words.

It was a plot to wreck the train!

And now she was out in the open air beyond the upper entrance, and she could see the peaceful light still shining from Aunt Betsy's window. But there was no time to go there for help.

The train must be so very near!

Katie did for a moment think of kindling a bright fire on the track, but that would take too long, and the great ruin and horror would come before even a small fagot would be well ablaze.

"There's nothing but my own little lantern," almost sobbed poor Katie. "Maybe he will know it when he sees it, but he must be warned before he reaches the cut."

The lantern shone like a frosty little star determined to be seen as Katie sprang forward up the track. She had not far to go, for the train was ahead of time to night, instead of being behind, as would have been more desirable under the circumstances. Never had anything appeared to Kate Crowninshield more suddenly than did the great, glaring eyes of the locomotive headlight, that now glowed upon her out of the overshadowing night, and her lantern seemed to have instantaneously vanished.

"It is so small," she cried in agony, "and he will never see it."

Nevertheless, on a low mound of earth and stones, close by the side of track, Katie took her post of charity and danger, and swung her little lantern frantically to and fro, while she now tried to make her sweet girl's voice heard through the roar and clamor of the rushing train.

On came the railway giant, tugging with him his precious freight of human life, and it flashed upon Kate Crowninshield's mind what an awful capacity for suffering that train might have on board. On, with the great glare and the all-absorbing torrent of sound, and almost before Katie knew it, the object of her hope and fear had dashed ruthlessly past her, and was quickly swallowed up from her sight in the rocky jaws of the deep cut. With a cry of grief and disappointment on her lips, and a strange thrill of pain at her heart the poor girl sank upon the ground and buried her face in her hands, while the little lantern dropped neglectedly beside her.

Only for one brief instant, however, did Katie yield to the terror and the trouble of it, for in another she had picked up her starry friend, sprang to her feet, and darted away down the railroad track toward the cut. She was light of foot as any fawn, and there were sad wings to her speed, but it seemed to her as if she would never get through the cut. She paused a moment when she reached the lower one, to gather breath and to brush the salt mist from her eyes before she looked upon the awful scene she knew must be prepared for her.

And then—why, there was the train, the rear car rising close in front of her while the others (and there were but few of them that night) stood all erect upon their wheels beyond—not all upon the track, to be sure, but all apparently safe—all, except one great, dark mass, whose polished metal glittered in the varying lights that flashed upon it, and whose hoarse throat screamed angrily with the escaping steam, for the locomotive had come to grief pretty decidedly among the granite boulders that were heaped on the track by the fiends who had planned the wreck. The passengers were swarming out of the cars, and none of them seemed to be hurt at all, nor did Katie hear a sound that told of pain as she swiftly threaded her way among and past them. She had caught a glimpse of a group away beyond even the shattered locomotive, however, which forbade her lingering for an instant. Right down toward her own garden-gate four men were carrying a heavy burden, and others were following, and Katie heard them say, as she darted by:

"Who is it?"

"Why, its the conductor. He was thrown from the platform of the forward car."

"Is he killed?"

"They say so. Nobody else was hurt. He was a splendid fellow."

A tall, handsome, bearded man, in dark-blue clothing, but his face was ghastly pale when they laid him on Grandfather Crowninshield's own bed, and the surgeon, who had been among the passengers, bent gloomily above him.

"Head all right," muttered the man of science. "Only a cut or so. Ah, there's a rib, two of 'em, and his arm below the elbow. Struck the ground so, that's clear, and the other bones are likely to be all right. Must have been leaning out to look ahead, I should say. Hullo, what's that light on his face?"

The light in the room, what with the crowd and the country candles, had been none of the brightest, but just at this moment a clear, golden gleam was poured down on the face of the injured man, and slowly, as if the radiance itself had awakened him, he opened his eyes and looked dreamily about him.

The surgeon heard a sigh that was half a sob close behind him, and looked up to see that the sudden light came from Katie and her lantern, but just then the questioning eyes of the wounded conductor fell upon her face, and he exclaimed, faintly but earnestly:

"I knew it was you. There was hardly room to stop the train in, but we'd have all gone to pieces if it hadn't been for you and your light. You've saved them all, God bless you!"

And so Katie Crowninshield suddenly found herself a heroine, with a swarm of grateful people about her, very much to her discomfort. They would have made her a present if she would have allowed them, but the only really welcome words she heard from any one were those of the surgeon.

"What, killed? A man like him? Nonsense! He'll carry his arm in a sling for a month or so, but he'll be up again in a fortnight."

Of course, no time was lost in repairing the track and in forwarding the passengers, and a few hours only saw the farm-house as quiet and peaceful-looking as ever. Even the surgeon had done his work and gone. The engine lay battered and helpless among the boulders where it had forced its willful way. The conductor lay still on grandfather Crowninshield's bed, and the fitful slumbers the surgeons' opiate gave were starry with signals that white fingers held up before his dreaming eyes. As for Kate and her lantern, the latter had fairly burned itself out and asleep on the little table in Katie's own room, and she herself had by no means clearly comprehended, as yet, the happy consequences of her railway signaling. It was very much like a dream to her, for Katie was no prophetess, nor could even the lantern throw any light upon the future. She could not see, just then, and yet the days that followed brought it all to pass, that neither she herself nor grandfather and grandmother Crowninshield would consent to any more railroading or signaling. It was much better, indeed, they declared, nor did he himself pretend to deny it, that Katie's husband should farm broad acrss of the fertil valley than that he should be at the mercy of train wreckers and wayside lanterns. And when the question was decided to her liking, such a hug and kiss was that which Kate Crowninshield gave.

"To whom?"

"Why, to her lantern, of course."

Mediæval Customs.

The Hofburg, the chief palace of the Austrian sovereigns, has been the scene of an ecclesiastical ceremony or act of devotion which is a curious relic of mediæval customs. In accordance with a usage observed from time immemorial on Maunday-Thursday the ceremony of "washing the feet of the poor" was this morning performed as usual by their Majesties at the imperial residence. In the Middle Ages the custom prevailed at many other Catholic Courts, but in the present day to find a parallel would be impossible, except at the Vatican and the palace of the King of Spain. The proceedings opened at 9 o'clock, when twelve old men, of whom the oldest is in his ninety-third year and the youngest eighty-seven, and twelve old women, the oldest ninety-six and the youngest ninety, dressed, as usual, in the old German costume, presented to them by the Emperor and Empress, entered the court chapel, in order to receive the sacrament, and were then brought into the Hall of Ceremonies at the Hofburg. On each side of the hall was a table with twelve covers, the one table for the old men and the other for the old women. They are all citizens of Vienna, and many among them showed by their behavior that they had taken part in the ceremony more than once. With the appearance of the clergyman at 11 A. M. the ceremony began. The Emperor, who was followed by all the Archdukes present in Vienna, served the old men, and the Empress, followed by all the Archduchesses and court ladies, served the old women at their respective tables. The Corps Diplomatique was, as usual, in attendance, but this year, for reasons generally known, the British, French and Turkish ambassadors did not appear. All the ministers were present, as well as court dignitaries and privy councillors, the chamberlains, the grandmasters and the highest representatives of the army. The tables being removed, the Emperor and Empress knelt down in front of each of the old people, took off a shoe and stocking from each, washed the foot with towels moistened from a golden ewer, held by a chamberlain. After the feet of the old people had been wiped the Archdukes and Archduchesses replaced the shoe and stocking, and their Majesties concluded the ceremony by hanging round the neck of each of the old people a purse with thirty silver florins. The old folks were then sent home in cabs, each with a well filled box of provisions and wine.

The Sheep of Thibet.

The sheep of Thibet, which are very numerous, are chiefly a small variety of the fat-rumped Persian and Abyssinian, with black heads and necks. Some are hairy, with short wool underneath, while others bear a long soft and fine wool. It is from the latter that many of the costly Indian shawls are made. Not a little of this peculiar wool finds it way to British India, and is there manufactured. This breed is found in its purest state in the deserts of Great Tartary; no other variety being near to contaminate its blood. It reaches far into the interior and northern parts of Russia and is much disseminated in China, Persia, Hindostan, Asia Minor and eastern Africa as well as Thibet. In Palestine it is more numerous than any other breed; indeed the largest proportion of the sheep of northern Asia being of this description. Professor Pallas conjectures that this character arises in the fat rumped sheep from their feeding upon the bitter and saline plants found upon the borders of the Caspian and Black seas. And he asserts that when they are removed from the places where these plants grow the fatty excrescence becomes less. But Banfield says, as the fat rumped and fat-tailed sheep are varieties which are widely dispersed, it seems more probable that they may have been produced by accident and may also have been perpetuated by accident, design or fancy. The fat-tailed sheep is very extensively diffused it is found throughout Asia and a great part of Africa, as well as through the northern parts of Europe. They differ, like other sheep in the nature of their covering. In Madagascar, and in some other hot climates, they are hairy; at the Cape of Good Hope they are covered with coarse wool; in the Levant their wool is extremely fine. The proportion which the weight of the tail in some of these sheep bears to the whole carcase is quite remarkable.

The usual dressed weight of the sheep is from fifty to sixty pounds, of which the tail is said to make more than one fourth part. Russel describes two breeds of fat-tailed sheep about Aleppo; in one the deposit of caudal fat is moderate, in the other sort the tail is much larger. The unctuous fat of the tails of these sheep is accounted a great delicacy alike by the Boers and the Hottentots of southern Africa. The Hottentots, in their primitive condition possessed immense flocks and pursued the pastoral arts with great success

Strong Mucilage.

A very strong mucilage, having sufficient tenacity to fasten sheets of pasteboard together, and having the additional advantage of being water proof, can be made by melting together equal parts of pitch and gutta percha. To nine parts of this add three parts of boiled oil and one-fifth part of litharge. Continue the heat with stirring until thorough union of the ingredients is effected. Apply the mixture hot or somewhat cooled, and thinned with a small quantity of benzolo or turpentine oil.

A GENTLEMAN, whose nose and cheek had become distinctly colored with the red wine he was wont to imbibe, said one day to his little son at the table: "You must eat bread, my boy; bread makes your cheeks red." The little boy replied; "Father, what lots of bread you must have swallowed."

Various Kinds of Drunkards.

Some men seem to become drunk suddenly, giving no previous indication by thickness of articulation or unsteadiness of gait; this being commonly the case where mental excitement from other causes—as a heated discussion—prevails at the time. The most dreadful and astounding cases are afforded by those unfortunate people who are never sober. How they manage to survive so long as they do is a mystery. There are men who have been perpetually under the influence of liquor for twenty or thirty years. Of course, the brain must have become permanently injured, so that we may infer that the drink these persons now take has little or no real effect on them, and that their state would just be the same without it. Others, again, are systematic and punctual drunkards of regular habits, men who take their quantum and are put to bed unconscious every night, yet are capable of attending to their daily business in the most extraordinary manner. These, as a rule, never exceed a given amount by so much as a glass, and do not suffer so much as intermittent drunkards—at any rate not so soon, for the inevitable consequence is only a little longer deferred. The writer knew an old doctor in Jamaica who used to aver that the climate was the finest in the world. "Yellow fever, sir?" he would exclaim —" not a bit of it! A vulgar chimera! A malicious libel on us! The fact is, its the vicious irregular drinking habits of the people here that kills 'em. I drink a bottle of brandy every night, and have done so for thirty years. I get tipsy seven times a week, in an orderly and decent manner; and I've never had yellow fever nor a day's illness!" And to all appearance he was a fine, healthy man of sixty-five or seventy years, with a beard as white as snow. Yet he was carried off suddenly by a trifling indisposition incidental to the climate; and it was found on examination of his papers after death that his age was only fifty-two.

It does not by any means follow either, that because a man is never intoxicated he may not be drinking too much. Men employed in the great breweries in London, especially the draymen, consume an enormous quantity of beer. The daily allowance which their employers give them is a very large one, but they rarely confine themselves to that; and the draymen, in addition, get much gratuitously from the customers to whom they are always delivering the casks; so that ten or fourteen quarts is no exceptional consumption for one man; yet they are not drunkards, in the ordinary sense of the term. The very nature of their work necessitates the employment of none but steady men, strength being also a sine qua non. But if one of these men should break a limb, or get confined to bed from any other accident, he is almost sure to get delirium tremens; and a scalp-wound frequently kills him. Brewers' men are notorious in hospitals as being the worst cases for operation, being prone to exhibit all the most dangerous complications which fetter the success of surgical treatment.

A Story of "John Phœnix."

The invitations sent of late to naval officers requesting them to furnish suggestions for a change of uniform "remind me"—as Mr. Lincoln would have said—of a similar invitation issued by Jeff Davis when he was Secretary of War under General Frank Pierce. One of these invitations was sent to Lieutenant Derby, a good draughtsman and a merry wag, who sent in response a proposition for having a two-inch iron ring appended by a piece of strong leather to the seat of each enlisted man's trousers. Long and formal specifications demonstrated the utility of this ring. Each officer was to carry, instead of a sword, a long ash pole, with a hook on one end. By hooking into the ring of a private he could be kept in line of battle if he were disposed to hang back, or caught if he attempted to run away. The ring would also be useful in the artillery service for draft purposes, and in the cavalry men could be locked to other rings in their saddles and so kept from falling off. The illustrations which accompanied the specifications represented officers catching infantry stragglers and forcing them into the ranks, dragoons padlocked to their saddles, and artillerymen with cannon-prolongs hitched to their rings, hauling huge pieces of artillery up steep heights. It was very funny, and the clerks in the War Department enjoyed some hearty laughs over it; but when it reached the Secretary he became indignant and regarded it as an insult. He ordered charges and specifications to be drawn up, and a court-martial was actually ordered, when it came to the ears of Governor Marcy, then Secretary of the State, who was level-headed, and who advised Davis to let the matter drop. He might convict Derby and dismiss him from the service, but he would be laughed at from one end of the country to the other. Davis took the advice, and Derby's "suggestions" are still to be found on the files of the War Department.

Cattle Raising in Texas.

The typical cowboy is with us almost a thing of the past, not simply because the number of cattle has so decreased of late, but because the manner of handling them has undergone a radical change. Time was when an owner of 1,500 or 2,000 head of cattle would find employment for fifteen or twenty vaqueros; under the present system three men can now perform the functions for which five times that number were requisite a few years ago. It was formerly the custom upon our ranches to "loose-herd" the cattle during the day and to round them up on the "bed ground," or pen them in corrals for the night. Now we have immense pastures, inclosed by many miles of barbed wire fencing, in which cattle roam at will by day or night. The pasture fences are examined and kept in repair by men detailed upon the ranches for that purpose. Ten years ago the cattle were driven North from Texas without regard to sex, age or condition. The result was that Texas was almost drained of breeding as well as of beef cattle. Now there is some discretion exercised, and it is the exception not the rule for cows and calves to be driven "up the trail" or the shipping centres. Many of our stockmen have introduced fine cattle of Durham and other breeds on their ranches with a view to improving their stock. Full-blooded cattle however, are not easily acclimated, nor do they do well unless fed. The half-bred cattle seem to thrive, and in time the long-horned native cattle will be supplanted by a mixed breed of finer quality. Two species of the musca, known here as the "heel fly" and "screw fly," are the bane of the cattle men. The former look very like the ordinary honey bee, and deposit a nit upon the leg of the animal below the knee. The nit in time devolps into a worm, and eats its way into the flesh. The "screw fly" is much like the blue bottle fly, and attacks the animal wherever the flesh is laid bare, by branding or making the ears; it leaves a nit from which the worm is hatched by animal heat. Some time since a valuable calf got screw worms in one of its ears. It was doctored, and it was thought cured. It died recently, and upon opening the skull it was found that the screw worms had eaten their way to the brain. The present system of branding and making the ears not only disfigures the cattle and destroys the hide, but as may be seen from the above statement is dangerous.

A Heroine of Tel-el-Kebir.

The old retriver Juno, who earned such undying fame by leading the gallant Gordon Highlanders at Tel-el-Kebir, was the admired of all observers the other day at Cairo when the regiment paraded to receive the medals won by its members during the campaign. Colonel Hammill, C. B., pointed out the distinguished dog to General Sir Archibald and Lady Alison, and we doubt not that among the spectators there was a very general feeling of regret when Juno had to content herself with compliments and caresses instead of receiving the honorable decoration she so thoroughly deserved. Owing, too, to unavoidable circumstances she could not be included in either of the photographic groups of the regiment which were taken by command of the Queen. One of these gave the portraits of all who distinguished themselves at Tel-el-Kebir, and the other was representative of each rank in the gallant corps. There was room for Juno on both, in the former by reason of her being the first member of the British force to rush" Arabi's entrenchments, and in the second on account of her being "the regimental dog" par excellence, It will be a national shame and scandal if Juno's likeness is handed down to posterity without something in it to show that the English people recognized their debt of gratitude to the noble dog. When we first described her gallantry at Tel-el-Kebir we suggested that a silver collar, bearing a suitable inscription, would form an appropriate decoration, and we now venture to repeat the proposal. The sentimentality which went to such excesses in the case of Jumbo might find a much more deserving object in Juno.

How Canada Got Its Name.

The origin of the word Canada is curious enough. The Spaniards visited that country previous to the French, and made partial searches for gold and silver, and finding none, they often said among themselves "A can nada" (There is nothing here). The Indians, who watched closely, learned the sentence and its meaning. After the departure of the Spaniards the French arrived, and the Indians, who wanted none of their company, and supposed they also were Spaniards come on the same errand, were anxious to inform them that their labors would be rewarded by finding gold. This was repeated to them frequently, and "A can nada" soon became familiar as little more than a single word. When we first described her gallantry at Tel-el-Kebir we suggested that a silver collar, bearing a suitable inscription, would form an appropriate decoration, and we now venture to repeat the proposal. The sentimentality which went to such excesses in the case of Jumbo might find a much more deserving object in Juno.

The Republican.

SATURDAY, June 2, 1883.

One of the sadest things on record is the way in which the Kentucky State Democratic Convention sat down upon Henry Watterson, the great apostle of free trade. That body didn't make up a free trade platform by a very large majority, but sensibly concluded not to handicap the party in that way.

Ex-United States Marshal Sloss, of the Huntsville District, has been indicted for defrauding the Government when Marshal, and Marshal Strobach is now on trial in Montgomery before the U. S. court for the same offence. Taken altogether and considering what we hear of like proceedings in Texas and Arkansas, the skies are not altogether clear for United States Marshalls. Valk lide gentlemen.

It is not fair to presume that all the Alabama Congressmen who will support Mr. Randall for Speaker are protectionists. Their records in Congress do not show it. It may be over hasty also for Alabama editors to assume that Mr Randall will get only four of the delegation. We do not speak authoritatively, of course, but we should not be surprised if he should get six out of the eight. It is a good time for Democratic leaders of opinion to go slow on this tariff business. There is no sense in courting a split in the party on any economic question. We will need the full strength of the party, in all parts of the Union, to carry the next presidential election.

The Emperor of Russia was formally crowned at Moscow and afterward rode through the streets of the city with the Empress unguarded. The Emperor is the head of the Greek church by virture of his office, and after making a public profession of faith crowned him self and the Empress. During his prayer of intercession for his people he was visibly affected and his voice broke down in sobs. The pomp and pageantry of the whole was grand beyond description, and cost the Empire ten millions of dollars. The Nihilists, who had announced that they would prevent his coronation by assassination, were not on hand upon this occasion. We are begining to think these Nihilists, who have terrified the crowned heads of Europe, are a lot of very considerable frauds after all.

THE PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES.

As our readers will not be interested in the business proceedings of the Association, we will not consume space with them. Suffice it to say they were harmonious and satisfactory. The attendance was larger than usual, and a greater proportion of ladies present than ever before.

Selma, solid Selma, hospitable and refined Selma was the place of meeting and the 22nd and 23rd of May the time. Some of us reached there Monday night. The great mass of the Convention came in on Tuesday morning. We early birds missed the brass band, but we caught the first outgushing of an overflowing hospitality. A committee of distinguished Selmians, appointed by the city with reference to their fine gentlemanly instinces and courtliness of manners, met the delegates at the depot and at once escorted them to quarters. It was our good fortune to fall into both the hands of this committee and a personal friend, the latter of whom had already bespoken us quarters at the St. James Hotel—one of the best in the south. Tuesday morning they came—these genial yet earnest moulders of opinion—from all quarters of the State and the meeting was like a love-feast. To us it was peculiarly pleasant. For every member of the Association we have a regard akin to friendship and for some a love akin to that of Jonathan for Daivd. Greetings over and after a period of rest, the Association had a business meeting at Waverly Hall. Here they were welcomed by Mayor Davidson, who then introduced Hon. N. H. R. Dawson, that distinguished citizen of Alabama, whom the people have a mind some day to elect as their Chief-Magistrate. Col. Dawson addressed the convention welcoming the delegates on the part of the people of the city; Col. R. H. Powell responding on the part of the press. At 5 o'clock the Association witnessed a display on the part of the fire department of Selma. Later the Selma Guards, an excellent military company, gave a fine drill. At the armory of the Guards the editors were the guests of both Guards and Waverly Club, and here met the accomplished ladies and noble men of Selma socially. After the dance guests and hosts retired for needed repose.

The next day the Association was taken in hand by the management of the E. T. Va. & Ga. Railroad and transported to the rich cane brake region of the state, passing the fine stock farm of Mr. Fort and the magnificent plantation of Hon. Mims Walker, a member of the last legislature and several previous ones. On this trip also we had the pleasure of meeting Hon. J. W. Bush and Hon. A. C. Davidson, with both of whom it has been our pleasure to serve in the Senate, and who we know to be of the noblest specimens of Alabama manhood. We also met Rev. Mr. Richardson who once resided here and served the Presbyterian pastorates near. Both at Demopolis and Uniontown splendid collations were spread, where costly [illegible] like water, and the beauty [illegible] at once rich and still [illegible] the charm of their [illegible] in the evening [illegible] till warmer [illegible] them [illegible] of the [illegible] mans [illegible] al and crowning act of hospitality. After needed rest, the editors met at the elegant rooms of the Harmony Club of the city, which is composed of the Jewish people of Selma's good society. Here we were welcomed by Mr. Rothchild in a beautiful speech and here the ever handy and always eloquent Powell was again brought into request. Refreshments, music recitation and song, the last by two of Alabama's sweetest singers—Miss Maggie Stilt and Miss Eloise Buford—rendered the closing evening delightful in the extreme.

The following morning many of the editors departed for the Land of Flowers, while we remained over in Selma another day to attend to some matters of business. We have read that they went to Pensacola where they were regally entertained; from there to Savannah, where Georgia hospitality met them, Way Cross and Brunswick throwing in their ovations, and as we write, Atlanta waits to greet them with characteristic hospitality.

Altogether the members of the Press of Alabama have never had a more pleasant trip, and all the people connected with it returned to their homes with a more gratifying sense of the high appreciation in which the world holds their noble calling, and with a higher ambition to be worthy the vocation to which they have been called.

NOTES.

The annual oration by Mr. Lucien J Walker, of the Eufaja Times and News was one of the finest ever delivered before the Association.

Messrs Dawson, Johnston and Tipton of Selma, were fittingly made honorary members of the Association. These gentlemen, together with Messrs Sumpter Lea, Gaston Robbins, H. L Mc Kee and Frank Glass, the accomplished editor of the Times, have brought the press of Alabama under obligations that cannot be easily repaid.

The city of Anniston with characteristic enterprise, gave the Association a cordial invitation to visit that place, and the Association, remembering the magnificent reception at that place in years gone by, regretted the programme laid out, would not admit of it. The time will come when Anniston can have the Association all to herself and furnish matter of interest to keep it with her during the whole of its session.

The tariff was more or less discussed and the editors were widely different in opinion regarding it.

Col. Denson, of the Gadsden Times, well known in this section as a fluent speaker, was more than once brought into request to respond on the part of the editors. Most of the body are gifted rather with the pen than tongue, and when men like Powell and Denson, who combine both, are about, they must be prepared for double duty.

We had heard much of the cane brake region of Alabama, but were not prepared for what we saw. It is one continuous stretch of fine land, perfectly level, which resembles our richest bottom lands and equally productive. Though the crop was backward, corn was "knee high" and as green as the grass of Erin. With a proper system of labor, there is no reason why it may not be the richest country on the face of the earth. For noble men and queenly women that country cannot be excelled. Though not abreast with the hill country in developing enterprises, the people have caught the spirit, and cotton mills and cotton factories are being built, to be followed by other enterprises.

It has been about one year since we visited Selma. The improvement is marked to one who has been away from the city a year. The residences show more means on the part of the people. The merchants are solid men. The cotton factory and other enterprises have doubled their capacity. The excellent newspapers of the city evidence a "liveness" in the place. The people are hopeful—the outlook is glowing.

The writer acknowledges personal kindnesses at the hands of Mr. Cadmus, a member of the Real Estate, Loan & Banking Association, which is another live institution of Selma and which has been a benefit to that section particularly and the state generally.

The St. James Hotel, under the management of Col. Dedman, is one of the best in the south in its cuisine.

With regret we left our hospitable neighbors of the south and returned to the treadmill of duty in the hills, but in this age he who lives must work with hand or head, and both are equally honorable.

Time and Expense Saved.

Hard workers are subject to billious attacks which may end in dangerous illness. Parker's Ginger Tonic keeps the Kidneys and liver active, and by preventing the attack saves sickness, time and expense.—Detroit Press.

Atlanta Constitution.

A western debating society is debating the question, "Isn't it more honorable to be a burglar than a Bill Chandler republican?" Of course the affirmative side will have a walk over, but, apart from this, it is interesting to know that the rising generation is taking an interest in the paramount political issues of the day.

Field Marshal Murat, Halstead, of Cincinnati, who took a drink of American whiskey in full view of both armies at the battle of Sedan, threatens to wave the bloody shirt again. Halstead, although simply a western editorial statesman, knows very well that the bloody shirt is all the republicans have left.

Correspondents of the New York Tribune are making every effort to prove that your Uncle Samuel S. Tilden has one foot in the grave. From a republican point of view Mr. Tilden ought to have been buried; but we are glad to state that his health is better now than it was in 1876.

"Don't monkey with the tariff," says the statesmanlike Cincinnati Enquirer. The demand comes too late. The republicans have monkeyed with it until the people demand that the democrats shall straighten it out in the interest of common sense and justice.

A Tragic Death.

Hot Springs, Ark., May 22—George Johnson, son of Brakish Johnson, of New York, died at the Arlington house yesterday. He awoke during the night before, and got up to get a drink from a pitcher, the mouth of which was broken. The pitcher fell and severed the femoral artery. He was found pulseless and speechless in his blood, and although surgical aid was rendered he died during the day. The body was embalmed and sent to New York.

A Fatal Bite.

READING, Pa., May 28—An awful death of a young man from a snake bite is reported from Mickville, this county. Four weeks ago Peter Strause, aged twenty-one, was at work in the woods. While removing timber he experienced a sharp, stinging pain in his left hand, but paid no attention to it at first. In a few days, however, the arm began swelling, and finally the entire body became swolen and very much inflamed. It was then believed that a snake had bitten him, although the early season did not warrant such belief. Strause became very ill, and his body was peculiarly colored. The poison had a terible effect on him. He had been perfectly healthy, yet in a few weeks his teeth dropped out and he was nearly blind. Medical aid could afford no relief. His eyes were fixed and jaws set; he was unable to take any food or water, owing to the gangrenous condition of his throat, and he died in spasms. It is believed that either a black spider or a copperhead snake bit him.

Special to the Constitution.

Rome, May 26—The small grain crop in this section is very fine, and next week will see hundredbs of reapers at work harvesting.

The lawyers retained in the Shorter will case go to Griffin next week to argue a motion for a new trial before Judge Stewart.

RICH COAL VEINS.

Captain A. G. West, builder of the East and West railroad, recently returned from St Clair county Ala., and says two four feet veins of coal have been discovered in the Coosa coal fields, immediately on the line of his railroad.

THE ANNISTON & ATLANTIC R. R.

The Anniston and Atlantic R.R. bought charter and subscription notes, the latter amounting to twenty-five thousand dollars, of the Talladega and Coosa River railroad. The first named is the road that will be built from Anniston to Goodwater, there to connect with the Savannah and Memphis road. Nine miles have already been built and equipped.

Death of Senator Hill's Daughter.

ATLANTA, May 21.—Mrs. R. B. Ridly, daughter of the late Senator Hill, died to-day from injuries received Friday in jumping from a buggy while the horse was running.

A Gold vein has been discovered at Hose Cove, N. C., about four miles east of Highlands. Quarts containing gold dust in large quantities has also been discovered about two miles west of Highlands.

He Named The Baby.

"Adolphus, Oscar, Augustus, Rudolph, Harold—bah! Mrs. Baxter, I won't have any such foolish pump handle names fixed on to my son and heir. I allowed you to name the girls, but I'm going to fix the boys."

"And didn't I give them pretty names?" There's Rose, Lillie, Olive, Violet, Laura and May."

"All flowers. Now Mrs. Baxter we'll be consistent and stick to the garden. This boy's going to be called Pumpkin Squash, or I'll know why. Pumpkin Squash Baxter sounds quite aristocratic. And the next wer'e afflicted—I mean blessed—with, we'll call Spring Onion, and by the time we've filled the nursery you will be able to imagine the family a high toned Horticultural Exposition, with dollar tickets and children half price."

Polish Jake's Remarkable "Slate."

ASHLAND, Pa., May 28—Two months ago a Pole, named Jacob Meriwhisky, came to Centralia and opened a saloon. He was patronized by his countrymen and the roughest of other nationalities. Being unable to read or write English, he requested the English speaking habitues to charge them selves with the amounts they were indebted, and yesterday all the prominent business men were startled by the presentation of bills for liquor at Polish Jake s. They indignantly refused to pay, saying they had never entered the saloon and other parties had used their names. An investigation of Polish Jake's books showed this to be true. Henry Ward Beecher, according to the books, owes $12; John B. Gough, $35; Roscoe Conkling $39; Freddy Gebhardt $17; Mrs. Langtry, $30; and Mace and Slade, $40. The sheriff closed out the saloon yesterday. The loss to the saloon keeper is $700.

MITIGATING CIRCUMSTANCES—A Texas justice of the peace, who is constantly trying criminal cases, was called on to marry a couple. After he asked the usual question if they desired to be united in the bonds of matrimony, and they had replied in the affirmative, the justice asked them solemnly:

"Having plead guilty of the charge, if there are in your opinion, any mitigating circumstances, now is the time to state what they are."

The District Conference of the A. M. E. Church is now in session in Jacksonville.

In a farm house near Boone, Ia. lives Mother Spence, aged eighty-six. In the same house lives her daughter, aged sixty-four, her granddaughter, aged forty; her great-granddaughter, aged twenty one, and her great-great-granddaughter, aged two. This is believed to be the only house in the country sheltering five generations.

Chattanooga Times.

Wheat is heading throughout this section; with a weeks warm weather, cutting will soon begin.

A gentleman yesterday evening showed us a branch cut from a rose bush, which bore on the same stem two roses, one a deep red and the other pure white; there was no graft, but natural growth. This is a strange freak of nature.

There are at present in course of erection at Chattanooga: A new furnace to cost $155,000, stove factory to cost $75,000, steel mill, hollow ware foundry, four-story flouring mill, large cooperage factory, and pipe works are being doubled. Within two months two more woodenware factories will be built.

James Smith and two of his sons were arrested near Shellmound yesterday on the charge of being implicated in the burning of Henry Potter's house on Sand Mountain in March. When the house was burned the incendiaries stole about 3,000 in money and jewelry, besides many other valuables, all of which was found in a cave yesterday. The posse found large quantities of corn, wheat, bacon, etc., secreted in the cave.

In Probate Court for said county, special Term, May 22, 1883

This day came M. M. Hannah, administrator de bonis non, with the will annexed, of the estate of Alansel M. Hannah deceased, and files in court his application in writing and under oath, praying an order of this court to sell the lands of said estate in said petition described, for the purpose of division among the heirs of said estate, upon the grounds that the same cannot be equitably, fairly and beneficially divided by metes and bounds. It is therefore ordered by the court that the 2nd day of July 1883, be and is hereby appointed the day upon which to hear and determine said application, and that notice thereof be given by publication for three successive weeks in the Jacksonville Republican, a newspaper published in said county, as a notice to Robt C. Hannah of Ellis county, Texas, and all others interested, to be and appear at my office in the court house of said county, on said 2nd day of July, 1883, and contest said application if they think proper.

The Republican

Miss Mamie Montgomery has bought the residence of I. L. Swan, Esq.

Anniston will shortly sell off lots to purchasers and that thriving, model city will soon start off on a "boom."

The closing exercises of Miss Mamie Montgomery's school are progressing as we to press.

The Banner county Hose company seems to have lost its stinger—or rather its spanner; but the old reliable bucket brigade is always on hand.

Messrs. W. J. and J. W. Whiteside, of Rabbit Town, will each build fish ponds soon, we lean, for the cultivation of the carp.

Joseph Gilmore, son-in law of Thos. Grimes, of Cleburne county, was killed recently while plowing in his field, by a falling limb.

We have received an invitation to attend the commencement exercises of the University of Alabama, beginning June 18th, for which Hon. B. B. Lewis, President, of the University, has our thanks.

The alarm of fire was again sounded Wednesday night. This time it proved to be in the Female Academy. The bucket brigade was promptly on hand and extinguished it before any great damage was done.

Recent fire alarms have shown the necessity of the town council placing at convenient and accessible points wrenches for the purpose of opening the fire plugs, so that the bucket brigade may get plenty of water.

There was an alarm of fire Friday last, and it was soon ascertained to be at the residence of Mr. H. L. Stevenson. Our admirable bucket brigade was soon on hand and put it out before any damage was done.

The Mobile Rifles, at the inter-state military drill contest, at Nashville some days ago, carried off the first prize of four thousand dollars. Military companies from many States, both North and South, entered the contest. It is highly creditable to Alabama.

Rev. Mr. DuBose, a Presbyterian minister from Florida, has recently settled at Cross Plains, in this county. He came from Florida in search of health and was attracted by the beautiful mountain scenery about Cross Plains and at once bought property there. We regard him as a most valuable accession to our county.

Notice the new advertisement of Mr. J. D. McCormick. He has quite a handsome stock and is constantly adding to it. His prices are very moderate. Mr. McCormick is a very trustworthy gentleman and his representations as to the quality of his goods may be relied on Give him a trial.

The corner in field peas has come to an inglorious end this year, and some who expected to make money by a rise have lost thousands. They were bought for as much as one dollar per bushel and sold in Chattanooga recently for 50 cents per bushel. While in Selma recently we learned that there was absolutely no market for them at any price.

The rumbling of the next big "boom" comes to us from the Southern end of this county. It is said arrangements are about perfected by which large manufacturing enterprises will be set on foot on the strip of land between Oxford and Anniston, that may result in building up that whole territory and uniting the two towns practically into one big city.

Some valuable cattle have recently died here with something like murrain, and the hogs are dying with a singular disease. They shiver as with a chill and stagger as does an animal with blind staggers, and in a few hours are dead. It is not on account of deficient food, for some of the animals that have died have been well kept all the time and were fat. Will some one of our readers suggest a remedy.

Our enterprising fellow townsman, Dr. J. D. Arnold, has constructed a fish pond on the lot once occupied by Snow's tannery, and will stock it with German carp. Mr. Chas. Martin, another live man of our town, will also have one made for the same purpose on his farm, near Martinsburg, some two miles and a half above here. Martinsburg, it may be proper to state, will be at the junction of the E. T. Va. & Ga and E. & W. Railroads. It is now preparing a "boom" and our readers will hear from it in due time.

We have received, with compliments of President J. L. Dodson, an invitation to attend the graduating exercises of Oxford College, beginning June 15th. If business engagements permit we shall be there. The closing exercises of this fine school are always most interesting and enjoyable. Essays will be read by Miss Lizzie Carden, Opelika, Ala., Miss Estelle Gladden, Oxford; Miss Lelia Gray. Oxford; Miss Birdie Lanier, Monroe La.; and Miss Mollie Oden, Childersburg, Ala. Orations will be delivered by Mr. J. B. Graham, Spring Garden, Ala., and Mr. J. R. Madden, Lincoln, Ala. Prof. Dodson will deliver the Baccalaureate Address and award the diplomas.

Some of the water oaks recently planted in the park near the public spring, have been bent out of perpendicular, by poor town cows leaning against them, we presume. Our city fathers should remember that as the twig is bent the tree is inclined and hasten to straighten them up before they get rooted to prevent position. After awhile the town must have a beautiful fish pond in the park. It can be made at small cost.

You can keep your hair abundant and glossy, and retain its youthful color, with Parker's Hair Balsam.

We learn from a gentleman who has tasted the water, that Dr. Arnold, in digging for his fish pond, discovered some days ago a fine chalybeate spring of about four times the strength of the one at the foot of the mountain. Dr. A. will develop it, and if it proves to be what is claimed for it, our people will have a fine mineral water within easy reach by a before-breakfast walk.

Since the report of the Press Association was written, we find that circumstances somewhat changed the Programme, and that the Association, after reaching Atlanta, determined to take in Anniston, for two hours, on the return trip. Thursday a dispatch was received from Samuel Noble Esq. advising Messrs. Forney, Caldwell and Grant that the Association would reach that point by the Ga. Pacific and advising them to come down by private conveyance; but it reached here too late to enable the gentlemen named to get there in time to mix with members of the press and enjoy the hospitality of our neighbors.

A Real Necessity.

We presume there is hardly a lady to be found in our broad land who, if she does not already possess a sewing machine, expects some day to become the owner of one.

But after the mind has been fully made up to purchase one of these indispensible articles, the question arises as to what kind kind of a machine to buy.

It should be so simply constructed that the most inexperienced can successfully operate it. The other points mainly to be considered, and which are the most desirable, are durability, rapidity, capacity for work, ease of operation, regularity of motion, uniformity of tension, and silence while in operation.

The "Light Running New Home" fills the above requirements, and is said to combine the good points of all sewing machines, with the addition of many new improvements and labor-saving devices.

The price is no higher than that of other machines, and every lady who is the happy possessor of one may rest assured she has indeed a treasure.

All who send for the company's new illustrated catalogue and enclose their advertisement (printed in another column) will receive a set of fancy advertising novelties, of value to those collecting cards, &c. Their address is, New Home Sewing Machine Co., 30 Union Square, New York.

CALHOUN'S CAPITAL CAREER.

Practical Results of Prohibition.

I send you the following correspondence, between myself and the Mayors of the incorporated towns of Calhoun where the licensed liquor traffic formerly prevailed, as an illustration of the practical results of prohibition in the county. At the close of the month of May '83, I sent the following communication to the municipal authorities of Oxford, Anniston, Cross Plains and Jacksonville.

"Will you be so kind as to examine the police records of your city and write me the number of arrests and convictions during the months of May 1882 and 1883, respectively."

From the Mayor of Oxford I received the following response:

"Upon examination of our police records I find, there were 25 convictions for violations of ordinances during the month of May 1882, and imposition of fines to the amount of $125,00. During the month of May 1883 there was one arrest, which resulted in an acquital."

From the Mayor of Anniston, the following:

"During the month of May 1882 there were 14 convictions for disorderly conduct and fighting. May 1883 there were but two and they were young boys charged with a trivial offence—fight."

The Mayor of Cross Plains reports only one arrest for May 1883, which he says is a very great decrease in the number of arrests and convictions compared with the month of May 1882. He says he cannot give the exact difference as his term of office does not extend back to May 1882.

The Mayor of Jacksonville reports from 6 to 10 convictions in May 1882, in his court, while his record for May 1883 is entirely clear—no arrests—no convictions. Here are two pictures—Whiskey—Prohibition. What a wonderful revolution in the short space of one month. How eloquently these figures speak! Testimonials that carry conviction to the minds of the most skeptical. Since prohibition went into effect in "Sleepy Hollow" two mammoth brick manufactories have commenced operations, the erection of an elegant hotel projected and already applications for board from summer tourists are pouring in from the beautiful city down by the sea, and the Land of Flowers—and alligators.

The sound of the hammer is heard on the hill; while a spirit of enterprise, energy and activity seems to animate our town with the inspiration of new life.

OBITUARY.

Sacred to the memory of James W. Beasley who died in Birmingham, Ala., of Cholera Morbus, May 18th, 1883, in the 28th year of his age.

Job said, "In the midst of life we are death," and it is so. He was the last of all my brothers, and all the true and tried friend that I had in this world. We were left when very young, orphans. We had all our childish pleasures and sorrows together, and the bond that bound us together in childhood strengthened as we grew up, until it was stronger than a three fold chord. It never was broken. But in the midst of my grief I bow with meekness and humble submission to the will of Jehovah. He gave and has taken. Blessed be his name forever and ever. My loss is my brother's gain. He spoke of the certainty of death and said, "I have to die some time, and why not now? My way to heaven is clear. There is not a cloud in my sky. My time has come. I will soon be with Jesus," and in a short time he breathed his last.

He is gone. His body is confined to the tomb. His soul has returned to God who gave it. And, dear brother, when I am called from this world I hope to meet thee in that land of eternal pleasures, where we will be united to part no more forever.

The following remedy has been successfully used in Pennsylvania: Hydrophobia can be prevented and I will give what is well known as an infallible remedy, if properly administered, for man or beast. A dose for a horse or cow should be about four times as great as for a person. It is not too late to give the medicine at any time before the spasm comes on. The first dose is one and one half ounces of alecampane root, bruised, put in a pint of new milk, reduced to one half by boiling, then take all at one dose in the morning, fasting until the afternoon, at least a very light diet after several hours had elapsed. The second dose the same as the first except take two ounces of the root; third dose same as the second—the doses to be taken every other morning. Three doses are all that is needed and there need be no fear. This I know from my own experience, and know of a number of other cases where it has been successful. This is no guess work. Those persons I allude to were bitten by their own dogs, that had been bitten by rabid dogs and were penned up to see if they would go mad. They did go mad and did bite the persons. This remedy has been used in and about Philadelphia for forty years and longer, with great success, and is known as the Goodman remedy.

MANHOOD
How Lost, How Restored!

Just published, a new edition of DR CULTERWELL'S CELEBRATED ESSAY on the radical cure of Spermatorrhœa or or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc also, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits induced by self-indulgence, or sexual extravagance, &c.

The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

Sure Cure for WORMS. MOTHER'S Has No BAD TASTE MOTHER'S Is far superior to all other preparations as a worm-destroyer, being composed entirely of vegetable ingredients and free from all nauseous taste that vermifuge has. It is a pleasant Syrup that children will gladly take, or it can be eaten with bread. Thousands of children die annually of worms when by the use of the Mother's Worm Syrup their precious little lives might be saved. It expels the Round Worm, Thread Worm and the Huge Tape Worm. It never fails. It clears up the skin and sweetens the temper of the little sufferer, secures sleep, and brings back the appetite. It restores the roses to the cheek and saves the teeth. By its use the child is safe from Convulsions, Spasms, and St. Vitus' Dance, which are usually caused by Worms. SYRUP. REMOVES Round & Tape Worms. WORM CHILDREN Cry for It

The condition as above indicated, exists in almost every family. With some the troubles are of recent standing, while many have become chronic and difficult to overcome. Old and young females are constant victims. Dr. Dromgoole's English Female Bitters makes positive and unmistakable cures of all lingering female weaknesses, excesses, irregularities and periodical obstructions; imparts strength and vigor to the feeble and emaciated; builds up and re-animates dragging, broken-down and worn-out constitutions; repairs damages inflicted by years of painful suffering; regulates, comforts and consoles the troubled maiden, and is a fast friend to mothers all along the troubled pathway of their married lives.

It cures ovarian diseases, uterine displacements and ulcerations, hysterics, leucorrhœa, chlorosis, weakness of the kidneys and back, revives the drooping, despondent and melancholy, calms the excitable and nervous. It is a never-failing iron tonic female regulator. $1.00. Sold everywhere. Family Medical Adviser mailed free to any address. J. F. DROMGOOLE & Co., Proprietors, Louisville, Ky.

At the bedside, the physician's first question is, "How are your bowels?" proving that they must in all cases be properly attended to at once, by the use of some medicine that will cleanse the stomach, revive the liver, cause a free flow of bile and carry off these disease-making secretions. Pills, oils and other strong medicines, produce pain, griping, sick stomach, and often cause the loss of time.

Bailey's Saline Aperient is relieved of all these unpleasant effects; it acts mildly upon the bowels, causes a free flow of bile, relieves constipation, biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach, heartburn, colic, indigestion, etc.

It is a white powder, and is as cooling and pleasant as a glass of soda water. Large Bottles 50 cents.

AGRICULTURE.

POTASH IN GREENHOUSES.—An experienced gardener, among other insecticides, recommends the use of potash in the greenhouse as providing a remedy against most insects, and also fertilizing the plants. He says: "I use it for cleaning the glass, swilling all wood and and brick work everywhere inside, and find it useful both for cleansing and as an insecticide; and I think it is a good dressing for the soil. I have used it as strong as one ounce to the gallon of water for syringing glass over plants, and it has not injured the leaves, on the contrary, improved them. However, I would not advise its use in this way carelesaly, but used as I have described it gets into every crack and crevice, dealing certain death to the insect tribe. I would strongly advise all who have not had a thorough experience of the different kinds recommended, to be very cautious in their use of insecticides and note carefully their results, as many are more dangerous than useful. Paraffine, for instance, when applied to plants in any form whatever, kills the insects; but how often does it close the pores of the leaves and make the plants unhealthy, and, as a consequence, more liable to future attacks from insect pests."

A SUCCESSFUL grower of quinces says he attributes all his success in the business to the accident that most of his trees were set in low, mucky ground, and with such shelter that their own fallen leaves and those of an adjoining apple orchard made good annual mulch. He says it is not the trunks and branches that are tender, but the root, trees being almost invariably killed in exposed situations where frost penetrates deeply. He mulches well with autumn leaves and well-rotted stable manure, saying the better the manure, the fairer and larger the fruit. He also believed a vigorous growth prevents, to some extent, the twig blight and the red rust.

THE peach borer is a wasp-like insect, with transparent wings, and a richly ornamented body, banded and striped with gold, which deposits its eggs about the base of the trunk. The eggs hatch out and the larvæ bore into the sap wood and cause an exudation of gummy matter which appears in the masses about the base of the tree. The larvæ seem partly to live in this gummy substance and partly in the sap wood of the tree. Sometimes three or four are found on the same tree, occasionally girdling and destroying it, but always inducing more or less of a diseased condition, and impairing its vigor. Altogether, it is a very objectionable and destructive insect.

WATER FOR SWINE.—There are many farmers who think it unnecessary to give a drink of water to a pig, but who consider the slop that it receives as ample for its needs, or that when a pig is fattening dry food only is needed and that water makes soft pork. There are many more who are hardly so ignorant as this, yet act precisely as though they were, and neglect to provide any water for their stock but what they can procure from pond holes or sloughs. The consequence is disease and death. Pure water is indispensable to the health of all kinds of stock.

IN wintering colts the first year a small feed twice a day of oats or other grain will well repay the cost. If colts are ever stunted it is the first winter. After that they will keep on growing on good hay with no grain, and the danger of injuring from too much life in young horses makes it advisable to feed grain sparingly or not at all until they are ready to work. But with colts taken from the dam in the fall the only danger is from too little rather than too much spirit.

HORSES should come through the winter in good flesh, and be in good trim for the hard work of spring. Horses' feet need special care at this time of slu h and mud. When the horses are brought in from work, they should be rubbed down, and the feet and legs thoroughly dried. If left covered with mud the skin may soon become diseased, and cracked heels or foot fever may result. Look well to the horses' feet.

COWS.—Any cow that is out of condition will need the best of care now. Warm barn slop, with a little ginger, is excellent. If the animal is poor and weak, there is danger of feeding largely of rich food. Calves infested with vermin are known by their rough coats. A mixture of lard and sulphur rubbed along the back, with a dose of a teaspoonful of sulphur and molasses once or twice a week, is effective.

SHEEP.—Ewes should have dry and clean pens and yards, with plenty of good, wholesome food. If the wool is falling, a few ounce doses of equal parts of sulphur and cream of tartar will relieve the irritation of the skin. Early lambs may be pushed forward with fresh cow's milk, given warm, a quarter of a pint to a meal. Do not run any risks in over-feeding.

SWINE.—Breeding sows should be separated from other pigs, and provided with warm, dry pens, bedded with leaves or straw. A rail fastened to the wall eight inches from the floor, will prevent the young pigs from being crushed. It is well to feed the sow some raw linseed oil a few days before the pigs are born.

BARLEY is driving oats from many of the best farms in Vermont, being a first class grain to sow with grass seed, and yielding thirty to fifty bushels per acre, worth more per bushel than corn for pork, beef, milk or butter.

THE day of feeding large quantities of corn to an animal for a score or more of months is past, and thrifty young steers off from good pastures, with a few weeks finishing off with corn, are to furnish the beef of the future.

WHERE the bark has been gnawed or scraped off from a tree the new bark may be made to grow again by covering the denuded place with clay. It has been made to grow in this way without leaving a scar even.

ONE of the important points in planting seeds is to press the soil very firmly upon the seeds. In setting young plants the same thing should be remembered. It is also beneficial to strip off of the leaves.

DOMESTIC.

BLACK PUDDING.—For black puddings the method in Ghent, Belgium, is to take one pound of fat of pork to one quart of blood, (which must be rapidly stirred while pouring out of the animal, to prevent congealing,) and a number of onions, to be chopped to a pulp, as well as the fat; put in pepper, salt, summer savory, and sweet marjoram, mixed all together, with as much flour as will make a thin batter; then put it in well-cleaned skins, tied every few inches apart with string; put them in a well-filled boiler of cold water, and let it come near to boiling; then take them out and put in fresh cold water, and that may be suffered to boil an hour, unless the skins show signs of bursting; then cool off the water a little before they are done. They are a feast for an epicure. The English method for black puddings is simply the fat of pork chopped into small lumps, with a very small quantity of onion, and groats for consistency. I suppose they should be boiled previous to mixing with the blood; add a little salt, and boil as directed.

RULES FOR CAKE —Have the ingredients all measured and prepared, and the tins buttered before mixing the materials. Sift the cream of tartar, or baking powder, well into the flour; dissolve the soda in the milk, or if no milk is used, in a little warm water; roll the sugar; beat the butter to a cream; mix the butter and sugar together; beat the yolks and whites of the eggs separately. When fruit is used, it must always be added the last thing, and dredged with flour to prevent its falling to the bottom. Cake to be light should be baked slowly at first, until the batter is evenly heated all through. I find that cake is very much more delicate made with pulverized sugar than when made with a coarser kind. Eggs will beat lighter and quicker if they are put into a basin of cold water for half an hour before using.

HOW TO MAKE TEA.—The proper method of making tea ought always to be observed, yet, although so simple, few seem to know how. People will spoil it by boiling, or they will make a weak decoction of the almost tasteless Oolong or Hyson and adding a few drops of milk, will swallow cup after cup of the insipid stuff and imagine that they are taking tea. Tea to be good must never be boiled, as boiling kills the fine flavor and the aroma. There is but one way to make tea, which is to allow one spoonful for each person, you expect to supply; pour on boiling water (be sure the water boils,) let the infusion stand on the table (never over the fire) and in from three to five minutes it is ready for use. A cup of rosy-flavored English breakfast two-thirds tea and one-third milk makes a beverage fit for an epicure, a philosopher or a king.

IN a case of extreme sickness, when it is important that what little nourishment the patient can take should be highly condensed, the following is an excellent mode for concentrating, in a small compass, all the nutritive properties of a chicken. After picking the chicken sprinkle a little salt over it and cut it in pieces, as if for frying. Put the pieces in a small glass jar (or wide-mouthed bottle), stop it tightly, and put it in a pot of cold water, gradually heating the latter till it boils. Let the jar of chicken remain in the water till the juices are well extracted, then pour them off for the patient.

RED PEPPER CATSUP.—Cut up ripe peppers and place them in a preserving kettle until it is full; then cover with the best cider vinegar and boil until the peppers have dropped to pieces. After removing from the fire, as soon as the sauce is cool enough, I rub it through a wire sieve. It is much better, in my opinion, without salt or any other condiments, and is of a beautiful scarlet color, and so thick that it must be put up for use in large-mouthed bottles or jars, and will keep fresh for years. It should boil slowly for at least four hours.

VEAL LOAF.—Chop four pounds of raw veal quite fine; mix with it half a pound of crackers rolled to large crumbs, three raw eggs, two teaspoonfuls of salt, two salt-spoonfuls of pepper and quarter of a salt spoonful of powdered allspice; if the veal is perfectly lean add a tablespoonful of butter; put this mixture into a smooth tin mould or pan just large enough to contain it. Set it in a moderate oven and bake it for two hours. After the veal loaf is cooked let it cool in the pan, and then turn it out. It is to be sliced and served cold for luncheon or supper.

SPICED VEAL.—Cut cold lean veal, either baked or fried, into pieces an inch square. Measure sufficient vinegar to cover it; heat the vinegar scalding hot, adding to each pint one dozen whole cloves, half an inch of stick cinnamon, a teaspoonful of salt and a small red pepper or a dozen pepper-corns; when the vinegar is scalding hot pour it and the spices over the veal, and let the veal stand in this pickle for at least twenty-four hours, it may then be used cold for luncheon or supper.

GRANDE CREAM.—Take 1 pint of orange juice, and put it over the well-beaten yolks of 6 eggs; set it over the fire, adding the peel of half an orange. Keep stirring all the while one way, and when thick, but not boiling, take out the peel and put into glasses to cool. While it is cooking, add white sugar to sweeten to taste. Just before serving, beat the whites of 4 eggs to a stiff froth, sweetened with 2 tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar, and drop a tablespoonful into each glass. This is very nice with cake.

HOME-MADE feathers may be gotten up by taking what milliners call bonnet wire—a flat light thread, and wire tape—and beginning at the far end of it and sewing on the extreme tips of those beautiful bronze and green duck or cockerel feathers, lapping them so as to hide the quill ends. You will be surprised and delighted with the result.

HANDSOME tidies for foot rests are made as follows: Take two pieces of satin ribbon three-fourths of a yard long and one and a half inches wide, paint on each a running vine, join the pieces together with antique lace insertion and around the whole sew antique lace. Chair and sofa tidies may be made in the same manner.

DARK blue satin or plush table spreads are made square, and in each corner is a stem of golden rod artistically embroidered. The border is usually of plush, in old gold or terra-cotta color, joined to the spread with embroidery silk in herring-bone stitch.

HUMOROUS.

LAST fall a Baltimore hardware dealer, who had a bill against a blacksmith in an adjacent village, sent it out by his collector for payment. Upon arriving at the village the collector found the shop, but not the smith, and after a long hunt discovered him on his own door-step, elbows on his knees and chin on his hands.

"I bays no pills," replied the smith, as the account was handed him.

"Why, what's the matter, Mr. Coon?"

"Vhell,, der matter ish dot I haf failed in peesness und I doan pay nopody."

"Failed? Have you actually failed?"

"I haf."

STILL ahead: Smith Washington, an aged colored African, whitewashed the fence of an Austin banker for a dollar and a quarter, which the banker paid him in Mexican quarters at par. Several days rolled away into eternity before Smith Washington had any occasion to put one of those Mexican quarters into circulation, but when he attempted to do so he was shocked at the twenty per cent. discount. His feelings were hurt, too. He lifted up his voice and said: "Jess ter think ob a banker, in whom I had ebery confidence in de world, beating me out ob a quarter ob a dollar. I 'lowed he was an honest man. I hadn't orter tuck de job in the fust place," and then he added more cheerfully: "But ef I hadn't tuck de job to whitewash the fence I neber would hab found out whar de chickens roosted, and as I sold four dollars' wuff ob chickens next morning, de bank hain't cotched up wid me yet."

"Do boldly what you do at all." Boldly do we affirm that Kidney-Wort is the great remedy for liver, bowels and kidney diseases, rheumatism and piles vanish before it. The tonic effect of Kidney-Wort is produced by its cleansing and purifying action on the blood. While there is a gravelly deposit in the urine, or milky, ropy urine from disordered kidneys, it always cures.

A NICE distinction: "Didn't you know any better than to behave as you did last night at the party?" inquired Colonel Biceps of Colonel Calkins. "You made a regular fool of yourself." "I did, did I?" replied Calkins. "Most assuredly you did, I was really ashamed of you." "That's all right. You say I made a fool of myself. That puts the whole responsibility of being a fool on my own shoulders. Now with you it is different. The man who would blame you for being a fool would blame a negro because his hair curled."

THE lass of Kyle: While Robert Burns was at Moffat, once, with Clarke, the composer, the poet called for a bumper of brandy. "Oh, not a bumper," said the musician: "I prefer two small glasses." Voluntary Tributes of Gratitude for Benefits Received.

DEAR SIR—Please allow me the privilege of giving my testimony regarding the wonderful curative properties of your invaluable medicine, Hunt's Remedy. During the past six or seven years I have been a great sufferer from kidney disease, and during a great part of the time my sufferings have been so intense as to be indescribable. Only those who have suffered by this dread disease know of the awful backache, and pains of all kinds, accompanied by great weaknesses and nervous prostration, loss of force and ambition which invariably attend it. I had all these troubles intensified, and was in such a bad condition that I could not get up out of my chair except by putting my hands on my knees, and almost rolling out before I could straighten up. I tried the best doctors, and many kinds of medicine, but all failed to help me, and I experimented so long endeavoring to get cured that last spring I was in very poor shape, and in seeking for relief my attention was directed by a friend to the remarkable cures of kidney diseases, etc., which were being accomplished by Hunt's Remedy. I was induced to try it, and began to take it, and very soon "limbered up," as it were; my severe backache and the intense pains I had suffered so long speedily disappeared, notwithstanding I had been bothered with this complaint so many years.

When I began to take Hunt's Remedy I was considerably run down in my general health, and suffered a loss from loss of appetite. Ever since I have been taking the remedy, however, my improvement has been most marked; my former complaints, aches, pains, etc., have disappeared, and I now feel like my former self, hale, hearty and sound in health. I shall always keep Hunt's Remedy with me, and would most earnestly recommend all those who are sufferers from Kidney or Liver diseases, or diseases of the Bladder or Urinary organs, to use Hunt's Remedy, and take no other.

Yours very truly, HENRY H. SHELDON,
No. 280 Westminster st., Providence, R. I.

"Yes, sir."

"Is he a Durham?"

"He may be."

"Isn't an Ayrshire, is he?"

"Like enough."

"No, I don't."

"Then how do you expect to sell him?"

"All I know about that calf is that his father hooked a justice of the peace to death and his mother chased a female lecturer two miles, and if that ain't breed enough to ask $4 on you needn't take him!"

The butcher said the breed was all right.

R. V. PIERCE, M. D.: Dear Sir—My wife, who had been ill for over two years, and had tried many other medicines, became sound and well by using your "Favorite Prescription." My niece was also cured by its use, after several physicians had failed to do her any good.

Yours truly, THOMAS J. METHVIN.

SIGNS of spring: When the ulster wishes it could look unobtrustive, When the maiden tells her father that board is cheap at Mount Desert. When the young man takes his last year's straw hat out of the closet and anxiously inspects it. When the lady in the ninth story of an apartment building begins to balance flower-pots on a two-inch window-sill. When the patent medicine that all the winter cured chilblains and rheumatism is advertised as a spring tonic and alterative. When the brash young shad tells his grandmother that he doesn't believe there are no such things as nets, nohow, and he's going up the river if it broils him. When the small boy tries to climb a tree that he can't reach half way around, and in the struggle gets his trousers-legs worked up above his knees and has all the bark scraped off his shins.

"By asking too much we may lose the little that we had before." Kidney-Wort asks nothing but a fair trial. This given, it fears no loss of faith in its virtues. A lady writes from Oregon: "For thirty years I have been afflicted with kidney complaints. Two packages of Kidney-Wort have done me more good than all the medicine and doctors I have had before. I believe it is a sure cure."

NIGHT.

I care not what the Day may bring,
The Night is all my own;
A thousand fancies round me fling
Their charms; I am alone!
Alone with Night and Solitude,
The world's great wheel is still;
No vagrant sounds nor voices rude
The happy silence fill.
Oh, charmed hours! that, all too fleet,
Speed on to bring the Day,
When shall the Night come, tender, sweet,
When fancy hath its way?

Love loves the Night for Night brings Love
To Love that counts the hours.
And tenderest tones betwixt them move
In love-illumined bowers.
Nor care I what the Day may bring,
So Night but bring to me
The charms its fancies round me fling,
Sweet Solitude, with Thee!

FOUND AND LOST.

In a corner of Madame Froissart's brilliantly-lighted drawing-room, watching the gay scene being therein enacted, sat Gertrude Meyer.

For the moment she was alone—with her, indeed, a rare occurrence, since he was a belle and beauty; but a slight sprain to her ankle a few days previous, had prevented her joining in the dance, and the little throng of men who all the evening had gathered around her had for the instant disappeared, many of them at her express command.

The last had lingered, reluctant still to go, when—"I am tired," she said. "I want to be alone."

He bent then, from his splendid height and, with a glance from his dark eyes few women could have resisted, whispered a few words in her ear; but neither glance nor whisper brought even a momentary flush to the lovely cheek.

"Elsa is without a partner," she rejoined. "I like to see you dance together. Ask her for this waltz."

An angry light kindled in Frederic Houghton's eyes, and he turned abruptly away.

The next moment, Elsa, with a pleased flush, was leaning on his arm, and with a half-sigh, though she knew not wherefore. Miss Meyer sank back in her cushioned corner.

Was she always to receive love, never to return it?

Gertrude asked herself.

True, Frederic Houghton had never, in words, declared his passion; but every glance, every accent, had been replete with its intensity.

She felt sure that he loved her.

How poor and meagre was the cold friendship she might offer in return!

But if she determined to smile at least more kindly, he gave her no opportunity.

Other men flocked back to her side. She had sent him to Elsa; by Elsa he remained.

One dance followed another, but he would resign her to no other partner; and only an amused gleam crept into Gertrude's eyes as she watched him, and fancied she read the pique which prompted his action—a pique which in part reflected upon herself, as the next day and the next passed, until the week had gone, and still she neither saw nor heard from him.

At the end of that period she again shrugged her shoulders, and told herself that she had forgotten him.

It was from Elsa, a fortnight later, that she learned his regiment had been ordered upon active service, and was to depart in three days for the seat of war.

What should she say to him when he came to bid her farewell?

She need not have questioned.

She waited, but he came not.

It caused her no real grief, no heart-pang but a sort of restless surprise, which stirred some depths whose existence hitherto had been unknown.

Three or four days later Elsa came to her with a shy blush.

She had always been the child's friend and confidante.

Though in reality but twelve months her senior, she felt herself the elder by long years.

"I have a favor to ask you, Gertrude," she began.

"Frederick asked me to write him. This morning I received his first letter. I am ashamed to send him my poor little scribbling, and at school I remembered how beautiful always were your exercises, and I said to myself, 'I will go to Gertrude—she will tell me what to say.'

"I love him so much—so very much Gertrude!

"I think that he, too, loves me. I want to breathe into my words just enough of my heart's perfume that he may know where to seek to find the flower itself."

Gertrude looked up amazed.

"Is it this love which makes you so poetical, Elsa?" she asked. "I never heard you talk like this before."

"It is one of your own thoughts I borrowed," Elsa answered. "But tell me, will you do for me what I ask?"

"You think it will be honorable?"

"Yes, yes! Why not? You can tell him nothing I do not feel—only you will paint the picture so that he may love to look at it."

A little longer Gertrude demurred, and then, drawing to her pen, ink and paper, she wrote.

As she did so, her reluctance vanished.

She fancied herself in Elsa's place.

She imagined how some rosebud, wooed by the sun, would one by one open its shrinking petals, quivering 'twixt ecstasy and pain, to meet the passionate kiss of the day god; and so her imagination found vent in words.

She covered the sheets with closely-filled lines, and as she read them Elsa pressed them to her lips.

"Ah, they will make him love me!" she cried, as she ran with them to her own home to copy them in her own handwriting.

By the next post came his answer.

Elsa had been right.

The letter had strangely stirred his heart.

Pulses he had thought dormant, he wrote had leaped into mad, exultant life.

He had slept, he told her, with the paper next his heart.

Again Gertrude wrote, and yet again, until she looked for his replies almost as Elsa.

She who had never loved in her life, found a strange and satisfying delight in pouring upon the sheet the cry of a hungry soul, while her own soul knew no hunger, the passion she had never felt, the ecstasy of a love at which she scoffed.

"So might I feel," she whispered to herself, "when, like the sleeping princess in fairy lore, the magic prince would bend and kiss my lips."

And so to this unknown king she wrote.

The replies became more frequent, more ardent, until at last there came a letter when Frederic Houghton asked Elsa to become his wife.

With tears of joy in her bright blue eyes she brought this, like the others, to Gertrude.

"Answer him," she said, "and tell him yes! yes! yes!"

Slowly Miss Meyer read the letter through.

The written characters were blurred from her sight.

By a powerful effort she controlled herself, and spoke with some degree of calmness.

"Not this, Elsa," she said.

"This you must answer yourself."

"Oh, no, no! I cannot!

"Make it yet more beautiful than the others, Gertrude.

"The regiment is ordered home again he writes; so there will be no more letters atleast, until after we are married and then there will be no more need of poetry. He will not miss its absence."

"No need of poetry?"

"Ah," thought Gertrude, "then was love's perfect fulness but prose?"

"Let me be alone," she said aloud.

"This evening I will send you your letter.

Giving orders not to be disturbed, she seated herself at her desk, but one by one two scalding tears fell from the beautiful, proud eyes upon the blank page spread before her.

They were the unconscious baptism of her awakened womanhood.

Then she wrote, but it was her heart's blood, rather than the ink, which spread itself upon the sheet whereon she impressed her soul.

"I give you all," she wrote, "my past, my present, my future.

"To me I see but two words—husband and wife!"

"They are emblazoned in letters of gold within the shrine where my soul kneels and worships.

"Frederic, I love you!"

Her pen dropped from her hand.

Had she indeed written the words, or was it her heart which had cried them aloud in the stillness?

A hundred mocking demons took up the cry and echoed it.

She heard it everywhere around about her.

She saw it blazoned in the air.

In the evening, true to her promise, Elsa received the letter, but unfinished.

"Add to it what you will," wrote Gertrude, "I could not close it fittingly."

But Elsa sent the copy with no added words.

Another fortnight and the regiment had arrived.

A month passed but Gertrude and Frederic Houghton had not met.

Once he had called with Elsa, but she had not been at home.

By a singular coincidence it was at another of Madame Froissart's receptions that fate threw them again together.

For a moment her hand had rested in his and his keen eyes searched her face.

Then Elsa came to claim him for a dance, and they separated.

Midnight had sounded, when some one asked Gertrude for a song.

Many joint in the plea.

Giving a somewhat reluctant consent, she took her seat at the piano in the little music room, the curtains dividing that from the drawing-room drawn aside.

She hesitated a moment, then struck the chords, and soon the rich, sweet voice filled the space.

"It was a dream," was the song she had chosen, and the pathos of voice and words brought quick tears to many eyes.

As the last echo died away, amid a murmur of applause and admiration, a man bent close beside her.

"Come into the conservatory a moment," he said.

"I wish to speak to you."

She let him place her hand within his own and lead here where he would.

Among the plants and flowers he turned to her.

"I must speak," he said.

"You shall know how I have loved you!

"In another month to tell you would be sin."

"Is not your betrothal, then, as sacred as your marriage?" she questioned.

"No," he answered; "for sometimes, Gertrude, I feel it would be greater sin to redeem than break my pledge.

"Listen to me."

"You knew the old love I bore you, though I never spoke in words.

"Oh, heart of ice! had you not one throb for the anguish I endured?

"Coldly you sent me from you to another.

"She welcomed me with a smile—you had dismissed me with a frown.

"She warmed me in the sunlight—you chilled me in the shadow.

"For a little time I sought diversion and forgetfulness.

"In the latter I failed sadly.

"With gladness I hailed the outbreak which brought my regiment into service again.

"Elsa's regret at my leaving her softened and touched me.

"I begged her to write to me.

"Through her I thought I should hear news of you; but, instead, her letters gave me a wondering glimpse into a nature whose depths I had never suspected.

"How rich, how full, how true they were. I cannot paint to you.

"I read, and re-read them.

"My heart cried out for more and more, until I knew that its longing and its need were satisfied at last.

"How rich and exhaustless must be the mind which stored such jewels!

"With man's avaricious greed, I longed for its possession.

"Is it only the fulfilment of the wish which makes me fancy its treasure already is exhausted?

"It was Elsa's letters, not Elsa, that I loved.

"She gives me food, but my heart still is hungry.

"Gertrude, help me!

"Tell me the right!"

They were alone.

She heard his quick, agitated breathing.

Her own heart beat so loudly that unconsciously she pressed her hand upon it.

For this only she had given up the birthright of her soul.

The temptation stifled her.

She gasped for breath.

"Then the mist cleared—she saw clearly.

"Let us return to Elsa, Mr. Houghton," she said calmly.

"She will wonder at our absence; and as for what we have been speaking of, remember the words of my song, 'It is a dream.' You have your letters—they are realities. One cannot always live in dreamland."

"For the second time," he answered, "you send me from you."

"For the second time, and the last."

"Oh, Heaven! that a soul so beautiful in outward form should wear a case of ice!"

Thus, man-like, and in a man's blindness he judged her.

He went forth, in his weakness, to redeem his pledge.

She, in her strength, took up her double burden, but, that she bore it, gave the world no sign.

Painting House Walls.

If a plastered wall be new, and has not been whitewashed, it will do to size it with glue water; but if it has been calcimined or whitewashed, which is often the case, no glue sizing should ever touch it. Any preparation of that kind is liable, sooner or later, to peel off and spoil the surface for any future finish. A safer way is to take oil and coat the whole surface before painting, which makes a fast union of any wash to the wall. On such a base oil paints will adhere perfectly.

But the principle trouble in painting walls is found in the defective character of the plastering. If one is building a house, he can place the studding twelve inches from center to center, so that strong laths will not spring and break up the mortar at every pressure. The laths, too, should be spread one-fourth of an inch apart, and the mortar have twelve pounds of hair to the barrel of lime. This will make a wall that will stand like the walls of the houses plastered a hundred years ago. The reason why the plastering falls off from our modern houses is because the laths are laid so close that the immediate swelling cuts off the clinch, and the mortar is usually too sandy, and has but six pounds of hair. On such a surface are laid three coats, when the clinch will fail to hold one. Professional lathers or masons themselves ought to lay the laths and be sure of a large spread; then if the mortar is strong or rich, with plenty of hair, there can be no falling off. I have seen many houses so poorly plastered that the entire surface had to be cleaned off and replastered after a few years. A person coming into possession of such a dwelling, no sooner gets the walls well painted to his taste than they begin to break up and disfigure the whole work. If you are sure the work is well done, the ceiling as well as the side walls may be painted to advantage. When any portion becomes soiled or smoked, it will then be an easy matter to wash it off. Rooms once thoroughly prepared in that way last for a life-time and always look substantial and neat. In case of cracks, make some putty of the same color as the paint and fill up.

An Accurate Time-piece.

* * * While on the subject of Waltham watches, we may mention that we have seen a letter from the Commander of the Gordon Castle (Castle line of Steam Packets) who was fortunate enough to save life at sea, and who for his gallant conduct was presented in September last with a Gold Keyless Waltham Watch by the President of the United States, on behalf of the London Local Marine Board. Referring to this Presentation Watch, he says: "When I left London the watch was six seconds fast, and on my arrival at Singapore it was only three seconds slow, a most extraordinary performance for a watch, as I carried it on my person the whole time. I compared it every day with my chronometers on the passage out, and it seldom or ever differed one second from them; in fact, I found it almost, if not as good as my chronometers, which is a good deal to say for a watch carried about and subject to all kinds of jolts."—London, England The Watchmaker, Jeweler and Silversmith, Feb 5, 1883.

Birds on the Farm.

The crow regulates its food from necessity, and not from choice. To him, strictly a grain-feeding, and not an insect-eating bird, corn is his favorite diet. It is not true, as some have claimed, that it picks out weevil-eaten or imperfect kernels from the hills. He eats all he can get, good or bad, and though he is also a great scourger, the balance is rather against his being beneficial to the farmer. The robin is an insect-eating bird. It prefers insects in the larval, pupal, and adult stage to any other food. Few persons have any idea of the enormous, the incalculable number of insects that robins eat every year. A young robin in the nest requires a daily supply of food equivalent to considerable more than its own weight. To supply the millions of young birds hatched each year, this requires an enormous number of insects. The service of these birds, during the time they are engaged in rearing their young alone, would entitle them to protection, were the parents themselves to feed exclusively upon garden fruits during the whole period. But at this time the diet of the old birds is very largely of an animal nature; nor is this the only season during which the destruction of insects goes on. It does not harm to put scarecrows in your trees and gardens to drive off the robins, but it hardly pays to kill them. Yet when killed they make very delicate eating.

Swallows may generally be found where there are grain-fields. The Summer range of these birds includes nearly all the central portion and the great grain-growing sections of the West. They are more or less migratory, and spend their Winters in the South. As pestiferous as the eave and barn swallows are with their chatterings, and the annoyance they give the farmer in various other ways, they are natural enemies of the midges and similar small insects that prey on grain, and pursue them with unremitting vigilance. It has been estimated that the nesting of a single pair of swallows will in twenty-one days consume 500,000 insects. Their benefit is simply incalculable.

Blue-birds have largely superseded swallows near houses, and protect fruit trees from insects much better than the swallows do. The martin is too lazy to do much good, and has been largely driven away from New England. The King bird, or bee-martin, has been voted a terror to bee-keepers; but it has been found that the immense number of insects it destroyed more than balanced this evil. Again, the king-bird drives away the other birds from fruit trees, and is useful for this reason. If suitably baited with scraps of cotton, strings, and loose material to complete a nest, the king-bird will soon accustom itself to building in and about the orchards, gardens, and even the houses of our farmers, and thus protect thousands of dollars worth of vegetables and fruits. It is strictly an insectivorous bird, and will not destroy, on the whole, that which conduces to the interests of the farmers. Altogether the king-bird is one of the most valuable species for agriculturists. The legislation in regard to this bird should be of the strictest kind.

Another species doing an immense amount of good in its own quiet way is the yellow-billed, as also its ally, the black-billed cuckoo. These birds build in apple and fruit trees. They are strictly insect-eating, while they make terrible raids upon the caterpillar. They should be encouraged in every possible way.

The blue jay does much benefit, but so much direct damage that it is almost absurd to class him as a friend to the farmers. The Baltimore oriole is very destructive to pea-vines early in the season, but he eats a class of insects not touched by other birds—the leaf beetles and the larvæ of many species of insects inhabiting the tops of elm, oak, and apple trees. At the end of the season a balance will be found in the oriole's favor. The nut-hatch is eminently an insect-eating bird, living largely upon grubs which hide under the bark of oak, chestnut, elm, maple, and other rough-barked trees The black titmouse, or chickadee, is of direct benefit to forests by the great number of insect larvæ consumed during the year. It eats insects too small for the nut-hatch. The woodpecker hooks out larger insects than either of the two preceding kinds, but can hardly be said to be an especially valuable aid to the farmer.

The wrens are strongly beneficial to gardens and plants about the houses, because of the number of caterpillars they eat. The fly-catchers are beneficial, and so are the thrushes, warblers, and vireos.

The Figured Vest.

In 1819 Mr. Rockwell, of Connecticut, went as a carpenter on a whaler. In the course of fifteen years he sailed on many voyages, on an English man-of-war, in the American service, the merchant marine, enduring many hardships and privations, without hearing from his wife and family. He was given up as dead and his wife married again, lost her second husband, and and was left with three children. On the 4th of July, 1835, he came back to his old home. About a week before Zelinda, the youngest child by the second husband told her mother of her strange dream. She dreamed that her "other papa" had come home, clad in sailor costum, except that he wore a peculiar vest made of handsomely figured silk, such as she had never seen before. She was laughed at, and no more was thought of it. A thunder storm was approaching as Rockwell reached his old home. He knocked and asked for brief shelter from the impending storm. He was bidden to enter. The widow and children were just sitting down, and he was asked to share their meal. He was unrecognized, but his sailor costume attracted attention—and the vest he wore! All eyes observed and all remembered Zelindas' dream! The widow exclaimed: "You remind me of the man who was once my husband!" "Don't you know me, Esther?" the long lost husband replied, as they embraced each other. Explanations followed, and five days later the two were reunited in marriage. He died about a week since, aged 86, and his wife soon followed him.

Stamp Collecting.

"Where did we get that quantity of stamps in the window? Why, it is only a sample of what we have inside," a stamp dealer said. "Look here," opening a large case closely packed with stamps, "and at these," displaying a pile of albums more or less filled. "I'll tell you where we got them. We buy them from every civilized country in the world. Only this morning we got in a quantity of rare Belgian stamps, which cost us three thousand dollars. We have agents and correspondents in the capitals of every country, who are always on the lookout for anything rare in our line. Besides, we purchase large quantities from small collectors in the United States, many of whom make a fair living nosing about importing houses and begging the stamps from foreign letters."

"Do you have many customers?"

"I should say we do. Besides the large number of retail dealers through the United States to whom we sell, we have valuable customers in the army of stamp collectors which has sprung up of late. You would be surprised at the number of persons absorbed in the hobby. Stamp collecting is no longer a school boy pastime. It has become the serious occupation of thousands of persons, the most of whom, as I find by experience, are far past their youthful days. You have no idea of the avidity with which they scrape together these odd-looking stamps, and the large prices they are willing to pay for them. I have heard of some who keep their stamp albums under double lock, and of others who even keep them under their pillows at night. Stamp collecting is the most alluring of hobbies. There are 6,500 different stamps known. The value of certain single stamps is equal to many a person's yearly income. A leading banker, whose residence is in Madison avenue, has an album of stamps worth at the lowest estimate $30,000. Another album, owned by a lady, is valued at $25,000. I could name several more, varying in value from $20,000 down to $5,000."

"Well, some are enthusiastic, and they collect stamps from pure love of the rare and curious. Just as many expend fortunes on rare manuscripts and works of art. Others, and I believe they compose the larger class, have more characteristically American views. They see the almighty dollar behind these tiny pictures, and they buy them up for the same reason that a keen Wall street man buys up stocks which he knows will bring profitable returns. From two to five years will double the value of nearly every one of these stamps, and these collectors know what they are doing when they invest largely in the article."

"Are corners in the stamp market possible?"

"Certainly; many collectors are at present buying up all the match box and medicine revenue stamps which pass out of use in July. They hope in a few years to create a corner in the market and get them off their hands at immense prices. We sold a match-box stamp yesterday for $15."

"What collections have been sold at notably large prices?"

"There was one sold in London in 1876 for £8,000. Another sold in Paris last fall for 40,000 francs. We ourselves have sold several $5,000 collections. This may surprise you, but remember that some of these little stamps sell for more than $200. There is one of the old local stamps issued by the Brattleboro, Vt., post office in 1846. We would not sell it to-day for less than $200. We have many others of equal value. The stamps which are most in demand and bring the highest prices are the provisional stamps issued from 1844 to 1846 by the Postmasters of Baltimore, St. Louis and Brattleboro. Here is the Baltimore stamp—a simple frame of single lines enclosing a facsimile of the autograph of James Buchanan. The St. Louis stamp displays the arms of the State of Missouri with 'St. Louis' and the large number of value above, and 'P. O.' below. The Brattleboro stamp consists of the autographic initials 'T. N. P.' in an octagon ground of vertical lines, with 'Brattleboro' above and 'P. O.' at the sides. Any of these can be sold for $200."

"It is said," the reporter remarked, "that many rare stamps have their birthplace in stamp factories in Chicago and other enterprising towns."

"That is not true. Stamp counterfeiting has been entirely broken up in the United States since we overturned one of the concerns in Philadelphia in 1876, and had the proprietor sentenced to State Prison for twenty years. Besides, the stamp dealers are generally experts, and can no more be deceived by counterfeit stamps than the bank teller by counterfeit bank notes."

"When and where did this mania for stamp collecting begin?"

"It may be said to have originated in London in 1862, when Mount Brown, Esq., published the first list of postage stamps. Dr. J. E. Gray, of the British Museum, followed with a similar and more complete work in the same year. These works were widely read, excited much curiosity, and caused thousands to become stamp collectors. The mania went on increasing until at present I can safely say there are more than a million persons seriously devoted to collecting stamps."

Gold Mines.

It appears from some statements on Mexico in 1882 that some of the gold and silver mines there have been worked uninterruptedly since the Spanish conquest. During the time that Mexico was a Spanish colony, that is from 1537 to 1821, the mines produced silver to the value of $2,086,268,703, and gold to the value of $68,768,411. Since the Mexican independence was established in 1821, down to the year 1880, the mines produced silver to the value of $900,658,309, and gold to the value of $48,413,783. This yields a grand total for the production of silver and gold in Mexico between 1537 and 1880 of $3,105,110,219, or upwards of £600,000,000. Another computation, based on the report of the Mexican Mint, gives a somewhat higher total than this.

Salmon Canning.

Astoria, a little "salmon" town at the mouth of the Columbia, on the ocean, also makes some pretensions to being the "future great." It is the oldest town here, having been established as a trading post in 1811. It is a wierd-looking place, built on the side of a hill sloping to the ocean. Its chief industry is salmon fishing and canning. The fishing season begins about the middle of April and lasts four months. Then these "salmon towns" go to sleep for the remainder of the year, like summer resorts. The bay at the mouth of the Columbia River is very stormy during the fishing months, and loss of life is frequent. The fishermen are mainly Greeks, Portuguese, Russians, Finns and Scandinavians. Some have their own boats and nets, while others are supplied by their employers. These who have their own boats and nets are paid 60 cents a salmon of eight pounds weight; the latter are paid 45 cents a salmon. A "war" has also broken out among the canneries. One large establishment announces that it will give 90 cents a salmon. The rise of 50 per cent creates consternation among the canning establishments, and reduces their profits to nearly nothing. The man who is so extravagant is interested in canneries on the Sacramento River, where the spring run of fish is very light. This inducement will attract independent fishermen from the Sacramento and lessen competition there. As fishermen are employed nearly all the year on the Sacramento, they can work cheaper, and the reduced price of material and cost of living enables the Sacramento canner to can for about 50 per cent less; yet he sells very little if any cheaper than the Columbia canner. Some of the leading canning firms at Astoria have from seventy-five to 100 boats. It is designed to make Astoria the headquarters of the canning business for it is cheaper to seine salmon there than to catch them further up the stream and bring them back by boat. The smelt are very fat, and canning smoked smelt is one of the growing industries of that fishy town. The spiced trout the wise Easterners get from the far West are only a species of salmon.

There are thirty-six canneries on the Columbia River. They turn out from 6,000 to 25,000 cases each. The total for the season 1882 was 535,000 cases, which at an average of $5 20 per case would make the total value of the industry $2,782,000. The shipments direct to forign ports were 344,328 cases, being about double the number shipped to San Francisco, the East and islands in the Pacific. Several vessels were dispatched from Astoria direct to Liverpool, with whole or part cargoes of salmon, one vessel taking 70,000 cases. The estimated capital invested in canneries is $2,000,000, and during the four months' fishing season employment is given to about 7,000 men. In the distant future it is proposed to establish a hatchery, when instead of turning out 500,000 cases yearly three or four times that number will be canned. The run of salmon in the Columbia River is remarkable, and seems to be inexhaustible considering the laxity of the law in regard to the destruction of fish by traps and wheels. This system of wholesale slaughter and wanton destruction brings on another "war" between the canners and the free-booters. There is a law prohibiting fishing from Saturday until Monday, in order to allow the fish to ascend to their natural spawning grounds, but the buccaneers, with their wheel of iron spikes, violate it with impunity. Large quantities of tin for making cans are imported direct from England to this point—this industry having introduced a direct trade with England. Duty on tin plate, less 10 per cent, is refunded to canners on their making proper entry at the Portland Custom House at the time of making foreign shipment. Chemicals required for canning are also imported. Salmon canning has given an impetus to boat-building at Astoria. A few years ago nearly all of the fishing boats were built at San Francisco. Several boat-shops were recently established at Astoria, and last winter turned out an aggregate of 300 boats.

Flowers for Cutting.

If you care to cut many flowers for use in the house—and almost everybody who loves them wants flowers in every room during the season—it is a good plan to have a corner expressly for "odds and ends," from which you can cut without feeling that you are taking from the beauty of the garden beds. In this corner you can sow such seeds as may be left after sowing in the beds Here you can put out cuttings from the bedding plants, and "strike" the branches you cut off from your house plants in the spring when you put them out on the veranda for the summer. Nothing will come amiss. In a short time you will have a brilliant bed of miscellaneous plants, and the more flowers you cut the more there will seem to be. There is a peculiar charm about these out of the way corner gardens that I fail to find in the more orderly beds in the garden or on the lawn. Perhaps it is because there is a total lack of formality and primness, and such a general fraternizing of all kinds of flowers that the very atmosphere of the place is redolent of good will and equality.

The Republican.

SATURDAY, June 9, 1883.

MR. RANDALL.

The Atlanta Constitution and some other Southern journals of influence are trying to "paragraph" Mr. Randall down. We meet the declaration at every point that his election to the Speakership means the defeat of the Democratic party. This is about the stock in trade of his Southern opponents. It is a mere declaration. It proves nothing. On the contrary an equal if not greater number of Southern editors and politicians hold that the election of Mr. Randall is essential to the success of the Democratic party in the next Presidential contest. On this head honors are easy. Few have had the temerity to assail Mr. Randall personally. His reputation for personal honesty is too high in the country for that. Some have falsified the record to prove that Mr. Randall, in representing the interests of his immediate constituency, could not be true to the National Democracy. We say they have falsified the record. It is not true that Mr. Randall packed the committee on Ways and Means in the interest of the protectionists. The record will prove the contrary; and we challenge any of his opponents to show otherwise. Mere declaration will not do. The record is public and the property of the country. It can not be shown from that. Mr. Randall is entitled to the gratitude of the South for his splendid services to this section when higher questions than the tariff were involved. He should receive the support of Southern members of Congress. It is said that Republics are ungrateful, but this does not prove that such should be the case. When Mr. Randall led the fight against the Force Bill, he rendered a service to the whole country, in the cause of constitutional liberty, that dwarfs and over shadows everything else. His election to the Speakership would be a fitting return for that service. It does not lie in the mouths of Southern men to depreciate that service. Below we copy from the Mobile Register, in answer to a specimen paragraph from the Constitution, an article that we endorse in every particular:

"Pennsylvania is one of the few States in the country where a Democrat is no better than a Republican."—[Atlanta Constitution.

"The Constitution did not think so when Mr. Randall by his ability, courage and patriotism, stood between the South and Republican outrage like a stone wall—firm and immovable. The Pennsylvania Democrats in Congress, men like Clymer, Randall and Curtin defended the South when we needed defence, when every interest dear to our civilization was at stake and in peril. Are such Democrats no better than Republicans? The question of the hour among Democrats is not whether the present tariff is an outrage upon taxpayers. Upon that question we are all agreed. It is not whether the duties should be kept within the demand for revenue. Upon that we are all agreed. It is not whether a tariff is necessary. We all agree that we must have a tariff and cannot possibly declare for free trade so long as the present debt rests upon us. It is not whether in levying duties we should see to it that American industries receive no shock. Upon that question there is barely a difference of opinion.

The only difference between Democrats is the amount of incidental protection needed to sustain home industries against foreign competition. Democrats whose constituents are largely interested in iron think that the duties should be a little higher than is thought just by those who represent farming interests; and Democrats who represent the raw products—wool, rice and sugar, hold that the duties should be a little higher than is thought just by the manufacturer of woolen goods, and the refiners of sugar and the consumers of rice. Here is all the difference between Democrats on this question. It is a difference upon which good and wise men may divide within the ranks of their party. It is purely a question of expediency, and involves no party principle—no more than was involved in the question whether the silver dollar should contain so many or so few grains.

To read the Pennsylvania Democracy out of the party on such a question is to stamp as untrue Democrats those Pennsylvanians of a former generation like Dallas and Buchanan who stood precisely where Mr. Randall stands to-day. It is to read out of the party the followers of Henry Clay in Kentucky. It is to condemn the Tennessee Democracy who favor as did President Jackson "a judicious tariff" and who elected Polk upon a tariff platform committed to incidental protection. It is to hand Virginia with her traditions over to the hands of Mahone. In short it is to destroy the national party which has saved the South from absolute ruin and to which alone the South can now look for protection from Federal usurpation."

Brigham Young's grave is very much neglected, and his widows never visit it. They went once to cry over his remains, but it made the ground so muddy that they all caught cold.—Philadelphia News.

The Montgomery Avertiser says: Seven more car loads of cattle went through to Texas, June 1st—five from Albany and two from Thomasville, Ga. This makes a total up to date of 163 cars, or over 5,700 head.

Mr. Randall has been four times tendered the Speakership by the Democratic members of Congress. How comes this if his Democracy is not as strong as the strongest?

Terrible Tragedy.

Selma Times.

The north bound accommodation train on the E. T., V. & G. R. R. yesterday afternoon when near Burdsville was the scene of a fearful encounter. A passenger by the name of Lawrence, from about Randolph, was aboard in a considerably intoxicated condition. He was approached in the aisle by the conductor, Mr. E. L. Nelson, of this place, who asked for Lawrence's ticket or fare. Without further provocation the drink maddened man laid one hand on the conductor's shoulder, and as he laughingly said, "You don't want any fare from me, do you?" he drew a knife across the astounded train-official's neck. Conductor Nelson was terribly wounded, but had strength and courage to draw his pistol. Lawrence withdrew along the aisle and did the same thing. Both commenced firing at each other, and kept it up until their weapons were emptied of cartridges. At least ten shots were fired, but the train was running rapidly and the jostling was such that the aim of neither availed anything What is more wonderful, no one of the passengers was hit by one of the random balls. Engineer Sitton was apprised by the ringing of his bell that something was wrong, stopped his train and came back to the passenger car. Conductor Nelson was then such an awful sight to behold, reeking as he was with his own blood, that Mr. Sitton fainted. Fortunately for the wounded man a down freight train was met at Burnsville by the accommodation, and he was brought back to the city, reaching here about 7 p m. Dr. C. J. Clark was summoned, and did all in his power for the injured man. It is not thought he is dangerously hurt, though his wound's results cannot be accurately predicted. Steps were taken last night to arrest the crazy victim of drink who did the direful work. Such a reckless disregard of human life on board a rail road train is phenomenal in this country, and we hope that it will be made an example. Intoxication is little extenuation of such an occurrence, and should not be allowed to weigh in this instance. Mr. Nelson's many friends sincerely trust he may recover, for men of his nerve and determination are rare. They should not be lost by the hand of temporary maniacs.

A Just Tribute.

Montgomery Advertiser.

At the recent Alabama Press Convention, held in Selma, the welcoming address was made by Hon. N. H. R. Dawson, late Speaker of the House, and the response by Hon. R. H. Powell, of Union Springs. Mr. Dawson, among other pleasant things, paid the following merited tribute to four men who have been distinguished in Alabama journalism:

I recur to the past and recall the names of three grand types of the fourth estate in Alabama, "immortal names that were not born to die," Grant, Forsyth and Tyler, whose services, in the cause of local self-government, have engraved their names on the history of the times in which they lived and labored. They have passed from the scenes of their earthly triumphs and trials, and 'after life's fitful fever, they sleep well,' but while liberty has a temple or genius an admirer, their names will be enshrined in the hearts of a grateful people.

While weaving a chaplet for the illustrious dead I would not pluck one laurel from the garlands that deck the equally illustrious living. The name of another member of the press challenges our affection and admiration, that of Charles C. Langdon, who has illustrated in a long life of usefulness the splendid virtues of a noble manhood. Patriot and statesman, may he long live a conspicuous exemplar of the civilization which is rapidly passing away.

Mr. Powell, in reply, said:

We accept, as representative men of the Alabama Press, the distinguished four whose familiar names you have so eloquently interwoven in your graceful welcome address.

Grant, who was the Nestor of the press, whose word was his bond and whose unsullied name was the synonym of honor, who administered the financial affairs of Alabama for more than one term, and when he retired from office not a shekel of the public money clung to his hands, not a breath of suspicion soiled his spotless escutcheon.

Forsyth, whose terse and logical editorials, bristling with arguments, gave him a reputation unconfined by State lines, unlimited by national boundaries.

The cultured and scholarly Tyler, who in the dark days of reconstruction battled with undaunted courage for the rights of local self-government, and the chevalier Bayard of the press, added a new lustre to a name already famous in American history.

Had you, sir, drawn most liberally upon acknowledged classical attainments you could not have paid a more fitting tribute to the manly merit of Charles C. Langdon. He was for years a plumed knight of the quill, and for half a century loyal to all the great interess of Alabama and a fearless advocate of every political right of her people.

As in the physical world the setting sun, which sinks to rest behind the evening horizon, floods the heavens with gorgeous splendor, the crowning glory of the dying day, so Chas. C. Langdon, going grandly down the western hills, in the quiet calmness of a serene old age, reflects upon his pathway of usefulness, a grandeur and a glory, all the more sublime and beautiful, because of the unfaltering fidelity which has characterized his long and honorable life, consecrated to the service of the people for whom he lived and labored. He has carved for himself a niche high up in the temple of fame, and has a place in the heart of every loyal Alabamian that will be green and unfading while memory retains her throne.

A Narrow Escape.

CLEVELAND, O., June 2—A crowd of men were at work putting up braces under an old frame building on Ontario street, so that it would not fall into an excavation for a new block just at the south of it. All at once there was a sand-slide, and Fred Rutchinsky, one of the laborers, was buried under it The others rushed to his rescue, and commenced shoveling as rapidly as the narrow space would allow; His head was soon uncovered, when it was found that he was rapidly sinking in the quicksand: Before further headway could be made a second slide came, again covering him from sight, The men worked desperately, relieving each other at short intervals but the task seemed a hopeless one as the wet sand ran in as fast as it was taken out. In a few moments his head again appeared in sight. He was ashy pale and could hardly speak. Again was he covered by a slide of sand. A few boards were driven in about his body, and another effort made, which ended with success. When half his body was in sight a rope was passed around him and a dozen men hauled him out. He was in the sand nearly an hour and a half, and, although very much exhausted will recover.

Pratt Mines

Birmingham Age.

The output of the Pratt Mines for May was 38.000 tons. Considering they worked only three quarters time the entire month this is a pretty good yield. We understand they have openings sufficient to turn out at least 10,000 tons more per month when the demand justifies it.

The Pratt Coal and Coke company will at once commence building fifty more coke ovens. They already have 210 lighted up.

Warden J. H. Bankhead and State Physician Cunningham have removed to Pratt Mines, where the majority of convicts are quartered.

A mile of new side tracks has been built at Pratt Mines. Sup. W. L. Gude has made many other new improvements there which clearly shows that he is the right man in the right place.

Solons Indicted for Gambling.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 4—A dispatch from Austin, Texas, says the grand jury has indicted from forty to fifty members of the legislature for gambling. Quite a number of those indicted have left money with their counsel to plead guilty and pay the minimum fine rather than stand a trial in court.

Another dispatch from the same place says some one entered the county clerk's office, Saturday night, and stole all the indictments returned by the grand jury for violations of the gambling law, including those against members of the legislature. There is no clue to the thief, but sporting circles are greatly elated.

The Gambling Law.

MEMPHIS, June 3.—Ed Garvin was tried yesterday in the criminal court and found guilty of gambling. His counsel made a motion for a new trial, which was overruled by Judge Green, and Garvin was sentenced to one year in the penitentiary and to pay a fine of $200. An appeal was taken to the supreme court which tribunal will pass upon the constitutionality of the gambling act on Monday, the 11th inst. Garvin's conviction was the first under the new law which makes gambling a felony.

KNOXVILLE, June 4.—The first train over the Knoxville & Ohio railroad from Louisville came into Knoxville on time this morning at 9:45. All the steam whistle in Knoxville blew a serenade, and a large crowd gathered at the depot and cheered vociferously.

The bottom fell out of the south reservoir to-day, leaving the reservoirs all bottomless.

At Charlotte, N. C. this morning, Teos. I. Shields shot and killed Jas. G Sit on, Superintendent of the Maryland and Charlotte copper mines. The shooting was done with a double barreled shotgun, the load taking effect in Sitten's head, killing him instantly. Shields claimed that Sitton seduced his sister and refused to marry her, Shields gave himself up and is now in jail.

Death follows Baptism.

From the Charlotte Observer.

A colored woman in this city named Sophia Johnson died yesterday almost immediately after having been baptised by the pastor of the Church street Baptist (colored) church. She had been sick for a long time and a few days ago became greatly concerned about the future and insisted upon being baptised She was placed in a vehicle and carried to the fount on Church street and immersed, after which she was carried home She had reached home only a short time when she died.

A Georgia paper tells of a man down there who sneezed so hard he broke his back. This recalls the fact (alledged) that a large-mouthed man in Kansas, a short time since, dislocated his hip joint by yawning. There is a man in Williamsport, who is so round-shouldered that he has to use sticking-plaster to hold his shirt on. The champion thin man lives in Wyandotte. Every time he shaves his face he nicks the razor. An old chap living on Blank street has such a long nose that he has to take snuff in April in order to sneeze in July. The midget at a New York museum has such a small mouth that his mother kisses him through a pipe-stem.

A Boston man writes to a home paper from Brazil that the people dress well, even elegatly after they get up a little, but the children of the most wealthy are sometimes introduced to visitors without any clothing but a string of beads around the neck or a pair of elegant slippers on their tiny feet, while in the photographic galleries one can find few pictures of any but nude children. Among the lower classes boys are frequently never dressed until they are twelve years old. Girls commonly wear clothes sooner, though the first few years of their lives pass with only a pair of earrings, which, find their way into the ears of every female child by the time it is a year old.

Of the six standing highest in the West Point graduating class last year, four were Western boys. Out of the first six in this year's graduating class three are from the South, two from Ohio and one from Pennsylvania. At present, in all the classes, South Carolina stands higher than any other state in the Union. The boys who start in best prepared are from New England, owing to the high excellence of its schools.

Before cutting a man's head off in China the authorities considerately make him drunk; and occasionally a rich convict who has been sentenced to death will hire, or rather buy a coolie to take his place. The coolie leads a riotous life for some time beforehand, and at last, in a state of besotted helplessness, meets death without apparent suffering.

The bald-headed man never dyes.

Will be paid for the apprehension and delivery to me, at Middleton, Ala., or in any jail so that I can get him, George Hendrix, colored, who I took out of jail and am his bondsman for his appearance at the Circuit Court of this county. Said George Hendrix is about 5 feet 10 inches high, complexion very black—has a scrofulous scar on the left side of his neck and has a scar across one of his eye-brows, and weighs about 160 or 165 pounds, rather slow spoken. Broad across the chest and has a very flat nose. I will pay the above reward for his apprehension and delivery to me as above or lodged in any jail, so that I can get him. The said George Hendrix wore off a cassimere coat of rather a peculiar color, and a low hat white on the outside and black under the brim, and had on striped cotton pants, and wears a No. 9 shoe.

MISS TENIE SELLERS:—It is the wish of many of your friends that you repeat your recitation given at Miss Montgomery's exhibition, at some time most convenient to you.

MANY FRIENDS.

The Board of Trustees of the Normal School met Saturday last and tendered the presidency of the institution to Prof. Edward P. Moses, principal of the Graded School at Goldsboro, N. C.

We hope soon to be able to announce the acceptance of Mr. Moses. He has been very highly recommended to the Board of Trustees and his fame as a teacher is already national.

Miss Mamie Montgomery's School Examination.

The closing exercises of Miss Montgomery's school began last Thursday and continued through two days. Those of her patrons who attended the examination of classes were very highly pleased and warm compliments were paid the teacher, whose faithful labor the past session was apparent in the proficiency and deportment of the pupils through the two trying days of the examination. Thursday night two prizes were awarded for recitation—one by Mr. Julius Menko to the more advanced pupils of the school; and one by the teacher to the smaller pupils. The Menko prize, which was a beautiful gold medal, with suitable inscription, was given by an impartial board of judges to Miss Ida Wyly, after a fair test. Where all did so well it was exceedingly hard for the judges to determine to whom the award of excellence should go. Especially was it hard for the judges to determine between Miss Wyly and Miss Sellers. But after careful comparison of notes, each one having marked each competitor separately, the prize was given to Miss Wyly, the judges making honorable mention of Misses Tenie Sellers, Mamie Frank, Hannah Crook and Sadie Wyly. The committee appointed to decide between the smaller pupils was totally unable to agree and so gave the gold pin offered by Miss Montgomery to five little ones equally, stipulating that the prize should be drawn for. This was done and Kittie Morgan was the fortunate little one. Those mentioned by this committee were Masters Nunnelly and Mathews, and Misses Morgan, Montgomery and Nisbet. The prizes were delivered by Mr. L. W. Grant at the request of Mr Menko and Miss Montgomery. Friday and Monday nights the school presented Little Bopeep and Culp it Fay, and we must say did so remarkably well. Where all acquitted themselves so perfectly we shall draw no distinction. Monday night, at the request of the teacher, Mr. W. W. Woodward presented the prize for head marks and deportment. Miss Lizzie Swan got the prize in the first class, Miss Sadie Wyly in the second. In this class also Misses Hannah Crook and Mattie Swan tied and drew for it, Miss Crook getting it. In the third class Miss Pearl Smyley was declared the victor; in the fourth Miss Minnie Sellars; in the fifth Miss Alice Kaufman and in the sixth Miss Mary Ramagnano. The deportment prize was awarded on the vote of the pupils. Four were declared equally entitled to it, to wit: Misses Lula, Sila and Willie Nisbet and Miss Lula Kaufman. On drawing Miss Lula Nisbet got the prize.

Taken altogether the closing exercises of Miss Montgomery's school were highly satisfactory to patrons and the public. This session closes her school permanently, she taking a place in the Normal school at the college building.

FLOWERY YARD LOCALS

The following reached us on Saturday too late for last issue.

Mr. Ed. West died last Friday night after lingering several years with consumption.

Mr. John Schencks has been very ill for several weeks.

Miss Lizzie Linder is visiting relations at Jacksonville and Oxford.

We have a Sunday school progressing at Union church and preaching twice a month—Rev. Mr. Stevenson the third Sunday and Rev. Mr. Livingston the fourth.

Wheat crops are very good; corn and cotton are rather late from the fact that the spring has been backward.

What has become of all the local writers? If I don't hear from them pretty soon I will be compelled to believe they took Johnie's train after the thirtieth of April. BILL ARP, jr.

HEAD OF THE VALLEY.

TERRAPIN CREEK, June 1, 1883.

ED. REPUBLICAN: I notice in your highly appreciated columns a sketch from a subscriber, which I do most highly appreciate, from the fact, that I am clearly convinced that the stock law would be a great advantage to the common people of this section, and country at large, financial, as well as of great advantage in improving our stock, which is so greatly needed. In the first place, rail timber is almost exhausted; fencing under par, &c. What's the remedy? None but a stock law. I am satisfied from observation that less than five years would develope to the people a per centage of 200 per cent in the quality and advance in value of their stock. We would at once be relieved of the scrubs we have, and place in their stead the best we could find. We would be relieved of the enormous tax of rail splitting, clearing out hedge rows and fence corners. We would have grass lots and clover fields, by which we would save 50 per cent in forage, and our stock would do better and live longer. Another great drawback is, it takes it least 50 worthless curs to keep the few scrubs at bay. And I will venture to say after all this, that there is 12 per cent of our crops destroyed annually by the ravages of the stock. Mr. Subscriber, suppose the expense of keeping up 50 worthless curs and 10 boys to sic 'em on was added to this 12 per cent, it would almost educate every child in this settlement. In the next place I do think that bad fences and ill-disposed scrub stock causes more bad feelings, loud cursing, and sends more souls to hades than anything your humble correspondent can now call to memory

And, now, to Mr. Editor again: I yet have a vote, and think I can control more, and never will I (unless you run or I am changed) vote for another man to go down to Montgomery who is not in favor of the stock law. So I know I won't close until I appeal to the yeomanry of my country.

I would say to you that W. A. Wilson, of Cross Plains, has a new Massillon thresher—Eclipse engine, and is ready to visit your hills and valleys and sound the note of seperation.

As for crops, wheat and oats good, corn little and bad stand, and owing to white frosts and cold winds king cotton looks a little sheepish. So good bye, Mr. Subscriber, I hope to quill with you again. KNARF, SIRRAH.

Bishop Beebe, of the colored Methodist Church, preached here Sunday morning last. He was greeted by a tremendous congregation. Many of our white citizens attended, among them ourself. To say that he preached a splendid sermon would be but just praise. His language was remarkably good, his course of reasoning clear and accurate and his imagery really brilliant. At times he was truly eloquent. His sermon proved him to be a highly educated man and it was the universal verdict of his white friends that his sermon was of a very high character.

Local Option Law

R. M. Pilgreen was tried last week, found guilty and fined $50, for a violation of the local option law. He appealed to the Supreme court.

A question was raised in the trial of the case the decission of which decided several others of the same character.

The defendant was indicted for selling whiskey in Columbiana. The facts are that one Bob Dollar, living in Columbiana, sent an order to defendant at Calera, through the mail, to send him a gallon of whiskey. Defendant delivered whiskey to the Express Company with instructions to collect on delivery. The counsel for the defence, Ex Governor Cobb and J. B. Knox, Esq., of Talladega, took the position that the sale of the whiskey was not made in Columbiana, but was made at Calera, defendants place of business. They cited numerous authorities, and made fine legal arguments to sustain their position. But Judge Sprott, after taking the question under advisment, decided that the delivery was not made until the Express Company collected the money of Dollar in Columbiana, and turned over the package to him, and that a sale neither actual nor constructive could take place prior to delivery.—Shelby Sentinal.

Chattanooga Times.

Yesterday afternoon two men in a beastly state of intoxication boarded the north bound Alabama Great Southern train at Birmingham. They had a bright male infant of three years with them. They were ticketed for a station six miles above Birmingham, and when they reached it they staggered out of the car and rolled down the embankment, leaving the child in the car. The conductor did not know to whom to deliver it, and had gathered from their maudlin mutterings that they were acquainted with Col. Wm. Crow and Cris Jones, of this city, and he concluded to bring the infant with him. The child was delivered to Mr. Jones last night. He knows nothing of it, and is anxious for some information of its parents. News will probably be had from them to day.

The Calumet Iron and Steel company works at South Chicago, which has been closed for several days, dobating the Pittsburg schedule, started again this morning, with half its force.

Trying To Burn A Town.

PETERSBURG, VA., June 3.—Determined attempts have recently been made to burn the houses of the fire department of this city so as to destroy the apparatus of the fire department, thereby endangering property. This morning at 3 o'clock, during the progress of a fire on Low street, the house of the hook and ladder company was set on fire and destroyed. The theory is that the Low street fire was kindled by the incendiaries to give them an opportunity to destroy the truck house. The police are on the lookout for the incendiaries. The citizens generally are greatly exercised on the subject.

Useful in the Family.

We usually leave it to doctors to recommend medicines, but Parker's Ginger's Tonic has been so useful in our family in relieving sickness and suffering that we cannot say too much in its praise.—Salem Argus.

The Tuskeegee News is for Randall for Speaker. Mr. Thos. Williams, who represents that District in Congress has also recently written a letter in which he declares himself for Randall.

Seeing The Superintendent.

From the Wall Street News.

In the office of a certain western railroad superintendent it was understood that when a common looking stranger entered the outer office and asked for the great mogul one of the several young men therein employed should claim to be the official wanted, and thus turn the bore away. The other day a web-footed stranger with a business squint to his eyes, asked to see the superintendent, and the chief clerk promptly replied.

"Yes, sir; what can I do for you?"

"Are you the man?"

"I am."

"No mistake?"

"None at all."

"Then it's all right. Six months ago one of your trains killed a cow for me, and you have been just mean enough not to answer any of my letters. Old hoss, I'm going to lick $35 out of you."

"But, sir, you see—"

"I see nothing but you! Prepare to be licked!"

And the proxy superintendent was not only mopped around the room and flung into the wood box as limp as a clothes line, but the cow owner kicked the others out the door and upset the desks and tables with the remark:

"The next time I do business with this corporation, I want you to not only reply to my letters, but to put "in haste" on your envelopes."

Trial of a Curious Murder Case

PETERSBURG VA., June 5.—Twenty-four jurors have been summoned from this city, to select a jury from for the trial W. F. Dodson, at Danville, for the murder of a negro named James Reed. It was impossible to get a jury at Danville. The case will be called for trial to morrow. Dodson recently insured his life for $5,000 for the benefit of his wife and children. That they might get this sum he murdered a negro, placed his body in a house and set fire to the house, that the body might be burned and identified as his (Dodson's), but the plan failed

"Here, you didn't read the sign, 'It is against the rule to smoke in these cars?'"

"Yes, I read your blamed old sign and I have not broken your rule yet. I'm smoking in the singular number in this one car just now. When I smoke in "these cars" then it will be time for you to talk."—Texas Siftings.

Two brothers named Wise, colored men, raised a row at a camp meeting in Butts county, Ga., which came near causing a riot, whereupon Jack Pears attempted to settle the difficulty, but was fatally stabbed. The Wise brothers mounted horses and rode away.

MANHOOD

How Lost, How Restored!

Just published, a new edition of DR. CULVERWELL'S CELEBRATED ESSAY on the radical cure of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., also, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, induced by self-indulgence, or sexual extravagance, &c.

The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

Sure Cure for WORMS. MOTHER'S BAD TASTE. It Has No MOTHER'S WORM SYRUP. REMOVES Round & Tape Worms. CHILDREN Cry for It

In far superior to all other preparations as a worm-destroyer, being composed entirely of vegetable ingredients and free from all nauseous taste that vermifuge has. It is a pleasant Syrup that children will gladly take, or it can be eaten with bread. Thousands of children die annually of worms when by the use of the Mother's Worm Syrup their precious little lives might be saved. It expels the Round Worms, Thread Worm and the Huge Tape Worm. It never fails. It clears up the skin and sweetens the temper of the little sufferer, secures sleep, and brings back the appetite. It restores the roses to the cheek and saves the teeth. By its use the child is safe from Convulsions, Spasms, and St. Vitus' Dance, which are usually caused by Worms.

The condition as above indicated, exists in almost every family. With some the troubles are of recent standing, while many have become chronic and difficult to overcome. Old and young females are constant victims. Dr. Dromgoole's English Female Bitters makes positive and unmistakable cures of all lingering female weaknesses, excesses, irregularities and periodical obstructions; imparts strength and vigor to the feeble and emaciated; builds up and re-animates flagging, broken-down and worn-out constitutions; repairs damages inflicted by years of painful suffering; regulates, comforts and consoles the troubled maiden, and is a fast friend to mothers all along the troubled pathway of their married lives.
It cures ovarian diseases, uterine displacements and ulcerations, hysterics, leucorrhœa, chlorosis, weakness of the kidneys and back, revives the drooping, despondent and melancholy, calms the excitable and nervous. It is a never-failing iron tonic female regulator. $1.00. Sold everywhere. Family Medical Adviser mailed free to any address. J. P. DROMGOOLE & CO., Proprietors, Louisville, Ky.

At the bedside, the physician's first question is, "How are your bowels?" proving that they must in all cases be properly attended to at once, by the use of some medicine that will cleanse the stomach, excite the liver, cause a free flow of bile and carry off these disease-making secretions. Pills, oils and other strong medicines, produce pain, griping, sick stomach, and often cause the loss of time.
Bailey's Saline Aperient is relieved of all these unpleasant effects; it acts mildly upon the bowels, causes a free flow of bile, relieves constipation, biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach, heartburn, colic, indigestion, etc.
It is a white powder, and is as cooling and pleasant as a glass of soda water. Large Bottles 50 cents.

WILEY CARPENTER
J. M. CARPENTER,
may12-'83—3t Administrators.

A JOYFUL GREETING.

Hello! How are you? I am glad at last your eyes have fallen upon me. Now that we have met, pray cultivate the acquaintance, for it is my purpose to interest and serve you. Between you and I, though only a newspaper article, I am ambitious. Having a portentous message for all mankind, if it be cordially received, its import truly realized and acted upon, I shall be considered a world's benefactor. Could have no higher ambition you will admit.

A misanthrope of ample means determined to end his life by drowning himself. Going to the banks of the canal, found the time not favorable for the purpose, a number of persons being in the vicinity, and daylight still present. He concluded to walk along the towpath until it was dark. While doing so, he heard piteous cries issuing from the door of a hovel near by, and unconsciously walked over to the place, and found a poor family consisting of a mother surrounded by several children, who told him of their sufferings for food. He took from his pocket his wallet and handed it to the woman, reasoning with himself that he would not need it. The grateful thanks and praises that he received from the recipients of his bounty awoke emotion in his breast, of such a pleasurable character, that he changed his suicidal intent, and decided to live for others. His future life became replete with good deeds—many a dark home and heart were made bright by his presence.

Well, my appearance in these columns springs simply from a desire on the part of those I represent, to benefit your news-devouring race. My province is to help you, your friends, your relations, aye, even your mother-in-law, if that interesting lady be not already far beyond the pale of good influences.

I am sent among men to bear tidings of a discovery that marks an epoch as important to the health of mankind as Newton's apple and Franklin's kite were to natural science. The sick, the discouraged, the dejected, the broken down, and the despairing, may now all find a cure, certain as the Jordan proved to the Syrian leper. It is only necessary, as in the case of that sufferer of old, to follow directions.

The agent which I herald builds up the system, sweeps the cobwebs from the brain, and sends pure, invigorating blood dancing through the arteries to the music of happy laughter.

The gloomy, wormout man of business, by proper use of this wonderful medicine, will be enabled to meet trouble and reverses like a man. Then, in perfect health, he will not have abnormal views of the "Vicissitudes of fortune, which spares neither man, nor the proudest of his works, which buries empires and cities in a common grave."

The weak and nervous woman, just able to drag herself, in "moping melancholy" through duties of the day, may steal the bloom from blush roses, and have eyes as bright and sparkling as the dewdrops nestling in their leaves; and the poor little baby, now disfigured with pimples and scabby sores, may be made sweet, cool and wholesome as—"that youngster of Mrs. Blank's, across the way, whose family is always in a glow of health." Don't you know the reason? "No." Then I will tell you. For years your neighbor has never been without Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

This remedy is a medicine, not a beverage, and is to be taken according to full and perfectly plain directions accompanying each bottle. It is specific, but not a patent medicine, and contains no vile narcotics or viler liquor. It is a prescription used for years by the well-known physician, Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., whose name is a household word in innumerable homes all over our own and foreign lands. The Golden Medical Discovery is prepared and offered to the public by the World's Dispensary Medical Association, a body corporate, existing by and under the laws of the State of New York; its president is Dr. Pierce, the great specialist in chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted the best years of a very busy and wonderfully successful life to the relief and cure of his suffering fellow men—and at a time when high political honors lay broadly open before him, Dr. Pierce resigned his seat in the Congress of the United States, simply from a sense of duty toward others. His associates in the great sanatarium represented to the doctor that the immense business of their association demanded that his personal attention should be paid to the great army of patients crowding upon them from every clime. Dr. Pierce is also the founder of the Invalids' Hotel at Buffalo, N. Y. This establishment, possessing all the comforts and luxuries of a first-class American hotel, has in addition the daily attendance of a large faculty of eminent specialists, whose practice collectively cover the whole field of surgery and chronic diseases. The laboratory in which Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is prepared is an object of interest and wonder. It has a frontage of one hundred feet, a depth of one hundred and twenty-five feet, and is six stories high. In this mammoth and palatial workshop two hundred persons are constantly employed in putting up Dr. Pierce's Medicines.

While the Golden Medical Discovery's curative effects are almost immediately felt, it is not merely a temporary stimulant, but is as certainly a safe and complete cure, in all cases for which it is recommended, as it is that certain misery and death will follow their neglect. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will not cure club feet, will not refurnish armless or legless unfortunates with new and perfect limbs, and it is not guaranteed that even a dozen bottles applied to any stray portion of a second hand skeleton, will develop such member into an animate, human form divine (?). In brief, it is not asserted that this medicine will, or can, counteract the decrees of Providence & in all cases where a high state of civilization and cultivation has engendered disease and suffering, whereby God's natural man has become a nervous, artificial being, the Golden Medical Discovery will positively restore to him the strong, vigorous, self-asserting life, from which, almost unconsciously, he had drifted far, and perhaps hopelessly away. It is claimed, and guaranteed, if this medicine be used as prescribed, and faithfully persevered in a reasonable time, it will permanently cure liver complaint, and the various blood disorders consequent upon torpor of the liver, in all their various forms and ramifications, including bronchitis, consumption, which is scrofula of the lungs, dyspepsia, costiveness, sick-headache, skin diseases, fever and ague, malaria, and other disorders arising from poisoned or deteriorated blood.

This wonderful medicine cures all humors, from the worst scrofula to a common blotch, pimple or eruption. Erysipelas, salt rheum, fever sores, scaly or rough skin, in short, all diseases caused by bad blood, are conquered by this powerful, purifying and invigorating medicine. Great eating ulcers rapidly heal under its benign influences. Especially has it manifested its potency in curing tetter, boils, carbuncles, scrofulous sores and swellings, white swellings, goitre or thick neck, and enlarged glands. Consumption, which is scrofulous disease of the lungs, is promptly and positively arrested and cured by this sovereign and God-given remedy, if taken before the last stages are reached. For weak lungs, spitting of blood, consumptive night-sweats, and kindred affections, it is a sovereign remedy. For indigestion, dyspepsia and torpid liver, or "biliousness," Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it effects perfect and radical cures.

To all suffering from lassitude, weariness, despondency, lack of vigor or ambition, be it man, woman or child, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will speedily impart new tone, vigor and life to the whole system. The haggard face will grow round, ruddy, and beam with the expression of long lost confidence. The step will be firm and elastic, and the relieved sufferer will once more enjoy in common with fellow men that feeling of proprietorship in earth, air and being, only fully realized by those in perfect health.

The Golden Medical Discovery will not make drunkards or opium eaters; on the contrary, any unfortunate, driven by trouble, adversity or inherited appetite, to the use of insidious stimulants, will find the Discovery of great assistance in efforts to break the chains binding him to a shameful and miserable existence.

Those feeling only "out of sorts," with no predominant symptoms, and who, if asked, would find it difficult to explain their sensations, will find a sovereign remedy in the Golden Medical Discovery.

Those who are irritable, petulant, or fretful, ever seeing the gloomy side of life: who imagine "the time is out of joint;" to whom life is a heavy burden, not a blessing; who think the whole world is arrayed against them, and anticipate calamity at every turn; to all such let this message be full of encouragement and joy—Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will radically cure them, when it will be found, to their lasting benefit, that life and the world have not changed, but that disease had thrown clouds of misery and woe about them, through which all things were seen, as "through a glass darkly."

Let no sufferer be discouraged because he or she has tried other medicines without benefit. In fact, these are the cases the World's Dispensary Medical Association particularly desire to reach through their Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. When all other medicines fail let this be tried, and no one will be doomed to further disappointment.

The Golden Medical Discovery is a prescription of a physician with a wide-awake reputation and an honorable position to maintain. It is far beneath the dignity of Dr. Pierce to lend his name to any vile nostrum, or catch-penny preparation, whereby the public may be deceived. Having used his Discovery for many years in his unprecedented private practice, he is convinced it is indeed a specific in diseases mentioned. Desiring this marvelous cure shall benefit not only those with whom he comes personally in contact, but that all mankind may be embraced in his grand plan for the amelioration of human suffering, the doctor, through the World's Dispensary Medical Association, earnestly and most confidently recommends his Golden Medical Discovery to the public at large, assured the most skeptical will be thoroughly convinced of its worth by a trial of a single bottle.

In stubborn, or long-seated affections, and where the bowels are very costive, the gentle, though certain action of the Discovery, will be more rapid and satisfactory by supplementing Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets in small daily doses of one or two. These pills (the original and only genuine Little Liver Pills) are purely vegetable, sugar-coated, and very small, yet by the peculiar process used in their preparation, they possess the strength and virtue of larger and unpalatable pills. Pleasant Purgative Pellets will speedily remove all ill and disagreeable effects arising from over-eating or drinking, and are recommended as a cathartic at all times, being perfectly safe, sure and unattended by the griping pains usually experienced in the use of purgatives less carefully prepared. Promptly resorted to, these little Pellets will radically cure indigestion, biliousness and sick-headache, thus saving the patient from serious and lingering disorders. Dr. Pierce, the President of the World's Dispensary, and his faculty of twelve skilled specialists, can be consulted by letter or in person in any case of chronic disease requiring either medical or surgical treatment free of charge. For those desiring more exhaustive information than can be imparted through correspondence, the doctor has written a book, called "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, in Plain English; or, Medicine Simplified."

This work alone is a goodly harvest for an ordinary life, and stamps its author a profound scholar and a very remarkable man. The book contains nine hundred and twenty-two pages, illustrated with two hundred and eighty-six wood cuts and colored plates, and makes plain as a, b, c, anatomy, physiology, materia medica, practice of medicine, hygiene, temperaments, psychology, etc.—and answers in plain, easily-to-be-understood terms all questions that may arise within their range, especially those questions the would-be inquirer is deterred by fear, or modesty, from asking the family or other physician. That all may be enabled to acquaint themselves with matter so vital to health, happiness, and success, the price of this great work has been fixed at one dollar and fifty cents, postpaid by mail to any address, while smaller and far inferior books, purporting to cover the same ground, have sold at five dollars a copy. It being the aim of the proprietors of the Common Sense Medical Adviser to reach not only the affluent, but also those in moderate, and even straitened, circumstances, the price of the work places it within the reach of all.

AGRICULTURE.

CURE FOR HORSE PULLING AT THE HALTER.—For the benefit of such of our readers as may desire to make use of it, a method is suggested of breaking a horse of that common and very unpleasant habit of pulling at the halter, which has been thoroughly tested and found to work admirably. If you have a horse that is addicted to this habit, follow the instructions herewith given, and a complete cure will soon follow.

Get a strong, half inch cord 22 feet in length; put the center under the tail like a crouper; twist them a few times as you bring them forward over the back pass forward on each side of the body, then pass them forward through the halter below the jaw. Tie firmly to a tree, post or stall, and excite the animal by any means that will cause him to pull, until the habit is overcome. You may even whip him across the nose keenly until there is perfect submission which will not require long. Hitch in this way for a few days, or so long as there is any predisposition to pull on the halter.

CLOVER FERTILIZER.—Two or even three crops of small grain can be raised in succession to advantage on any piece of land provided clover is sown with every crop of small grain. Then a crop of clover is turned under for every crop of small grain except the first, and upon this hypothesis when a farmer wants to enrich his land or any one or more pieces, let him seed the land with small grain for two or three years in succession, always sowing clover in the spring and ploughing in the fall, and then if he chooses to put the land in corn he can do so for one, or even two seasons, and then put it back in small grain and clover. After a field has had clover sown in it for six or eight seasons it will seed itself, and after every crop of small grain a crop of clover will spring up from the seed in the ground exposed to the action of elements by ploughing for the crop of small grain. Another fact well known is that a crop of wheat grown on fallow ground is greater and the grain larger than that grown on corn ground.

THE Gardener's Monthly gives in substance the following good practical directions for pruning ornamental shrubs on the approach of spring; "Indiscriminate cutting back will not answer the desired purpose. Distinction must be made between slow and vigorous growers, and between those which bear flowers on old wood and those which flower on new growth. Such as grow to strong to flower well should be lightly pruned, and in the same individual the weakest shoots should be cut in more severely than the stronger ones. Lilacs and the Philadelphus bear flowers on the wood of last year, and to prune them much now destroys the flowers, while the altheas and others which flower on the young wood cannot be too severely cut in."

THE best heat for the hot bed is fresh horse dung from a stable where some ten or more horses are kept, so that a load of it can be taken out hot and fresh before it has had time to burn by excessive heating. Such manure can not always be had when wanted, a good substitute may be made by mixing forest leaves in alternate layers with common cow stable dung, in a sheltered place, until a pile of a cord or two is obtained; if the weather should be cold, and the material partly frozen when it is piled, it will be necessary to pour a few bucketfuls of boiling water upon the heap to start fermentation: when the pile is well heated cart it as quickly as possible to the bed, so as to check fermentation as little as possible.

PLANT-GROWING.—The more freely a plant is growing the more water will it require; and the more it grows the more sun and light will it need. In all cases those which seem to grow the fastest should be placed nearest the light. The position for room plants is the south east. They seem like animals in their affection for the morning sun

DOMESTIC.

TO MAKE FRENCH ROLLS.—After the dough has risen it may be made into many ways. By taking off a part and beating up an egg, and working it in with a little butter, you may have nice French rolls; just use flour enough to handle them well, dip your hand in the flour, and flour round the sides to make them break apart nicely; make off quickly, put close together and allow no room for them, or any other rolls, to run and get out of shape. When nearly done, wipe the tops over with milk without taking them from the stove. Take a piece of dough the size of a loaf, beat two eggs light, half cup of milk, small spoonful of butter, and with the hand work altogether in a stiff batter; grease a pan, (a round one is best), pour in an inch and a half thick, and bake in a moderate oven till well done; split and butter; send to table hot. It should rise twice its original thickness. By adding a little more of the above ingredients, with a cup of sugar, and giving it a second rise before baking, you have a very good plain cake, especially for children.

MAKING HAIR GROW.—If the head be perfectly bald, nothing will ever cause the hair to grow again. If the scalp be glossy, and no small hairs are discernible, the roots or follicles are dead; and you might as well cause an arm which has been amputated to grow again. However, if small hairs are to be seen, brush well, and bathe the bald spot three or four times a week with cold soft water:—Carbonate of ammonia, one drachm; tincture of cantharides, four drachms; bay rum, four ozs.; castor oil, two ozs. Some elderly people often desire to keep their hair from turning gray. The following dye will effect this:—Take the hulls of butternuts, say about four ounces, and infuse in a quart of water. Then add half an ounce of copperas. Apply with a soft brush every second or third day. This preparation is harmless, and I have reasons for believing so, has never been published. It is far better than those dyes made of nitrate of silver.

FRENCH BREAD.—As a rule the French bread is always sweet and good, and two things contribute in a great degree to this—that is, the manner and form of baking. They never make a thick loaf; no matter what the size or shape, it is always thin; and more than two-thirds crust. They bake their bread until it is perfectly cooked. The loaves being so thin, the heat strikes through them very soon after they are placed in the oven; hence all the fermentation is stopped, while in the case of large loaves fermentation continues to go on after the bread has been in the oven for some time, and of course much of the sweetness is lost. Then, in baking so long, and having so much crust, there is a peculiar sweetness given which can be attained in no other way.

POTATOES—HOW TO COOK.—Potatoes should be boiled in a sauce-pan half full of water, boiling, and not in one filled with hot water. Steam is thus engendered, and the potatoes are steamed instead of boiled, whereby the poisonous element which the potato has in common with their solanee is neutralized. The lid of the saucepan should fit closely. When the potatoes are boiled the steam should evaporate before they are eaten. They should not be fried in butter as the poisonous matter is thus retained, to the serious prejudice of the stomach. William Cobbett was wont to describe the potato as the "accursed root," but as it still constitutes the chief food for laborers, it should be cooked properly.

TO MAKE CAULIFLOWER PICKLES.—Cut the whitest, closest bunches into small clusters. Plunge into scalding brine, and boil three minutes. Take them out, lay upon a cloth, sprinkle with salt thickly, and when dry brush this off. Cover with cold vinegar for two days, setting the jar in the sun. Then pack carefully in glass or stoneware jars, and scald with vinegar seasoned thus: To one gallon allow a cup of white sugar, a dozen blades of mace, a tablespoonful of celery seed, two dozen white pepper corns, some bits of red pepper pods, a tablespoonful of coriander seed, and the same of whole mustard. Boil five minutes. Repeat the scalding once a week for three weeks. Tie up:

AN ERROR IN WINDOW GARDENING.—A very common error in window gardening is that of attempting too much. Too many plants are crowded into the little space at command, so that it is impossible to give each the air and light it should have. Again plants of too diverse character are brought together. It is no uncommon thing to see tropical plants and those from the temperate zone, if not Alpine plants, all crowded into the same window, and subjected to the same temperature and treatment. Better far to have one healthy well grown plant, that will yield its flowers in perfection, than a dozen sickly, feeble, wretched plants, that have no beauty either of leaf or blossom.

TO TAKE RUST OUT OF STEEL.—Place the article in a bowl containing kerosene oil, or wrap the steel up in a soft cloth well saturated with kerosene, let it remain twenty-four hours or longer, then scour the rusty spots with brick dust. If badly rusted use salt wet with hot vinegar; after scouring rinse every particle of brick dust or salt off with boiling hot water; dry thoroughly, then polish off with a clean flannel cloth and a little sweet oil.

THANKSGIVING FRUIT CAKE.—One pound brown sugar, one pound browned flour, three pounds of seedless raisins, two pounds currants, one pound citron, three-fourths pound butter, one cup molasses, two teaspoons mace, two of cinnamon, one of cloves, one of black pepper, one nutmeg, one teaspoon soda, twelve eggs, one-half cup current jelly melted in one-half cup hot water. This cake will keep for years.

HOW TO USE EGGS.—Eggs that are to be used in cake should be put into cold water in summer while you are making your preparations, until ready to use them. Then break each one separately into a cup, to see if it is good; but by breaking all into the dish you beat them in, you risk the whole by one egg. If good, turn it into the dish, and proceed the same way with the others.

TO PREVENT HOLLOW PICKLES.—If you will cut a short slit in the blow end of your cucumbers before you put them in the molasses and water, I think you will not find so many hollow pickles. The s it allows the gas to escape which forms so rapidly.

HUMOROUS.

SINCE the failure of two or three female bankers and brokers in the East, it seems impossible for that sex to secure the confidence of Western women who have pin money laid aside. A woman who claimed to have heavy financial backing, and who was in the confidence of all the great capitalists and speculators, recently opened a shop in Toledo and offered to receive deposits and pay interest at the rate of four per cent. per month. Her first customer was her last. A hatchet-faced old maid walked in on her one morning with a five dollar bill and inquired:

"Are you the woman who will pay four per cent. per month on deposits?"

"Yes."

"Only four!"

"Just four."

"That's all."

"Well, I did think if you would give eighty per cent. and secure me with a diamond ring or a gold watch I'd deposit this five dollars, but you seem so stingy and independent that I won't leave it."

By contracting a severe Cough and Cold, I was compelled to give up my daily work and keep to the house. A neighbor recommended me to try a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup; it was procured and used; to my astonishment relief was instantaneous.

MUGGINS is near-sighted—very near-sighted—and Brown had often told him that he could not see two feet ahead of him; but since he loaned him fifty dollars he has had cause to change his mind. Brown was at an optician's, a few days ago, selecting a pair of opera glasses, and went into the street to test them. In looking up the street he discovered Muggins ten blocks away trying to hide behind a lamp-post; and, as he gazed upon him, Muggins turned his pockets inside out to convince him that he had nothing in them. Brown does not believe in near-sightedness any more.

Between disease and health is often brief and fatal. It i better to be provided with cheap and simple remedies for such common disorders as coughs, colds, etc., than to run the risk of contracting a fatal disease through neglect. Dr. Wm. It has been known and used for many years in America, and it is no exaggeration to say that it is the best remedy in the world for Coughs, etc. Ask for Dr. Wm. SOMEBODY'S WAITING FOR ME.

When the sunlight slowly fading
Proclaims the dying day,
And across the fields and meadows
I homeward take my way.
Just down the turn in the pathway,
'Neath the shade of that tall oak tree,
There's Somebody, mild and gentle,
Who watches and waits for me.

She stands in the waning sunshine,
With the lovelight in her eye,
And her wind-swung tresses floating
O'er a cheek of crimson dye.
With a smile of joyous welcome,
To meet me she gayly trips,
And a tender kiss awaits me
From Somebody's loving lips.

I name not her age or station,
If humble or proud she be;
Aut of all the Heaven-given treasures,
The dearest and best is she.
Too kind for a thought of evil,
E'er willing my cares to share,
The Queen of my heart's deep centre
Is she who is waiting there.

So, whatever of ill befall me
Through the weary and tedious day,
As the evening shadows lengthen,
And I homeward take my way,
My step and my heart grow lighter
As I near to that old oak tree.
For I know my darling's watching
And waiting to welcome me.

MY LADY COQUET.

"Going abroad, Fred?" Why, what does that mean? When I last saw you such an idea was furthest from your thoughts, and here you give me twenty-four hours' notice of your departure on an indefinite tour."

And the speaker, a tall, splendid-looking man, opened his dark eyes in unfeigned wonder as they rested on the face of his friend.

"I've hardly given myself more than twenty-four hour's notice, Max. Of course it's a sudden notion, but to you, the oldest and best friend I have in the world, I may as well own the truth, though you need imagine it no secret. A very large portion of the fashionable world thoroughly understands my motives. I'm hard hit, Max, and I've got to go away. I want to feel an ocean rolls between me and the woman who has jilted me."

"Jilted you?"

"Yes, jilted me. It's not a pretty word, but I'm not in a frame of mind to look through the dictionary for another that means the same thing. I loved Nora Fielding with a love you cannot even dimly comprehend—you, who have lived for more than thirty years unmoved by any woman's beauty, unthrilled by any woman's voice. I had some reason, God knows, for deeming my love returned. She smiled on me, as only soulless women can smile; she seemed glad when I came, sorry when I left her. Yet when, moved to madness, I put my love into words, she smiled still, and told me that my love was folly. Of course, I should in that moment have scorned, despised her. So I did, perhaps; but it made my love none the less, my suffering no whit the easier. I can't describe her to you, Max. I think she might entrap you in her meshes."

"A coquet entrap me? No, no, my boy! Forewarned, forearmed. Suppose we have a little trial of skill—I and this slayer of men's hearts. You've left her at the beach, have you not? I was just contemplating a little trip seaward. What do you say, old fellow? Suppose you put your revenge in my hands?"

"You may make the attempt, Max, right willingly; but don't let the flame scorch you, in breasting it for my sake. Make her suffer, but see to it that she entails no pain on you."

"You forget, my boy, that you have bequeathed to me your scorn, but carry your love with you. Bury it at sea, Fred, and start fresh on the other side. I'll take care of my Lady Coquet on this side."

The next afternoon, standing on the pier, Max Elliott watched disappear down the bay the brave ship on which Fred Ronalds was a passenger for the Old World—a self-made exile for a woman's sake.

An honest bitterness welled up in Max Elliot's heart as he turned away. Better than he had ever loved a woman, he had loved this man, who had been the plaything of a woman's idle hour, who had had his honest love tossed back to him as though it were the foam upon a wave, and who had been driven to other lands to find the cure of absence perchance forgetfulness.

When his brougham stopped in front of his club, he glanced at his watch. It was a sultry afternoon in July. The city was growing unendurable, and there would be barely time to hastily pack a valise and catch the 6 o'clock boat which would transport him to cool breezes, the promise of a sea-bath, and —his revenge!

Such a thought was worthy to be acted upon, therefore, the next morning, Max Elliot's name appeared upon the Ocean House register, to be greeted by an approving chorus of welcome from the dear five hundred friends already gathered there.

As by natural instinct, he found his way to Mrs. Redfern's side. Great friends as he and George Redfern were, he and George Redfern's wife were better.

"What has brought you here?" she asked, with a little quizzical smile.

"Is not your presence a sufficient magnet for a less attractive place?" he answered, gallantly.

She shook her head.

"Of course; but I've been moping here for a fortnight, and have sent you numberless messages by George, all of which you have repudiated. You don't deserve that I should offer you any kindness in return, and I've a great mind not to present you to Nora Fielding to-day. Ah, you see how easily I have guessed your secret. I saw Fred Ronald's name, this morning, in the list of passengers on the Scythia. Of course he told you how badly he was cut up. It was a great shame, and I told Nora so frankly, but the girl is so pretty and so clever that I suppose she really is not wholly to blame because men choose to detach their scalps, hang them at their belt, and then go about the world moaning over their loss."

"Trust a woman to defend a woman, when jealousy is not possible to either," answered Max. "For my part, I regard Miss Fielding as utterly heartless and a flirt."

"Judge not, that ye be not judged," replied the pretty little matron. "Yes, that is she," she added, noting how the man's eyes suddenly dillated, as a tall, slender figure, draped in close-clinging white swept out of the open door on to the piazza. "There's no woman like her here. Of course she is conscious of her power, and uses it. But look in her eyes, Max, and tell me, if you dare, that Nora Fielding had no heart. No man has ever touched it, that is all."

"The idea of a woman's eyes betokening soul," was the cynical rejoinder.

But there was no time for more, for he and Mrs. Redfern had approached close to where the girl stood, and ere either of them was aware of her intention, they had been formally presented.

He would carry on no slow warfare, determined Max; and in that moment he began the campaign.

"Beware, Nora!" whispered Mrs. Redfern, that evening, in the little, shell-tinted ear. "He is Fred Ronald's dearest friend, and be sure he knows all regarding that little episode there is to know."

But the only answer the girl vouchsafed this friendly piece of advice was a shrug of the white shoulders, gleaming through the black lace of her gown.

A fortnight passed, and the hotel gossips again found food in Miss Fielding's latest conquest, for, by this time, so Max Eliot was deemed.

He understood now the infatuation which had possessed his friend, not by experience—for he told himself that each day he learned to scorn this woman more—but listening to the low, musical inflections of her voice, and looking into her eyes, which sometimes softened to a marvelous softness, he acknowledged her acting perfect.

Only to him who knew it to be acting was there involved no danger. But was he, intrenched in his own fortress, making the girl feel? Was he gaining the power to make her suffer? Once his, he would employ it ruthlessly, but first he must know that he possessed it. Sometimes he turned in a moment from warmth into coldness. She made no comment on his change of mood. Sometimes he feigned indifference to her presence—indifferent still, when the other moths, kept in abeyance by his superior stronghold, fluttered round the candle; but, save by a little, tired look, he saw from his covert and distant observation in her eyes, she welcomed his return to her, all unquestioning his absence. He found himself growing irritated, almost angry.

"Will you drive with me this afternoon?" she asked me, one morning.

"Yes," he answered.

And at 5 o'clock, the perfect little trap stood waiting its mistress' occupancy—the horses pawing impatiently, while the groom held their heads, and h elonging near, waiting Miss Fielding's advent.

Fifteen, twenty minutes passed, and she did not come. The half-hour had struck before, with a hasty apology for her delay, she took her seat, and gathering up the reins in her little gloved hand, gave the ponies an impatient touch of the whip, which made the groom's scramble for his place behind almost a Waterloo.

Max, quickly observing her, noted that her face was unusually pale, and although there was no redness about her eyes, he could have fancied there had been recent tears there. However, she talked merrily and brightly, as was her wont, and soon the sea air brought back the color to her cheek, and chased the latent look of sadness from her eyes.

"What a lovely sky," she exclaimed, as a sudden turn in the road brought them in full view of sky and ocean, and at that moment the sunset gun boomed from the fort.

The horses made a sharp swerve. The road was very narrow, with large boulders on either side. Almost before anyone could realize how or when it was done, the wheel of the phaeton had struck one of these, and the girl, totally unprepared to resist the shock, was thrown heavily to the ground. Almost as rapidly, Max was beside her.

For the instant he thought her dead. Her head had struck a small stone, and a tiny stream of blood was trickling from her temple, making her pallor more ghastly. The thought that she might be dead came to him with a sickening awfulness. Death and this bright, beautiful being seemed so wide asunder; and yet in a moment, perhaps, they had been united; but almost with the dreadful fear came its relief.

She opened the lovely eyes, and the white lips quivered, while she made a feeble motion to rise. He drew a brandy-flask from his pocket, and made her drink; then, when she had grown a little stronger, he lifted her into the carriage, and supporting her with one arm, drove slowly home.

As they approached the hotel, she called strength and will into action, and gaining the first entrance, escaped with but little assistance into the house. By mutual consent they made no mention of the accident.

For a day or two she was confined to her room; but when she reappeared, save that she was a trifle paler, she had never before looked more lovely.

"I thank you so much, Mr. Elliot, for your kind care of me," she said, as they stood together on the moonlit piazza.

"Do not mention it," he answered, coldly.

These past three days had been filled to him with a strange experience. His revenge had grown distasteful to him, he told himself. It could not mend Fred's broken heart, and his own could only harbor scorn.

The next week he saw but little of Miss Fielding. He avoided her wherever he could do so, although he noted that she was growing wan and pale.

"What are you doing, Max Elliot?" asked Mrs. Redfern, one morning, as she came upon him seated by an open window of the long drawing-room. "I told you once that Nora Fielding's fault lay not in her non-possession of a heart, but that no man had touched it. I could not say that to-day. Have you no scruples, no remorse?"

"None. If what you tell me be true, I should only exult. What could I feel but scorn for a woman who could lead a man on to wrecking his life at her feet? But you need have no fear. Miss Fielding is a capital actress, that is all.

"Mark what I say—you will recall those words," prophesied the little matron, sweeping angrily away.

"Never!" mentally ejaculated the man, vaulting through the low window to the piazza with a sudden feeling that the house stifled him, but not prepared to find himself face to face with Miss Fielding's self.

She had been sitting with an open book disregarded in her lap, her eyes gazing seaward, and she had heard of necessity every syllable which had been uttered.

"Yes, I have heard all," she said, in reply to his questioning look. "You came here to revenge your friend, Mr. Elliot. Well, your revenge shall be complete. You say he suffered. So you have made me suffer. Why should I seek to conceal what is acutest pain to confess? Was it my fault that I could not love Fred Ronalds? Was it my fault that his own love made him blind? If so, I have been punished, and my punishment is your reward. To it I add the humiliation of this avowal."

Never had she looked more lovely, never more proud, than when she stepped from the throne to the level of suffering womanhood. His scorn, his triumph—where were they? Swept away as by a mighty flood, and revealing the naked truth, of all which yet might be, of all which so nearly he had lost.

Before she had divined his purpose, he had gathered her two hands in his strong grasp.

"Nora! My darling, forgive me!" he murmured. "I love you, and my love has made me blind indeed! Oh, my darling, I came to mock, and I stayed to worship! I give up my revenge to you. Will you, more generous than I have been, refuse to take it?"

"Not that!" she answered; and now the bright eyes were filled with dimning tears. "But in taking it, it is to give in return my love, my heart, my life! Ah, Max," she whispered, softly, a little later, "is it always the woman's fault that men say she has no soul? Shall we expose our one priceless jewell to the gaze of every curious by-passer on life's journey?"

And he, with the jewel forever his, safe-locked in his stronghold, is fain to admit her words are true, even while he thanks God its radiance has never dazzled another's eyes—not even those of his dearest friend.

Sunflowers.

That the sunflower follows the sun in its westward journey is well known, but when does it turn its face back again to the east to greet the morning sun? Mr. C. A. White, of Washington, in a letter, relates an incident which throws some light upon the subject. One evening, he says, during a short stay at a village in Colorado in the summer of 1881, I took a walk along the banks of a long irrigating ditch just as the sun was setting. The wild variety of Helianthus annus, Lin. (H. lenticularis, Douglass) grew abundantly there, and I observed that the broad face of all the flowers were, as is usual in the clear sunset, turned to the west. Returning by the same path less than an hour afterward, and immediately after the daylight was gone, I found, to my surprise, that much the greater part of those flowers had already turned their faces to the east in anticipation, as it were, of the sun's rising. They had in that short time retraced the semi-circle, in the traveresing of which with the sun they had spent the whole day. Both the day and night were cloudless, and apparently no unusual conditions existed that might have exceptionally affected the movements of the flowers.

I doubt not, adds Mr. White, that many persons like myself have supposed that sunflowers remain all night with their faces to the west, as they are when the sunlight leaves them, and until they are constrained by the light of the rising sun, to turn to the east again. It is not my purpose to offer any explanation of the cause of the phenomenon here recorded, but it seems to me improbable that it could have been an exceptional instance; and I could only regret that no opportunity has since occurred to me to repeat the observation.

Recreation for the Million.

It is not given to every one to cross the ocean and make the tour of Europe; to revel in the halls of dazzling light of New port or Saratoga; to repair to the sea-side or the mountain top, and there for five dollars a day to drink in the life-giving air. The spirit may be willing but the means are wanting. And yet the same need for recreation exists in the life of those of moderate means as in those of the rich. This larger class, however, will be glad to know that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company proposes to continue during the season of 1883 its popular daily excursions between Jersey City and Newburgh, a route furnishing many objects of interest, and an infinite variety of scenery. The magnificent steamer, Richard Stockton, under the command of Captain Lawrence F. Frazee, will leave the Pennsylvania Railroad docks, Jersey City, every morning at 9 a. m., (excepting Thursday at 9:30 a. m.) and arrive at Jersey City on the return trip about 6:30 p. m. This steamer is substantially built, fully equipped and with a capacity for 2500 passengers. On the route such points of interest as Weehawken, Ft. Lee, Yonkers, the Palisades, Tarrytown, Sing Sing, Sleepy Hollow, Stony Point, West Point, Iona Island and Newburgh, with a privilege of remaining at the three last named for a time varying from one to two hours. The tickets are put at very reasonable rates, and we know of no way in which a day can be so pleasantly spent, with a trifling expense as on one of these trips up the Hudson on the Stockton.

Dr. Siemens has expressed the opinion that in the near future steel will take the place of wood and iron in the construction of buildings of all kinds, where it can be used. He claims that steel is without a rival where strength and magnitude are both required, besides giving more security than wood, and costing less.

AMinnesota Deer Hunter.

A Western Editor writes while hunting in the pineries of Minnesota I once met an old half-breed who taught me more in a few days than I ever learned before or since. It was when I compared my scanty superficial knowledge with his sound practical lore that I discovered the lamentable extent of my ignorance and how much I had to learn. This old veteran was about fifty years of age, and he had hunted deer for more than thirty-five years, making it a specialty. It can be readily understood that his advice was worth taking, and I am only sorry I did not prolong my hunt with him, as every deer brought out new stratagems, and every move was checkmated by this unerring, steady old Nimrod. He was a regular hound, and could find more game than three ordinary hunters; but, what an anomaly! he could not shoot. Actually, if a deer moved, or even wagged his ears, the old fellow would quietly wait till he was stock still, and then blaze away. Sometimes he would kill, but that was by no means a foregone conclusion; and as he would insist on using a single barrel muzzle-loading rifle, of course the deer was off before he could "do it some more," To miss with him seemed rather a matter to be expected than one to get mad about, so, nothing daunted he would reload his rifle, sit on a log, light his pipe, soliloquize and ascribe reasons for his maladroitness, and make wise resolutions for the future, and having put in about half an hour, go ahead, take up the track of the doomed deer, and eight times out of ten get another shot, with varying results, inside of an hour.

How he did it I could never tell! all that I know is that I have followed him for days from morn till dusk, and have seen him shoot three or four times at the same deer in a day, and generally bag him in the long run. When we became better acquainted, it was mutually agreed and understood that he would do the finding and I the shooting; and by that means we generally had the pleasure of hanging up a deer or two a day without his firing a shot. At first I ascribed his finding the deer merely to good luck, but I soon got over that. He would follow a fresh track a short distance, and without giving any reason, and guided by an unerring judgment, which was simply supernatural, would leave it or strike out at right angles and shortly come upon the same track or else point out the deer, perhaps fifty or one hundred yards away, sniffing and watching his back track, while his foot were either on his flank or rear. On such an occasion it was merely a matter of target shooting with me and not interesting, being entirely too mechanical, so that I frequently purposely made a noise to start the unsuspecting stag es give him a chance.

This conduct on my part was sure to be followed by a blessing from the veteran, who recognized no rules or laws governing such shots, and as I seldom missed, it was difficult to make him perceive the difference, as in any case the deer was "venison." One day I missed clear and clean, and as the doe kept out of my sight I could not shoot again. The old man, in a fit of rage at my blundering in having made the deer run before I fired at him, threw up his rifle and, without taking any aim, let fly. Down came the doe, all in a heap, shot through the neck, and dead as a nail. The funny part is that to this day the old fellow thinks I did the killing; whereas I only fired one shot and that was away high.

This man's antipathy to a breech loader amounted to actual hatred, and it was only after repeatedly showing him its advantages that he so far condescended as to allow me to hunt with him while carrying my repeater. I shall never forget the queer expression on his tough, weather beaten countenance when at last I convinced him of the superiority of the repeating rifle.

Home of the the Blue Crane.

Mr. Dunlap has returned from a hunting expedition in Spencer Co,, Ky. The only trophy he brought back with him was a gigantic blue crane, which measured five feet from tip to tip, and was exactly six feet in height. Mr. Dunlap tells a very curious story of a resort of these cranes. About two miles from Taylorsville is an island in Sayre's creek whose area is perhaps ten acres. The island is a favorite haunt of these peculiar birds, who annually resort there for the purpose of rearing their young. Notwithstanding the fact that the crane is a wading bird it builds it nest in the tallest tree it can find. The island is not cleared up, but is covered with gigantic sycamores towering eighty or ninety feet in height and the loftiest of these are selected by them for their nests. One of the trees has twenty-eight nests upon its topmost branches and another has twelve. The nests are rude, ugly structures, built in a slovenly manner of sticks, leaves and twigs, and are guarded jealously by the birds throughout the breeding season.

The cranes have been in the habit of resorting to this island for a term of years beyond the memory of the oldest inhabitant. Here they have been left undisturbed, until it has become a royal domain on which nothing else of the feathered tribe dare intrude. The silence of centuries broods over the primeval forest, unbroken save by the flapping of their wings, or it may be the chance shot of the wandering sportsman. The stream four miles around is frequented by flocks of the birds who here seem to lose, at least for a time, their solitary instincts, and become sociable and gregarious. They leave annually about the 1st of September, returning the 1st of April, and have been doing so for years and years. Their number upon the island is almost incredible, and old citizens of that country say it must be fully 10,000, perhaps much more.

A Wandering Jew.

For a number of years past the people in the southwestern portion of Connecticut have been mystified by a man, clothed in tattered leather, who appears at regular intervals, something like Scott's "Old Mortality," and passes on without divulging his origin or destination. Our Orange correspondent writes as follows: "That strange character, the 'Leather Man,' takes in the towns of Woodbridge and Orange in the regular course of his travels, and was last seen passing through here March 9. He has been over the same route for many years, appearing regularly after an absence of about six weeks, always going south in the direction of Bridgeport. When in this vicinity he spends the night in an old barn standing alone by the roadside. It has been his habit since the beginning of his travels through this region to stop for breakfast at the house of the writer, who had become accustomed to his regular comings as to recognise his peculiar rap on the door, even when it was not known that he was near. Several times attempts to enter into conversation with him were made, but with indifferent success, and on one occasion when we told him that 'they had been writing about him in the newspapers, the information did not seem to interest him very much. However, since we have been the owner of a large dog who sometimes greets his appearance with a lusty bark, he no longer stops at our door, but coolly trudges by on the other side, without even deigning a glance. Notwithstanding the little interest he evinces in the world and its goings on he has been seen seated by the roadside with a newspaper in his hands, apparently deeply absorbed in its contents, and at another time near a brook, washing some article of—we will not say underclothing, for that would spoil the tradition, but something that closely resembled it. Without his wonderful suit of leather he would be an object of curiosity, appearing as he does at regular intervals and always traveling in one direction. Whatever his aim or purpose, he trudges along as if he had the most important business in the world to perform, and if it was a matter of life and death that he should reach a certain destination at an appointed time. This strange creature's life in its unbroken silence and stated goings and comings closely resembles that of the veritable 'Wandering Jew.'"

Pulling his Mustache.

"There he sleeps as peacefully as an infant," said an old man pointing to the sleeping figure of a slender-built, heavy-mustached young man across the aisle of the train, "and no doubt he dreams of the innocent days of childhood, before he had fallen into the depths of crime."

"What's the matter with him? Who is he?" asked several passengers excitedly, eying the sleeper with suspicion.

"He sleeps as calmly," continued the old man abstractedly to himself, "as though he had never murdered his partner, forged his name to a check for $50,000 and skipped to Mexico. He thinks, probably, that no man can penetrate his disguise, but I should know him in the dark with a mask on. Ah, Miles Gashwell, now I can confront you with proofs of your villainy!"

Quite a crowd had collected around the two by this time. "The idea," continued the old man, turning to the awe-struck bystanders," of his trying to disguise himself by a false moustache and wig. One of you fellows jerk that moustache off and see how it changes his expression."

Nobody seemed disposed to unmask the villain until a strapping six-footer pushed his way into the midst of the group, and taking the mustache by both ends, gave it a yank that fairly lifted the slender young man to his feet. The latter let off a yell that would have paralyzed a Comanche Indian and struck out wildly in the air with his fists.

"Great Scott!" he shrieked, "are you trying to jerk the top of my head off? Let go of that, will you," and he kicked the six-footer vigorously in the pit of the stomach. "What the deuce do you want of me, anyway?"

"Why, we thought you had on a false mustache," ventured one of the crowd timidly. "This old man said so."

They all turned around to see what the old man would say, but he didn't say. He had gotten off when the train slowed up at the last crossing.

What is the use of Snakes?

Persons who dislike snakes continually ask, "What is the use of them?" That they are not without a use, will, I hope, appear in the course of this note, were it necessary to preach that all things have their use. But in one habit that offended Lord Bacon, namely of "going on their belly," lies one of their greatest uses, because that, together with their internal formation, and external covering, enables them to penetrate where no larger carnivorous animal could venture, into dark and noisome morasses, bog jungles, swamps among the tangled vegetation of the tropics, where swarms of the lesser reptiles, on which so many of them feed, would otherwise out-balance the harmony of nature, die, and produce pestilence.

Wondrously and exquisitely constructed for their habitat, they are able to exist where the higher animals could not; and while they help to clear those inaccessible places of the lesser vermin, they themselves supply food for a number of the smaller mammalia, which, with many carnivorous birds, devour vast numbers of young snakes. The hedgehog, weasel, ichneumon, rat, peccary, badger, hog, goat, and an immense number of birds, keep snakes within due limits, while the latter perform their part among the grain-devouring and herbivorous lesser creatures. Thus beautifully is the balance of Nature maintained.

Rare fun in Court.

The present Judge Hutchins, of the Superior Court of the northeastern judicial circuit of Georgia is the son of Nathaniel Hutchins, so well known by many of the older citizens of Elbert as one of the cleverest men and ablest jurists in Georgia. He was the predecessor of his son on the same bench now occupied by Colonel Hutchins, of Gwinnett, and was popularly known all through the upper portion of the State. During the progress of the Superior Court at Carnesville last week this amusing incident occurred, which was related to a New South scribe by Senator Phil Davis: Colonel Thurmond, of Athens, an attorney, had an instrument of writing in court, the validity of which needed to be proven and which could only be done by the owner of the signature found thereon swearing to the same. The witness was called and an old gray-haired man, who had lived over his three score and ten, took the stand and Colonel Thurmond handed him the paper and asked:

"Is that your signature, sir?"

The old gentleman looked at the paper closely, and said;

"Wa'al, I'll tell yer, Ize gitting old, and my eyesight are not so good as it wunst was, but if somebody will loan me a pair of specks, praps I kin cipher it out."

A pair of glasses were furnished him, and he scrutinizingly gazed at the document again.

"Well?" said the lawyer.

"Very well," Colonel Thurmond said again, waiting for the witness to decide.

"Wa'al," said the old man, "that ar is my fist."

"You can come down, sir," said the lawyer.

But instead of "coming down," the old man turned his eyes on the Court, and after gazing at him for some time, he said:

"Jedge, is you old man Nath Hutchin's boy?"

"He was my father," answered the Court.

"Wa'al, give me yer hand, Jedge, kaze I loved yer daddy, and I is awful glad to see his boy followin, in his foot marks."

The Court gave the old man his hand, and after shaking it heartily, the witness stepped from the stand and started out of the court room. When he had gotten out of the bar, and was about midway the hall, he turned abruptly about, and said in rather a loud tone of voice:

"Here—here's them ar specks, if any of youns wants 'em."

The court room was in an uproar of laughter, but the old man never smiled, as he returned the glasses and left the house.

The Bunko Game.

A man who thinks that, without any familiarity with the swindle that suddenly confronts him, he can cope with its operators who have devoted much study and practice to perfecting it, foolishly overrates his own shrewdness. It struck me, for instance, that if I should be taken into a bunko den, and the gamblers should accept my check for the amount of my loss, I would not be at all concerned about it, because I could go straight to the bank and stop payment. When I said this to a detective, he replied, "You wouldn't do any such thing." Why not? Simply because that important point in the swindle has been looked after by the bunko men. I have never seen this feature of their work described in print, and you may care to use it. When the rascals get a subject who has a bank account, and lead him into making a check, they know very well that he will lose no time in stopping payment on it, unless they manage by some clever device to prevent him. This is the way they do it: A newspaper lies folded on the table, as though carelessly thrown down. When the check has been made out and signed, the operator who receives it places it between the folds of the paper, and in that way blots it. Then he seems to take it out and hold it up before his eyes to examine it, but the real check has been left concealed in the paper, and he has taken out a blank one, previously placed there. At this instant the stool pigeon, who is still figuring as the innocent friend of the victim, exclaims, "This is a swindle, and we won't stand it." He snatches the sham check from his confederate's hand, tears it into very small bits and scatters them on the floor. "Now let us go out," he says. There is a pretence of barring the way, but he and the victim are soon in the street —the latter profuse in his thanks for having been rescued. Of course, he doesn't go near the bank to stop payment on the check which he believes to have been destroyed, for he is not anxious to expose his verdancy needlessly, and the swindlers thus gain time to go and get it cashed.

The End of a Hermit's Career.

The remains of Jesse E. Williams, the "hermit of Chester county, Pa.," has been recently interred in Philadelphia. He lived in a small shanty on land known as "The Barrens," in West Nottingham township, in the county whose title was a part of his surname. He was generally thought demented, but it is known that years ago he was one of Philadelphia's most prosperous and honored merchants. He is said to have often entertained Henry Clay, Daniel Webster and other eminent men of their time at a sumptuous home. He formerly owned a farm near Conshocken, but he preferred politics to business and failed financially. With his fortune went his friends; his wife became divorced from him and he was deserted by his children. For years he wandered over the State and finally settled on the spot where he died, which is on the edge of a large pine forest. Poultry was his hobby and all he cared for in life was an improved breed of chickens, about which, it is said, he at one time or other wrote a book.

The Republican.

SATURDAY, June 16, 1883.

Mr. Randall and the Speakership

"When Mr. Randall led the fight against the Force bill, he rendered a service to the whole country, in the cause of constitutional liberty, that dwarfs and overshadows everything else. His election to the Speakership would be a fitting return for that service. It does not lie in the mouths of Southern men to depreciate that service."

This is the sentiment of the Jacksonville Republican from which the above is taken. Mr. Randall, it is true, rendered an invaluable service to the South particularly as the leader of the successful opposition to the infamous Force bill; and no Democrat should or would pluck from his brow a single laurel that he so worthily wears. He has been elevated to the Speakership two or three times by the aid of Southern Democrats, but times have changed and a different and important issue is to be met in which the South, and the whole country indeed, is vitally interested. Mr. Randall's pronounced views in regard to the tariff and the questions that grow out of it, are wholly irreconcilable with those that should be entertained by the incumbent of the highest office of the House of Representatives during the next session of Congress. Mr. Randall's services will never be forgotten, but Democrats must look at things as they are and subordinate the claims of individuals to the interests of the country.—Montgomery Advertiser.

On a comparison of views, perhaps, there would be no difference between the Republican and the Advertiser on the tariff question. The Republican stands on the platform of the National Democratic party in that regard, and we do the Advertiser the credit of assigning it the same position. It cannot be denied that Mr. Randall occupies the same ground. His public speeches attest it. Then by what authority does the Advertiser assume to relegate Mr. Randall to the rear? Does the Advertiser believe that the Democratic party can narrow itself to a party of one idea, on that idea read all Democrats of Mr. Randall's views out of the party, and then go in and win in the next Presidential race?

The tariff question is not a new one, as the Advertiser intimates. It is older than the editor of the Advertiser. On it there is and ever will be shades of difference of opinion among members of the same party in all parties. Neither the Democratic or Republican party dare make protection for the sake of protection, or free trade in its broad sense a party shibboleth. To do this would imply the abandonment of old organizations and the creation of a new party of one idea, as was the Greenback party. The Advertiser surely does not desire the disruption and abandonment of the Democratic party on a purely economic question. That paper will not say that there there are not more vital and important questions than the tariff, upon which all Democrats are agreed. It is the mission and end of the Democratic party to resist the subversion of our Republican form of government by the Radical party. This is the chief and supreme question. The whole tendency of the Radical party is towards a strong, centralized government and imperialism in fact if not in name. For this that party struck boldly and with undisguised hand when the South was prostrate. (See White's Force Bill.) It was such Democrats as Randall who saved the country and unmasked the desperate purpose. Think you the Radical party has abandoned its purpose in this regard? No. The danger is as imminent to day as ever. The Radical party is moreover, par excellence, the party of protection and the friend of monopolies that grind the people, Mr. Randall on all occasions has declared his hostility to dangerous monopolies, and by his unswerving opposition to Radicalism in all its phases and by his adhesion to the Democratic party and his endorsement of its platforms, has placed himself squarely in favor of a tariff for revenue and against a tariff that protects the few at the expense of the many The difference between Mr. Randall and Mr. Carlisle, between one wing of the party and the other is scarcely perceptible.

Then what a spectacle does the Democratic party present, squabbling over the Speakership, a question great in itself, perhaps, but comparatively unimportant in the light of other issues, and in the squabble throwing away an opportunity of getting control of the government and of bringing it back to its ancient and safe moorings.

The assertion of the Advertiser that it will not do to elevate Mr. Randall with his views on the tariff question to the Speakership is pure assertion, supported by no good reason. Mr. Randall is a pure, Jeffersonian and Jacksonian Democrat. He is to day the most capable man in the party to lead it. He represents an important wing of the party that does not agree entirely with Mr. Carlisle, the Advertiser or the Republican on the tariff, but yet, looking beyond the present and remembering the past, the Republican prefers him to Mr. Carlisle, because he is as good a Democrat as Mr. Carlisle is, a wiser politician, a more capable leader and incomparably the best organizer in the party—and more because he has the full confidence of the party, as attested by his nomination to the speakership four times by the Democratic Congressional caucus.

By a wise course the Democracy have a fair chance to win in the next presidential election. Now, above all other times we need the safe and conservative leadership of Mr. Randall He will be elected, and we feel as confident as if it were already done, that his course will strengthen the Democratic party. As he has been fair in the past, he will be in the future. In making up the committee on Ways and Means he will be just to men of all shades of opinion on on the tariff within the party. His course will re-assure the free trade wing of the party, and his election will deprive the Radical party of the cry that the Democrats intend to ruin the industries of the country by an injudicious tariff.

Believing thus, we are for him and we want to see Southern members of Congress support him. We are for him because we believe his election will contribute to our party's success. We are for him because he was for our section when it sorely needed aid. We are moved both by patriotism and gratitude in our advocacy of him.

ANNISTON.

The editor of the Troy Messenger, who was with the party of editors who visited Anniston on their return from the recent excursion of the Association, has this to say of that thriving city:

The party left Atlanta at 8 o'clock Thursday morning by the Georgia Pacific, reaching Anniston about noon, and were escorted to the residence of Mr. Noble, one of the proprietors of the Anniston mills, where tables groaned under the weight of good things which hungry people delight in. One curious feature of this banquet was, that the spreads were of cloth as it came from the mills; the cotton was grown in the valley; it was ginned and spun and wove at the mills—home production in its entirety.

Twelve years ago the ground now known as Anniston was owned by a man named Maddox, who sold it all but a small reservation to the present company, and the improvements made since then are simply wonderful. What was then but good farming land has developed into an incipient city. The place is well laid out; the streets are macadamized with slag, the refuse of the furnace; waterworks have been established, a large well having been sunk in the valley from which it is forced to a reservoir on the hill, and led through mains to any point in the place and over the highest stack; it is lighted by the electric light, and, in fact, it is a model town throughout. The manufacturing establishments are located convenient to the railroad, and consist of one large mill, employing about 400 hands, and one blast furnace, the output of which we have no data, but it must be considerable. In addition to these a building has been put up for the manufacture of car wheels from the brown hematite ore, and which will be in operation in a few days.

Until within a few days past the proprietors secluded the place to their own use. The land had been purchased and they had made all the improvements, all for their own use. There was no waste land, consequently there was none to sell. Three miles above Anniston is Oxford, and a company has purchased the intervening space between the two places has been surveyed and plotted, and the lots will be sold by auction. The name of this new place will be Central City. Perhaps the situation can best be comprehended from the following excerpt from the Jacksonville Republican: "The rumbling of the next big "boom" comes to us from the Southern end of this county. It is said arrangements are about perfected by which large manufacturing enterprises will be set on foot on the strip of land between Oxford and Anniston, that may result in building up that whole territory and uniting the two towns practically into one big city."

The product of the Anniston mills has a wide and increasing reputation—exceeding even that of the Tallassee mills. And it would not be a bad idea for some of our people who are anxious to advance Troy's manufacturing interests to visit the place.

Speaking of Mr. Maddox, the former owner of these lands, recalls a war reminiscence. It was in 1863, and Clanton's Battery was encamped at Oxford. Some of the boys, eager for something else in the ration line than scant regulation fare, concluded that a raid on Mr. Maddox's premises might prove profitable, took buckets and sailed out in search of water. Reaching the house they called him up, and he got out in his night clothes to hold the dog, which he did by getting astride of him and holding him by the collar. One party went to the well, but another detachment broke into the dairy and carried off butter, honey, milk, etc., and quietly withdrew. The next morning the act of the despoilers was discovered, and lamentations resounded throughout the household, and of course the soldiers were charged with the robbery; but Mr. Maddox stoutly stuck to it that it was not the soldiers, as they only went to the well and he watched them while he was holding the dog.

Bidding the hospitable proprietors adieu, the Association took the train for Calera and Montgomery where the members separated, well pleased with the extensive trip they had taken.

Postmaster in Limbo.

Chattanooga Times.

News reached this city yesterday that Post office Inspector Frey had at last succeeded in capturing Robert Lee, the postmaster of Driskel, Ala., who was arrested a few days since for selling stamps at a discount and who subsequently escaped by jumping from a car near Larkinsville, Ala., Thursday night while being taken to jail in Huntsville.

After Lee escaped from the train, Inspector Frey went to Huntsville to procure men to assist him in his search for Lee. In company with W. F. Barber and A. H. Harper he returned to Larkinsville. He there learned where Lee had spent the night and that he was hiding in the mountains a few miles east of that place, intending to return to Collinsville, his home, when he had baffled his pursuers. He soon heard, however, that Inspector Frey was on his track, and knowing the latter's disposition, concluded to flee the country.

The officers pursued him about twenty-five miles, and when overtaken in a deep ravine he swore he never would be taken alive, and when the officers approached he opened fire on them. The first shot killed Inspector Frey's mule and also grazed his leg. A general firing was then commenced, in which Mr. Harper was wounded and had to retire. Lee's ammunition gave out and he finally surrended. He remarked after being recaptured that had his amunition held out he would have never surrendered, as he much preferred death to serving a long term in the Albany New York penitentiary. He is now in jail at Huntsville.

Suicide From Grief

Chattanooga Times]

Mrs. Julia Wheeler, living near Bridgport, Ala., committed suicide by hanging herself last Friday night, but the terrible deed was not discovered until Saturday evening. The cool and deliberate manner in which she prepared for self destruction, and the systematic execution of the same is sickening.

Thursday evening she went into an orchard near her house and selected a suitable tree on which to hang herself. She procured a ladder and climbed to a limb, where she carefully pruned all the branches off. She then piled the brush about the tree to prevent discovery from her house, and then went home to make her final preparations for death. Friday morning she called her children together and bade them a long and affectionate farewell, and sent them to the house of a neighbor, telling them to return Sunday. Before going they inquired of their mother if she intended leaving, but her only answer was to cover them with kisses. She made her toilet as carefully as possible, using her best clothes. She failed to procure a rope and used yarn, twisting several strings together. This she securely tied to the limb of the tree she had selected, formed a noose, and encircled her neck and sprang forward. She fell five feet and died of strangulation. Her body was not discovered until the next day. It presented a horrible appearance, being splotched with perfectly black spots, the eye balls bursted from the sockets and her tongue protruding several inches. The coroner's verdict was that the deed was caused by mental aberration. About sixteen months ago her only brother died. This distressed her greatly and she was just recovering from his death when her husband died. Since that time her health has been very delicate, and her grief so preyed on her that her mind became unbalanced. Mrs. Wheeler was about thirty years of age and wife of Rev. J. H. Wheeler, pastor of the Christian church. She was an exceedingly intelligent and agreeable lady and was universally beloved by all who knew her. She leaves 6 children to mourn her loss.

The Star-Route Case with the Jury.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The Star-Route trial virtually ended to-day with Judge Wylie's charge to the jury, and the court adjourned until 10 o clock to-morrow. Questions were asked by same of the jurors before they retired with regard to arrangments for meals, sleeping accomodations, changes of clothing, etc., are taken as indications that they do not expect to agree upon a verdict very soon. The jurors are occupying a comfortable room in the new wing of of the City Hall. Bailiffs who have charge of them were specially sworn and instructed in their duties, and every precaution has been taken by the Marshal to prevent any violation of rules regulating the conduct of jurors during their deliberations. Many sensational reports with regard to alleged "jury fixing" in the case are afloat, but they are believed to be entirely without foundation.

Beauty and the Beast.

LITTLE ROCK, June 9.—The particulars of a thrilling adventure with a panther in northwest Ark., reached here to night. Crawford Buxley, a noted hunter, killed a deer, and in conveying it to his mountain home the blood attracted a panther. Later in the evening, Mattie, the sixteen year old daughter of Buxley, while stretching the hide of the slain deer in a shed near the house, was attacked by the panther, which threw her down and fastened its claws in her body. Her screams drew her father to the spot, and after an exciting struggle, the animal was driven away. The girl was not seriously hurt.

A country merchant visited the city and purchased from a dollar store a table caster, which he took home with him, and after putting a tag on it marked $14, made a present of it to a Methodist preacher, whose church his family attended. The minister took it home, and examined the article. The next day he took the caster (with the tag attached) back to the grocery man, and said to him: "I am too poor in this world's goods to afford to display so valuable a caster on my table, and if you have no objection, I should like to return it, and take $14 worth of groceries in its stead." The merchant could do nothing but acquiesce.—Ex.

She is a beautiful woman, and Mr. Bell, falling in love with her pretty face married her, although she was deaf and dumb. It was while experimenting with an audiphone, for his wife's use, that he discovered the principles of the telephone. Bell is now worth $6,000,000. The leading portrait painter in Washington owes his success to a picture of Mrs. Bell. A portrait which he had painted and placed on exhibition attracted so much attention that the unknown artist suddenly became prominent and orders poured in upon him until he now has more orders than he can fill.

Will be paid for the apprehension and delivery to me, at Middleton, Ala., or in any jail so that I can get him, George Hendrix, colored, who I took out of jail and am his bondsman for his appearance at the Circuit Court of this county. Said George Hendrix is about 5 feet 10 inches high, complexion very black—has a scrofulous scar on the left side of his neck and has a scar across one of his eye-brows, and weighs about 160 or 165 pounds, rather slow spoken. Broad across the chest and has a very flat nose. I will pay the above reward for his apprehension and delivery to me as above or lodged in any jail, so that I can get him. The said George Hendrix wore off a cassimere coat of rather a peculiar color, and a low hat white on the outside and black under the brim, and had on striped cotton pants, and wears a No. 9 shoe.

Mrs. Hamilton, of Mobile, is again spending the summer in Jacksonville.

The peach and apple crop in this section will not be much. The fruit is faulty and falling off.

Circuit Court will commence here the first Monday in August and continue two weeks.

Mr. Jo. H. Francis of New York, has been spending several days with his father at this place.

Mr. Rosenberg, of Rome Ga., is on a week's visit to his brother-in-law Mr. Louis Sellers, of this place.

The closing exercises of Oxford College have been going on this week. We regret that business engagements prevented us from attending.

The enquiry after real e tate in Jacksonville is quite spirited. Our people must not make the mistake of asking too high for vacant lots. Encourage building.

Mr. Charles Greer, of Lafayette, Alabama, is visiting relatives in Jacksonville. He was formerly connected with the press of Alabama, but is now engaged in other business in Lafayette.

The patent brigade will soon start out from Jacksonville Annually these young men go out through the States from Virginia to Texas and realize handsomely They represent some very excellent patents.

Mrs. Wilson, mother of Mrs George Wilson, of this place, died Wednesday. She was an old lady, and the lamp of life simply burned down and went out gently. The day before her death she was walking about the house.

There will be a Sunday School celebration at Asbury Church, Beat 8, of this county, the last Saturday in this month Hon. Jno. D. Hammond will deliver a Sunday School address on that occasion.

See advertisment of Ramagnano and Henderson, distillers. Outside of pure corn whiskey made at their distillery, they keep other brands of fine liquors, some of which belonged to the stock of Johnny Ramagnano before the prohibition law went into effect, and which was celebrated as a pure article.

The examination exercises of Calhoun College will begin next Monday morning, and close Friday evening.

The Primary classes will be examined on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday mornings. The intermediate classes on the evenings of the same days. The more advanced classes on Thursday and Friday. Declamation, Reading, Calisthenic exercises, and music each day. Our patrons and the public generally are most respectfully invited to attend.

W. J. BORDEN, Prin.

Every farmer in the county, who has a suitable location where a pond can be made, free from overflow, should have a carp pond. The time will come when this fish will be as staple an article of food in the county as beef or mutton. Every owner of a mill or gin pond in the county should apply to the proper Department at Washington and get some for their ponds. The carp is a local fish and will stay where planted We have no doubt that Gen. Forney, our faithful Representative in Congress, will take pleasure in forwarding to Washington the names of those who may want young carp. They will cost the applicant nothing except the exp ress charges.

Mr. Henry W. Grady, correspondent and one of the proprietors of the Atlanta Constitution, has been visiting Anniston. In the Constitution of the 10th inst, he gives a graphic and most interesting account of the rise and progress of the model town. We will publish the article in the next two weeks. It is too long for a single issue of our paper. We give this week an editorial from the Constitution highly laudatory of this Calhoun county town. Let us all help along the boom. Every citizen in Calhoun is interested in the growth of Anniston and other towns in the county. The more they grow the more taxes they pay, and the more taxes they pay, the lighter the burden upon the masses at large.

Col. Lugo Lugovinia, a Spaniard and an officer of the Spanish army, and now holding a commission under the Spanish Government at the city of Mexico, was in Jacksonville two days last week, the guest of Capt. Jas. Crook. He came to Jacksonville to buy some of Capt. Crook's fine Merino sheep for his ranche in Mexico, and did buy several hundred dollars worth. He has a very extensive sheep ranche in Mexico and purposes to cross the Merino on his native sheep to increase the wool clip. Col. Lugovinia commanded a regiment in Cuba during the insurrection on that island and participated in many of the battles between the contending armies. He is a son-in-law of Sen[illegible]thony of Rhode Is[illegible] wife. He

Why an Arkansaw Small Farmer Would Not Talk Business.

Arkansaw Traveler.]

A cattle dealer stopped at the house of an Arkansaw small farmer, and called to a man who was drawing water with an old fashioned windlass that cried out with an alarming creak at every turn of the crank.

"Light!" shouted the drawer of water.

The man dismounted and approached the well "I am a cattle-buyer," said the man, "and I'd like to talk business to you."

"Can't talk business till I give these steers as much water as they want."

"How long will it take you?"

"Blamed if I know. They ain't had no water for two days, and the well is seventy five feet deep, and the bucket leaks; now make a calc'lation.

"How long have you been drawing?"

"Sence sun up; and they are just as rampant now as they was when I commenced. I don't low to do nothing else for several days yit, for by the time one gits 'nough the other is spiling for some."

"Why don t you drive them to the creek?"

"Thar ain't no creek in this neighborhood."

"Why don't you drive them to the river?"

"Cos they'd rush in and drown their fool selves."

"Why don't you drive them to the pond?"

"They won't drink that sorter water."

"Don't you want to sell them?

"I would of I had the ole woman's consent, an I think she's willin.'

"Where is she?'

"You'd better consult her before she leaves.'

"You don't know that woman like I no. It ain't safe to pester her when she's gittin ready to go any whar. We'll hafter wait till she gits thar.'

"How far is it?'

"About nine miles.'

"I see you don't care to talk business."

"No I aint so powerful keen."

"If you would pay more attention to business you would live better."

"Don't wanter live no better'n I am. Suits me.'

"Are you making any attempt to educate your children?'

"Yes, an' they're gittin along fine. Jim hit a nigger with a rock yisterday, Bob sassed a justice of the peace an' Buck ain't afeered of the devil. That's a mighty good showin, I tell you;' and the windlass screaked and the steers walled their eyes.

"Are all your children boys?'

"They might have bin of it hadn't bin fer one thing.'

"What was that?'

"One of 'em was a gal.'

"Where is she now?

"Married to the triflinest feller I ever seed."

"Well, there is no use fooling with you, good-day."

Where the Nickle Comes From

Nickle is extensively used for various purposes, and yet few people are aware that there is but one nickle mine in the United States which is now worked.

This mine is situated in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania. It has been worked for seventeen years, and developed to the depth of 200 feet. The length of this lode is between two and three thousand feet; and it produces from four hundred to six hunared tons per month, employing in the working of the mine a force of 175 men. In the arts, nickle is rapidly growing into favor as a substitute for silver in plating steel, iron and other metals. Its commercial demand is rapidly increasing, and as it is much cheaper than silver it will without doubt be adopted in the manufacture of many articles as a substitute for that more precious metal. One mine, the Mine Lamotte tract Missouri, was worked from 1850 to 1855.

The ore was the sulphuret, associated with lead and copper. About $100,000, was realized from the croppings of the vein.

Croppings of nickle ore are also found in Madison, Iren and Wayne counties, Missouri. The refined metal is worth three dollars a pound.

Thomas L. Mathews, brickmason, aged about 45 years, died at his home, in this place, on Sunday evening last. Mr. M was a clever and useful citizen. He was attended in his last illness by his aged mother, sister, and brother Seaborn J. Mathews, of Jacksonville, where the deceased was born and raised. Mr. M. had been in a low state of health for several months, but his demise was not anticipated at the time it came and was rather a shock to his friends. A large assemblage of friends attended his burial. Appropriate religious services were had at the [illegible] Rev. M. P. Brown, officiating.—Scottsboro Herald.

The Model Southern Town.

Atlanta Constitution.

Chicago has long boasted of Pullman, as the model town of this country, and a miracle of western energy and development. In behalf of Atlanta we match it with Anniston, three hour's ride west of us, as a sample of what can be done in the South by pluck and ability.

Anniston was not started as was Pullman, with the backing of a company of $20,000,000 capital, which made it the site of its shops, and factories. It was not in the suburbs of a great city from the overflow of which it could get its growth. It was planted in a wilderness at the foot of a mountain crowned with its virgin forests. It was backed by no corporation, and started modestly, with the capital of two men bunched at a venture. Atlanta was its nearest city, and it was one hundred miles away, with a wild country intervening. In view of these things its growth is all the more remarkable.

It may be said, too, of Anniston that it has but reached the point where it will grow of itself. With 95 per cent of its population at work in gainful occupation—and the idle five per cent reckon only the children too young to work, for there is not one single loafer within its radius of three miles—it might add 2,000 men of business professions or leisure, and still have a larger per cent of actual workers than any city recorded in the last census. But faster than its casual citizenship can grow, will come the workingmen to fill the new shops and factories now being built. So that it will always be a self supporting city. Although in its infancy, it has all the advantages of manufactures, streets, water, parks, drainage that are usually confined to older and larger cities. Its enterprising owners have even gone so far as to start a railroad of nearly 50 miles to connect it with an incidental property and open up to its commerce a rich valley that needs a market.

It is gratifying to us to be able to write and print such a record of enterprise and development, and to claim such a town as our neighbor. We shall watch its development with interest and take pride in every evidence of its progress. If it does all that we expect of it; we shall after awhile with due formality christen it, "The Atlanta of Alabama"—and if it continues to do well, reclaim from that state some of the land we let it have to start business on, and compass the new town with old Georgia's boundary lines.

In Broken Arrow beat No. 10, St. Clair county, an election was held, June 2d on the application of Dan Watson, on oath that the sale of whisky would be for the public good in that beat where heretofore it had been prohibited by the vote of the people. The citizens sat down on Mr. Watson by a vote against whisky of 113 to 54. A dead shot! Well done for this intelligent, refined people! -Ashville Aegis.

You can not expect your children to thrive when they are being destroyed by worms. Give them a few doses of Shriner's Indian Vermifuge and they will be restored to health.

The Blount County News says Anniston is on a big boom.

This is to certify that we bought over Four Thousand Dollars worth of Dr. Dromgoole's English Female Bitters and Bailey's Saline Aperient during the year 1881, and from personal observation and public opinion, take much pleasure in recommending them as worthy of public confidence and favor.

Useful in the Family.

We usually leave it to doctors to recommend medicines, but Parker's Ginger's Tonic has been so useful in our family in relieving sickness and suffering that we cannot say too much in its praise.—Salem Argus.

Sure Cure for WORMS. MOTHER'S WORM SYRUP. CHILDREN Cry for It

Is far superior to all other preparations as a worm-destroyer, being composed entirely of vegetable ingredients and free from all nauseous taste that vermifuge has. It is a pleasant Syrup that children will gladly take, or it can be eaten with bread. Thousands of children die annually of worms when by the use of the Mother's Worm Syrup their precious little lives might be saved. It expels the Round Worm, Thread Worm and the Huge Tape Worm. It never fails. It clears up the skin and sweetens the temper of the little sufferer, secures sleep, and brings back the appetite. It restores the roses to the cheek and saves the tears. By its use the child is safe from Convulsions, Spasms, and St. Vitus' Dance, which are usually caused by Worms.

It Has No BAD TASTE MOTHER'S WORM SYRUP Expels the Round & Tape Worms

The condition as above indicated, exists in almost every family. With some the troubles are of recent standing, while many have become chronic and difficult to overcome. Old and young females are constant victims. Dr. Dromgoole's English Female Bitters makes positive and unmistakable cures of all lingering female weaknesses, excesses, irregularities and periodical obstructions; imparts strength and vigor to the feeble and emaciated; builds up and re-animates flagging, broken-down and worn-out constitutions; repairs damages inflicted by years of painful suffering; regulates, comforts and consoles the troubled maiden, and is a fast friend to mothers all along the troubled pathway of their married lives.

It cures ovarian diseases, uterine displacements and ulcerations, hysterics, leucorrhœa, chlorosis, weakness of the kidneys and bladder, revives the drooping, despondent and melancholy, calms the excitable and nervous. It is a never-failing iron tonic female regulator. $1.00. Sold every-where. Family Medical Adviser mailed free to any address. J. P. DROMGOOLE & Co., Proprietors, Louisville, Ky.

At the bedside, the physician's first question is, "How are your bowels?" proving that they must in all cases be properly attended to at once, by the use of some medicine that will cleanse the stomach, excite the liver, cause a free flow of bile and carry off these disease-making secretions. Pills, oils and other strong medicines, produce pain, griping, sick stomach, and often cause the loss of time.

Bailey's Saline Aperient is relieved of all these unpleasant effects; it acts mildly upon the bowels, causes a free flow of bile, relieves constipation, biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach, heartburn, colic, indigestion, etc.

It is a white powder, and is as cooling and pleasant as a glass of soda water. Large Bottles 50 cents.

AGRICULTURE.

AN OX TEAM FOR THE FARM.—For hauling about the farm and breaking up land, oxen are, in several respects, preferable to horses. In the item of feed they are much cheaper, and this alone is a weighty consideration. And then as the character of their work, while they are slow, they are strong, sure and trusty; they do not pull with such violence and suddenness as many horses do, and hence do not break so much harness or so many carts. When they hitch a tree or stump, they stop until the driver can turn them aside. This disposition makes them much better than the horse for hauling in the woods or in new grounds. Many horses, as soon as they make a hitch with a vehicle, begin to pull harder or become fretful, and generally end by breaking the cart or some part of the harness. For hauling rails, wood, litter, &c., about the farm, oxen are the best and safest team, though a little slower, generally, than a horse.

On the score of economy the scale is altogether in favor of the ox. A pair of oxen costing much less than one horse, will do more work than the horse, make it unnecessary on a two horse farm to keep but one horse. Thus there is a great annual saving in both corn and long forage, and the manures from two steers is more than that of one horse. The board of a farm horse for one year would buy three or four oxen. And then, when an ox gets too old for a profitable work animal, it can be fattened, and its hide, tallow and flesh will sell for enough to buy another ox. For breaking up lane, a pair of oxen does excellent work, but they are not well adapted to field work in summer time, though entire crops are frequently made with no other team. Even when there are plenty of horses to do all the work of a farm, it is best to have one ox, or a pair, to do the rough work. For getting out litter for compost, the ox is just the animal.

CARE OF WAGON WHEELS.—The severest strain in the cart or carriage comes upon the wheels. The felloes especially are exposed to alternate mud and drought, according to the prevailing weather. The paint soon wears off, and the wood absorbs the water from every mud puddle through which the vehicle is driven. In a dry time the wood shrinks, and the tire gets loose. The remedy is a new setting of the tire, and a bill from the blacksmith. It is much cheaper to clean up the carriage occasionally, and giving the wheel a dressing of linseed oil as hot as it can be put on. The wood will absorb a good deal of the oil, and will swell the rim so as to make the tire tight. It will prevent the rotting of the wood, and make long-lived wheels. When the wheels have soaked up all the oil they will take, put on a good coat of paint.

THE peach-borer is a wasp-like insect, with transparent wings, and a richly ornamented body, banded and striped with gold, which deposits its eggs about the base of the trunk. The eggs hatch out, and the larvæ bore into the sapwood, and cause an exudation of gummy matter which appears in masses about the base of the tree. The larvæ seem partly to live in this gummy substance and partly in the sapwood of the tree. Sometimes three or four are found on the same tree, occasionally girdling and destroying it, but always inducing more or less of a diseased condition, and imparing its vigor. Altogether it is a very objectionable and destructive insect.

THE real practical value there is in keeping accounts with the farm consists in this: "When a farmer keeps such an account in his operations he is able by annually casting up his balances to see just what crop and what line of his farm operations have paid him best. If any line or cropping in a series of years is thus shown not to be so profitable as some other crop, these definite data enable him to correct his mistakes and determine on some new line of procedure." The most of the business men who fail find on a revision of their transactions, too loosely kept, that in reality they had failed months and sometimes years before the fact was revealed to them.

A GERMAN paper gives the following interesting method of starting plants early: The seeds of peas, beans, cucumbers, etc., are started in a frame, and when a little grown are lifted and the roots dipped in a mixture of clay, chopped moss, water and loam, and on withdrawal are sprinkled with firm, dry earth. A piece of moss is then flattened into the form of a plate and a little earth sprinkled on it. The prepared plants are then placed on this plate, the moss folded over the roots, tied on so as to form a little ball and set away on boards or shelves until the season for removing to the open air comes, when they are planted, pot and all, which gives them an early start.

WESTERN corn growers persist in planting corn after corn. The result is that they have bred a worm which eats the roots and which lives in the ground from year to year. As it is not migratory its existence depends on having corn planted on the same field in succession. Good husbandry, which demands rotation of crops, will therefore rid farmers of this pest.

EARTH worms in pots will generally succumb under liberal doses of lime water or tobacco water. A florist also uses successfully ten drops of carbolic acid in a pint of water. Poured upon the earth, the worms are killed and the plants improved.

DR. STURTEVANT says that the experiments at the New York Agricultural Experiment Station seem to indicate that the seed end of a potato has more vigor than the stem end, and suggests the close analogy between the potato and a portion of a branch.

IT is said that the American teasel is even superior to that imported from France. As no substitute for the teasel has been found for fulling cloth its culture is a safe industry, and the few farmers who have tried it report it to be a profitable crop.

AS COMMON red clover matures its seed upon second growth, failure may succeed because of drought, insects, or because the first growth was not cut early enough to permit the second to ripen its seed perfectly.

AMERICAN buyers have taken so many Clydesdale stallions in Scotland that it has caused an increase in price of 100 per cent. within the last year and a half. There is also a great demand for polled cattle and Shropshire sheep.

DOMESTIC.

THAT.—That salt fish are quickest and best freshened by soaking in sour milk. That cold rain water and soap will remove machine grease from washable fabrics. That fish may be scalded much easier by first dipping them into boiling water for a minute. That fresh meat, beginning to sour, will sweeten if placed out of doors in the cool air over night. That milk which has changed may be sweetened or rendered fit for use again by stirring in a little soda. That boiling starch is much improved by the addition of sperm or salt, or both, or a little gum arabic, dissolved. That a tablespoonful of turpentine boiled with your white clothes will greatly aid the whitening process. That kerosene will soften boots and shoes that have been hardened by water, and will render them as pliable as new. That clear boiling water will remove tea stains; pour the water through the stain, and thus prevent its spreading over the fabric. That salt will curdle new milk; hence, in preparing milk porridge, gravies, etc., the salt should not be added until the dish is prepared. That kerosene will make your tea-kettle as bright as new. Saturate a woolen rag and rub with it. It will also remove stains from the clean varnished furniture. Milk which has been changed may be sweetened or rendered fit for use by stirring in a little soda.

GREEN GOOSEBERRIES FOR TARTS.—Fill very clean, dry, wide-necked bottles with gooseberries picked the same day, in dry weather, and just before they have attained their full size. Wrap a little hay round each bottle, and set them up to their necks in a boiler of cold water, which should be brought very gradually to boil; a little hay must be put in the bottom of the boiler, and the bottles fixed firmly. Let the fruit simmer gently until it appears shrunken and perfectly scalded, then take out the bottles, and fill up as many as you can quite full with some of the cooked gooseberries—it is generally necessary to sacrifice one of the bottles in doing this, taking care not to break the fruit. Directly the bottles are full of gooseberries, pour boiling water into the bottles up to the brims, else they will mildew. Tie bladder over the tops immediately, and keep the bottles in a dry, cool place. When the gooseberries are used, pour off the greater part of the water, and add the same sugar as for fresh fruit, of which they ought to have the same flavor and appearance. Prepared in this way, gooseberries are perfectly wholesome, and will keep until the fruit comes in again.

PERAMBULATOR ROBE.—A sensible robe for mild spring weather, to be tucked into a perambulator, is made of two thicknesses of blue "eider-down" cloth: the tufted surface of both squares placed outside, and the edges joined by rows of machine stitching. This infantile "buffalo robe" should be added to the usual printed or woven carriage coverings to keep out the keen spring winds which lurk even on the sunny side of the way.

OLD TINTS IN MERINOS.—Quaker gray, dove and cloud gray merinos are combined with velvet to make street toilets for spring. A pleated flounce on the bottom of the skirt, trimmed with velvet bands, which also form the trimming of the draperies, corsage and cuffs, makes a very elegant costume. Handrun Andalusian lace with figures as heavy as those of embroidery is the fashionable garniture for black Ottoman silk dresses.

A SPIRAL TAPER.—Amber wax candles moulded in deep spiral curves have appeared in the shop windows. This shape is to keep the wax from guttering down the sides irregularly as the candle is consumed. The lower ends of the candles are sensibly cut away in grooves so that they can fit into an ordinary candlestick without "wobbling" or necessitating bands of paper. Besides amber, other pretty colored tapers are old blue and framboise pink.

THE addition of a little mace to a veal soup will give an agreeable flavor to it. Do not put in enough to make it a distinct flavor, but put it in with the herbs and pepper and salt.

PIES made of canned whortleberries should have an undercrust only; then over the top put strips of puff paste. Too much crust with the berries makes an almost tasteless pie.

A SIMPLE but delicious dish for dessert is made by cutting up oranges in small pieces and then pouring over them some rich boiled custard. Serve with cake.

IF a little vinegar or some cider is mixed with stove polish, it will not take much rubbing to make the stove bright and the blackening is not likely to fly off in the dust.

FOR one who can afford to use it in that way, whipped cream highly flavored with vanilla, rose water or wine, makes the richest and most agreeable pudding sauce.

To clean hair-brushes, use ammonia and hot water; after washing well, shake the water out and dry on a coarse towel; they will look as good as new.

IF you put soda in water with which you are to wash windows you will find that finger-marks, putty stains, etc., will be much more easily removed than if clear water alone is used.

WHEN boiling cabbage put a slice of salt pork in the water and an agreeable flavor, with no objectionable grease or fat, will be given to the cabbage.

WHEN cooking a large fowl or joint of meat it may be covered with a buttered paper to prevent its being scorched.

KEROSENE will burn clearer if the burners are boiled for five minutes two or three times a year in wood ashes and water.

CLEAR boiling water will remove tea stains; pour the water through the stain and thus prevent its spreading over the fabric.

Do not put glass articles that have held milk into hot water, as this causes the milk to penetrate the glass, and it can never be removed.

HUMOROUS.

JANET home from church: Janet was not comely, but an excellent servant and especially devout. One Sunday afternoon, on returning from the kirk, she mentioned to the ladies of the family how much she had enjoyed the services. Shortly afterward they heard her scolding at a great rate and one of the ladies remonstrated with her. "Why, Janet, I'm afraid the services did you very little good, after all, as you seem to have lost your temper." "Ah, weel," said Janet, "I left William to look after things and every thing's so upset it's enough to take the taste o' prayer out o' one's mouth."

A book agent named Joe Smyrk,
Was put out and hurt by a jerk,
He says as a cure,
St. Jacob's Oil is sure,
At all times to get in its work.

A lightning-rod man in St Paul,
From a house had a serious fall,
Though battered and bruised,
He said, when he used
St. Jacob's Oil—"It simply beats all."

"What makes you limp so?" asked a Harlem man of a friend who went hobbling along toward the elevated railroad.

"My knees are awfully sore—outsch!" he yelled, as he struck his leg against a hydrant.

"Have you been saying your prayers a great deal, lately?"

"Not to any remarkable extent," he grinned.

Well, then, what makes your knees so sore?"

"Pulling the tacks out of carpets, preparatory to house-cleaning. Confound it!" he exclaimed, as he painfully climbed the stairs leading to the station.

"I perceive," says the lawyer, "you wish to obtain a separation because of his cruelty."

Our best physicians gave my case up. I finally got so low that our doctor said I could not live twenty-four hours. My friends then purchased a bottle of Dr. Wm. Editor of Evening Press:

DEAR SIR.—Feeling deeply grateful for the great benefits which I have received from the use of a very valuable article which has its origin and home in our beautiful city, and hoping that others who are afflicted as I have been may find like relief from its use, I beg the indulgence of a few lines in your valuable paper for the privilege of communicating to you a brief statement of facts, for the benefit of the multitude of sufferers to be met with on every side. Many of my friends well know that I have been very severely afflicted with heart disease for a number of years, and have suffered from it as only those can suffer who have that disease; it reduced my strength so low that I could scarcely walk across my room, and the least exertion rendered me so short-breathed that I dared scarcely move, and life seemed very burdensome. I was treated for my malady by the best physicians, and derived no benefit from their treatment or prescriptions until I was advised by my family physician to use Hunt's Remedy, as my trouble was caused by inaction of my kidneys, which affected very seriously the action of my heart. I commenced taking it (having little faith in it or any other medicine) and it has helped me wonderfully, and I am now a great deal better, and have been ever since I began its use. In fact, I have taken no medicine that has benefitted me so greatly. My breathing is easy, and I have gained in strength so much that I am able to do my housework. I cheerfully recommend Hunt's Remedy to all who may be afflicted as I have been, or who are suffering from general debility and nervous prostration.

Respectfully, MRS. A. O. ROCKWELL.

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and the people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop," or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hop on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

is past, and Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" will not raise the dead, will not cure you if your lungs are almost wasted by consumption. It is, however, unsurpassed both as a pectoral and alterative, and will cure obstinate and severe diseases of the throat and lungs, coughs, and bronchial affections. By virtue of its wonderful alterative properties it cleanses and enriches the blood, cures pimples, blotches, and eruptions, and causes even great eating ulcers to heal.

So when she heard of the virtues of Kidney-Wort she got a box and it has completely cured her liver complaint."

PHYSICIANS AS A RULE

are having but little success in curing what are generally termed Malarial diseases, and for this reason it is quite frequently said that they do not know what Malaria is. Let us see what the principal difficulties are with which they have to contend. There is an old proverb which says, "You should always tell your Doctor and Lawyer the truth." Did you do this when you first consulted your physician in regard to those queer chills followed by flushes of heat—that numbness and pain in all parts of the body which he said was Malaria? Did you tell him that you had often suffered during the previous year with sour stomach, heartburn, nausea, flatulence, constipation, and occasional griping, and that your tongue had been coated more or less for a long time? If not, you are more in fault than the Doctor. You probably told him the truth, but not the whole truth, and it is from this cause, this neglect of what are considered by many as trifling ailments, that people are compelled to suffer long illnesses, which simple remedies will prevent if taken in time.

The symptoms we have mentioned are those of a weak and bilious condition of the digestive organs and a diseased liver. They are borne by many with but little complaint, the patient generally attending to his usual occupation, and scarcely mentioning his ailments to his nearest friends. He sometimes has an excellent appetite, eating heartily and with great relish. At other times there is positive disgust for all food. There is with some a constant dull headache, with dots before the eyes, pain in the right side, a sleepy, dull feeling after meals, a restless, nervous condition at night, bad dreams, at times great melancholy without apparent cause, a costive condition of the bowels, a coated tongue.

These symptoms, when not attended to, are sure to undermine the system and produce the most serious diseases. Typhoid fever is caused by the neglect of these ailments, Chills and fever are always traceable to an impaired condition of the digestive organs. No one was ever attacked with Malaria whose digestion was good. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint often lead to Consumption. The digestive organization is the basis of health, and any deviation from perfection is dangerous.

How shall we keep the digestive organs in such a condition that the system will resist disease?

Our answer to this is plain, and, we think, reasonable. We must go the original cause of the trouble. If the stomach has become filled up with slimy secretions, they must be removed, and this should be done without irritation. The bowels must be purified and cleansed without weakening the general system. The liver must be roused to healthy action and made to secrete the proper amount of bile necessary to good digestion. A few doses of Dr. Schenck's Mandrake Pills will do all this.

They are the great remedy of the age. They have driven from use more poisonous drugs than any medicine ever brought before the public. Before their introduction, mercury or calomel was a remedy used daily in the practice of every physician. It is now only used by the careless or ignorant. It is known as a violent mineral poison, and would never be used by any one if all knew the virtues of that great vegetable remedy, Mandrake, as prepared by Dr. Schenck.

Dr. Schenck's Mandrake Pills are sold by druggists everywhere at 25 cents per box, or sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price. Dr. Schenck's Book on Consumption, Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia, is sent free, post paid, to all applicants. Address Dr. Schenck & Son, Philadelphia, Pa.

TRIUMPH.

The dawn came in through the bars of the blind,
The the winter's dawn is gray—
And said: However you cheat your mind,
The hours are flying away,

A ghost of a dawn, and pale and weak—
Has the sun a heart, I said,
To throw a morning flush on the cheek
Whence a fairer flush has fled?

As a gray rose-leaf that is fading white
Was the cheek where I set my kiss;
And on that side of the bed all night
Death had watched, and I on this.

I kissed her lips, they were half apart,
Yet they made no answering sign;
Death's hand was on her failing heart,
And his eyes said: She is mine.

I set my lips on the blue-veined lid,
Half veiled by her death-damp hair;
And oh, for the violet depths it hid,
And the light I longed for there!

Faint day and the fainter life awoke,
And the night was overpast;
And I said: Though never in life you spoke,
Oh, speak, with a look at last!

For the space of a heart-beat fluttered her breath,
As a bird's wing spread to flee;
She turned her weary arms to Death,
And the light of her eyes to me.

THE PURPLE STAR.

"The next time Gus Rybolt is brought before me for some of his numerous misdemeanors I will sentence him heavily."

And Judge Johnson stirred his tea vigorously, while a deep wrinkle grew between his fine iron-gray eyes, under which glowed his keen earnest eyes.

His little daughter Janie lingered to pour his second cup of tea. She was very fond of waiting on papa, for Janie, though only twelve years old, was the old judge's housekeeper, her mother having died two years previously.

"Who pays his fines—for you often speak of his arrests, papa?"

"His brother Warren, who is as fine a young man as the town contains. I cannot understand Gus; he's handsome; bright, and might be almost anything he chose. He'll end on the gallows yet."

"Oh, papa!"

But reckless, wild Gus Rybolt was soon forgotten when the parlor was reached, and Janie sat down to the piano.

A servant entered an hour later and handed the judge a telegram.

"Dying! Uncle Rube!"

"Yes; are you afraid to remain with the servants and Mrs. Smith. I feel uneasy owing to that money. I ought to have put it in the bank but have been overcrowded with work and business. Too bad!" muttered the judge a trifle anxiously, glancing at his daughter dubiously.

"Oh, no, papa, I'm not afraid. Poor uncle Rube! You had better start at once. Don't worry about me; Mrs. Smith sleeps in the next room; you remember."

But the judge did worry and fret, not only over the danger of his daughter and his money, but blamed himself severely, for his carelessness.

Even among the graver fear for his brother, the thought of thieves and burglars haunted him.

"I ought to be ashamed of myself to leave that amount of money in the house even for a day, for the place is so isolated, the servants such arrant cowards and cousin Sallie such a weak help. Only Janie's brave little heart to be depended on. Heaven bless the child. Now what can be the matter with Rube I cannot imagine; he was well enough last week."

Mrs. Sallie Smith, a forty-second cousin of the judge's, and a confirmed invalid, occupied the room on the right of Janie's, while that on the left was her father's, and in it the iron safe that contained the money referred to.

"I am afraid I am a bit nervous," mused Janie, looking around the chamber with a shudder. "The servants are quite a way off, and cousin Sallie takes so much laudanum she would never waken. I wonder if I would feel safer with the money under my pillow?"

And foolish little Janie, having the combination of the safe, went to it, opened it and took out the roll of bills.

"Oh, oh," said a soft voice behind her. "That is exactly what I want; I had no idea you would be so accommodating. Don't scream on your life."

Janie did not cry out. She gave him one sudden, startled indignant look, and bending her head, buried her white strong teeth in the exposed wrist of the hand that held her captive.

"You little tigar-cat," he cried, in a rage and intense suffering. "Let go or I will kill you."

But while the sharp pain had unmanned him, with the other hand she thrust the roll of money into the safe and sprang the lock.

"Now," she said triumphantly, "get it if you can, but—oh, Gus Rybolt, I know you."

"You—no you don't—ah, well, you will tell your precious father before another day closes. Come, hand over the cash; I want to have some chance of getting away."

"No, you cannot have the money, Gus Rybolt, remember your sainted mother, your good brother; what will you do now? How can you be so base? This is no time for nonsense. Hand over that cash, or I'll——" and the click of a revolver hammer sounded.

Janie's eyes flashed in scorn.

"You harm a helpless little girl! You, who always boasted of bravery! For shame, Gus Rybolt; you are a coward!" But in a gentle tone—"If you will make me a promise I will also make you one, and keep mine as long as you do yours. If you will leave me now and become a better boy—an honest, honorable one—I will never tell."

The temptation to persist in his undertaking was great, but down in wicked, dare-devil Gus Rybolt's heart there was a tender spot, which beautiful Janie Johnson had held ever since she was a mite of a child, and he had taken care of her at school.

Harm her? He wouldn't have harmed a hair of her head to have saved his own life, and she knew it.

"You cannot have the money; but won't you accept the promise—won't you make the compact?"

"Yes," he said at last, in a husky, strained voice. "Heaven bless you, Janie Johnson, and may Heaven help me!" and he was gone.

And Janie, with eyes full of tears, slipped into bed, and after a long time fell soundly asleep.

But wasn't that old judge furious when he came home.

"An abominable practical joke," he fumed. "There was Rube well as I am, and very much surprised to see me. I know who did it."

"Why, papa," laughed Janie, "you ought to be so thankful that Uncle Rube is well, and not dying, as you thought. How can you feel provoked or angry? I am so glad it was not true.

The next morning Gus Rybolt had disappeared.

Ten years later Janie Johnson was a lovely, stately woman. The radiant promise of early girlhood was more than fulfilled, while the brave tender heart was unchanged.

The wife of the governor was receiving, and her rooms were filled with distinguished guests. The last comer was a young man of thirty, of commanding presence, whose grave and noble face made him appear somewhat older. After paying his respects to the hostess, he made his way slowly forward, and was met by many smiles and greetings. He was evidently a great favorite in society.

"Oh, there is General Rybolt, who has refused the Austrian mission, papa says, because he has another and better mission among the poor of New York. You know him by reputation, dear; but very few know the half of the great and good things he is doing with his wealth and talents." The speaker was the Governor's daughter.

Janie Johnson turned her lovely hazel eyes carelessly toward the person pointed out—looked one instant coolly upon him, and her face underwent a sudden strange change.

"It is—yes, it must be Gus Rybolt! How marvelous are thy ways, O God!" she breathed.

Her face was no longer pale, but flushed, and her upraised eyes showed pleased recognition.

His first words were: "I have kept my promise; have you kept yours?"

"Yes, oh, yes," she breathed, then added "Thank Heaven!" to which he gave a low "Amen."

To say the old judge was astonished is putting it mildly. To find in the eminent editor and reformer his old—as he supposed—incorrigible Gus Rybolt, utterly nonplussed him. To an old friend he said confidentially;

"Yes, the boy has turned out a trump, and the wonder of it is Janie thinks so too," and he laughed.

And Janie never told of her robber, yet she kisses sometimes a purple star on her husband's wrist.

"It is the beginning of the new life," she says, "the beautiful new life of an honest man."

Almees in Paris.

A company of Algerine dancing girls, four in number, are now exciting a considerable degree of interest in Paris, Mariam and Alcha are very young and pretty, and the other two, both of whom bear the name Zora, make up for the lack of a beautiful face by a certain richness of costume and grace of gesture. The oldest Zora wears a magnificent coronet of diamonds, and is said to resemble a Japanese idol. The orchestra consists of a violin, a guitar, and a drum: and the dancing to be properly appreciated should be seen in a small room. Mariam wears a bodice of blue silk embroidered in silver, white silk trousers, a band of purple around her jet-black hair, and earrings, bracelets and spangles of gold. Each girl rises and dances in turn, then two more repeat the dance with variations. The dark skin of the ankles is relieved by gold bracelets. Their feet are bare, and at first glide softly over the floor without seeming to leave the surface. The body is swayed from the hips, and pieces of red silk are swayed by the dancers. The contortions become more complex and the movements more rapid as the time of the music increases. From the account one would judge that the dance is of a rather a voluptuous nature. It is termed the Oriental cancan. The gi[illegible] Paris are said to be remarkable champagne, a singular taste of the Prophet.

Indigenous Potatoes.

Native potatoes have been discovered in Arizona by Prof. Lemmon. They were found in a cleft of the highest peaks north of the Apache pass, under a tangle of prickly bushes and cacti. Eager to know if the Solanum found was bulb bearing, he carefully uprooted the little tuber, which proved to be an undoubted representative of the true potato family. According to the researches and reasonings of Humboldt, this was the location to look for the home of the species from which our first potatoes sprang. In May last, Prof. Lemmon again set out in search of more specimens, choosing the Huachuca mountains as his point of exploration.

These mountains have two peaks over 10,000 feet high, with sides furrowed into deep canons, those of the northeast being filled with trees, among which are maple and ash. In July last he discovered the potato plant he was searching for on the southwest side of the range, hidden among the rich bottom soil of a dell in a high valley. A few plants of the white species were found in full bloom, and farther on blue blossoms were found. The white flowered specimens formed tubers on shorter subterranean stems than the blue ones. The blue flowered potato plants sent off their runners from eighteen inches to two feet. July 12, they were in full bloom.

The blossoms were large, and the white flowered were of a creamy white color, with greenish mid-ribs to its corolla lobes. The subterranean stems were not longer than those of our common potato. The blossoms of the blue flowered are smaller, bright purple, with pale white midribs to the corolla. with fifeteen to twenty flowers to a head. They are found at an altitude of about 8,000 feet in Tanner's canon, and some of the plants were 2 feet high. Later in the season they produced potato balls of unusual size, comparatively speaking.

These native species of potatoes, which may have been and very likely are the original native stock from which all our potatoes now used have sprung, deserve a fair trial and careful propagation to develop them to the size now attained by our best potatoes. By the 1st of September the blue flowered plants formed bluish colored potatoes, oblong, about 1½ inches long by half as wide, and a third as thick, with from four to ten unmistakable potatoes on each plant. The white flowered plants produced white potatoes, nearly round, from half an inch to one inch in diameter. These potatoes are unquestionably indigenous.

Still another variety wae found near the summit of a peak 10,000 feet high, under the shade of fir, pine and poplar trees, growing in soil kept moist during the greater part of the year by melting snows. Its nodding balls of ripened seeds were surrounded by golden-rods and brilliant asters. Their tubers were tinted with purple, and seed balls were either solitary or in pairs. Prof. Lemmon brought back with him over three quarts of these small potatoes, comprising the different varieties, besides some seed balls.

A hermit in these mountains, whom Prof. Lemmon interested in his discovery, has recently written him that in digging up the bed of an old pond he has secured a lot of these potatoes, perfectly white as large as hen's eggs, which on being cooked tasted well, and have all the appearence of very fine potatoes. Various cultivators have manifested the utmost interest in Prof. Lemmon's discovery, and are making careful preparations to cultivate the specimens he has forwarded them.

Seeing a Man Home.

I picked Simmons up pretty near dead drunk, and took him home. When I got to his house, as I thought I shook him a bit and said: 'Here you are.'

'Right,' said he, and he gave a big bang at the knocker. Up went the window. 'Who's there?' screamed a woman. I have brought the old man home,' said I. 'All right,' she cried, and came to the door. She immediately seized hold of Simmons and gave him such a shaking that his teeth seemed to rattle in his head. 'Who are you shaking of?' says he. 'Goodness gracious,' cried the woman, 'that is not my husband's voice.' I struck a match and she found she had been shaking the wrong man. 'There,' cried the woman furiously. 'I've been setting up here expecting my husband home drunk, and now I've wasted my strength on a stranger.' 'Don't he live here?' I asked. 'No,' said the womam; 'he don't.'

'What made you knock?' said I to Simmons. 'Knock,' said he' you told me to.' 'I thought you lived here,' said I. 'Glad I don't, said he. I supposed he was thinking of the shaking he had. At last I found where he did live, and got him home. Mrs. Simmons was sitting up for him. As soon as ever we knocked out she came. 'Oh,' says she 'you're the wretch as makes my poor husband drunk, are you?' and she gave me a slap across the face. I've never seen a drunken man home since.'

Soapstone ground fine can be moulded into different shapes by mixing with water-glass, and when dried closely resembles the natural stone.

Pueblo Indian Traits.

To sum up the Pueblo's character in a few words, and to omit many illustrations which might amplify the hasty enumeration of his more general traits, we found him social in disposition, clever as an artificer, shrewd at a bargain, gentle in his family, controlled by the precepts of the elders; maintaining a system of government curiously complete in all fundamental principles of civil law; a shepherd, caring for immense flocks of goats and sheep; an agriculturist; and, withal, an Indian, priding himself in the mark; still using the bow, the eagle plumes, the barbaric fineries of dress; and though falling on festal days to the level of the brute in the observances of his heathenish rites, yet seldom committing upon his fellow any act of injustice or cruelty. Recalling the goat-skin which he sold us as a cinnamon bear hide, we smile and forgive him; as well as for the theft of the missing sketch-book—we regard the latter as indicative of a promising tendency toward art. But when we bring to mind his hospitality, his joviality, and picture him as our modern Arcadian free-liver, it is impossible to think of him as other than a good fellow. His quick wit was exhibited on many occasions, but notably in connection with a bargain for a coat and trousers of buckskin attractively displayed over the wearer's fine physique. We were quite willing to wait and receive the purchase from the hands of the man through his window or door, but he too well understood the importance of working the hot iron. A moment's thought, a series of rapid contortions, and the tight-fitting garments were drawn off and thrown at our feet, Before payment could be made the ludicrous had impressed itself upon the crowd, and hardly had the money been clapped into his mouth than, adroitly snatching a blanket from a bystander and wrapping himself therein, the youth scampered off, hands over ears, towards the village. A long, lean man, garrulous in witticisms, followed him with banter gobbled out of a turkey throat. But the annoyance was soon left behind in company with a puff of dust which followed the red bandana and flying locks, over the edge of the gulch.

On another occasion one of those small skin-lined saddles, dangling a multiplicity of straps, awakened an interest. "Quanto:" (how much). Six fingers are instinctively presented skyward, with an undecided seventh threatening the perpendicular. Obedient to instructions, we lose all interest immediately and assume the expression of total indifference. (Exit.)

Tableau II perhaps comes off next day. We notice our friend Lucero has frequent occasion to drag his saddle back and forth before our door. At length we mutually discover each other. We smile, and raise three fingers, which observing the change of countenance this awakens, is finished off as something between military gesture and a sidewalk salutation; and the saddle moves on. Before both have gone far there is a sudden decision. One man stops short, and returns a five-finger salutation, very much as an auctioneer elevates his hammer for a last call. The proposition for compromise is submitted to greater experience within, but meets with no favor.

"He'll stick you yet on your own bargain and don't you forget it," says our interpreter,

Juan Lucero is softened into approach by the indicision; but the Western man's promptings are obeyed to the full extent of indifference, (Very hasty exit—pressing engagement.)

Still the saddle was seen often, We had already taken seats on the morning of departure, with the impedimenta adjusted to a fit: but the man and the saddle were on hand. At the right moment he emerged from the shadow of an adobe wall. Three fingers this time, and an evident swallowing of emotions as an accompaniment to the nods affirmative. The whole bespoke the obstinate wrestling of flesh and spirit over the decision. For want of room we tied it to the axle, where, for seventy-five miles it required constant watching, as it had a way of inching on to the wheels, and marvelously defying all sorts of knots.

Some time after, when sauntering through the plaza of Santa Fe, the words of the Western man were brought to mind by seeing a quantity of pack-saddles at one dollar apiece.

The Train Dispatcher.

Great cares almost universally hasten nature in heaping up the appearance of age. Young men suddenly falling heirs to great responsibilities soon become prematurely old, and not a few have lost their identity, even to their nearest friends, beneath the weight of care suddenly imposed upon them. Men rushing through life with the burdens and responsibilities of ordinary mortals on their shoulders, little appreciate the terribly heavy burdens borne by men upon whose shoulders have been laid the lives of hundreds of people and millions of dollars of property.

"Yes, sir, I don't mind telling you why it is," answered the conductor of one of the accomodation [illegible] out of the ci[illegible] inquir[illegible] ed w[illegible] your[illegible] have asked me if I had not at some period of my life been the victim of some sudden and awful calamity. You have read, of course, of hair turning gray in a single night through fright. Mine was not caused that way. Was I born that way? Oh, no; at twenty my hair was as black as a coal. Those streaks of gray were caused by my three or four years' experience as a train dispatcher on a great trunk line running out of Chicago.

"People who climb on a passenger train when she is two or three hours late little imagine what endless planning and management it takes to get her through safely. Let a freight get behind time and we can handle her by running her on another train's time, but a passenger breaks up everything on the road. A train dispatcher must be familiar with every circumstance and every possible combination of circumstances. He must know on just what portion of the road fast time can be made and give orders accordingly. He must never give an order for certain time to be made unless he is positively certain that the grade and condition of the weather will permit of such time being made. To-day I may order a train to run from station A to station B, and another for a train to run from B to A, when the same order to-morrow would precipitate a collision, You have got to know all the men on the line. Why, on that road that I worked on there would be engineers and conductors that could never get a train through on time. Then there would be others that would never be late except in case of accident. Why, sometimes during my eight hours of duty I would give 250 train orders. Just think of that a moment. Here is a passenger train four hours late and a freight side-tracked at almost every station. Of course that puts every train behind time. First I have to order the operator to put out his flag and hold the train for orders, and then I have to send the order and wait for it to be repeated back. At the same time a train may be passing a station five miles away, where I want to hold and side track her. All this time I must not only keep a clear track for the passenger train, but must not unnecessarily detain the freights. Sometimes right in the middle of a rush of business like this the wire will break or some operator will leave his key open. Then everything is to pay. Fortunately the train dispatcher's orders is the law. Every employe is bound to obey it. So we do not have to worry about that.

"Did I ever have an accident? No; but I've come mighty near it. Once I left the office by permission in care of my assistant, and when I returned I found that he had two trains running toward each other on a single track and only a station between them. Fortunately I got a message to the station in time to flag the first train that got there, but if one of them had happened to have passed there would have been a fearful accident. It was a very natural mistake. My assistant had been with me two years. He had everything side-tracked all right, but had forgotten the 'unwritten law' of the road prohiting two trains passing on a single track. On another occasion I lost a train."

"Yes, sir, lost it completely. It was a local freight, and was a little late. It left F—— twenty minutes behind time, and was due at M—— in forty minutes, where it was ordered to side track for No. 3, a fast express. F—— and M—— were eleven miles apart, and No. 3 could not leave F—— until the local was reported side tracked at M——. Well, I waited an hour, and then called M——, who had the message for the local, and asked him where the freight was. He didn't know, In the meantime the express was at F——, and the passengers were getting mad. Thirty minutes more and still no train. Then I ordered No. 2 to run cautiously to M——. She did so, but found no local. To say that we were paralyzed is putting it mildly. Ten minutes later W——, a little station near the city, reported the local there. She had got by M—— in some way without disturbing the operator. Diogenes never hunted so diligently for an honest man in the degenerate days in which he lived as did we for that train."

"Why did you leave the business?"

"Because I was growing a year older every week. I had the work of ten men upon my shoulders. You often hear about the brave engineer, clinging with firm resolve and calm resignation to the throttle while the engine is plunging on toward inevitable destruction. His responsibility is nothing. He has only a single train and has no duty but to obey rules. The train dispatcher has a hundred trains under his finger that presses upon the key. A moment's delay to a passenger train, a trifling accident to a freight, and the dispatcher is cussed. The eight hours you put in bending over your key seemed like a week. Your head swims and grows dizzy beneath its awful responsibility. No more train dispatching for me if you please. I was offered that position on this road with a comfortable salary, but told them all I wanted was a train. All those gray hairs that you notice were caused by my short experience as train dispatcher."

Horse-Car Manners.

When a gentleman boards a horse-car he should jump on to the feet of as many platform passengers as possible. By so doing he not only discovers the easy self-position of the man of society, but he also assists in the discouragement of the dangerous practice of riding on the outside of a car.

It is preferable to get on the front platform, which will give you an opportunity to open the forward door, thus ventilating the car and distributing catarrh, sore throat and pneumonia among the passengers.

Be not in an immoderate hurry when the conductor passes through the car collecting fares. Patience is a virtue, and you should do what you can to assist the conductor in cultivating it.

Never offer your seat to an elderly woman. She has not long to live, and a little rest can not materially lengthen her days. It is in youth that the seeds of disease are implanted. Therefore, you should never give up your seat to any but a young lady. You help her to build up a strong constitution by averting weariness and undue tension of the muscles.

If you can do it without making yourself sick, chew tobacco, using the straw for a cuspidor. Tobacco, you know, is a powerful disinfectant, and, besides, if passengers were too careful to preserve the cleanliness of the straw, the penurious officers might neglect to replenish it as often as sanitary considerations demanded.

Smoking, unfortunately, is forbidden, except in the open cars; but by carrying a lighted cigar into the car and letting it go out gradually, you will be enabled to permeate the interior with effluvia which will drive out any disease germs that may be floating about.

Never give your seat to a homely woman. It is the duty of a woman to be beautiful, and if she neglects that duty, take good care that you do yours by punishing her for her negligence.

Never take the child in your lap, that a gentleman may have a seat, and if the conductor suggests that children occupying seats must pay fare, refuse absolutely to notice his suggestion. Take advantage of your sex when opportunity offers. Conductors rarely put women off the cars.

When a lady leaves a car while it is in motion let her face to the rear. She will probably get a fall, but what of that? If she is a lady of spirit she is not going to be dictated to by an arrogant monopoly.

When the car stops within a few feet of where she wishes to land, no lady who respects her rights will get out. She will wait until the car starts, and then have it stopped for her individually. She has paid her fare and is entitled to her rights, and ought to have them, even if it kills the horses.

Of course it is unnecessary to remind the gentlemen that it is their bounden duty to look the ladies on the opposite seat out of countenance.

It is also unnecessrry to say to the ladies that when taking an open car they should never neglect to sit upon one of the smokers' seats. The man who smokes in public is never so happy as when a face is near to receive his fumid exhalations, and you thus contribute to his happiness, besides making yourself happy by having something to growl at.

Take Care of the Eyes.

"Nellie, I fear you will injure your eyes," I said to a young girl, who sat reading in the twilight. "My eyes are very strong," she replied, "why, I can look right straight at the sun." Now every one will acknowledge that such eyes are a great blessing, seldom possessed by the present weak-eyed generation; but I fear even Nellie's strong eyes will soon be injured if she persists in using them under such trying circumstances—reading fine print in the moonlight, or at a long distance from the lamp, or allowing the full glare of the noonday sun to reflect into her eyes from the printed page. Sewing on black goods by the lamp light she thinks nothing of, nor of sitting up until midnight half the night in the week to read an interesting book. Now all these things are hurtful to the eyes, and no more than one person in a thousand can practice them and remain uninjured. As no one can be sure of being the lucky person, it behooves all to take proper care of these priceless members.

When the eyes are tired and inflamed at night I find it rests them for the next day to bind over them a wet towel on retiring, Lately, I have laid next my eyes a little sack containing dampened salt, and find it better still. No matter if the brine finds its way beneath the closed lids; the smarting will last but a minute. Indeed I often rub it into the eyes and find it strengthens them. Years of practicing this have proved that although it will not make weak eyes strong, it will do more toward warding off the day of spectacles than an improper use of them, and a dozen bottles of eye water and boxes of salve. I became quite interested in knitting lace; but last winter I found that the necessary fine work with my reading and writing was all my eyes could endure. I have not knit six inches of lace in as many months, and although I often think of the real thread I wanted for my curtains, I know it will not pay to knit it.

The Republican

SATURDAY, June 23, 1883.

The editor of the Ashville Ægis intimates that he is ready to abandon the Democratic party should that party abandon the plank in its platform that declares for a tariff for revenue only.

This is a pretty safe threat, inasmuch as there is no likelihood of the Democratic party doing anything of that kind, and we only notice it to show that there is at least one Democratic editor in the State who thinks the tariff question bigger than everything else. We had supposed before this that all Democrats in Alabama regarded the supremacy of the whites as most nearly affecting the interests of our people, and the preservation of a republican form of Government to the whole country as of more vital importance than the tax question.

UNINTENTIONALLY WRONG.—We have a genuine regard for the editor of the Ashville Aegis and respect him for his candor and truth, and hence our surprise and pain to see him carried so far by his opposition to Mr. Randall as to dub him an "avowed protectionist."

Mr. Randall in more than one of his speeches has declared that there is no warrant in the Constitution for protection, but that in levying a tax for revenue he would discriminate in favor of our industries. This is the ground, if we understand it, occupied by Mr. Morrison, Mr. Bayard and nine tenths of the Democratic party. Moreover Mr. Randall plants himself on the platform of the National Democratic party. How then does the editor of the Aegis make it out that he is an "avowed protectionist." We ask our brother to investigate Mr. Randall's record, satisfied as we are that he will make the amende honorable if he finds he has misrepresented him. Outside of common fairness the editor of the Aegis owes this to a man who has stood between the South and ruin, as Mr. Randall did when the whole power of the Radical party was put forth to the destruction of the South, in the Force Bill.

The papers contain a most horrible account of murder and attempted murder and rape in Coosa county some days ago. A negro went to the house of Mr. Carden, and offered to hire to him. Being refused, he hung about the house until after night. When the family had retired, he placed his gun through a hole in the window, at the head of the bed, and shot Mr. Carden dead. He then demanded of the wife and mother that she send her daughter out to him. This being refused, he attempted to get into the house. The mother sent her little boy out into the yard to blow the horn for the neighbors. The negro shot him but did not kill him The boy succeeded in getting back into the house. The negro then loaded his gun again and shot the mother through a crack in the wall, and again attempted to enter. Wounded as she was, the brave woman resisted him, but in the struggle he drew her out of the house. She threw him and got back into the house again, and sent her daughter off into the woods by a back door. When the fiend learned that the girl had fled, he left the premises. He was pursued next morning, captured and hung by the mob, making a clean confession.

The little boy is badly wounded and his recovery is doubtful. Mrs. Carden's wounds are painful, though not necessarily fatal. The young lady, who was the object of the fiend's lust, is very ill from nervous prostration caused by her terrible fright.

When will the negro learn that crimes like these are followed by speedy and certain death. The more intelligent of the race, who learn of such occurrences through print, should tell them to the more ignorant among them, in order that they may be warned against such crimes.

Mr. Randall is an avowed protectionist, and we undertake to say that any democratic congressman from Alabama, who casts his vote for him for the office of speaker of next House of Representatives, will be returned to private life ever thereafter. If re-nominated after his term expires, he will be defeated before the people even if it has to be done on an independent platform sound on a tariff for revenue only.—Ashville Aegis.

As probably a majority of the Democratic Congressmen from Alabama will vote for Mr. Randall, and as probably more than one of them will be re-nominated by the Democratic party after so doing, we would ask the editor of the Aegis if he would go with the opposition as against to the Democratic nominee for Congress, in such an event?

We do not press for an answer. We recognize the delicacy of the question. But, in event the answer should be "yes," then we ask him to what party he would go? Not to the Radical party surely, for that is the party of protection for protection's sake, and moreover all the instincts of our patriotic friend would be averse to such a step. Would he form an independent party on this one issue? He is surely not foolish enough to believe that the Democrats of Alabama can divide on the tariff to any considerable extent and still elect Democrats to Congress. Does he not know that such a course would put Radicals in Congress from most of the Districts in Alabama who would vote for high protection to Northern industries and no protection to Southern liberties?

If he answers that he would not go into any such unpatriotic movement, then we ask him why forecast it into his paper and thus put such ideas in the heads of weak-kneed and weak-minded Democrats?

We are satisfied that the Aegis does not want to set up for a blusterer who threatens with no idea of carrying the threat into execution. Then what does he mean by such talk? We are honestly puzzled over that article.

The Opelika Times places Gen. Forney as a high protective tariff man. Gen. Forney is for a tariff for revenue and has always voted with that wing of our party. He voted in the last congress against the tariff commission and then voted against the bill after it was brought in and submitted. He has always voted with the tariff reformers, and we hope the Times will do him the justice to make the correction. We have only two Congressmen in Alabama who may be considered protective men, to-wit: Messrs Shelly and Hewitt, and the latter, as we understand, only goes to the length of endorsing and approving a discriminating tariff in favor of American industries, while the others, as shown by the record, are for a tariff for revenue, giving such protection, and such only, as is incident to such a system of taxation to support the Government. The vote for Speaker does not involve the question of how members of Congress stand on the tariff. In voting for Mr. Randall, if he does, Gen. Forney will be governed by considerations higher than the tariff, higher than any one plank in our party platform—the success of the Democracy in the next Presidential contest, which includes all of good to the country.

We reproduce a very sensible article from the Coosa River News this week on the subject of the Speakership. We are glad to note that this reliable democratic paper has taken ground in common with the Republican.

The main thing the Democrats have to do is to beat the Radicals in the next Presidential race. This we cannot do if we divide on side issues.

A MAN AND A TOWN.

THE STORY OF THE NOBLES IN ANNISTON.

The Pullman Enterprise Eclipsed by an Alabama Enterprise, Engineered by Georgia Business Men of English Blood—A Story of Pluck Discretion and Perseverance.

Special Cor. Atlanta Constitution.

ANNISTON, ALA., June 5, 1883.—I have a story to tell this morning, that will read like a romance.

Not a love story, but romantic in the patience and heroism of its chief actor—in the curious hinging of accident and fate—in its marvelous delopment and fruition—in the tremendous import of the volume of which it is the opening chapter.

It is the story of a Man and a Town!

Eleven years ago this month I ran across the man in one of the streets of Rome. It was mid-day. The glare of the sun was intolerable, and the dust through which he plodded was stifling. He was illy-dressed, haggard and anxious-looking. Without money or strong friends, he was staggering under debt and the indifference of those who should have helped him, and the suspicion of those who underestimated him. His struggle appeared to me then utterly hopeless, but I felt as his earnest figure passed through the dusty street, that, poor and without resource as he was, there was reward in the future for so much of energy and ability, and patience.

Yesterday I sat with this man in the piazza of his home. And from that piazza over a half-mile stretch of clover slopes and terraced lawns, I saw a town of more than 3,000 people, with factories, furnaces, shops, mills, and long lines of houses, churches, stores and hotels. This town, with every house, big or small, belongs to the man and his partners. It is set in the midst of a tract of sixty-five square miles, with vast forests, fields and mountains of ore, every foot of which belongs to the same men.

This change has been worked by the most legitimate means. Speculation has had nothing to do with it. To build up the man the town has been builded and his enrichment has enriched his section. And here is the story of how it was done.

A SCRAP OF HISTORY.

In 1854 Samuel Noble, Sr., an Englishman, ran a machine shop in Pennsylvania, at Reading, I think. He had six boys, every one a stalwart, making such a family as gives England its conservatism and strength. He came south to visit the Ducktown copper mines, and hearing that a man named Hume, living near Rome, wanted an engine built, went by to see him. He was persuaded by the people of that city to move his establishment south. He chartered a steamer, and boarding it with his family and machinery, sailed for Savannah, and thus became a Georgian.

Of the six sons, Sam Jr., soon went to the front, gradually becoming the managing head for the family. The war left their works demolished, and the family practically penniless. Sam borrowed $5,000 from George Quintard, of New York, without note or security, and burying himself in the woods started a saw-mill. With the product of this he re built a steamer for the Coosa river, and then supplied lumber for bridges and trestles. From this point the Nobles re-established their iron works, and later with a stock company, rolling mill and nail works. Without capital they struggled through the fluctuations in iron and the panic—barely holding their heads above water, and fighting a losing fight. At length Sam Noble, made up his mind that he must seek a new field and new adjustments.

FOUNDING THE TOWN OF ANNISTON.

He drifted into Alabama, and with consummate knowledge of ore and mines, prospected here and there amid the then undeveloped hills. At length, he found, about three miles from Oxford, a literal mountain of brown hematite ore, with heavily wooded foot-hills, guarding the entrance to a valley of surpassing beauty, despite its shabby garniture.

"When I first saw that mountain of ore," said Mr. Noble to me, "I determined to own it."

And shortly afterwards, in 1872, he did buy it, getting 2,000 acres for $20,000. He did not have the tenth of this to invest, and therefore took in two partners, Messrs. Vandiver and Neff, who put up the money. In less than a year on the property as a credit, he bought his partners out, giving them 100 per cent profit on what they had put in.

About that time he went to Charleston, for the purpose of selling wheels to Mr. Alfred Tyler, on the Carolina road. While Tyler he noted an old manding appearance. At length this ral D. H. T

"While I was building the old Macon and Western road in Georgia, I become interested in the minerals of upper Alabama. Do you know anything of good iron properties over there?"

Mr. Noble at once described his own property. General Tyler promised to call and examine it. He did so, and was delighted. The result of this accidental meeting was that a partnership was formed, the three Tylers and three Nobles taking equal halves, and General Alfred Tyler and Sam Noble put in charge. A furnace for making charcoal iron was put up, and a few houses for operatives built.

"That was just ten years ago," said Mr. Noble. "There was not a house to be seen here then. These fields and streets were then bald red hills or dense forests. A wilder or more desolate looking spot you could not have found. With every natural advantage, it had been gashed and starved by man, and presented to the casual observer but little attraction. However, we started a furnace here, and were soon at work."

HOW THE TOWN WAS BUILT.

The furnace once established, the nucleus of the town was set. Then instead of skimming the earnings for dividends, every dollar the furnace made, was put into improvements. Another furnace was added, machine shops and foundry erected, a cotton factory started, and stores opened. All the time, the earnings were turned back into new houses, new shops and machinery, and the rent and earnings of these in turn directed to building still others. As a result of this admirable policy, at the end of ten years, the partners find themselves the owners of a young city worth two million dollars at least—built out of an original capital of $140,000, and not one dollar due on any of the property.

As the first principle of the owners was to put the earnings into the betterment and and extension of the town, the second principle was to utilize every resource of the property. For example, the wood to build the houses is cut off the forests of the company by the company's employes, sawed and planed by the company's mills, and fashioned into houses by the company's carpenters. Huge fields of grain are planted for the use of the town on the company's lands, by the company's farmers, and ground in the company's mill, and sold from the company's store. The ore for the furnaces is mined from the company's banks by the company's miners, hauled in the company's wagons, burned with charcoal from the company's forests, coaled by the company's employes, and is fluxed by limestone cut from the company's pits. These furnaces yield $1,500 to $2,000 daily in cash production, not a dollar of which goes outside the town for raw material. The engines that turn the works are made by the Nobles, and even the brick used for building were made by the company until the the demand outran its capacity, and it bought 5,000,000 Atlanta made brick the other day to supplement their own yield. So that there is a continual inflow of money, with the smallest possible amount going out.

The third principle was that the town must be started right. That is, it must be laid off properly, outlined with system, its streets made firm and regular, its parks and ground located judiciously, pure and abundant water provided, perfect drainage established, and its general design so defined that it could not become confused by future miscellaneous building. To do all this it was necessary that the control be held in a few hands, and that one purpose should breathe through every impulse. Messrs. Tyler and Noble therefore declined to sell one foot of land to any outsider.

The result has shown that they acted wisely. The plan of the town is fixed, and a most admirable plan it is. The streets are macadamized beautifully and drained to rock gutters and curbings. A large force of hands is kept month after month extending the macadam. Trees are planted in almost endless avenues. A system of water works, that cost I believe $80,000, brings sparkling water to every door, gives protection against fire, irrigates lawns and feeds fountains. Parks have been set apart and enclosed. Churches and school houses have been built. A cemetery has been built and beautified, and in its soil rests the remains of General Tyler who crowned his illustrous life with the suggestion of this town, was its strongest friend, and expressed with dying lips the wish that he might be laid here for his final sleep.

Had these improvements been attempted with a mixed citizenship, they would have failed. Cross purposes, petty jealousies, rings and jobs, old fogies and the like, would never have permitted such liberal expenditure. As it is the work has been done well, cheaply, in order and with system.

ONE DECADE'S WORK AND THE OUTLOOK FOR ANOTHER.

It is interesting to note what ten years have done, with a town started on an Alabama mountain side, with less than $150,000 capital, and a platform of—The profits invested in extension, Every resource made to yield its product, and One management in charge of everything.

As noted above a population of between 3,000 and 4,000 is attained. Ninety-five per cent of this population is provided with profitable, steady labor, sure pay and good homes. Their houses are built with plastered rooms 18 feet square, wide halls, and each has a patch of ground. Besides the two furnaces, which coin wood, ore and limestone into a daily income of $1,500, the cotton factory, the planing and grist mills the foundry and machine shops, there are immense buildings going up to accommodate engine and machine works, that will give employment to 100 additional hands Plans for extensive car works have been made, and the ground is now cleared for the building. Two coke furnaces now at work, and a cotton seed oil mill erected. Mr Noble has just bought five million brick from Messrs. Lockett & Co., to be delivered between June 1st and December 1st. These will be used in new buildings and will supplement the kilns of the company now burning steadily.

A force of carpenters and masons ranging from 60 to 125 men is kept constantly at work in building. A block of stores is just being finished, new streets of buildings for the workingmen are extending rapidly, and the plans are just drawn for a hotel to cost $30,000 to $50,000. Every department of the work of the town is kept separate. The streets are in charge of a supervisor who has all the men and wagons he needs and who is constantly pushing the improvement on. The farm hands are in charge of a competent man who, with 28 hands, horses and the best implements and machines, has the farm settlement away from the town, watches the herds and flocks, and raises huge crops of hay for the 200 mules of the company, and grain for its mills. A mayor elected by the people has charge of the city, and a marshal enforces his rule. A happier, healthier or more contented community I never saw, nor so well arranged for the opinhave

The Speakership—"Go Slow."

Coosa River News.

Some of our cotemporaries have, we think, been unduly exercising themselves over the speakership of the next House of Representatives. In their zeal to be of service to the party some of them have declared in advance who must and who must not be elected Speaker.

Bill Arp, in one of his late inimitable letters, discussing the tariff question in his peculiar style, advised his Georgia friends to "go slow!" We submit to our Alabama confreres that there is a world of wisdom in those simple words of homely caution.

What we want is harmony in ranks. No contention or strife among brethren, no bickerings over questions of mere party policy or political expediency; no pharisaical assumption; no advising of patriots and statesmen to take back seats; no more "democratic blunders" to give aid and comfort to the enemy.

What we most want and must have is a democratic president. To this end we must have concord, union, a perfect welding of the party. Every democrat of every hue, the blue and the better blue, if there be such distinction, should burnish his armor to fight the common enemy and not use his weapons upon his political brother merely because he uses a gun of different calibre or of slightly different patent. Already some good men and would be leaders of the party have shown a feverish anxiety to thrust forward the tariff question and make it the great, if not "only" test of qualification for the speakership of the next House, and in this have unwittingly done harm.

Can we afford to take any risk by encouraging premature discussion and unnecessary dissentions among ourselves? Can we afford to misrepresent the views and traduce the good names of the representative men of our party in order to vindicate the wisdom of our construction of party creed? Can we afford, in advance of a party platform adopted by the body of the national democracy in convention assembled, to denounce true and tried democrats as untrustworthy, or make them take back seats, because of a slight difference between them and ourselves on a question upon which the party has for a long time agreed to disagree, and upon which our enemies are themselves divided?

It seems to us there is enough in the tyranny, oppression, extravagance and corruption of the republican party to furnish us food for thought and subjects for discussion, without the necessity of giving ourselves up to fratricidal warfare.

Why should we trouble ourselves about who is the "fourth" man for Randall, or the fourth man for any body else? Messrs. Randall, Carlisle, Cox, Blackburn, Morrison and Springer, whose friends have suggested their names in connection with the speakership, have been honored by democratic constituencies, and we suppose, and are ready to believe, are all sound democrats and able men. A host of others might be mentioned whose ability, long service and fidelity to the party would entitle them to all the honors the House could bestow.

We will have from our state in the next congress eight thoughtful, prudent, farsee ing representatives, whose duty it will be to aid in the organization of the House. Their interests are fully identified with the best interests of our people and our party. Their position will enable them the better to determine the needs of the party, and in view of the great stake for which we are playing, we feel confident they will discharge their duty wisely and well. Moving on a plane of the broadest statesmanship they will, from motives of unselfish patriotism, aid in the selection of a sound democrat for speaker; one whose ability, peculiar fitness for the place, experience, capacity for work, force of character, and with such a reputation, private and political, as will reflect honor upon the party and contribute largely to favorable results in the campaign of 1884.

There is to be a gathering of all the Roumanian gypsies in the country at Utica, in July, to do honor to their queen, whose name is Mary Lovell, and is now with a band in camp at Philadelphia. At least this is what the son, who is chief of the band, says. According to his story, Queen Mary, who has just arrived in this country to look after the welfare of her subjects, is recognized by all the wandering tribes of Roumania. She is seventy-six years old, and succeeded to the sovereignty upon the death of her mother, Queen Anne.

The Scottsboro Herald says that Frey, the post office detective, did not capture Lee, the swindling postmaster in Dekalb county, that Lee did not fire at anybody, that no mule was shot and that Frey did not get hurt—in fact wasn't on hand when Lee was captured. And yet Mr. Frey is reported as having reported a terrible battle between himself and Lee and that he was wounded and his mule was killed by Lee. In view of the emphatic declaration of the Herald it is in order for Mr. Frey to explain. Has he been gulling the P. O. Department?

Chattanooga and Opelika will celebrate the 4th of July.

NOTICE NO. 2

LAND OFFICE

of Mobile in Jack-

Mr. Percy Clark, of Selma, is here for the summer. The family of Dr C. J. Clark will be up soon.

Capt Jas. Savage was here Tuesday. He has recently been to Florida and is much enamored of the country.

We are under obligations to Hon. S. J. Randall for the Compendium of the Tenth Census of the United States.

It is said the well on the East side of our public square has valuable medicinal qualities. Dispeptics who have been drinking the water report marvellous cures.

We have received, through the courtesy of Rev. Mr. Lane an invitation to attend the reception given by the young ladies and gentlemen of Hearn School, Cave Spring, Ga., June 22nd.

Misses Dora and Mary Lou ...rook, daughters of Mr. Sam ...rook of Alexandria valely, were in Jacksonville this week. They have just returned from Ward's Seminary at Nashville.

There will be a Mite Sociable at Mrs. Morgan's, Tuesday night 26th. Given for the benefit of the Episcopal church. Admission fee 10cts. All grown people are invited to attend. Ice cream and other refreshments will be served free of charge.

Some Old Things.

There is a heating stove in our town that was hauled here by wagon all the way from Philadelphia before the days of railroads. It is in fine condition and is worth more, intrinsically than most of the newer patterns of this day.

Judge Walker drives a buggy which he has used over forty years. He has never had it repaired. The wheels, and all its parts are perfect, and is to day, of greater value than any new $100 buggy of late construction.

Just as our forms go to press we learn of the sad death Wednesday of Mrs. J. W. McDaniel, who lived some miles above Jacksonville. She was in a wagon with her husband, who was driving. In the wagon was a large harrow with iron teeth. In passing a tree the harrow was knocked from the wagon and the lady with it. The harrow fell upon her and some of the teeth pierced her head, killing her instantly. The stricken husband passed Jacksonville Thursday with the remains for interment in Calhoun county. These are the facts as we got them.

At this writing, Thursday, the examination exercises of Calhoun College are progressing. Patrons express themselves highly pleased with the progress their children have made. The exercises have been very interesting. To morrow evening, Friday, will be closing day, and a large attendance is expected. Orations, recitations from select authors and music will fill up an enjoyable programme. This examination closes the school of Prof. Borden. After this the building will be surrendered to the State for her Normal School.

Rev. J. B. Stevenson will preach in the Methodist church at this place, the first Sunday in July at 10½ a. m. and 8 p. m. He will preach at Weaver's Station the 2nd Sunday in July. The night of the 2nd Sunday in July he will commence a protracted meeting at the Methodist church in Jacksonville to continue several days.

Since putting up the above, a card has been received from Rev. J. B. Stevenson stating that Dr. Brown, of Florence, Ala, will preach at Weaver's Station at 10½ a. m. the 2nd Sunday of July and at 8. p. m. in Jacksonville, and remain with us several days.

It will be remembered that some months ago a lawyer and member of the Legislature, at Uniontown, in Pensylvania, named Dukes, shot and killed a man named Capt. Nutt. Dukes wrote letters to Nutt charging that his (Nutt's) daughter was guilty of adultery. When Nutt went to Duke's room to call him to account he was shot down like a dog. A petit jury, strange to say, acquitted Dukes, to the great indignation of the public. He was not allowed to take his seat in the Legislature and proceedings had been instituted by the lawyers to disbar him.

Some days ago Dukes passed the son of Capt. Nutt, (less than 21 years old) and laughed in his face. This was more than human nature could bear. The boy procured a pistol, and the next time Dukes passed him, he fired four shots into his body, killing him instantly. He was arrested and put in jail, but public sympathy is with him.

Dukes had been frequently warned that he had better leave Uniontown, as the boy would kill him, but he said he would live there or lie in the graveyard. On his dead body was found a bowie knife and repeater. No lawyer in Uniontown could be found who would prosecute the boy, but some eminent m... unteered to defend him.

Obituary.

Mark W., son of Mark and Sarah Driskell, near this place, died at the residence of his father, the 15th inst, after a short illness. He was born Dec 21. 1875 and was consequently 7 years, 5 months and 25 days of age at the time of his untimely death. He was a most interesting and promising child and was the only son. The stricken parents have the sympatyy of our community in this their great bereavement

Oxanna.

An enthusiastic friend at Oxford sends us the following from that enterprising town. As soon as we recover from the Florida fever Capt. Savage has thrown us i to by his glowing account of the profits of orange culture, we will go. We can't stand it all at once:

OXFORD, ALA, June 19th.

DEAR LON:—Why don't you come down and see us? You ought to just be here some evening and hear us all talk up Oxanna. We talk a heap and build about an average of two cotton factories and from one to three iron furnaces a day here now, and all we want is lots of good nice level places and good water and wind. We are going to have a street car line from this place to Anniston propelled by a gas dummy. We have a party to furnish the gas. We are bound to have the gas. The boom is on us. We can't help it and are not responsible for it. We feel sorry for you people up there. Why don't you get up some excitement, if nothing more than to commit suicide on somebody. Come down and listen at us two days, and we will guarantee you will not sleep for a week afterwards. Thanking you for kindness and favors shown me while there last, I remain yours, under excitement.

SASOMETER.

FLOWERY YARD LOCALS

Rev. J. B. Stevenson filled his appointment at Union last Sunday. His sermon was able and full of instruction.

Miss Lizzie Linder, left last Friday for Atlanta, Ga., and Lynchburg Va., where she will spend the summer months with relatives.

The E. & W. narrow gauge Rail Road is moving on rapidly. I understand the cars are now running some 3 or 4 miles below Hebron church. It seems that Calhoun is destined to be the first county in the state. She is healthy and well watered, and rail roads are running through north and south, east and west; Oxford and Anniston are stretching their wings for one great city; and since we are rid of that terrible enemy whiskey, let everybody push her on to prosperity, let our watchword be "Onward" until we make her, not only the first in the State, but the proudest and first of the whole land.

BILL ARP jr.

Stock Law Again.

Editor Republican.

Not long since there appeared in the colums of your valuable paper a sketch from one of your subscribers, in which he discussed the advantage and necessity of a stock law; also one from Tarrapin Creek in favor of the same, and I now take this occasion to say to both of these gentlemen that I am with them, first, last and all the time. If any right-thinking man will look the matter squarely in the face he cannot help being in favor of stock law. The time has been in this country, that a stock law would have been a great disadvantage to the poor man—that is, to that class of poor men who did not own lands, but the time has come now that a stock law will be as much to the interest of the man who does not own land as to the man who does, from this fact, that a great majority of the men who do not own land, both white and black, are tenants, and the burden of rail-splitting and fence building rests chiefly upon their shoulders, whether they are paid to do it or not, for it is a custom almost all over this country that a tenant must split so many rails, and do so much fencing before he can get the land to cultivate; and I will here state that I am a tenant, and I know something about what it costs to split rails and build fences to protect crops from the ravages of worthless stock. Last year I split rails and built a $60 fence around a $40 field to keep out a $10 cow, and I say to my fellow tenants and to the voters of Calhoun county let us do away with these old rotten fences, that are giving us so much trouble throughout the year, and get up a better system of farming, because it is as much to the interest of the tenant to improve the lands and get them in a high state of cultivation as it is to the man who owns the land, because we are all dependent upon the production of the soil for a living, and if we were done with the fencing buisness we could then turn our time and attention to the improvement of the land, which is greatly needed, all over this country. In conclusion I will say that I am ready to vote for the man for the next legislature that is a stock law man and no other.

D. T. SMITH.

Nobody has ever had any reason for thinking Mr. Williams a protectionist, nor has any one ever said that he was pledged to Mr. Randall, and if he does vote for him for Speaker, it will be outside of his tariff views. We believe that Mr. Randall's election as Speaker is necessary to the election of a Democratic President in 1884, hence we should not hesitate to cast our vote for him, tariff or no tariff.—Tuskegee News.

"My Son, I Love You Still."

STEUBENVILLE, O., June 19.—A brutal murder was committed at Mingo junction last night. The junction is located three miles from Steubenville. Peter Mulholland is the murderer, and his gray-haired mother the victim. Pete is a worthless young man who bears a bad reputation. He was on a spree yesterday, and went home last night about 7 o'clock. His mother met him at the door. Her eyes filled with tears at seeing him intoxicated, and she begged him to let liquor alone. This enraged the fellow, and uttering a volley of oaths he drew a revolver. Pointing it at the old lady's forehead, he fired. The ball entered the head of the unfortunate old lady just above the bridge of the nose. She fell at the feet of her son, and expired in a few minutes. Just before she died she feebly exclaimed to her son, "Pete, my boy, I love you still," and breathed her last. She was sixty five years of age, and a kind, affectionate woman. Mulholland was promptly arrested and lodged in jail. He is twenty-four years of age and unmarried. He and his mother lived alone near the outskirts of the town.

On the 16th inst. 178 children were killed at Sunderland, England. About 3000 children were in Victoria Hall, to witness the sleight of hand of a conjurer. In passing out the door they became jammed so that no more than one could pass at a time. One child tripped and fell on the stairs. This threw others, and the crowd behind pressing forward piled one upon the other until 178 were smothered. Many have since died. The scene when the parents gathered at the hall and recognized among the dead their little ones was harrowing in the extreme. The catastrophe is similar to that at Brooklyn bridge a few weeks ago.

"Sam," said the old man as he let the maul down beside the rail-cut, "this 'ere fence has got to go up if it busts the country. I'll shave the time down to two weeks, and if you'll pitch in right smart you can call me old man after noon to-morrow."

Sam agreed. It was better than working for $16 a month.

"Look out," exclaimed a man over whose face a barber was moving a razor, "you are cutting off my moustache."

"You didn't tell me not to cut it," the barber replied. "With me a man must always specify."

"All right," said the customer. When the barber had finished, the man arose from the chair, approached the artist and gave him a violent kick.

"Look out, you are kicking me," howled the barber.

"You didn't tell me not to kick you. With me a man must always specify."

"Oh, no, sor, I still have a job."

"Every truth has two sides; look at both before committing yourself to either." Kidney-Wort challenges the closest scrutiny of its ingredients and its grand results. It has nothing to fear from truth. Doctors may disagree as to the best methods and remedies, for the cure of constipation and disordered liver and kidneys. But those that have used Kidney-Wort, agree that it is by far the best medicine known. Its action is prompt, thorough and lasting.

During many months previous to taking the Remedy my hands and fingers would be very much swollen and stiff every morning; my left side, in the region of stomach and spleen, was very large and sensitive; at times I would be taken with severe cramps over teh spleen, and be obliged to apply mustard or cayenne for temporary relief; I was very nervous nights and could not sleep; I was obliged to be very particular in my diet and my physical system was sadly demoralized. Since I have taken Hunt's Remedy systematically all these things have changed; I have no swollen hands or limbs, no pains or cramps in the side, can eat all kinds of food, sleep soundly and get th roughly rested, and my kidneys are active and perform their functions promptly, thus taking out of the system all the poisonous secretions which contaminate the whole system where the kidneys do not act efficiently. My friends, what Hunt's Remedy has done for me it will do for all of you. I believe it to be the only sure cure for all diseases of the Kidneys, Liver and Urinary organs. Respectfully,

How to Secure Health.

It seems strange that any one will suffer from the many derangements brought on by an impure condition of the blood when Scovill's Sarsaparilla and Stillingia, or Blood and Liver Syrup, will restore perfect health to the physical organization. It is the best Blood Purifier ever discovered, effectually curing Scrofula, Syphilitic disorders, Weakness of the Kidneys, Erysipelas, Malaria, all nervous disorders and Debility, Bilious Complaints and all diseases indicating an impure condition of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Stomach, etc. It corrects indigestion. A single bottle will prove to you its merits as a health renewer, for it acts like a charm, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature, having a tendency to lessen the natural vigor of the brain and nervous system.

Force of habit: The following good story is told of the secretary of the San Francisco Philharmonic Society: A gentleman rang his door bell one evening and asked if a Mr. —— lived there. Here is a bit of economy: Examine the squashes in the cellar; if they show any signs of decay, bring them out to the light; cut them in pieces; bake the good part in the shell and when tender scrape it all out, and dry it just as our grandmothers dried pumpkin for pies, before pumpkin meal and canned pumpkin were dreamed of; then, when ready to use for pies, soak the dried squash all night in a little water, or in sweet milk, then proceed as for fresh squash pies. This is an economy that will be appreciated by every member of the family, for the pies are excellent.

A delicious cream cake to be eaten while fresh is made of half a pound of flour, three ounces of butter, one teaspoonful of baking powder, two heaping tablespoonfuls of sugar, or a small teacupful, a pinch of salt, a teaspoonful of grated lemon peel, a cupful of cream that is not entirely sweet, and one egg. Beat the butter to a cream, and mix the flour with it, then add the other ingredients; mix thoroughly, and bake in a moderate oven. This is especially nice with fresh fruit.

A simple but very handsome scarf for a small table is made by taking three strips of broad ribbon, have the centre strip of a contrasting color; for instance, if the two outer pieces are of the ombre or shaded ribbons so much in use a year or two ago, let the centre be of cardinal; turn the ends back to make them pointed, and put a tassel on each point; baste the ribbon to a lining of silesia, old silk, or even of canton flannel, and where the edgeworks join, fancy stitches.

If you are so fortunate as to have velvet or even satin-lined cases for teaspoons and forks, do not read this: To protect the silver in common use from scratching, take a strip of the heaviest canton flannel; have it wide enough so that after laying the forks or spoons on it, the cloth can be folded over them; stitch a band of the flannel to the upper part of it and fasten, leaving spaces or loops through which to slip the silver.

Novel and strikingly elegant piano and table scarfs are made of plush, with figures applied in odd and out of-the-way designs. These figures may be purchased at art stores; they are cut from Turkish scarfs or shawls, and are to be pasted to the plush, and then, after being outlined with gilt thread, are to be used as a sort of centre for long stitches in all colored embroidery silks. Much ingenuity and expression of individual taste may be exercised in the embroidery.

Do not line your pretty willow basket. If you wish to brighten it with a suggestion of color, run a ribbon through the row of holes near the top, and tie in a bow at its sides. Cut a piece of pasteboard the exact size of the bottom of the basket, cover this with silesia, cashmere or silk, and tack with a few stitches to the bottom of the basket.

Serviceable housekeepers' aprons are made by taking two long breadths of fine white cotton cloth. Cut one breadth in two parts, and put one of these on at each side, so that there will not be a seam in the front of the apron; make with a deep hem and broad insertion of rick-rack, or of Hamburg, or of darned net. Tie with long and broad strings.

Corn zone is highly recommended as a breakfast dish. Take one heaping coffee cup of boiled hominy, beat it, and stir in a tablespoonful of butter, three eggs, and nearly one pint of sweet milk; as much corn-meal may be added as will serve to thicken this till it is like the batter for the "johnnycake." Bake in a quick oven, and serve hot.

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and the people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop," or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hop on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

DR. RADWAY'S

THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER.

Pure blood makes sound flesh, strong bones, a clear skin. If you would have your flesh firm, your bones sound without caries, and your complexion fair, use

Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent.

A remedy composed of ingredients of extraordinary medical properties, essential to purify, heal, repair and invigorate the broken-down and wasted body—Quick, Pleasant, Safe and Permanent in its treatment and cure.

No matter by what name the complaint may be designated, whether it be scrofula, consumption, syphilis, ulcers, sores, tumors, boils, erysipelas, or salt rheum, diseases of the lungs, kidneys, bladder, womb, skin, liver, stomach or bowels, either chronic or constitutional, the virus is in the Blood which supplies the waste and builds and repairs these organs and wasted tissues of the system. If the blood is unhealthy, the process of repair must be unsound.

The Sarsaparillian Reso

Not only is a compensating remedy, but secures the harmonious action of each of the organs. It establishes throughout the entire system functional harmony, and supplies the blood vessels with a pure and healthy current of new life. The Skin, after a few days' use of the Sarsaparillian, becomes clear and beautiful. Pimples, blotches, black spots and skin eruptions are removed; sores and ulcers soon cured. Persons suffering from scrofula, eruptive diseases of the eyes, mouth, ears, legs, throat and glands, that have accumulated and spread, either from uncured diseases or mercury, or from use of corrosive sublimate, may rely upon a cure if the Sarsaparillian is continued a sufficient time to make its impression on the system.

One bottle contains more of the active principles of Medicines than any other Preparation. Taken in teaspoonful doses, while others require five or six times as much.

One Dollar a Bottle.

THE SONG OF THE SWING.

Climb into my lap, little girl, little girl,
Since you wistfully-gazing stand;
Climb into my lap of gray old pine,
Lay hold of my hempen hand.

A wonderful trip, little girl, little girl,
We will take in a wonderful way,
From the wonderful earth toward the wonderful skies
On this wonderful summer's day.

Softly, and slowly, at first, we'll stir,
As the shy, wild creatures pass,
Scarce bending the tops of the clover blossoms,
Or moving the feathery grass.

Then up—up—up—where the blossom-clouds
Shut close 'round the robin's nest.
Peep quick! Can you see the deep blue eggs
She hides 'neath her soft, warm breast?

Now you can tell why the bobolink
When from meadow-grass he springs,
Carols with joy as he feels the air
Pass under his outspread wings!

Ah, down—down—down—with a sinking swoop
That makes your heart stand still!
Look up—at the arching apple-bough!
And out—at the distant hill!

It may be, the trout with the self-same sigh
Drops down to the depths of the pool,
Leaving the sun-bright ripples above
For the shadows safe and cool.

A bird or a fish or a butterfly,
Or a bee in a bed of thyme—
You shall know all their joys, little girl, little girl,
If into my lap you'll climb!

UNA.

For the first time in my life—nearly seventeen years and a quarter—I was all alone in the wide, wide world, to be precise, in that bit of it which lies between the Paddington station and Bath. I had all but missed the train, so that my uncle had only time to hurry me into a first-class carriage, wherein a solitary lady was already seated, and to give me a solemn injunction to get Aunt Margery to telegraph when I "turned up all right," before the train dashed away.

"All right!" Of course I shall be all right! I should think, at seventeen and nearly a quarter, I might be trusted to take care of myself during a three hour's journey; the more so as my uncle had "put me in at one end," and my aunt would "take me out at the other."

As soon as I had arranged myself and my belongings comfortably in my corner, I took a survey of my fellow passenger, a grim, iron-gray old woman in an exasperating bonnet, who was looking, not daggers—that is much too pointed and brilliant a simile—but rusty nails of the jaggedest description, at my poor little hat; such an attractive one as it was, too, with the most piquant little wag-wing imaginable brooding over it with outstretched wings. For my part, I think, when one has a pretty face, it is wicked to spoil it by a dowdy hat. I should have attracted much more attention if I had worn an exasperating distinguisher like my fellow-traveler's, with an aggravating bow at the top, and, besides, Tom would not have liked it.

I was rapidly losing my temper—it was too provoking. Here was somebody evidently just as ready to find fault and take care of me as anybody at home. My only comfort was a hope that she might get out at the next station, or at all events, at some distance from Bath. Ah, how little I knew what was coming, or I should have felt glad to have had her glaring twice as grimly from the opposite seat!

"Traveling alone?"

"Yes."

What a very unnecessary question I thought.

"You are too young and too pretty to be permitted to do so."

I meekly answered that my youth and prettiness were "faults" over which I had no control, and hinted at the possibility that time might be expected to cure both, if only I lived long enough.

She smiled—yes, really; not a bad smile, either.

"While waiting for that, you should have somebody to take care of you."

"Take care of me!" I exclaimed, with a little shudder of disgust. "I am quite able to take care of myself—indeed, I am tired of being taken care of. I am almost worn out. Besides, I have been at two garden parties, and have long since left the school-room," (with dignity).

"My dear, the school room would be the best place for you for the next half-dozen years. I must leave you at the next station, but I will tell the guard to look after you. You will learn in time how good a thing it is to be cared for. Una without her lion would never get safely through the world."

The train stopped; I helped her to gather all her bags and rugs.

"Good-bye, my dear; your little face has made the day look brighter to an old woman; so you have my leave to keep it unchanged as long as you can," and she actually patted my cheek with a kind old hand as she passed out.

I watched her take her place in a little basket carriage that was waiting for her—watched the old bald-headed man servant stand, hat in hand, evidently giving her all the story of life at home in her absence—and felt sorry, as I returned her good-bye nod, when the carriage moved out of sight down a shady country road. I followed her in fancy to a flowery country home, where I felt sure that she lived cosily with old servants, quaint furniture and old pet dogs, cats and birds. How little I then thought that one day I should——. But I forget; we must not anticipate, as real authors say—that must come in its own place. I had not even seen Tom then.

The train had stopped at a quiet little station, and was just beginning to move on past the roses, hollyhocks, when the door suddenly swung open, and a man jumped in. One glance satisfied me that he would not improve on acquaintance. Tom has told me since that he was a "cad," and, if a "cad" is an odious, vulgar, red haired person, with unwashed hands covered with coarse rings, a sky-blue satin tie, and an overpowering odor of bad tobacco—I know the difference quite well, for Tom never smokes any but the very best Manilas, and I quite enjoy the smell—then most decidedly he was rightly designated.

I saw all this at a single glance, as one does sometimes, and bent steadily over my book, wishing that the hour which would bring me to dear Aunt Margery was over. Presently I was reading something so amusing that I had forgotten everything beside. The train had left the little station, far behind, and was going at full speed, when suddenly a horrid voice close to my ear made me start, and I looked up to see the "cad's" hideous face close to mine such a wicked, leering face!

"Take off that veil, miss; I'm sure a whiff of fresh air would do you good. This carriage is awful muggy"—that was the creature's very expression—"muggy!" "Besides, its desperate bad for your eyes to read through that speckled stuff."

Without replying, I bent my head lower over my book, but the letters were getting confused, and my heart was beating with fright.

"Poor little thing! Deaf is she?" and he took the seat opposite, and leaned across, so that I had to shrink into my corner to avoid his touch. Poor little Una needed her lion now.

"Bad for the eyes, miss, and such pretty shiners as yours, are too good to be wasted on that stupid book. Give a fellow a peep at them."

And a great red hand advanced toward my veil.

I could only cower into my corner with a great cry of terror—one helpless call on "Uncle," knowing the while how far away he was, and how unconscious of his poor little Polly's trouble.

In putting up his hand to my veil, the man touched me, and the touch, slight as it was, roused within me a fury of anger such as I had never felt before, and I hope never to feel again; it gave me back my voice.

"You shall not! How dare you! You must not touch me!—uncle will kill you!"

The man laughed at my puny rage.

"Kill me for taking care of you! If he does not wish others to fill his place, he should look after you better, and not let you out alone. You had better be civil or——"

He drew out a large clasp-knife as he spoke and began deliberately to open it looking at me all the while. It was come at last; I should never, never see home again! One flash of thought, which seemed in a second to take in all my past, with its little discontents, naughtiness and great happiness—my aunt's anguish when she found me lying dead—uncle's opening of the telegram which would bring the news—the darkened home, the broken hearts which they would surely carry till they died, the remembrance of the dreadful fate of their wilful, but oh, the loving darling—all this occurred so vividly to me that, with a great cry for help to Heaven, I fell at the man's feet, and entreated him not to kill me.

"Kill you! I thought it was your uncle who was to kill me! Bless your little heart, I am going to take care of you. You look pale. Now didn't you come off in too great a hurry to have time for breakfast? Have a bit of luncheon"—stopping to take a black bag from under the seat. "I always go about provided with something good. I'm a soft-hearted boy, I am, and never see a fine young woman suffer, if I can help it. Peck a bit now—do; you have a hungry look.,'

What should I—must I—do? I sat up, and said as steadily as I could, choking back the tears—for I would not cry before him:

"I am not hungry; I will not eat. Do not speak to me any more. You must not—I am a lady."

"A lady! I know that. Do you think I'd be so good to you if you were not? I know a lady when I see her—and a hungry lady, too—I knew you was. Come, peck a bit. Don't be bashful."

By this time he had unlocked the bag and taken from it, yes, it may appear improbable, but oh! it is dreadfully true—a turnip—a great unboiled turnip, a turnip still covered with the soil of the field from which the wretch had taken it! He began to scrape and pare it while I looked on.

Was he mad? I would try to please him and do as he wished, and then perhaps he would not hurt me. I should soon be with my aunt now, and at that thought I felt the tears coming again, but opened my eyes widely and bit my lips hard—the tears did not fall. I crushed them back, and sat watching my companion till, having peeled the turnip to his satisfaction, he cut off a thick slice and handed it to me. Raw turnip! And touched by these fingers.

"Come, take it, my beauty—a peach ripe and downy as your own cheek. Peaches is dear too, this season; but I give no heed to that. If so be as I find a pretty girl to eat 'em I don't grudge the money. Come, peck away; or do you want me to feed you? No, you shan't have it without 'thank you.' After all my trouble that ain't manners," with a significant look at the knife.

"Thank you!" I said, eagerly. I took the slice of turnip—and began to eat—yes, I ate it all, every mouthful making me feel more ill. Another slice was offered, I took it and began to eat, but my throat seemed to be closing—I could not swallow.

"Come, finish it. Good, isn't it? The ladies are always fond of a bit of fruit. Don't be bashful—I've something here for you to wash it down. Nothing like a drop of brandy to make it agree with you," and he touched the neck of a black bottle which stuck out of his pocket.

What would become of me? I had once seen a dreadful woman for a few moments at home—a new cook she was—who was, oh! so frightful. Nurse told me she had taken brandy and was drunk. I had thought her mad. If he had made me drink it, and if, when Aunt Margery found me, I—but no, this I would not do; he might kill me first, I went on eating the turnip, and all the while I prayed earnestly for rescue. Was my poor prayer answered? The train began to slacken its speed—it stopped; but there was no station in sight. I think it was a siding or something of that kind.

At the side of the carriage where I was sitting, there was a steep bank which shut out all hope; at the other side were several lines of rail; beyond was the open country. In an instant my torturer was at my window. With an oath he commanded me to "be still, and stay where I was." I heard some one pass, and in reply to a question, I suppose, say that we had been shunted to allow a special train to go by—it would pass in three minutes. I called, but very faintly, I am afraid, for no one answered, and the "cad" turned on me so fiercely that I dare not try again.

The special train swept by, but I hardly saw it—my eyes, my whole soul, were fastened on the figure of a man who just then came down the green bank which was at some distance. I pressed my face to the glass. Which way would he take? He stood up for a moment, and then slowly, lazily sauntered toward me. The glass was up—my only hope was that he would pass close and see me, for I was past calling or moving now. I noticed every trifling detail of his figure and dress; he was a tall, broad-shouldered gentleman, dressed in light gray; young, and with a long, golden beard; even the carnation in his button-hole I observed, and the strength and careless ease of his figure as he lounged along. He stopped to whistle his dogs and then again strolled on idly twirling his cane.

I do not know what kind of face was pressed to the glass on my side—it was a wild and scared one, I am sure; but in another minute a pair of great merry blue eyes carelessly glanced up in passing, and were startled into earnestness by the eyes they encountered: the whistle sounded, but even as it did a strong hand was on the door-handle, the door was wrenched open, the train moved on—he was beside me. I was safe!

I don't know what happened then. My deliverer says that I cried, and held one of his hands tight in both of mine; but that I don't believe. In the first place we never had been introduced, and in the second, two of his fingers are about as much as my two hands can contain at once. I know when I grew calmer that I found him taking care of me, and that I didn't dislike it as much as one might have expected. I don't remember how I told him all; I suppose the turnip and knife, which still lay on the seat helped me a little; but I do know that he told me "not to be frightened, for he would not throw the scoundrel from the window, as he deserved"—and that he looked so fierce and so strong that I could quite imagine it was a habit of his to throw scoundrels from windows, and that he rather liked it. What he did was to take the creature by the collar, and force him down on his knees, in spite of his piteous protestations that "he never meant to hurt the lady—it was only a lark; he would not have done it for a ten-pun note, not if he had known."

"Hold your tongue. Swallow this, and think yourself lucky to escape six months on the treadmill. For the lady's sake, I will not prosecute you, and I'll not break every bone in your body, as I should like to do, as it might annoy her to see it done. But you'll eat this, to the last morsel—mud and all! I should say it is not the only dirt you will have to swallow in your life! Down with it!"

And when the last atom had disappeared, my deliverer, with a parting shake, flung the creature in a corner, where he lay till the train stopped, and turned to "take care" of me again.

I almost shrank from the stern face to which I now raised my eyes, but it softened in a moment, and I lay back in a corner and rested silently and thankfully, while he interposed his broad shoulders between me and the other end of the carriage till the train stopped, and I saw Aunt Margery's dear old face on the platform.

I am sure she wondered at the eagerness of my clasp and at my face, which I felt was still white and scared. I made a little motion toward my deliverer, but could not speak a word. He said a few words and gave his card to my aunt, who accepted it and the situation as graciously as she does everything, and looked rather anxious to get me safely to the carriage and home, and in five minutes more we were driven away.

"What did he do for you, darling?"

"Oh! he was so strong and good to me—and he made me eat the whole turnip, auntie!"

"The whole turnip! You must be ill, Polly? Come, we won't talk or think of it now."

And she quieted and petted me, evidently thinking that I had lost my wits, until I was lying on the sofa in her drawing-room able to tell her all.

Well that was my first and only attempt at "taking care of myself." I never wanted to do so again. Tom takes care of me now—of course you understand that it was he who came to my deliverance. Aunt wrote to him that very evening, and my father came down from London next morning on purpose to thank him, then Tom called, and so—and so—the end of my story, or, perhaps, I should say the real beginning of it is that I am his wife now.

At first I did think it a pity that my husband should be only "Tom," when I had always intended to marry at least three syllables, as I am merely "Polly;" but now I think Tom the most charming name in the world, and would not change it.

I have only one thing more to tell. The old lady with the disagreeable bonnet is Tom's aunt. I am writing this in her house, which is just what I had fancied it, and she is the dearest and kindest woman in England.

"Una has found her Lion," she says. I don't think I am much like Una; but Tom is a darling old Lion, with his tawny beard and splendid strength, on which his wife loves to lean. I hear him calling "Polly!" from the lawn, where he lies, lazily puffing his cigar under the cedar; and as he can grow on occasion if I keep his majesty waiting too long, I had better go.

"Coming, Lion!"

Meerschaum and Amber.

"The world buys its meerschaum at Vienna. The crude material is a sort of clay, of delicate texture and very white color, which is formed by the sediment of sea foam. It is fished from the water close to shore, and is generally found in lumps varying in quantities from the size of an egg to that of a half bushel measure. Small pieces are sometimes found ashore, where they have been washed by the waves. It is caught and raised by a sort of dredge, and is soft, pliable and pulpy. It goes at once to the dressing-shops, where the imperfections are clipped off, and after drying the piece is polished smooth. It is then packed in boxes, about as large again as a peach crate, and placed upon the market. Each case contains 100 pounds and is worth from $100 to $200, according to the size of the pieces, the largest onts commanding the premium, because they are generally of the better quality and make less waste in the manufacture. We endeavor not to disturb the original texture any more than is necessary, so that the larger a piece is, the less paring there is to be done, because several pipes can be taken from one block."

"Then you do not crush and mold the material?"

"Oh, no, sir. That would destroy the texture by closing the natural pores, the very thing that is undesirable. It is that that distinguishes pure meerschaum from the imitations. The material, as it comes from Vienna, is sent to the manufactory and placed in cold water. In the course of a few hours it becomes soft, resuming its primitive condition, and is about as pliable as soap. The cutters then take it, dissect the blocks, and with their thin-bladed knives, cut out the pipes, and if the design is fancy, carve the imitations. The green pipe is then placed in an oven where currants of warm air flow freely, and it is thoroughly dried, resuming before it is taken out the hard condition in which we receive it. The cutting is very difficult work, and no Americans have ever been able to become adepts at it. All our cutters come from the old country. They earn about $35 a week, and are always able to command situations, because the opportunities for learning the trade are so limited that the supply cannot become greater than the demand.

"After the green pipe is hardened it goes to the dressers, who remove the false mouth-piece used to keep the pipe from shrinking while in the oven, and smooth the surface with a sort of sandpaper known to the trade as schachtelhain. The polishers, who are generally girls, take the pipes, cover them with melted beeswax, and rub them with soft flannel until the surface shines. The stems are then placed in position, each being made for a particular pipe. The case-makers take the measure, and make the cases in which the pipes are presented to the public. It generally requires about a week to make a pipe, because the processes of softening and hardening are dangerous if they are hastily conducted."

"How are imitation meerschaum pipes made?"

"The shavings of the good pipes are mixed with plaster of paris and other such substances, making a pliable compound that is taken through the same process as the genuine material. You can distinguish the genuine from the imitation by its texture and color, the latter having a yellowish hue and a more solid appearance. It cannot be colored as prettily as the genuine because the process of pulping which it passes through in mixing closes the natural pores and kills the substance."

"You also manufacture the amber stems?"

"Yes, sir; and that is an art in which even more skill is required than in making meerschaum ware. Amber is a product of the Prussian coast, and is procured from the same source, and by the same methods as the meerschaum, although in much less quantities. It is carved while it is soft and is dried gradually. The polishing is done by immersing the dressed ware into a liquor mixture of alchol and beeswax, and rubbing with soft flannel until it glistens."

"And it is very expensive?"

"Much more costly than any goods we handle. This piece, which is about eight inches long elegantly polished and carved, as you see, is worth about $200. It was made for display, and would be too heavy for convenient usage."

"What part of the process in amber requires the superior skill?"

"The bending. Until a short time ago, it was necessary in getting a curved piece of amber to cut it out of the block, but there are a few men who can bend it. They hold the straight piece over a heated jet until it begins to soften. They cannot let it out of their fingers, and the heat is such that it would be impossible to retain it in one position, so that they must bend it while fumbling it, and have to do it very quickly. They have no opportunity to measure or survey, even by their eyesight, the curves, so that they must be so skillful that they can tell by the weight of the goods at the various angles when the bends are completed."

A correspondent of the Scientific American at York, Pennsylvania, "suggests the burning of petroleum for repelling hostile fleets from harbors like those of Baltimore, Philadelphia, and New York. A hundred thousand barrels of oil poured upon an out-flowing tide would cover a large area of water, and when set on fire would sweep a fleet with a torrent of destruction that nothing could resist." Another plan is virtually a modification of the fire ship. He proposes to link together long lines of ratts of oil barrels, and send them against the fleet by small, swift, steam launches that could be steered by electricity from the shore. The barrels could be exploded and the oil fired by the same agency at the proper moment."

It is stated that the grass ordinarily growing on low, marshy ground near salt water furnishes an excellent material for paper, and contains nearly as much useful fiber to a ton as straw.

Our Garden Capital.

The report of the Park Commission shows that there are nearly one hundred and twenty miles of trees in the city of Washington, of which about one-half are maples. The remainder includes poplars, box elders, elms, lindens, buttonwoods, willows and firs. Of maples of every variety there are 21,150; box elders, 4,945; elms, 4,570; lindens, 5,675; buttonwoods, 3,475; American ash 1,381; catalpa, 829; horse chestnut, 117; miscellaneous varieties, about 2,000. Now, these include only the work of the Parking Commission and represent the fruits of about ten years' labor. The young trees thrive well and give promise of making the city more and more attractive as yearly they increase in size. The stately giants in the public parks, also numbered by thousands, are included in the grand army of nature's ornaments under the charge of the Parking Commission. To the Superintendent of Public Buildings and Grounds, Colonel Rockwell, who is an officer of the army, is assigned the care of the government grounds. The Propagating Garden, the nursery of all the parks and gardens, is also under his charge, and is one of the three special points of interest to the student of botany. The garden is on the banks of the Potomac, beneath the shadow of the Washington Monument and near the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. Long rows of buildings with their glass roofs are seen as the visitor approaches the place across the monument lot. Here to-day, ready for planting, are 125,000 bed plants, including every variety that will endure in this climate. A month hence the entire lot will be transferred to the parks, circles, squares and reservations. Coleus, with their variegated leaves in endless variety; geraniums innumerable, vincas, dusty miller, dragon plants, lantanas, fuchsias by the thousand, are awaiting the time when, from the hotbeds of sand, they will grow and bloom in open air. It has been found by experience that the 10th of May is as early as the climate will permit outdoor planting. The force of gardeners and laborers employed by the government is now preparing the soil for the reception of the new plants. It will perhaps be regarded as strange that so large an area can be ornamented and the flowers allowed to flourish without injury from the children who throng the public gardens of the city. But it is to the credit of the people that such ornamentation can be made, and that but very few complaints are heard of wanton destruction. The temptation to remove the young plants is always great to those who are too poor to purchase them, and yet who have ground to beautify.

The coleus ready for planting are kept in tiny pots, and as ranged in the hothouses present to the eye the velvety appearance of the finest carpets. They form the bulk of the park ornamentation. Take, for example, Thomas Circle, where the statue of General Thomas stands. It is as open as a town lot, and yet for the next seven months great beds of coleus, garaniums steiras—a new plant to this climate—will flourish as though the ground were enclosed and the place private property. But the Propagating Garden not only furnishes the plants, but the gigantic palms, pandanas and other trees of these species. In fact the law of Congress forbids anything being grown at the garden that cannot be used in adorning the public grounds. So these, too, will in a few weeks be removed to Lafayette and Franklin squares, to make those enclosures more beautiful. Those who remember the little forest of palms and the great sago plants which grace the parlors of the President on reception nights, the walls of green which skirt the vestibule, will hardly believe that they are the same plants distributed throughout the city during the summer time. The conservatory at the White House is never stripped of its beauty to garnish the East Room, or the Green, Red and Blue parlors. It is the democratic park ornaments, carefully housed in winter, which are brought into requisition on all state occasions.

Not only plants and palms, but the seedings with which the parks are recruited are grown at the Propagating Garden. The trees on government ground are mostly matured, Occasionally it happens that one has to be cut down, but for every one destroyed there are three planted to replace it. Now during the winter, when Washington is shone of its floral decorations, the average member of Congress looks over the list of articles he is entitled to. The new member reads about the the Botanical Garden, the Agricultural Department and the nursery for the public grounds. He finds upon inquiry that the Committee on the Library has charge of the verdant things of nature. Orders for bouquets are eagerly sought. During the session of the House, and even the Senate, it is not unusual to see the desks of members covered with floral designs. The sweet simplicity of the stranger in the gallery would lead him to believe that somebody had paid for the tributes, Not a bit of it, unless you call the giver your Uncle Samuel, for as sure as flowers are fragrant and fair to behold so sure they came from the government hothouses. And throughout the season the parlors and sitting rooms of members and their families are redolent of the perfume of nosegays from our uncle's conservatories. An ordinary citizen may smell, but he cannot possess these fregrant gifts during the term Congress is in session.

The grounds about the different public buildings are evually as attractive as the garden spots in the public thoroughfares. The Treasury has its own conservatory, in which are housed during winter the rare plants used in beautifying the space between the main entrances to the building. The front of the State Department presents a pleasing appearance during the summer months, where every variety of the rose is in bloom. The grounds about the President's house are dotted with flower beds, but the grandest of all the floral displays is at the Agricultural grounds, the forty acres of which gradually slope toward [illegible] city, forming a lawn of most exquisite be[illegible] plateau fronting the building, with its broad walks and decorated owners, a legion of tulips and hyacinths are in flower to-day. They look to the eye as though endles pennants of red, white and blue had been laid about the ground. The air is redolent of the sweetest of perfumes. Two hundred stately willows adorn the walks in front of the grounds, while interspersed over the lawn are every variety of hardy trees that will grow in this climate. Eastward are the Smithsonian grounds, with their grand array of monarchs of the forest, the ivy-clad tower of the institute vividly recalling some ancient castle. Here, too, the taste of the landscape gardener will be displayed as the season progresses. Still further to the east of the Mall is Armory square, which in point of attraction is hardly less than the garden at the Agricultural grounds. The public reservation ends with the square occupied by the Botanical Garden, where are collected the rarest and finest palms and ferns that can be found in any conservatory of the world. The Bartholdi fountain is one of the attractive features of the place.

Fish of all Nations.

The International Fisheries Exhibition was opened on the 12th of May in London, with great eclat by the Prince of Wales, in the presence of a distinguished company. The ceremonies on the occasion were in accordance with the programme heretofore announced. The Prince of Wales in his remarks expressed regret at the unavoidable absence of the Queen, and conveyed the thanks of her Majesty to all the countries participating in the display and to their representatives for their untiring exertions in the work of ensuring the success of the Exhibition.

To the phlegmatic Dutchman belongs the honor of having inaugurated fishery exhibitions, for one of the first, if not the very first, was held at Amsterdam in 1861. The programme was sufficiently comprehensive, and was evidently drawn up with care; but the novelty of the exhibition was most likely the reason of its being, comparatively speaking, scantily patronized, though at the time it was accounted a success. For the next four years things were at rest, but in 1865, on the 1st of August, a fisheries exhibition was opened at Bergen, the programme being nearly a counterpart of that at Amsterdam, and included, besides the apparatus of all sea fisheries, from the whale to the shrimp, models of curing and smoking-houses. The next year there was another exhibition on a small scale at Arcachon, and later in the same year still another at Boulogne, on a grander scale. The next year witnessed three exhibitions—one at the Hague, another at Aarhuus, in Denmark, and the third at Vienna. June, 1868, saw the opening of the Havre Exhibition. Pickled mackerel was shown, it is believed, for the first time, and was then looked upon as more or less of a novelty, as also was the aquarium, which was the most popular feature in the show. Norway and Sweden had zealously taken part in all exhibitions down to 1867, but they were unrepresented at Havre. In 1871 there was an exhibition at Naples. Promoters had then an easy time till June, 1878, when the Piscicultural Exhibition was opened at the Westminster Aquarium, London.

In 1878 proposals were set on foot at Berlin to hold a fisheries exhibition there, and after two years of preparation one was opened in April, 1880. It was under the patronage of the Crown Prince; the Emperor and Empress, several Archdukes, and the King of Saxony being among the givers of prizes. The last-named monarch propounded a veritable riddle. His prize was for the best solution of the question how to render sewage, etc., innocuous to the fish in the river into which the sewage flows. Eleven Governments took part in the exhibition. The American display was chiefly remarkable for life-saving appliances. There was an apparatus for fixing to a fishing-rod to enable an unskilled hand to make long casts when spinning; and there was also a fearful arrangement of spring hooks, far more deadly than the English snap tackle, which rendered unnecessary all delicacy of handling on the part of the gentle fisher. He had nothing to do but drop his bait, and if a fish touched the engine with his head or tail, the spring was released and the fish hooked somewhere. But perhaps the most wonderful thing in the exhibition, as it was thought at the ime, was Wickersheimer's fluid, a colorless preparation that would preserve for months fish or skeletons soaked in it, so that examination and dissection might take place at any time. Another feature of the Berlin exhibition was the collection of archives sent by the fishing associations of Germany. It appeared that in former days a number of fishing-guilds existed, and these in course of time gave way to more modern associations, about fifty of which sent books, tackle, and insignia; the books of the Berlin Association contained a list of masters from 1637 to 1824. These angling associations appeared to have worked with a will, for it was said that in 1878 over 6,000,000 of fry had been distributed in the German rivers.

The interest in the fishery exhibitions was now complete, and the Exhibition at Norwich, England, opened by the Prince of Wales on the 18th of April, 1881, was a great success. In April last year Lord Rosebery, in the absence of the Duke of Edinburgh, the President opened the Fisheries Exhibition at the Waverley Market in Edinburgh. Even Siberia was represented, while the Swedish department was so complete as to draw from Lord Rosebery the remark that the Swedes had "traced the life of a fish from the cradle to the dish." At Edinburgh, as at Berlin, there was a good collection of works upon fish and fishing. Lovers of the curious were gratified by a sight of the fish-eating bug, and one of the features of the exhibition was the collection of stuffed fish shown by the London fishing societies.

—England last year imported enough German beer to pay custom duties of $30,000.

The Republican

SATURDAY, June 30, 1883.

With Whom Does he Train?

A few Democratic papers in Alabama have spoken in terms of emphatic protest against the candidacy of Mr. Randall for the Speakership. Every one of them concede his eminent fitness for the place, his wonderful ability as a presiding officer and party leader, and, are unwilling to yield even to his warmest friends in their admiration for the purity of his private and official life. But they claim that their opposition is based solely on principle. They charge him with being a high protective tariff man—class him with Pig Iron Kelley and other pronounced Republican protectionists.

We find in the debaters of the last Congress that Mr. Randall declared:

"I do not favor a tariff enacted upon the ground of protection simply for the sake of protection, because I doubt the existence of any constitutional warrant for any such construction, or the grant of any such power. It would manifestly be in the nature of class legislation; favoring one class at the expense of any other, I have always been opposed."

Is this the language of "a high protective tariff man?" Is it undemocratic, or at war with the tenets of the party as pronounced in National Convention?

If we understand the distinctive difference between the Democratic and Republican parties on the question of tariff, it is this: The Republican party is in favor of a high protective tariff—a tariff for the sake of protection; while the Democratic party is in favor of a tariff for revenue, which necessarily brings with it incidental protection to American industries. The main thing with the Republicans is protection for protection's sake which builds up monopolies, without regard to a revenue to supply the wants of the government. The main thing with the Democracy is to raise a revenue for the support of the government, economically administered, conceding cheerfully whatever of incidental protection naturally comes of this system of taxation.

We think this is the position of the National Democracy. It is the position of Beck, Carlisle, Bayard, McDonald, Morrison, Brown, Tucker, and every other recognized representive man of the party North or South. It is the position of Mr. Randall. It is in such company as just mentioned, that Mr. Randall trains, and not with such high protectionists as Mr. Kelley. He draws his inspiration, on the matters of tariff, from such time-honored Democrats as Jefferson, Madison, Jackson and Polk, and not from companionship with protective Republicans.

Are we right in supposing that our friends who are warring against Mr. Randall, are doing the work of those who would subserve personal and private ends, unmindful of the higher demands of the party and the whole country?

HUNTSVILLE, ALA., June 24.—Robert Lee, late postmaster at Driskell, Ala. who is in jail awaiting trial upon charges of forgery and embezzlement, has expressed to the authorities his determination to plead guilty and throw himself on the mercy of the court. Lee is a young man less than twenty-five years of age, and was married but little more than a year ago to an accomplished young lady of Collinsville, Ala. He does not seem to realize the gravity of the offense for which he is held.

Postoffice Inspector Fry to-day brought in another prisoner from De Kalb county charged with violating the postal laws Crimes in this department of the Government seem to be in fashion just now.

AUGUSTA, GA., June 27.—To-day several little girls living near Summerville mills found a small toy pistol and commenced playing with it. One of the children, Minnie Ship, was handling the weapon, when it was discharged. The ball first struck Minnie's little sister on the cheek, inflicting a flesh wound, and then struck another little girl named Minnie Steen in the stomach, producing a wound from which she died within an hour.

BIRMINGHAM, June 27.—Small-pox has made its appearance in the camps of the Georgia Pacific R. R. fourteen miles from the city. At Perkins' camp, where a large force is at work on the road, there are nine cases, and one at Red Gap, five miles from town. There was one death yesterday at Perkins' camp.

There are no cases in Birmingham except one imported case at the pesthouse.

The Cabinet to-day discussed the alleged shipment by England of Irish paupers to this country. The Secretary of the Treasury, after the meeting, telegraphed the Collector of Customs at New York to co-operate with local authority to prevent the landing of those known to be paupers in the meaning of the law In case any have landed, the Collector is instructed to take all practicable measures to have reshipped to port whence they came.

CHICAGO, June 26—A cold wave struck this city about midnight Monday, and lasted until dark last evening. The temperature about 50 degrees above zero. Fires were built and winter underwear and overcoats in demand. Spectators wore overcoats buttoned up at the races, but had to keep moving about to prevent being chilled through.

If we give our own affairs the attention they require, we shall not have time to superintend our neighbor's. Yet, there can be found in almost every community a class who think they are quite able to do both —Ex.

A MAN AND A TOWN.

THE STORY OF THE NOBLES IN ANNISTON.

The Pullman Enterprise Eclipsed by an Alabama Enterprise, Engineered by Georgia Business Men of English Blood—A Story of Pluck Discretion and Perseverance.

A TALK WITH SAMUEL NOBLE, JR.

I had a long talk with Sam Noble, as we sat in his piazza and overlooked the town that he and his partners built. Yet a young man—full of energy, and enthusiastic over his work—with the fullest confidence of his associates and all the capital he asks for at his back—it is easy to see that he has given his life to making a model city. He talks con amore, and yet modestly. He said, and the enchanting view from where we sat must have given impulse to his words:

"The first thing that I should credit in looking over my work since we were in Rome together, is the sincere and hearty confidence of my partner, Mr. Alfred Tyler, his sagacity, energy, and invaluable influence and advice. There has never been a question between us. We have worked in perfect harmony, and I realize, perhaps, better than any man living what it means to have a partner who is at once a friend, counsellor and coadjutor.

"In the next place, our situation is incomparable. We are 1,000 feet above the level of the gulf, on high table lands. We have delicious breezes the summer through and a mountain range to shelter us from the northerly winds in winter. A healthier spot or more delightful climate cannot be found on this globe. The scenery is fine, and so varied as to always please. From our mountains and hillsides springs pure spring water in abundance. We have here all that is desirable in making a city. Our mountains teem with the best of brown hematite ore and are covered with exhaustless forests. Our valleys are beautiful and fertile. Railroads give us quick connection with the outside world. Our location, in essential and incidental advantages, is simply incomparable."

"You have had a comparatively easy work?"

"Not at all. What we have done has been by sleepless energy and constant attention. We have worked night and day for ten years. While we have spent liberally we have spent with exact economy. Every furnace in the south except two or three suspended between the years of '72 and '79. We kept running without intermission and paid our men good wages. Instead of dissipating our earnings in dividends, we have concentrated them here. Three months after we had earned a thousand dollars it was at work earning another thousand. It has required the closest care to see that these reinvestments were judiciously made, and that every dollar was made to do its best."

"You have determined to open Anniston to the public at last?"

"Yes. There is no reason now why we should keep it off longer. The ground work of the city is laid and no matter who comes in now, it cannot be seriously changed from its settled plan. We have added to our domain, until we own in one solid block, 65 square miles—a pretty big estate, you will admit. This embraces fine mineral and farming lands, unsurpassed sites for homes, and for snug suburban residences of from 10 to 50 acres. We cannot occupy all the ground, nor develop all its resources, if we were to work twenty times as fast as we are now working. We propose, therefore, to throw it open to such citizens as we desire to sell to and shall be glad to talk with men of energy and intelligence and moderate capital who want to settle in what, it cannot be denied, is the model town of the South."

"By no means. We have never desired to do so further than was necessary. With our furnaces, factories, shops, the new works we are now building, and the coke furnaces and car works that are to follow, and the selling and settling up of our large territory, we have our hands full, without controlling the general business of the town. Our policy has always been, and will be, to insist upon everything being first-class, and we will assist, if necessary, to make it so. For example—when we started here we felt it was necessary to have fine beef, well butchered, for our people. We knew it not do to rely on the casual supply. We therefore sent to Philadelphia and employed a butcher who was educated to his business. We brought him here on a salary, enclosed 200 acres of clover for pasturage for beef cattle, and told him to furnish us the best of meat at the price we were paying for meat. He did so, furnishing us fine beef, mutton, sausage, head-cheese, etc., as can be bought in Fulton market. For years we sold meat at a loss, but the consumption increased until the business paid a profit. We then turned it over to the butcher, leasing him the pasturage at a nominal figure, and taking his bond to keep up the standard of meats. He soon had more than he could do, and another butcher set up in competition, and both are doing finely. We did the same way with our baker, and our supply of bread is equal to the best. And so with our farm. For six years we ran it at a current loss of $6,000 a year. But all the time we were getting it in first-class condition, and beautifying our valley. That little town of twenty-three house, barns, etc., under the hill over there is our farm settlement, and our farm is now paying its way. Every dollar it pays we put into new stock and improvement. You never saw finer clover in your life than we have here—for no finer ever grew out of the ground. So with our store. We started merely to accommodate our people. The sales ran up to about a quarter of a million a year, and we have now built a block of stores that we have rented to outsiders. We don't want the business, and we can't carry all the stock that is needed. Our people have had to trade largely outside of the town and we could not begin to take proper care of the outside trade that came in."

"You have several other projects on hand?"

"Oh, yes! First we must have a fine hotel. We built a small hotel we first started, added two rows of cottages when it overflowed, and still it is overcrowded. Now we are going to have a large hotel. It must be so perfect in its appointments and keeping that when a stranger enters he will never want to leave it. I have seen three such hotels in my life—one in Falmouth, Eng., one in Reading, Penn., and the Massasoit house, in Springfield, Mass. Our hotel shall be the fourth, if money and skill can make it so. We should prefer to see an outsider build it and run it. We have cleared the site and have the plans. If some good man comes to us and hasn't money enough to build it, we will add what is needed, and will keep the house filled. If the proper man don't come, we will build it, run it ourselves until it is established that it will pay, and then turn it over to some one else. In other words, we are ready to aid in any legitimate enterprise, either by giving the site, selling it at a low price, subscribing part of the money needed, or in any proper way. We shall not drum up a miscellaneous immigration, for we do not need it. But we do want earnest workers, and men of intelligence.

"There are numerous openings here for energetic men with moderate capital?"

"A great many. We need a savings bank here. Our men have nowhere to deposit their earnings. Our pay-rolls are enormous, and increasing every day. Our storekeepers are overrun with applications from the men to keep their money and every day or two some of the negroes complain that their trunks are broken open and their savings stolen. Our men spent at our saloon last year over $20,000 cash, and they spent $10,000 in the saloons over "the dead-line." As I told them they drank up forty cottages every year We started the prohibition movement and voted liquor out of the county by over 1,200 majority, the Anniston vote being 466 to 33. The money the men formerly spent for liquor would now go into bank if there was a bank here, and thousands of dollars besides. A good savings bank here would pay handsomely, and we will take stock in one, if we can get the right man to go in with us."

"Are your men contented and prosperous?"

"Yes. They get good wages, and are paid in cash every month. Their houses are built by our carpenters, and we charge only enough rent to give us 7 per cent on the cost. We are now selling to such of the men as want them, their house at cost on their own terms. Many of them are buying. We pick our men, and we get just the sort we want. Whenever a man is disorderly, we get rid of him and supply his place. We therefore have a model community."

"Have you any bonds on your property?"

"No, sir; and not a farthing of debt. We pay cash for everything. I have not signed a note for six years. A man who buys here, buys into a town with schools, churches, perfect streets, parks, water works already built, and not a dollar of debt. Everything is ready to make a city, and not a cent of interest or debt to pay."

"Your railroad connections are all that you want?"

"All that we could ask. We have roads leading north, south, east and west. We are going to build, however, a new line of road called the Anniston and Atlantic. It will connect us with our Alabama furnace, where we have a tract of twenty square miles, penetrate rich Talladega valley, and connect with the Savannah and Memphis at Goodwater, forty-seven miles to the south. We have paid little attention to building up outside trade, but with its admirable feeders and rail connections, and its commanding position, Anniston must be the trading point for a large territory."

"What effect has your town had on the surrounding country?"

"Admirable, I think every one will confess. We furnish a good market for all the grain, hay, eggs, butter and poultry that two counties can raise, and for 7,000 bales of the cotton they produce. What we cannot use we can collect here, pay cash for it and forward to Atlanta, Rome or Nashville. Our population is clear gain to the county."

"Will you have big sales of lots?"

"No. We do not care to work that way, or to catch a population that comes on impulse. We have established a land sale department, under charge of General Forney, and will have our lands surveyed and platted. We will offer inducements to good people, with large or small capital. To men of moderate capital, who wish to establish shops, factories stores, or any legitimate business, we will be as liberal as could be asked. For people who wish to make quiet and delightful homes, and have small farms for stock, grass or fruit, we will sell fine sites and just such land as they want. In other words, we have a city that is beyond comparison with any town of its size in location, beauty and plan, and we propose to give it a citizenship worthy of it."

A RESUME OF THE WORK

I might fill columns with interesting points of this young town, as described by Mr. Noble. As wonderful as it is in accomplishment, its promise is more so. The managers stop at nothing that will advance or beautify their city. The conservatory that cost thousands of dollars—the macadamized road leading over the mountain—the free library to be established for the employes—the Alderney cattle—the elegant homes and grounds—these and a hundred other topics keep them busy—for whatever is determined on is at once begun.

Here is a community of say 3,500 people. Of these 95 per cent are workers, and provided with steady work. The daily inflow of money, exclusive of what is sent outside for raw material, must be $3,000 to $5,000 a day. The most of this is at once re-invested in new spindles, forges or houses, which in turn swell the daily income. Who can measure the end of this compounding?

But more than this. The character of the Tyler Noble partnership is so high, and the eligibility of Anniston as a manufacturing point so established, that outside capital is already hurrying in. The cotton factory was largely built by the Messrs. Gurnee and other friends of the Tylers. The huge machine works now nearing completion are the works of Noble Bros., moved from Rome, Ga. The owners of Anniston need but to promise their supervision, and put up a nucleus of cash, and all the stock they offer the public in any new enterprise will be readily taken. And now the whole town is to be thrown open to all who want to buy.

What will be the work of the next ten years, with the outside world interested, when the first ten years has effected so much, with only the owners of the town interested in its growth?

It is a curious story, isn't it? The casual trip of the old Englishman to the south and his accidental excursion to Rome, The chance discovery of this location by his son, and the equally accidental meeting with Mr. Tyler, and the unexpected partnership that has proved so sympathetic and strong and well-adjusted. How chance is linked with destiny. from first to last! As for the work these men have done, I thought, as I stood between their two homes that, on neighboring slopes, overlooked their busy town, I had rather have been either of them, and felt that I had been equal with the other in the grand work spread out before me, than to have been the president of these United States.

Deplorable Condition of Farmers Near St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., 26—On this side of the river the whole of the levee is now submerged, and in the lowest places the first floors of the stores are flooded from a few inches to a couple of feet deep. Business in the houses on the river front is suspended excepting in two or three "doggeries," where scaffolds have been built and whiskey still dispensed. A large number of farmers and land owners on American bottom and the residents of Venice and other towns held a meeting at Venice yesterday and adopted resolutions calling for aid. Many people are camped in tents on the ridges surrounded by water, or in the open air on the bluffs beyond. Many are also housed in box cars on the railroad track and a good many of them will have to be fed. Their crops are totally destroyed and they are destitute of money and the necessaries of life. Advices from Chester, Randolph county, Ills., says that St. Mary's levee, opposite that point in Missouri, broke Sundry night, and St. Mary's bottom a large wheat raising region, is nearly flooded. Twenty thousand acres of wheat are under water in this bottom alone. Thousands of families are either living in the flooded houses or have fled to the bluffs for safety, and the loss to the crops and to general farming property is incalculable.

Kaskaskia, on the Illinois side, is to be abandoned, the people there having sent to Chester for a steamboat to carry them away.

Other points on both sides of the river, particularly on the Illinois side, are about in the same condition as above described, and it may be said that pretty much all the bottom land between here and Cairo has more or less water on it.

Something for Nothing.

Texas Siftings.]

All newspaper publishers have had experience with men who want to advertise themselves or their business without cost to themselves. It is pitiable to see the shabby means they take to attain the end they have in view. Men, who would feel insulted if they were called dead beats, will with bland effrontery ask a publisher to "please mention so and so" an advertisement) or, handing in what really is an advertisement under the guise of a communication, they will say, "Here's a little item that will help you fill up with." Men who do this—and there are some in every town—call themselve honorable and would not think of asking a real estate owner to let them use one of their houses a few months for nothing; nor would they ask him to let them cultivate and use a part of his farm without expecting to have to pay rent for it.

The advertising columns of a newspaper is to the publisher what the house or farm is to the real estate owner—his source of income. Why anyone should expect the newspaper publisher to be more generous in squandering his substance than any other business man, is something that cannot be accounted for, except on the supposition that some persons have an idiotic idea that printers set up type for the love of the work, and that ink, type and printing presses are gifts from Heaven to sinful men, who publish papers merely for the purpose of smoothing the pathway of their fellow-men on the rugged road to fortune, and who hope not for reward this side of the grave.

Writing a Book.

WASHINGTON, June, 19.—It is reported that ex-Senator Conkling is writing a book upon the political history of the last quarter of a century. Its real object, it is said, will be to present certain features of the politics of the country which Mr. Blaine might perhaps not present in a light satisfactory to Mr. Conkling. Republicans and friends of Conkling have felt much uneasiness in regard to the probable revelations of Blaine's book and its effects, and it is supposed that this plan has been hit upon to counteract the Plumed Knight's efforts.

Conkling's rare ability in preserving the details of political events, his thorough familiarity with the inside workings of parties and with events in and about Washington, coupled with his reputation, it is believed, will make the work equally successful as a business enterprise and as a political measure. It is understood that his plan is to push the work forward and, if possible, bring it out before Blaine's book appears.

Mr. C. G. Morgan has laid upon our table a lot of the finest and largest tomatoes we have seen this season.

The Edwardsville Standard comes to us this week enlarged to a seven column paper. We rejoice in this evidence of the prosperity of our neighbor and hope to see the people sustain the Standard as its enterprise deserves.

The closing days of the examination exercises of Calhoun College at this place were very largely attended and people were very highly pleased with the creditable display made by the pupils in their studies, elocution and music.

If the people of Jacksonville would throw open their doors to Summer boarders, we could have large numbers here each season, but only a few families in town will take boarders, and the consequence is the money they would spend here goes to other places.

Mr. John Brewton, father of Capt. C. W. Brewton of this place, died at his home in this county of heart disease, Saturday the 23d inst. He came to this county from South Carolina in 1848, and to the day of his death was a highly respected and useful citizen. He was near 73 years old.

The Methodist people of Anniston have almost completed their church building and it is said to be a handsome one. Our people gave Rev. Mr. Thompson some forty or fifty dollars to carry on the work while he was up here this week. Mr Thompson deserves credit for his zeal in this work.

Saturday evening last a party of young men from the county were riding on a hand car on the narrow gauge road near M. Littlejohns. A lever struck Mr. Ben Littlejohn jr. and knocked him in front of the car, which ran over him and hurt him severely, though not fatally. Dr. Montgomery was called to attend him.

Friday last Mr. Harvey Easterwood sent us the first cotton bloom of the season. The day following Mr. L. D. Miller sent us another bloom, and the same day Mr. G. W. McKirly sent us one. All these gentlemen may be considered as being equally forward and deserve credit accordingly. Mr. Smith, on the Crow farm, also sent in a bloom Saturday.

We have received the 7th number of the Weather Indicator, published at Ashville by W. H. Cather. Willie is probably the youngest publisher in Alabama and deserves success.

The Indicator contains the weather prognostications, prepared by his father, a month in advance. The country is divided into 23 districts and the weather for each district accurately foretold. Farmers should take this paper. It is a monthly and the price 50cts a year.

We understand that there is a movement on foot for the organization of a permanent Amateur Dramatic and Musical Club, whose object will be the accumulation of a fund for the thorough furnishing of our Normal school with improved desks, seats etc. This is a most laudable undertaking and worthy of the support and encouragement of our county people. The club will be composed of young ladies and gentlemen of our town, and knowing their fine talent reposing now in silence, we predict a brilliant success.

EDITOR REPUBLICAN.—There has been considerable commenting among the citizens of Anniston in regard to the step taken by Mr. Samuel Noble to prevent the evasion of the Prohibition law. His order reads as follows:

"All persons in the employ of the Woodstock Iron Company, who order liquor brought into this corporation will be discharged. Prohibition must be enforced &c."

SAMUEL NOBLE.

At the next meeting of the Anniston Lodge I. O. G. T. a committee was appointed to call on Mr. Noble and return thanks of the lodge, which they did in the following manner:

MR. SAMUEL NOBLE,

Dear Sir:—We the undersigned committee of the I. O. G. T. are instructed by a resolution of our lodge to thank you for the wise and resolute stand you have taken against the provalent evasion of the prohibition law.

We feel that your order will greatly promote the cause of temperance and morality, for which the whole lawabiding portion of the community and especially our order owe you grattitude.

We respectfully subscribe ourselves, your friends and fellow-citizens.

The Narrow Gauge Railroad.

This road at present besng constructed from the line of the old S. R. & D. R. R., to Broken Arrow, St. Clair county, is moving on rapidly and will soon be complete to Coosa River. They are now at Ohatchee with the track, and will put in the combination bridge, which will be of iron and wood, at once. They have laid off a side track at Ohatchee 1000 feet long, and also located a depot there, which will be built in time to receive and store the present crop of cotton. Right here might be mentioned the influence already felt by the people on this line who heretofore have been considered as living in an isolated, out-of-way, backwoods country; nevertheless, a country rich in minerals and fertile lands, yet inaccessable to market. At Ohatchee, for instance, we notice a store house has been built by Messers Smith, Wiggs & Co., a public well is being dug, and Mr. Smith informs us that he will at once proceed to clear 40 acres of good land adjacent to the store-house and on the line of road which he will lay off for a town. He proposes to give lots to any good men who will build upon them, either dwelling or buisness houses.

Capt. Evans, Chief Engineer, informs us that the company intend putting on a passenger coach when the road reaches Coosa river, only 3 miles distant. This will be a great convenience to the people of this section. We understand that hopes are entertained by some parties in St. Clair county, that this road will not be completed at the specified time—1st. of September, as a failure on the part of the Contractor to reach Broken Arrow by that time will save them a land grant of 1200 acres. However, from present indications, the indefatigable Callahan, Contractor, will have the cars whistling into Broken Arrow at least from 20 to 30 days before the specified time.

Driven From a Valued Home.

A will made in a mad-house, of which the testator has been an inmate during the greater part of his life, is not a document very likely, one would say, to pass muster in a court of law, but such a paper has been declared valid in Dublin. The testator was a French gentleman, who in his youth became insane from excessive dissipation and was confined in an asylum for two years before he recovered his mental health. Being then at liberty to go, he refused to do so, but having acquired a liking for the place, he remained there until his death, twenty-eight years later. Only once did he go out into the world, and on this occasion he returned to the asylum so drunk that he declared he would never run into temptation again, a resolution to which he always thereafter adhered, until finally he was told he could not remain any longer, whereupon he went forth weeping and died in eighteen months after his discharge.

Love at First Sight.

Alexander Washington Gray, a Carrol county farmer of sixty summers, went to Sharpsburg Monday morning on buisness; and by chance met Mrs. Georgianna Young, a widow who had already been married three times, and whom he had never seen before. They loved at first sight and agreed to a union at once and proceeded back to Carrolton, where they were married in the court house, before an appreciative audience of about seventy-five people.

Sure Cure for WORMS. MOTHER'S WORM SYRUP. Has No BAD TASTE MOTHER'S WORM SYRUP. Cry for It CHILDREN

Is far superior to all other preparations as a worm-destroyer, being composed entirely of vegetable ingredients and free from all nauseous taste that vermifuge has. It is a pleasant Syrup that children will gladly take, or it can be eaten with bread. Thousands of children die annually of worms when by the use of the Mother's Worm Syrup their precious little lives might be saved. It expels the Round Worm, Thread Worm and the Huge Tape Worm. It never fails. It clears up the skin and sweetens the temper of the little sufferer, secures sleep, and brings back the appetite. It restores the roses to the cheek and saves the teeth. By its use the child is safe from Convulsions, Spasms, and St. Vitus' Dance, which are usually caused by Worms. REMOVES Round & Tape Worms.

The condition as above indicated, exists in almost every family. With some the troubles are of recent standing, while many have become chronic and difficult to overcome. Old and young females are constant victims. Dr. Dromgoole's English Female Bitters makes positive and unmistakable cures of all lingering female weaknesses, excesses, irregularities and periodical obstructions; imparts strength and vigor to the feeble and emaciated; builds up and re-animates flagging, broken-down and worn-out constitutions; repairs damages inflicted by years of painful suffering; regulates, comforts and consoles the troubled maiden, and is a fast friend to mothers all along the troubled pathway of their married lives.
It cures ovarian diseases, uterine displacements and ulcerations, hysterics, leucorrhœa, chlorosis, weakness of the kidneys and back, revives the drooping, despondent and melancholy, calms the excitable and nervous. It is a never-failing iron tonic female regulator. $1.00. Sold every-where. Family Medical Adviser mailed free to any address. J. P. DROMGOOLE & Co., Proprietors, Louisville, Ky.

At the bedside, the physician's first question is, "How are your bowels?" proving that they must in all cases be properly attended to at once, by the use of some medicine that will cleanse the stomach, excite the liver, cause a free flow of bile and carry off these disease-making secretions. Pills, oils and other strong medicines, produce pain, griping, sick stomach, and often cause the loss of time.
Bailey's Saline Aperient is relieved of all these unpleasant effects: It acts mildly upon the bowels, causes a free flow of bile, relieves constipation, biliousness, sick headache, heartburn, colic, indigestion, etc.
It is a white powder, and is as cooling and pleasant as a glass of soda water. Large Bottles 50 cents.

AGRICULTURE.

LETTUCE FOR YOUNG CHICKS.—All kinds of stock like green food, and it is especially desirable for young poultry. Where the fowls have plenty of range it is no trouble to have them supplied in that direction, but there are breeders who have but little room and keep several varieties, who are compelled to keep their birds yarded all through the breeding season, and all poultrymen know how soon the fowls will clear up every vestige of grass in their yards. To keep them supplied with fresh sods is a good thing, but it either necessitates going some distance for the daily supply, or soon disfigures a plot of ground by taking so much sod from it. Raising cabbage for them is desirable, but it takes some time to get it. The quickest growing thing to raise is lettuce. In very early spring a small hot-bed will start enough to last until the sowings in the open ground have grown large enough to feed. Small beds can be sown, and if a good growth is kept up at first, the bed will last quite a while, as the tops can be cut off as wanted for the poultry, roots being left in the ground to sprout more leaves and tops, which they soon do if well cared for. The expense of keeping up a small bed of lettuce is not very great, and from it the fowls can be supplied with good, wholesome "greens," at a time when other "garden sass" is yet in its infancy. It is one of the best things for pigeons in confinement, and as many of our readers are pigeon-fanciers, as well as poultry breeders, the advice above given will be of two-fold advantage to them. Breeders, try it.

GARDEN AND ORCHARD.—Don't begin to work the soil until there is some warmth in it.

Don't get afraid of seeds unless there is pretty good ground for it. Good seed will often not sprout because it does not receive moisture enough.

Are any of your readers intending to buy trees from a nursery, for planting in the spring? If so, let me whisper a word in their ears—buy small trees. Small trees, ten chances to one, will come into bearing sooner than the larger ones. The latter are apt to be those that have been left in the nursery row after the best trees have been selected by the wide-awake orchardist who has "been there," and chosen for himself.

The larger the tree the less fibres there will be upon the roots. A tree that has plenty of fibrous roots will live and flourish, while one that locks such feeders will languish and perhaps die. At least the chances are that it will never be a vigorous fruit-bearer. The roots of large trees are always more or less mutilated in taking up, while the smaller ones do not suffer in this way.

THE FRUIT PROSPECT.—The weather thus far has been quite favorable for the fruit, and the prospects are exceedingly bright just now for one of the largest crops of fruits of all kinds known for a number of years. This is especially so regarding peaches, pears, cherries, and plums—the trees being heavily covered with buds, and the season is so far advanced that many of the trees are in full bloom. Should no severe frosts occur during the time of blooming, large crops of delicious fruits will be gathered. The prospect for apples is also very favorable, while the smaller fruits, such as currants, gooseberries, raspberries, strawberries and blackberries also promise an abundant yield.

BEET PULP.—Discussions are still taking place respecting the relative qualities of beet pulp, after the extraction of the sugar either by diffusion or pressure. The former process yields a pulp more aqueous. It has not yet been established, that the fresh pulp produces more meat than the preserved pulp. Henneberg and Kern, who have joined to their laboratory the stomach of the animal and the slaughter house—very essential collateral studies—affirm that in the case of fully developed animals, fattening them does not produce muscle or increase flesh; it only augments the quantity of fat stored up in the animal tissues.

POTATOES.—Although potatoes do not become spoiled by a few degrees of of cold, especially when they are dry, their eating quality, as well as their germinating power do certainly deteriorate when exposed to a temperature below thirty degrees. In cellars not entirely frost-proof the heaps should be covered completely with old carpets or matting, and these with six inches of straw or hay. Such a protection will afford safety against almost any amount of cold possible in a cellar. When the weather becomes warmer, the windows and doors should be kept closed in daytime and opened during night.

OATS FOR STOCK.—An experienced farmer recommends that oats be soaked sufficiently to swell them before feeding to stock. Ground oats are in proper condition at all time, but millers are not partial to grinding oats, and many farmers feed them unground. When soaked the husk is partly torn away, and facility of digestion increased. Poultry will carefully pick out the soaked grains from the dry when allowed a preference in the matter.

BEFORE filling up vacant places in the orchard with young trees it is best to think whether the full-grown trees now standing will not, with very good manuring, bring more fruit than a larger number would. Most of our orchards were planted too closely, and the tree roots interlace so as to rob each other of what fertility each should have.

As far as possible, the formation of manure heaps in the fields should be avoided. If formed, the practice of turning over the manure should be abandoned, as labor is thus lost and manure wasted. The best authorities consider it best to cart the manure direct from the barnyards to the land and spread it at once.

WHEN a potato is exposed to the light in a cellar the eyes nearly all start a good healthy green sprout; but, if in a pile, or in darkness, only the strongest eyes grow long, white, worthless sprouts. Hence, seed potatoes should be spread thinly in the light. The sprout should not be broken off when cutting the seed for planting.

A CORRESPONDENT of an exchange, writing from the South, says he some time since bought a Jersey heifer whose color was extraordinarily fine, but which has since disappeared, which would indicate that sharpers were experimenting in the matter of producing fictitious color in breeding stock. Is there such a thing as setting a limit to fraud?

DOMESTIC.

A VERY useful article for a bedroom is an ottoman-box, one large enough to hold a number of things. This piece of furniture is easily constructed, and may be had at very little expense. Take a packing box; if there is not one in the house, most any dry goods merchant will sell or give you such a box for the asking. Line the same with an old calico or percale dress. Select a showy and brightly-tinted pattern of cretonne for the outside, and just how this goods is utilized depends upon the amount of artistic taste brought into practice. A very pretty design for this sort of decoration is shown in plaits and Vandykes, the former disposed on the sides of the box, and around the upper edge place the latter, which will look very handsome with a finish of narrow Dutch lace not costing over three or five cents a yard. The lid should be secured to the box by a couple of common hinges. Then place coarse curled hair or excelsior (which is very cheap) on the cover for a cushion. Be generous in this detail, and make a good thick cushion, cover it with cretonne, and put a box-plaited ruffle on the edge. If this work is nicely done a useful and inexpensive piece of furniture for a sleeping room is secured. A window seat and receptacle for party dresses or any nice garment that would injure to fold can be also made out of a packing box. A large size is necessary, not so high as long. Line it with unbleached cotton cloth—that at six cents a yard is good enough. Before putting this in, however, it is better to first line the box with old newspapers pasted in, over which place the cotton cloth. This should be tacked in around the edges, firmly securing the lower corners with large tacks. For the outside take suiting of a dark gray tint—that at ten or twelve cents a yard is just the thing. On this applique cretonne designs, carefully cut out; some can be glued on, others worked on in buttonhole stitch, and where stems are frail, or, for that matter, where any part of the cretonne design is at all frayed; needlework the same, gives a relief effect to leaves, petals, and also to wings of birds, drapery of figures, and to the prominent points in a landscape pattern, some of which appliqued on plain neutral tinted goods produces a wonderfully attractive decoration, especially appropriate for the lid of the ottoman box, which should have the sides adorned in a corresponding manner. The ends could be made contrastingly interesting with floral decorations, wrought in worsted, worked over coarse canvas with double stitch, and if done in German yarn, the single stitch is preferred. The edge of the cushioned lid looks pretty finished off with two narrow ruffles with small scallops embroidered in button-hole stitch. A braided design would be very handsome in adorning the above named piece of furniture, and easily executed, particularly it done on the sewing machine. If needlework is the choice, an excellent border to the cushion can be had in using tinted cotton cable cord; double chain stitch it in two or three rows. The effect is neat and ornamental.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Furniture Gazette recommends pitch paper, such as used by roofers, as a moth preventive. He says that the best plan for furniture dealer or housewife is to cut the paper in slips and place about the room, under and behind sofas, chairs, etc.; this should be done as early as the middle of April, and in warm climates earlier; and if the dealer wishes to make furniture moth-proof, he should place on the inside of backs of chairs and seats small strips of the pitch paper, and the miller will not select these spots to deposite eggs. But he does not state whether it will operate as did the creosote used in Mr. Vanderbilt's house, for the same purpose, drive out the people as well as the millers. That matter can be easily tested.

THAT.—That codfish is a positive specific for the diarrhœa or any laxation of the bowels; and that the Yankee baked beans, are equally a specific in curing constipation of the bowels; neither of them ever fails.

That having feet in cold water every night and morning effectually prevents cold feet, or taking cold; or cures it if you have taken cold; and no one will ever die of consumption of the lungs as long as he or she continues the practice.

THE occasion for the deprecatory remarks of the household assistant as she views the tarnished appearance of the steel fender and fire-irons, but recently cleaned at great expenditure of physical energy, will, at least, be partially removed if a mixture of powdered and sifted emery and olive oil is supplied. An application now and then, followed by polishing with soft leather, will keep them in a brightly reflective condition.

TO prevent the hair from falling out try first wetting the head at night with salt and water. Have the salt dissolved in the water, so that it will not annoy you by particles sticking to your hair. Mild sage tea is also excellent. If these remedies do not effect a speedy cure try this: Get a little bottle of brandy, and put in all the salt that it will absorb; wet the head with this two or three times a day.

THE approved manner of eating an egg is the English fashion. Set the egg upright in the cup, make an orifice in one end and eat out of the shell, flavoring to taste. Eggs discolor silver so much, little ivory spoons may be used for egg spoons. If of silver, the spoon should be laid in cold water as soon as used.

BOILED hams are much nicer if allowed to stand in the water in which they are boiled until cold; the outside does not then turn black and dry up as it does when taken from the water to cool, consequently there is less waste in preparing them for the table. But always remember to remove the lid of the kettle so that the steam may escape.

AN excellent cement for mending china is formed by stirring into a thick solution of gum arabic sufficient plaster-of-paris to make a thick paste. Apply with a brush to the fractured edges and press them together. In three days the article will be ready for use.

A REMEDY for dryness of throat will be found in a small piece of muriate of ammonia, about ten or fifteen grains every two hours. Use the best quality, and allow it to dissolve slowly in the mouth.

FISH may be scaled much easier by first dipping them in scalding water for a minute.

HUMOROUS.

HIS furrows long enough: A land agent wanted a Kentucky farmer to emigrate to Dakota, as he was not making his living in the old Commonwealth. "What inducements do you offer?" asked the farmer. "We have the richest lands, the finest wheat, the best water, the fattest stock and the biggest farms in the world." "Yes," doubtingly interrupted the farmer. "Why, man, on one of those big farms they plow a furrow five miles long." "What?" "They plow a furrow five miles long." "That ends it, stranger. Don't talk Dakota to me! It's all I can do to plow one of these little fifty-yard furrows here in Kaintucky, and if it was five miles long, I never would get to the end of it. Gee, whoa, Buck, git up there!" and he started across the patch, leaving the agent sitting on the fence.

Rescued from Agonizing Death.

NEW YORK.—Mr. James White 1552 Broadway, formerly chief instructor in Dickels' Riding School, in this city, said to a newspaper reporter: "I broke my shoulder, arm and elbow, splitting the socket in four parts. Rheumatism set in and I employed the best physician. He tried everything, but I grew worse, and at last he said: 'I have one more thing to try and if that fails nothing can give you relief, and that is St. Jacob's Oil.' I used this great pain-reliever, and am able to use my arm, free from all rheumatic trouble. I have also recommended the remedy to a number of people, and in every case they have been speedily and effectually cured."

A LEGISLATOR, who has a large family at home, and who has to be very saving, entered a restaurant about dinner time, and asked for a business consultation, which was granted.

"How much do you charge for a dinner?"

"Fifty cents."

"How much for a breakfast?"

"Twenty-five cents."

"Then bring me a breakfast for a dinner."

"Necessity is the mother of invention." Diseases of the liver, kidneys and bowels brought forth that sovereign remedy Kidney-Wort, which is nature's normal curative for all those dire complaints. In either liquid or dry form it is a perfect remedy for those terrible diseases that cause so many deaths.

☞A pint of the finest ink for families or schools can be made from a ten-cent package of Diamond Dye. Try them.

THERE is nothing like strong commonsense. An Irish soldier went to his station with the order to report anything remarkable that had happened during the night. A drunken fellow fell off the wall and broke his neck, and no report was made. When questioned about it, Pat replied: "Faith, and I obeyed orders. If the man had fallen off the wall and not broken his neck I should certainly have reported it."

COLORLESS AND COLD.—A young girl deeply regretted that she was so colorless and cold. Her face was too white, and her hands and feet felt as though the blood did not circulate. After one bottle of Hop Bitters had been taken she was the rosiest and healthiest girl in the town, with a vivacity and cheerfulness of mind gratifying to her friends.

THE Chinaman who wrote a poem on grain of rice did very well, but a Chicago printer accomplished a feat which sounded more remarkable. He took a copy of a Chicago paper, and, after cancelling all the accounts of divorces murders and other crimes, reprinted what was left of it on a three-cent-piece.

IF there is anything in the world that has more power than a smile, when it is shot off from the right kind of a gun, we have never seen it.—Ex. The "right kind of a gun," we suspect, is a glass arrangement holding nearly a quart. "Smiles" shot from such guns have the power to bankrupt a man and knock him endways.

*Those who deaden sensation and stupefy the patient to relieve suffering make a grave mistake. They proceed upon the false idea that it is legitimate to procure relief from pain by destroying physical sensibility. This method, carried to the last extremity, would kill the patient to end suffering. It is not presumed that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will raise the dead but it often does restore those who are given up as hopeless cases.

A MAN was quietly munching a piece of pie in a saloon, when a look of distress suddenly displaced the serene expression on his face. Taking something from between his teeth, and looking at it, he cried to his waiter: "Here, you, there's a stone I found in this pie!" The waiter took it, glanced at it critically, and handing it back, briefly said: "It's of no use to us; you can have it."

A Splendid Remedy for Lung Diseases.

Dr. Robert Newton, late President of the Eclectic College of the City of New York, and formerly of Cincinnati, Ohio, used Dr Wm. Hall's Balsam very extensively in his practice, as many of his patients now living, and restored to health by the use of this invaluable medicine, can amply testify. He always said that so good a remedy ought not to be considered merely as a patent medicine, but that it ought to be prescribed freely by every physician as a sovereign remedy in all cases of Lung Disease. It is a sure cure for Consumption, and has no equal for all pectoral complaints.

Our Reporter's Vacation Notes.

DURING his rambles this season, our Mr. M. has taken upon himself the task of satisfying our numerous readers that whatever goods are manufactured in our goodly city of Roger Williams, are of as high a grade and as fine in quality as can be produced in any spot on the globe. Especially is this so when the skilled Pharmacist of many years' experience resolves to extract from the finest botanical specimens of the vegetable world the most potent cure for some special disease. In proof of his assertion that Providence, R. I., affords the best, he relates an interview with an acquaintance, given him while a journing temporarily at her residence. She says: "About a year I suffered severely with Rheumatism in my limbs, and Neuralgia in the head, which I endured two or three months with as much patience as possible, being under the treatment of an excellent doctor, and trying many kinds of medicine without any marked effect. At last a medical friend advised me to try Hunt's Remedy, because he attributed my severe suffering to the bad condition of my kidneys, which were not performing their proper functions, and I commenced taking it, and in a few days the neuralgia had departed, my headache had entirely disappeared, the swelling in my limbs and joints had gone, and I have not had a touch of it since. More recently I was troubled with impurity of the blood, which showed itself in severe eruptions on my face. I again resorted to Hunt's Remedy, and after taking it a short time was completely cured of that complaint. Hunt's Remedy has proved very beneficial to me in attacks of sick headache, which it always alleviates, and I notice the improvement as soon as I take the Remedy. This Remedy has strengthening elements, for it has made me feel much stronger, and has been very beneficial to my general health. I most heartily recommend it to all sufferers like myself.

MRS. L. G. TANNER, No. 136 Pearl St.

Great Praise.

ALBERT G. MANN, of Cottage Home, Ill., says: "I have been prostrated for three or more years with kidney disease; at times I was not able to put on my boots; my wife has often pulled them on for me. I was not so bad as that all the time, but I never knew what it was to be without pain in my back until I commenced using Hunt's Remedy. Since I began to take Hunt's Remedy I have been free from all pain and take pleasure in saying that it is the best medicine that I ever knew for Kidney and Liver diseases."

"Made New Again."

MRS. WM. D. RYCKMAN, St. Catherines, Ont., says: "R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., I have used your 'Favorite Prescription,' 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and 'Pleasant Purgative Pellets,' for the last three months and find myself—(what shall I say)—'made new again' are the only words that express it. I was reduced to a skeleton, could not walk across the floor without fainting, could keep nothing in the shape of food on my stomach. Myself and friends had given up all hope, my immediate death seemed certain. I now live (to the surprise of everybody) and am able to do my own work."

"HE has paid the debt of nature," said a minister to a man who inquired after one of his parishioners: "Are you sure of that?" asked the man. "Oh, yes; for I was at the funeral." "Well, I'm glad to hear that he paid it, for he had been owing me seven dollars for a barrel of flour so long that I had begun to think he wouldn't pay anything. Nature was mighty lucky, that's all I've got to say."

"Slow and steady wins the race." Steadily, but not slowly, Kidney-Wort is distancing all competition for universal popularity and usefulness. This celebrated remedy can now be obtained in the usual dry vegetable form, or in liquid form. It is put up in the latter way for the especial convenience of those who cannot readily prepare it. It will be found very concentrated and will act with equal efficiency in either form. Read advertisement.

WHILE Mrs. Siddons was playing one night an obstinate man in the crowded pit insisted upon standing up. A disturbance took place which threatened to become a row. It was, however, arrested by the witty Henry Erskine. Coming to the front of his box, he quietly said, yet so as to be heard by all: "Pray, excuse the gentleman, don't you see it is only a tailor resting himself?" The effect was magical. A burst of laughter put every one in good humor, and the obstinate man took his seat.

I had severe attacks of gravel and kidney trouble; was unable to get a medicine or doctor to cure me until I used Hop Bitters, and they cured me in a short time.

A NOTED BUT UNTITLED WOMAN.

Messrs. Editors:—

The above is a good likeness of Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., who above all other human beings may be truthfully called the "Dear Friend of Woman," as some of her correspondents love to call her. She is zealously devoted to her work, which is the outcome of a life-study, and is obliged to keep six lady assistants, to help her answer the large correspondence which daily pours in upon her, each bearing its special burden of suffering, or joy at release from it. Her Vegetable Compound is a medicine for good and not evil purposes. I have personally investigated it and am satisfied of the truth of this.

On account of its proven merits, it is recommended and prescribed by the best physicians in the country. One says: "It works like a charm and saves much pain. It will cure entirely the worst form of falling of the uterus, Leucorrhœa, Irregular and painful Menstruation, all Ovarian Troubles, Inflammation and Ulceration, Floodings, all Displacements and the consequent spinal weakness, and is especially adapted to the Change of Life."

It permeates every portion of the system, and gives new life and vigor. It removes faintness, flatulency, destroys all craving for stimulants, and relieves weakness of the stomach. It cures Bloating, Headaches, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Sleeplessness, Depression and Indigestion. That feeling of bearing down, causing pain, weight and backache, is always permanently cured by its use. It will at all times, and under all circumstances, act in harmony with the law that governs the female system.

It costs only $1, per bottle or six for $5., and is sold by druggists. Any advice required as to special cases, and the names of many who have been restored to perfect health by the use of the Vegetable Compound, can be obtained by addressing Mrs. P., with stamp for reply, at her home in Lynn, Mass.

"Mrs. Pinkham's Liver Pills," says one writer, "are the best in the world for the cure of Constipation, Biliousness and Torpidity of the liver. Her Blood Purifier works wonders in its special line and bids fair to equal the Compound in its popularity.

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and the people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop," or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hop on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.
