PRICE $2 A YEAR.

NOT SO MUCH AS YOU HAVE HEARD.

Excitement over the proposition to remove the Court House from Jacksonville to Anniston is becoming intense. Montgomery Advertiser.
Not much about Jacksonville, Bro. Advertiser. The excitement so far seems to be confined to the Hot Blast office and its half dozen correspondents. The people of Jacksonville know the people of Calhoun, and do not apprehend in the least that they will ever consent to any such thing. Anniston could never get the court house carried from the centre to one corner of the county unless she was strong enough within her corporate limits, to outvote the whole remainder of the county. This might be the case in the course of years, if it were possible to stop improvement in every part of the county and let Anniston do all the growing; but this can hardly happen. While Anniston is rapidly growing (and we are glad of it) the remainder of the county is more than keeping pace with it. Other points are developing industries and "within a very short time" large manufacturing interests will be developed in as many as four different parts of the county, widely separated, and thus the equilibrium will be maintained. No, Jacksonville is not excited. It was very ungenerous in the Hot Blast to spring this question on us, immediately following our disastrous fire, but if the intended effect of it was to further cripple us, it has failed of its object. People have not stopped moving in here and investing on account of it, we notice, and our own people are building many expensive brick structures for business and dwelling houses for homes; which, if you stop to think of it, don't look much like they were very apprehensive of removal, or very much exercised over it one way or another. Jacksonville will continue to be the county site, and prosper, and, generous as she has always been, will continue to wish her manufacturing sister well.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR ISSUES HIS PROCLAMATION.

Thursday, the 29th day of November, Fixed as the Day of National Thanksgiving.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—The President has issued the following proclamation:

By the President of the United States of America, a Proclamation:

In furtherance of the custom of this people, at the closing of each year, to engage upon a day set apart for that purpose in a special festival of praise to the Giver of all good, I, Chester A. Arthur, President of the United States, do hereby designate Thursday, 29th day of November next, as a day of National Thanksgiving.

The year which is drawing to an end has been replete with evidences of Divine goodness. The prevalence of health, the fullness of harvests, the stability of peace and order, the growth of fraternal feeling, the spread of intelligence and learning, the continued enjoyment of civil and religious liberty, all these and countless other blessings are the cause for reverent rejoicing. I do therefore recommend that, on the day above appointed, the people rest from their accustomed labors, and meeting in their several places of worship, to express their devout gratitude to God, that He hath dealt so bountifully with this nation, and pray that His grace and favor abide with it forever. In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at the city of Washington, this 26th day of October, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three, and of the Independence of the United States, the one hundred and eighth.

CHESTER A. ARTHUR, Secretary of State.

The jury in the United States District Court in Banks county, Ga., have found the men indicted for kukluxing guilty. A new trial has been asked.

LIFE ON THE PRAIRIES.

WITHERS' WRESTLE WITH WOLVES

DALLAS, TEXAS, Oct. 22.

Mr. Ed.—A few evenings since while seated in my room with several young gentlemen, our conversation turned upon that peculiar class of men, who have made themselves famous in Texas under the name of "cow boys." I asked:

"Are not these wonderful stories of adventure, reckless daring and personal prowess, creations of fancy or the product of mere sensational newspaper correspondence?"

A very intelligent and highly cultivated gentleman who occupies a prominent position in business circles in this city, replied, "by no means. I was a cow boy once, and with your permission, I will relate to you an incident which occurred to me while in that capacity, illustrative of the dangers of life on the Texas prairies ten years ago. The distinctive character of the cow boy has now passed into history. The romance of western life has been swallowed up in the grand march of progressive development, and the flower-crowned bosom of the prairie, once the home of the red man, is now covered with splendid cities that stand as proud monuments of the fact that American civilization has planted her standard amid the solitudes of the West. But ten years is an epoch in the history of the Empire State. I came to Texas before these grand enterprises, now assuming such magnificent proportions, were inaugurated. In many portions her virgin soil had never been disturbed by the plowshare. Then it was that these reckless spirits asserted and maintained their supremacy. I came from Virginia in delicate health and joined their ranks in the celebrated Pan Handle country, then a disputed territory between the cow boy and Indian. I was with them for six months without anything unusual occurring. One morning while at breakfast I was attracted by the incomparable beauty of the landscape, and felt a strong inclination to enjoy a gallop of a few hours and inhale the atmosphere, at that season of the year so fresh and invigorating. I mounted my splendid black and plying the spur was soon galloping over the plain with the speed of an antelope. I rode for hours until I came to a buffalo wallow in a chapparel where I dismounted to get some water. After having assuaged my thirst I lay down upon the grass and fell into a profound sleep. When I awoke the sun was slowly sinking to rest in the western horizon. As I remounted I discovered to my consternation that I was lost. I knew that my companions had long since moved from the locality in which I had left them, and the bitter realization dawned upon me that I was alone upon the boundless prairie. Have you any conception of the terror incorporated in those few words, ten years ago, lost upon the prairie. To have an adequate appreciation of my situation, let your memory recall some instance of shipwreck where the tempest-tossed mariner drifts out upon the wide surging seas, clinging with all the energy of despair to floating timbers of the stranded vessel. My mind abandoned itself to the most melancholy reflections. In imagination I saw my beautiful home far away upon the hills of Virginia. I heard the gentle salutation of my "sweet mother," and felt the tender imprint of a sister's warm kiss upon my cheek. But this sad reverie was soon to be broken. Suddenly my horse gave a start. Just then I recognized the cause. My very blood froze within my veins as a long, deep howl was borne faintly to my ears by the soft evening wind. Again it came. Nearer, clearer, more unmistakable came that ominous sound. It was a death knell to me. God of mercy I shouted in agony, as turning in my saddle I saw hundreds of dark objects distinctly outlined against the sky. I was pursued by wolves. My horse was an animal of magnificent speed and bottom, and dropping the reins upon his neck I muttered an invocation to heaven, and commenced the dreadful race for life. The noble animal needed no encouragement. With powerful bounds he cleared the mesquite grass, straining every nerve to its utmost tension, for too well his instinct taught him the terrible fate which awaited us. I looked again and to my unutterable horror I saw that the brutes were gaining upon us with marvelous rapidity. It was vain to urge my devoted steed to greater effort. The moon arose in resplendent beauty as if mocking my misery. I looked back once more. Right at my horses very heels these hell hounds come bounding, rending the air with their blood-curdling yells. In an agony of desperation I drew my navy pistols. Not a moment too soon for just then with a prodigious bound a gigantic wolf alighted upon my horse's haunches. I fired within an inch of his head. The lifeless body rolled upon the grass. Ha, it stopped them for a moment. With ravenous appetites they crowded to the horrid feast. A glimmering ray of hope dawned upon me. But then the agonizing thought flashed over my mind, where, oh, where was this wild headlong race to end. I raised my straining eyes to heaven, my lips moved but my voice was silent. On, on we bounded. During the short time gained I urged my horse onward until the veins stood out upon his neck like whip cords, and the perspiration poured from him in streams. Heavens, once more that hideous chorus resounds in my ears. With incredible celerity they had stripped the carcass and had resumed the fearful race with the speed of the whirlwind. One reached the side of my horse and leaped up on the saddle front. Again I fired and the body dropped. Again their course was momentarily stayed. How grandly my noble horse nerved himself in this dreadful conflict for life. On we went with a resolution born of despair. But my heroic animal was weakening. The end was coming. A third time I fired and left a jagged form stretched in death upon the prairie. A fourth time I shot down one of their number, and a fourth time gained a moment of priceless value. But the unequal fight could last no longer. Grand old Moro was staggering. God of heaven pity me I cried. I closed my eyes for the final horrible sacrifice, and just then as I bid farewell to hope and life, I felt my horse suddenly accelerate his speed. I looked up. Far away in the distance I saw faint gleams of light upon the prairie. With an energy born of desperation I urged Moro on. As I arose a slight eminence the broad, full light of a camp fire fell upon me. I was saved. I reeled in unconsciousness. The reaction was too overwhelming. When I recovered, my friends were bending over me. The wonderful instinct of my horse had carried me from the jaws of death to their camp. I asked for Moro. He was dead. His unparalleled fortitude and sublime heroism had saved my life and his was the sacrifice. I had ridden twenty five miles in an hour. I have witnessed every form of suffering. I have heard the terrific war-whoop of the Sioux Indian sounding the alarm of death at the midnight hour upon the prairie. I have felt the dark waves of the gulf closing around me as the walls of a tomb. I have travelled for days under the fierce glowing sun of Southern Texas, with my tongue cleaving to the roof of my mouth, and my eyes almost bursting from their sockets in my intense agony for cooling water, but never have I experienced such inexplicable sensations of awe and horror, as the night when lost upon the prairie, I rode with death as a companion."

TURK W.'s.

Burning of 1500 Bales of Cotton.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Oct. 20.—Fifteen hundred bales of cotton were burned this morning at the South Carolina railroad yard here. All the cotton was for New York. The fire is now under control.

The South Carolina Railway Company, who are insurers of the cotton that burned in their yards to-day, state that the amount destroyed is 2000 bales, involving a loss of about $10,000 which is fully covered by insurance.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Correspondence of the Republican.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27, 1883.

It will only be five weeks from this date before the 48th Congress begins its first session. The events which will follow will be of importance both from a political and business view. Business and politics are associated in Congress, in fact, they cannot well be separated. The material interests of the country are the first considerations with the people. When Congress meets, the first business, after organizing, is to listen to the President's message upon these important matters. His recommendations usually outline the party policy for the future, as well as the past business. Before this occasion arrives, it will no doubt be interesting to your readers to have a resume of the work done under the great business departments of the government. Nearest to the interests of the people perhaps is the Postal Service, a branch of government business in which everybody has a partner-ship. In the dead letter office of the Postoffice Department may be seen an old leather-bound book, which contains on a few pages each day's record of the whole number of letters mailed in the United States. This volume was kept by Benjamin Franklin, Postmaster General of the colonies, in his own hand-writing. The little retail government postoffice which began in this way has now increased to an expenditure of nearly fifty million dollars a year to carry the people's mails. And the people for their part, though they are now taxed but two cents a letter, send so much mail that it is estimated that the Department will soon be self-sustaining. Let us look into the great business system, and gain an idea of how it is manipulated and managed with so little friction and such fine results in convenience and benefit to the public. The Postmaster-General and the First, Second and Third Assistant Postmaster-Generals are appointed by the President, and are the business managers of the great concern. The former is a Cabinet Minister and is the responsible head of the great Postal Service. He appoints all officers and employees of the Department, and all postmasters and officials whose pay is not more than one thousand dollars per annum. With the advice and consent of the President he makes postal treaties with foreign countries, awards contracts and generally directs the management of the domestic and foreign mail service. No one man could possibly give supervision personally to all the details which this scheme includes. As a matter of fact, the Postmaster-General only deals with results, or with ideas in the aggregate. His assistants are each respectively the chiefs of certain assistant branches of the concern. The First Assistant Postmaster-General has charge of the appointing office, which itself includes five large divisions each presided over by a chief, who manages its affairs. The Second Assistant Postmaster-General has charge of quite another and distinct branch of the service. This is the arrangement of the mail routes and mail service, the letting of contracts for carrying mails by railroad, river and "star" routes. It is the province of the Inspector of mail contracts, performed under mail contracts, and the equipment division issues mail locks, bags, keys, catches, &c. The Third Assistant Postmaster-General has charge of the postal finances. His office is divided into the finance, postage stamp and stamped envelope, registered letter, dead letter, foreign mail, money and postal order divisions, the titles of which signify their respective duties. All three divisions or branches of the Postoffice Department are like the separate departments of any large business establishment, and have an infinite number of sub-divisions which are in charge of the upper grade officials under the chiefs or assistants.

It will thus be seen how the whole business is systematized and controlled. The Postmaster-General has an aggregate of something like twenty-five thousand assistants in the manipulation of the mails. Each one of these aids performs certain duties and the aggregate of all that is done comes to the chief official in a condensed report which shows at a glance the whole result. So thorough and nice is the manipulation that any trouble comes at once to his attention and is corrected.

ALABAMA NEWS.

Here and There—News from all Parts.

Sharp counterfeiters have flooded Mobile with bad dollars.

Sweet potatoes bring 75 cents a bushel in Selma, says the Times.

Selma Times: "One of the oldest citizens of our county—Patrick Chisolm, died near Harrell's Cross Roads, October 3, age 83. In 1818 he walked from South Carolina to this county and settled on the Cahaba 11 miles west of Selma. In 1822 he married Kate Craig, who still survives him. He raised a large family, not one of whom has ever removed from this county. He was a consistent and worthy member of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church for 61 years."

An Alabama boy—W. H. Lamar, of Auburn, Ala.—was on the ship Proteus, which was crushed by ice while on the way to relieve the Greely party at Lady Franklin Bay Station.

Prof. Cather, the meteorologist of Alabama, says the coming winter will be very cold and early. He says it will be phenomenal for its paroxysmal spells of heat, succeeded by intense cold over the country.

Opelika Times: Near Gold Hill, this county, Richard Whitaker shot Abram Nunn, the ball taking effect under the left arm pit and coming out in the breast. Death ensued instantly. It seems that whisky and jealousy were at the bottom of the affair.

Decatur News: A friend writing from Mosquito Point, among other things, says: "It's a boy and its name is Jo Wheeler." Up in Jackson they name all the new-comers Luke Pryor. In the western part of the 8th district, legions of them are being christened after "Little Jo."

Demopolis News: Undervaluation of property is believed by many intelligent citizens to be the effect of oppressive taxation. Georgia, a State not nearly so fertile, or rich in natural resources as Alabama, has a property valuation nearly twice as great as that of Alabama, while its tax rate is little more than one-third the tax rate in this State. Tax payers of Alabama put a low estimate upon their property because taxation is burdensome and much higher than in other States. If a just tax rate could be established, land owners especially would raise their assessment valuations, as it is to their interest that their lands should be publicly known as valuable in case they should, at any time, desire to sell. The financial affairs of our State, we regret to say, are not in a satisfactory condition and the taxpayers generally are perfectly aware of the fact. No sort of sophistry will convince them that they should pay a tax rate twice or three times as high as that of other States of like population and resources. It is better to deal candidly with the people and then all will be well.

Euflava Times and News: The Union Springs Herald takes us to task for saying that the action of the Georgia Legislature in refusing to appropriate $1,300 to pay Gov. Stephens' funeral expenses was wise. Alex. Stephens never had a more earnest admirer than the writer of these lines, and we think Georgia owes his proud name more than the State can ever pay. But we fail to see how Georgia can honor the memory of her illustrious dead by paying absurdly exorbitant funeral charges. Mr. Stephens was ever the faithful friend of the people, and if there ever lived a man worthy of being styled the "Great Comforter" that man was Mr. Stephens; and could he speak to-day he would applaud the action of the Legislature as being eminently wise.

Gadsden Times: What does Alabama want with an army? Her only enemies are defaulting treasurers, ship-shod executives, somnolent legislatures, drought, caterpillars, rust and crop mortgages. We would like to say something in favor of a militia system as a practical joke, if it were not such a threadbare joke.

Mrs. Julia Smith, nee Miss Julia Abernathy, who came here from Marengo county, for the benefit of her health, is very rapidly improving. No place like this for perfect health.

MATTHEW ARNOLD'S ARBOR.

He Relates Some Astonishing Things to a Young Reporter.

From the New York Journal.

"Can you tell me, sir," asked a Journal reporter yesterday, addressing a rather weak-eyed gentleman who paced the corridor of the Windsor hotel, "whether Matthew Arnold, the poet, is stopping here?"

"I am the gentleman for whom you are looking, sir," replied the odd-looking stranger. "Of what service can I be to you?"

The reporter explained that he had been detailed to obtain an interview.

"Ah, indeed!" replied the poet; "what a very enterprising set of newspaper men you are on this side of the Atlantic! I've only been in the kentry about half a day, and already you are on my mind about a bit inquisitive, will you? No! That's a dear good fellow. What I wanted to ask was, how many newspaper writers have you in this kentry, anyhow? Millions! Merry, you stagger me!"

The famous poet yawned wearily, and gazed out upon the street.

"Beastly weather, ain't it, my boy?"

"It's the first rain we have had here in two years," replied the reporter, blushing at his own recklessness.

"Merry on me!" exclaimed Mr. Arnold. "You don't say so?"

He drew a blank book from his pocket and made a note of the fact.

"What a pleasure it is," said he, as he replaced his note book and gazed admiringly upon the reporter, "to converse with you gentlemen of the press; one always learns something. You noticed that I jotted down the remarkable fact which you just apprised me of? Thank you, I make a habit of doing that. You see, I am to deliver a lecture shortly before your universities upon 'science and education,' and every little helps you know."

"You have been a poet from childhood, have you not, sir?"

"Oh, dear, yes. A man to be a real poet, you know, must be born with the crown of genius. I have been surprised at the number of poets you have in this kentry. Mr. Vanderbilt tells me he has always had a knack that way."

"Do you know Mr. Vanderbilt?"

"Certainly, sir."

"The gentleman who led the rush out of the opera house the other evening?"

"Really, I am not aware of that, but he certainly appears to be a very fine gentleman and a capital judge of poetry. He kindly informed me that he had purchased an entire set of your books once, but had to have them changed for that beastly humdrum stuff of Dickens because the covers were not of the right shade to match the wall paper in his library."

"You have written a great deal of poetry in your time, sir?"

"Aye, dear fellow, I have lived two-thirds of my life in deep communion with the workers in a sphere which transcends the vaguest ideality of mundane substantiality."

"Indeed?"

"I like you. It isn't every man I like. We see, we feel, we comprehend, we contemplate and we wonder. And why? Why, I ask, do we thus divest ourselves of the real and wander through the vast immeasurableness of the ideal? It is because, if we would accomplish anything the means to which do not lay upon the surface, we must go back of—of—"

"The returns?" suggested the reporter.

"Sir?" exclaimed Mr. Arnold. "I do not comprehend you. It seems to be the fault of you people in this young kentry that when one hesitates for a moment you 'feel called upon' to help him out. It is a habit we have on the other side of the pause sometimes for the word which will most fittingly express our emotions, and you snap us up with some such beastly remark as you have just made—no offense, you know, for I like you—and away goes the idea. Now, I know you will think it funny—I know I should think it funny if you didn't think it funny—but it is, nevertheless, the deplorable fact that whatever it was I had in my mind to say has left me."

"Really—"

"No apology, my dear fellow; none whatever. The fault is with me I assure you."

Mr. Arnold then retired.

GADSDEN NEWS.

Gadsden News: A certain man has $2,800 in the bank that he made running a "blind tiger" this year. We wouldn't be surprised if it takes all that, and more too; to clear him of all the indictments found against him for selling the "ardent."

Selma Times: The present drought is unprecedented perhaps in the history of Alabama. The river at Selma is lower than it has been within the memory of the oldest inhabitant. The water is clear and to look at it from the bluff it has the appearance of stagnant water in the first stages of greenness. Boats can hardly get here from Mobile, and find it impossible to get up to Montgomery. From all over the country come complaints of failing wells and springs and streams, and in some localities the scarcity of water has become almost alarming. Wells and springs have failed that were never known to go dry before, and the same may be said of many streams. Even where rains have fallen the thirsty earth has retained every drop and the waters flowed on as low and clear as ever. Fall crops are almost total failures, and the country will have to eat its peck without turnips and its bacon without peas, and can only have sweet potatoes for dinner on Sundays. There is no danger of anybody's dying of thirst or of cattle perishing from the same cause, but in this State we are not used to a scarcity of water and failing wells and springs. The present drought is a standing argument against prohibition, and will doubtless have an effect on the approaching election in Talladega county.

The Blount News means to deal with its subscribers in a business-like manner. Listen: "On and after the first of November, 1883, all persons indebted to this office will find their accounts in the hands of a justice of the peace for collection. Hereafter, our business will be conducted on a cash basis, and no names shall adorn our list of subscribers save those who pay in advance. We are disgusted with the credit business. Some pay, but a majority never think of doing so, but seem to be impressed with an idea that they are placing you under obligations by taking the paper out of the post-office."

Gadsden Times: The Coosa at this point is lower than was ever known before. The steamboat company have only been able to run one boat (the Hill City) for some three months, and only very light cargoes are taken on that boat.

Davisville on the Court House Question.

DAVISVILLE, October 22.—Mr. Editor—Dear Sir: In a recent issue of the Anniston Hot Blast there appeared an article from this place, signed "S. G. W.," which advocates the removal of the court house and jail from the present location to Anniston. And, I will say, he did not express the views of a majority of the voters of this town. We are very well satisfied with the present location of the court seat, as it is very centrally located. We would have just as far to go to court to go to Anniston as we would to Jacksonville. The only difference would be we could get to Anniston a little quicker—over the Georgia Pacific Railroad—than to Jacksonville. When it comes to test the matter, we will give Jacksonville a helping hand in defeating the swallow-tail and pigeon-toed bosses of the Hot Blast in this undermining scheme, for we doubt whether the communication signed "S. G. W." was written outside the Hot Blast office.

A VOTER.

The new town of Lincoln, in Talladega county, has a street called Jacksonville street, so named in honor of our town. We wish unbounded wealth, a good appetite and domestic felicity to every man, woman and child who shall ever live on Jacksonville street.

KIND WORDS.

The Jacksonville Republican is to be congratulated on its neat and handsome appearance. It comes this week filled with interesting reading matter, and presenting gratifying indications of its prosperity. The Republican has, very evidently, a very strong hold still upon the good people of Calhoun county, in whose midst it has been printed and read for a half a century, and deserves to be liberally sustained by them. May the son live to be another "Father Grant," and in all respects worthy of the venerable and honored sire.—Montgomery Advertiser.

The Jacksonville Republican comes to us with a new dress, all home print. We commend the energy of Mr. Grant in getting out such a good newspaper. May the Republican continue to succeed in the wish of the Gadsden News.—Gadsden News.

The Jacksonville Republican came to us last week with new head and dress and with 16 columns of original reading matter. Lon means to keep pace with the spirit of improvement so rife in Calhoun. Success to the Republican, established in 1837, two years before we were born.—Guetersville Democrat.

At the sale of lands belonging to the estate of R. D. Williams, and lying near this place, good prices were obtained. For convenience the lands were divided up into lots and thus sold. Bidding was lively, but Messrs. Rowan, Dean & Co., of this place bought it all, except one twenty acre tract bid in by Mrs. Williams. The tract situated three miles below here sold as follows:

88 acres on which is situated the gin house and pond sold for $850. 110 acres of same tract sold for $1075. 113 acres of same tract sold for $800. 20 acres of the tract lying on the home tract about one mile from the court house brought $225. 80 acres of the same tract brought $1050. 80 acres of the same tract brought $1500. 40 acres of the same tract brought $600. The entire tract of 531 acres brought $1000. A half interest in one house and lot in Jacksonville, formerly owned by Willis and Williams brought $300.

They have a vigorous and plain spoken Chief Justice in British Columbia named Begbie. A jury failed to convict a murderer where his guilt was clear, and the Judge went for them in the following style:

"On your conscience will rest the stigma of returning such a disgraceful verdict, and one at variance with the evidence on which you have sworn to find the guilt or innocence of the prisoner. Many repetitions of such conduct as yours will make trial by jury a horrible farce, and the city of Victoria, which you inhabit, a nest of immorality and crime, encouraged by the immunity from the law which criminals will receive from the announcement of such verdicts as yours. Go; I have nothing more to say to you. To the prisoner, who committed the murder with a sand-bag, he then said: You are discharged; go and sand-bag some of those jurymen; they deserve it."

MEN'S FASHIONS.

Shoes—The broadest toed, common-sense shoe, made solely for comfort, has now again taken its place as the fashionable shoe.

Dress Suits—The demand is for English and French cloths and fine diagonal worsted, the preference being slightly in favor of the former.

Neckwear—Fine satins are in favor; bright grounds and bright figures are the rule, fruit and flower effects are new features—very beautiful.

Pantaloons—But slight changes have been made in pantaloons. They are cut shapely in the form of the leg, and are well hollowed upon the instep.

France is sending re-inforcements to Tonquin, Chinese Empire.

Some men are known by the company they can't get into.

PERSONAL INTELLIGENCE.

Prof. Alexander Graham Bell has had an addition made to his Washington house containing a large room, in which he will, for an hour each day, receive deaf mutes and teach them to speak. In this good work he will be assisted by his good wife, whom in the same way he taught to speak years ago.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Correspondence of the Republican.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2, 1883.

The discussion which has followed the decision of the Supreme Court in the civil rights case still continues, and it seems to be the determination of the colored element to make it hot for the Republican party. A literary bureau has been established and Mr. Bob Ingersoll, who, now that the Star Route cases are over, is out of a job which keeps him before the public, has been engaged to lecture in different cities to work up a sentiment for the "downtrodden race." A petition is to be sent to Congress signed by Fred Douglass and other representative colored men, demanding protective legislation and it is plainly intimated that the Republican party is to be held responsible for the presumed outrages which are to be committed on the colored people by the lapse of the civil rights law. It seems to be not directly interested lookers on that the colored people are asking for something they don't want, working up a sentiment against their interests, and putting the Republicans in a very embarrassing position, politically without the least necessity for it, or the most remote hope of getting redress.

The large question of civil rights has another example furnished in the case now before the Equity Court of Hallett Kilbourne vs. the United States. This is a suit for $350,000 damages for imprisonment by order of Congress, for the refusal of the plaintiff to produce his private books and papers on an order of Congress. The decision is expected to be favorable to the plaintiff, indeed it is admitted that he will get a judgment for $20,000 or more, thus sustaining a former decision. The case is notable particularly because it establishes the precedent that Congress has no power to compel a witness to answer, or to surrender his private property. Kilbourne was for a long time imprisoned in the old Capital jail and his damages are assessed on this grievance. It is rather an imaginary and fictitious one, however, for while he was there he was praised and feted by the public, his cell was furnished like a parlor, was redolent with bouquets and flowers, and he held receptions and gave wine dinners to a jolly circle of intimates without restraint. It raised him from obscurity to notoriety and if it now provides him with a fortune he may well call it a lucky disgrace.

The raid upon the bogus pension attorneys seems to be in a very flourishing condition just now. The prosecuting attorney of the district will make up cases against the offenders for presentment to the grand jury at once. He believes that he can convict some of them of swindling the maimed soldiers. He is receiving hundreds of letters of complaint from the victims of these sharpers, and it is plainly evident that a large share of the pension attorneys live by fraud and misrepresentation. But it is doubtful whether the prosecution will amount to much. Some way these sharpers always wins the case. Principally because it is next to impossible to get legal evidence against them. Their swindling operations aggregate a large sum but it is a mere trifle against any one man, and so the prosecution lacks motive. It may result in Congress passing a special law to enable the commissioner of pensions to prosecute cases himself, and this is what ought to be done. Only the commissioner has ten times as much to do now as one man ought to attend to.

Speaking of pensions, the new public building, the pension office, is beginning to loom up to fine proportions. It occupies nearly half of the reservation known as Judiciary Square. It is now up to the second story and is amazingly large. It is 360 feet front and is built of brick. It is designed to be finished by next Spring but Commissioner of Pensions Dudley, in reply to a question about it said sarcastically to your correspondent that he did not think it would be done this century. It will be a huge monument of brick and mortar, as plain as a factory, which it will resemble in a degree as it seems to be largely devoted to manufacturing claims against Uncle Sam. Gen. Sheridan, little Phil, took command of the army this week. He will be stationed at Washington and it is said that he will make a scattershot among the army of army aristocrats stationed here, few of whom ever see any more active service than walking down the avenue of an afternoon.

BENEATH THE CEDARS

Lie Many Heroes of the Tenth Alabama.

Mobile Register.

The following considerate letter from a Christian gentleman of Virginia is gladly given place in these columns: MANASSES, PRINCE WILLIAM Co., Va. Oct. 27, 1883.

To the Editor of the Register: Dear Sir.—Near Bristoe Station on the Virginia Midland Railroad, there are about one hundred graves of the Tenth Alabama Regiment. They are in a grove of small cedars which have come up since the men were buried. The old cedars were cut to make head boards. I felt impressed with the thought that perhaps some parent's or friend's heart has wondered where their loved were lying, and concluded if it would be of any consolation I would take the trouble to get as many names as I could and send them to you for publication.

The following is the list I obtained. Many of the boards are gone and some had no name, while others had been worn too indistinct to read:

- Allen, R. A.
- Adams, W. P., Co. A., 1861.
- Barr, T. A. Died August 23, 1861; aged 22 years, 5 months and 12 days.
- Booxar, J. O.
- Coleman, S. L.
- Cravys, J. W.
- Davis, Cyrus.
- Dunlap, R. G.
- Dickinson, W. H. Born February 1, 1841, died August 10, 1861.
- Gardner, L. S. Died October 12, 1861.
- Haines, S. H., Co. E.
- King, B. F., Co. G.
- King, W. W.

These two are brothers and were buried at the same. Beneath the inscription are the initials "A. F. H." On W. W. King's board is "By A. F. H."

Leatherwood, J. E., Company D., died September 8, 1861. This is on brown stone and well executed.

Martin, J. F.

Manters, J. F., died September 9, 1861, aged 21 years, 4 months and 12 days.

Nunnely, W. D. This is on stone.

O'neal, J. T.

Plexco, J. L.

Ponder, M.

Patterson, J. M.

Pike, H. W., died October 17, 1861, aged 24.

Pike, W. H. H., died September 20, 1861, aged 20 years and two months and no days. These are side by side.

Pritchett, F. D., Co. E., died September 19, 1861, aged 22 years, 2 months and 15 days. This is on brown stone, perhaps the best stone in the cemetery.

Sprinkle, C., Co. H. This is remarkably plain.

Sims, J. F., Co. D. Died September 20, 1861.

Tuck, C.

Vaughn or Vaughn, J. M.

Watking, D. F., Co. G.

Weaver, J. W.

Ward, W. M., Co. D., died October 3, 1861.

Perhaps it would be well to have them removed to Manassas cemetery, as that is about to be fenced in. Should you publish this, I wish you would send me a copy of your paper. Any information I can give I will do so.

I am the pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church at this place. Address sacrifice and bravery rarely equaled in the annals of warfare. The Tenth Alabama was organized in Montgomery on the fourth of July, 1861, and in July went to Virginia. In that State all of its struggles were located and in that State, where so many of its members lie buried, it earned its glorious record.

At Winchester, Va., it was brigaded with the Ninth and Eleventh Alabama, Nineteenth Mississippi and Thirty-eighth Virginia, under Gen. E. Kirby Smith, and went first under fire at Drainsville, where the regiment lost 21 killed and 64 wounded. In the campaign on the Peninsula, it came under the guns of Yorktown and was vigorously shelled. Then it fought at Williamsburg and lost eighty-five killed and wounded. At Seven Pines, being held in reserve, the command suffered but little, but in the battles of Gaines' Mill and Frazier's Farm, it was badly cut up, losing over two hundred killed and wounded.

At the second battle of Manassas the regiment lost about thirty men, and at Harper's Ferry it sustained another loss, about one-half the regiment of two hundred being killed or wounded. The winter of 1862-3 was passed without serious casualty, but afterwards at Salem, when sustaining the shock of Gen. Sedgwick's corps, there was a loss of 120 out of a regiment of 400 men. Again at Gettysburg the men were mowed down by fifties.

There was hot fighting next year for the gallant Tenth at the Wilderness and at Spotsylvania, the respective losses being 50 and 60 killed and wounded. After this followed the second fight at Cold Harbor, with its record of 20 killed and wounded. The month of June and August, 1864, saw the regiment at Petersburg, at Hatchet's Run, at High Bridge, where the losses were 20 and 80 men. The retreat and surrender at Appomattox closes the history of this brave body of men. There were ten officers and 208 men present. One thousand four hundred and twenty-nine names had been at different times placed on the rolls. Of these, 300 fell in battle, 180 died of disease and 249 were discharged or transferred. Such is the history of the regiment—that noble band which has its representatives yet among the living, and yet other representatives lying hidden beneath the sod of the Old Dominion.

A SHOCKING SCANDAL,

WHICH RESULTS IN A FATAL AFFRAY.

A Prominent Church Member Charged With Raising a Girl—A Suit in Consequence, Followed by a Murder.

NASHVILLE, TENN., Oct. 3.—The following is the American's special:

Kerrville, a small town twenty miles north of Memphis, on the Chesapeake, Ohio and Southwestern Railroad, was the scene of a tragedy yesterday afternoon. T. M. Edwards shot and killed Sam. E. Roberts. The origin of the crime was the loss of a young woman's honor. Some months ago it was reported that the daughter of Mr. P. Ligon, a prominent citizen, had become a mother, and she was unmarried. When her condition was first discovered and she was asked who was the author of her ruin, she replied that it was T. M. Edwards, a highly respected farmer, a man of family and an Elder in the Presbyterian church.

The assertion was received with the greatest astonishment. Edwards was called to task for it, and he agreed to give her father his note for $500 and to Dr. Gaines his note for $100 to take her to a quiet secluded place near Nashville, which was done. Dr. Gaines going with her. Her child died shortly after birth. The news of the girl's ruin reached the ears of the officers of the Presbyterian Church, and Edwards was cited to appear before them. He was tried, his guilt was established to the satisfaction of his judges, and he was summarily expelled from the Church. Edwards now endeavored to escape the payment of the notes he had given. He claimed that he was not the seducer, but that the girl's step brother, Sam E. Roberts, was the guilty person. Dr. Gaines was determined to get his money, so he instituted a suit on the note, and at the trial last Saturday Miss Ligon testified under oath that T. M. Edwards was the author of her ruin, and the judgment was accordingly given in favor of Dr. Gaines for the full amount of the note. Young Roberts now appeared in the case of the tragedy, and denounced Edwards for committing him. This led to a quarrel and to-day Edwards shot and killed the young man. Edwards surrendered to the Sheriff at Memphis.

ALABAMA NEWS.

Here and There—News from all Parts.

Hog cholera is prevailing in Limestone, Pike and other counties in the State.

Alonzo Weeks, of Geneva county, is 19 years old, is only 2 feet 10 1/2 inches high, and weighs 42 1/2 pounds.

The Anniston car works will employ two hundred workmen and turn out twenty cars a day so says the Hot Blast.

The Greenville Advocate gets the $100 prize at the Louisville Exposition, offered for the best article, in a southern weekly paper, on the resources of the South and the local industries of the town in which such paper is published.

Three or four weeks ago the most sanguine farmers of our county did not place the estimate of our cotton crop, and many of them at less than this amount. But the late fall has been so favorable to the maturing and opening of cotton that it may be safely estimated that we will gather two-thirds of a crop.—Cousa River News.

In Selma, Ala., forty-six leading business houses, during the past year, did a business of $11,814,850.

The steam ginmill belonging to Mr. John Bell, seven miles west of Clayton, says the Enfauila Times, was burned Thursday, with four bales of cotton and a large amount of cotton seed. The property was insured with Solomon's agency at Clayton for $1,500.

The crowd of blacks and whites, says the Abbeville Times, that left here some time ago for Texas are now writing back to their friends for money to come back on. We have always known that there was no better country than this.

Mr. Caleb Golden, of Dallas county, has, so we are informed, over 350 head of hogs that are fat and ready for killing at any time when the weather gets cool enough. He has several that will weigh over four hundred pounds. Why not every farmer raise hogs and live at home like Mr. Golden?—Abbeville Times.

Tom Dunn, a white man, who recently escaped from the Helena coal mines, says the Birmingham Age, was arrested by Sheriff Haggood on Thursday last and lodged in jail. As soon as Dunn has finished his present term at the coal mines, he is to be tried for an assault with intent to murder.

Charles Campbell, a switchman on the Alabama Great Southern Railroad, was knocked down by a freight train on the South & North road and received a painful, though not serious injury.—Birmingham Age.

From the best indications of the future action of farmers, the Troy Enquirer says it is very reasonable to expect that only one-half the quantity of guano will be used in this county next year than was sold during 1883.

The Grove Hill Democrat says: We regret to announce that Stave Creek Baptist church was destroyed by fire last Sunday afternoon about four o'clock. It was, doubtless, incendiarism, as there had been no services in the house that day. The house was a good one and had just been finished. The old church having been burned the 20th of September, 1882.

RACE RIOT

AT DANYILLE, VA., FROM POLITICAL EXCITEMENT.

A Bloody Conflict Between Whites and Blacks, in Which Four Persons are Killed and Twenty Others Wounded.

RICHMOND, VA., Nov. 4.—The whole State is in a tumult of excitement over the approaching election. All parties have been working more zealously than ever before that the State may cast a larger vote than ever before in its history. The efforts to bring out a heavy vote have naturally caused much bitter feeling, and aroused more or less a spirit of strife; and the prospects are that the election will be the most exciting held in years. The bloody riot which occurred yesterday at Danville was the immediate result of a conspiracy concocted by Mahone and executed by his conscienceless henchmen in order to create a race feeling and to align, if possible, the negroes solidly to his support.

THE RIOT AND HOW IT ORIGINATED.

DANVILLE, VA., Nov. 4.—In a conflict between a crowd of white and colored people last night, Walter Holland, a son of C. G. Holland, was shot in the head and is supposed to be mortally wounded. Thomas Seward was shot through the body. Five negroes were killed, and it is supposed many more were wounded. The beginning of the conflict was the beating by one of the citizens of a negro who abused another negro for apologizing for apparent rudeness, and spoke roughly about the citizen. Some of both colors interfered, and a pistol was knocked out of the hands of one white man and exploded. Just then the report reached an assembly of white citizens in session about political matters that a conflict was going on in the streets. They came out in a body, and both classes formed in separate crowds, some in each crowd being armed. A number of negroes approaching the white crowd called out: "Shoot, don't you. We had as soon settle this thing now as any other time!" Just then somebody in the white crowd called out "Fire!" and the firing began. The negroes returned the fire and ran off, some firing as they ran. All the stores were closed immediately, the alarm bell sounded, and people came out with their arms. The town sergeant came out soon after with one of the military companies, and commanded the people in the name of the commonwealth to go home, and the streets were soon cleared.

THE SEASONS.
Sweet summer went forth to the fields,
With roses entwined in her hair;
Her footsteps as light
As her glances were bright,
And all that she looked upon fair.
Grew Autumn, beholding the mild,
Grew cheery in changing her charms,
They met, but alas!
All her strength seemed to pass,
And she languished to death in his arms.
Now sombre grew Autumn and sore
As he clung to the maid in his woe;
Then Winter passed by,
And, with ten-stricken eye,
Hid them both north a mantle of snow.

Recollections of Madison's Term.

An Old Resident, in Washington Star.
I remember Mr. Monroe very well. He was rather an unpretentious person, kind in manner, conversed freely with every one, and invited familiarly by the freedom of his way. The custom of receiving New Year's calls was then of recent origin. Mr. Madison, I believe, first introduced it in 1810. He had introduced the ceremony in New York some years previous, and was pleased with it. No one could have fathered such a custom better than he, or appreciated the cordiality of the occasion.

His entertainments were marked with hospitality and liberality—a good representative of the old school. It would be amusing to the present generation to have seen him in his dress, small of stature, wearing small clothes, knee-buckles, and powdered wig, a thorough-bred Virginia gentleman, and endowed with great powers of conversation. However, his appearance did not strike the correspondent of the Edinburg Review favorably, who, when asked what he thought of the President, said "Mr. Madison looked like a schoolmaster dressed up for a funeral."

Not so, however, was Mrs. Madison, who was the friend of everybody, of whom Washington Irving wrote as a "fine, portly, buxom dame," and Mr. Ogle Taylor speaks of her that "she never forgot a face or a name, had been very handsome, was graceful and gracious, and was loved alike by rich and poor." Mr. Madison was advanced in years when he married her. She was the widow of a wealthy merchant of Philadelphia named Todd; her maiden name, I think, was Dolly Payne. During her stay in the White House she made things lively by the frequent dancing parties there. She was a graceful dancer, particularly excelling in the cotillon and minuet.

Around her was life, and every one felt her presence to be a need. She presided over the affairs of the Executive Mansion. It is a sad commentary that her fond hopes should have been blighted by the misdoings of her son, Payne Todd, who in some way squandered her estate, worth $100,000 or more, and thus left her in an impoverished condition. She was an ornament to the country, and was the last lady to live in the original mansion. You know that the British burned the house in August, 1814.

FASHION NOTES.

Velvet is all the rage.
Hosiery is very cheap this fall. The favorite balmoral skirt is black.
Wool costumes are the correct street wear.
There is a return of favor to clinging dress draperies.
Steel soutache on gray velvet is considered very chic.
Silk costumes are regulated to house and carriage wear.
Russian green combines with black, gray or deep red.
Silk boucans are vandyked, scalloped and sometimes pinked.
Basques, as a rule, are short, and are pointed both back and front.
Brides on the continent no longer wear gloves at the ceremony.
Black stockings remain the first favorites of fashionable women.
Balmoral skirts are wider, but the yoke about the hips is invariable.

The silks, satins and brocades of this season are dazzlingly beautiful.
It is again fashionable to wear a fancy pin in the bonnet bow under the chin.
A Parisian costume of pigeon-gray is trimmed with the plumage of the blue jay.
Of all the forms of the feminine waistcoat that of fur bids fair to be most popular.
Velveteen is an exploded name; all velvet pile stuffs take the general name of velvet.

The greater the fear, the more sublime is that courage which can stand firm in its presence and unshrinkingly pursue the path of duty.
The Baltimore Municipal election went in favor of Democracy.

We are gratified beyond measure at the assurances of appreciation that reaches us every day from subscribers upon the improved appearance of the REPUBLICAN. Our increasing subscription list and increased advertising patronage attest also emphatically the peoples estimate of our efforts to give them a good home paper. The kind things said of the REPUBLICAN also by our brethren of the press in the State at large have been most highly appreciated by us. We shall endeavor to make the paper such a reflex of county life as will secure it welcome admission into every household in the county, and while doing this shall not forget to keep our readers posted on State and general news. We trust that each subscriber who is pleased with the paper will speak a word in its behalf to some neighbor who does not take it and thus help us swell our subscription list this winter to double its present proportions.

We see from the Cherokee papers that Mr. J. B. McElrath, a former Calhoun county boy, is running for Treasurer of that county. He is a most deserving gentleman and we hope he may be successful before the people of the good old county of Cherokee.

J. J. DeArman found a watch on the square last week, advertised for the owner in the REPUBLICAN Saturday and found him the same day and returned the property. This is another exemplification of the virtue of advertising. If you have anything to sell, or want to buy anything, you want people generally to know it at once. The newspaper can tell it to thousands while you are telling it to a dozen. Advertising is reasonable common sense.

Mr. W. W. Woodward, one of the young members of the bar here, who went to Texas some weeks ago and located in Dallas, has been employed to assist the county prosecutor in that city. Dallas is a large and important city and the docket of criminal cases is necessarily very large, and it is a high compliment to Mr. W. to be chosen for so important a position in so short a time after his arrival. The office of county prosecutor in a city like Dallas is a lucrative one, and Mr. Woodward's practice will be a paying one from the start. We congratulate him.

Dr. J. C. LeGrand.

We learn that Dr. J. C. LeGrand, formerly of Weavers Station, has begun the practice of medicine here. For the present his office is at T. W. Ayers' drug store, but he will have an office in the Mobile block as soon as it is completed.

We republish the above as a matter of interest to some of Dr. LeGrand's friends who may not take the Hot Blast, and to enable us to pay a slight tribute to a most deserving man and successful practitioner. By his own unaided exertions, without the advantages of wealth, and with nothing but an inherited good name to back him, Dr. LeGrand has achieved for himself a position that any man of his age might well be proud of. At a comparatively young age he has acquired a wide practice, secured the confidence of his profession in this county, and the esteem and regard of the community in which he has practiced. He is Secretary of the Medical Board and an active member of it. We trust that his removal to Anniston may prove beneficial to him.

The Talladega Mountain Home advocates Hon. Wm. H. Forney as the successor of Senator Pugh.

It says: No man in the State has the same legislative experience, and no man in the State is better qualified both by experience and the possession of the qualities requisite for exalted statesmanship than the honored representative from the Seventh district.

Among other places on a boom may be mentioned Centre, in Cherokee county.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

FROM ALL SECTIONS OF CALHOUN.

Our Bera correspondent writes: Mr. G. W. Peterson is very sick with pneumonia.

Mrs. Emma Wilson, daughter of J. S. Canada, whose life has been despaired of for several days, is thought to be better.

B. P. Bynum is building a nice residence on Coldwater.

The little boy Cummings, who got his leg broken by a runaway mule sometime back is fast getting well.

Our Choccolocco correspondent writes:

The wife of our fellow-citizen, W. F. Jordan, died last week and was buried at Harmony church. She was an estimable christian woman and member of the Baptist church. She leaves a host of sorrowing relatives and friends.

W. W. Hughes had a protracted corn husking last week, lasting for two days and nights—an evidence of plenty of the staff of life in our land.

Messrs. Stockton & Smith are making beautiful brick with their machine. Will soon have some ready for shipment. They have a spur track from their yard to the Georgia Pacific and say they can soon furnish brick to supply the demand as far as Birmingham, Columbus and Oxauna. It would be worth your while, Mr. Editor, to visit these works. Your correspondent will take pleasure in going with you. Mr. Stockton is visiting Atlanta this week.

A letter was enquired for at the post office here a few days ago for the "best looking man in town." He was informed that it would be here in a few days.

Gov. Colquitt and Messrs. Frierson and Constantine visited the steam brick works last week. It was estimated that that least two thousand people visited the works last Sunday from the surrounding country.

Dr. B. S. Evins, of White Plains, paid our town a visit last week. He is always welcome.

Our popular and clever as he can be depot agent, J. B. Thompson, has donned a new suit of clothes. Lookout girls.

Several bales of cotton sold here this week at from 9 1/2 to 9 3/4.

W. S. Wood, cattle buyer from Atlanta, will ship a carload of cattle this week.

Several ladies and gentlemen, of DeArmanville, and Mr. J. F. Davis, of Davisville, attended church at Harmony Sunday to hear a very impressive sermon of Eld. J. A. Scott, from the text, "Be not weary in well doing; for you shall reap if you faint not."

Quail shooting is becoming a popular as well as profitable amusement of some of our young men.

Our Davisville correspondent says: Messrs. Scarbrough & Milligan are prospecting in their mines above town and will be raising ore on a large scale by the 1st of December.

Mrs. Davenport of Bowdon, Ga., has been visiting our village, the guest of Mr. B. F. Logan.

The residence of Mrs. M. E. Tumlin caught on fire last Friday night and would have been destroyed, but for the timely assistance of neighbors.

Mr. H. L. Davis left last Friday for Sand Mountain on hunt of a shot gun that emigrated to the mountain.

Mr. B. F. Logan and family left here the 4th inst for Sand Mountain.

Our Ohatchie correspondent writes:

Ohatchie is now having a nice rain and the thirsty soil is taking it in almost as fast as it falls. With a few days of clear weather, oat and wheat sowing will be pushed. Corn and cotton crop about hoisted. Both considerably short.

Some of our farmers are going to sow grasses and clover this year. There is no question but that the fertile bottom lands of Tallassahatchie and Ohatchie creeks are well adapted to clover and grasses, and I have often wondered why such men as B. B. Nunnally, Henderson, Nabors, Smith Gray and others do not devote their rich creek lands to the grasses and pasturage. Then one-half the labor now used would be sufficient to run these farms. I heard a Georgian, who had rode over a portion of Nunnally's and Smith's farms, say that if the land lay in his county it would bring $50 an acre, and that the near future would bring amazing changes for the better. He also examined the out-crop of iron around Ohatchie and says it is only a question of time when furnaces will be in full blast in hearing of this place. A good deal of the mineral lands about here have already changed hands and been bought by men who are able to raise the iron at the proper time, and now with the aid of the E. & W. road there will be no difficulty in shipping to any point.

The quiet little place of Ohatchie is doing a very good business shipping cotton. I noticed a car load leave here last Saturday, and the agent told me it had all come in since Friday noon. I also see a good deal of freight left there for the surrounding country.

The shingles are on the ground to cover the new depot, which will add to the safe keeping of freight.

Health of this community good, with the exception of an occasional chill.

A correspondent from Buncome writes:

There is a piece of furniture in this neighborhood that I don't suppose any young man in this vicinity would begrudge to pay $100,000 for to set off his house with, if he designed to go to house-keeping.

There is a jewel in this vicinity 9 1/2 karats pure diamond, set in gold. Most all the lassies in our vicinity want to own this jewel, but are afraid lest the jewel will treat them like it did Earnest.

Golden has declined the idea of selling his springs. Like Phoebe Thornton, after courting 40 years, she declined the idea of marrying. He has spoken for 100,000 feet of lumber to improve the springs with. He will erect a hotel with 100 rooms, and a livery and sale stable supplied with the best of stock, buggies, &c., for the accommodation of visitors. He will also connect with the hotel billiard and pool tables for the amusement of guests and put up a bathing pool that will have six different waters. I suppose that it will be equal to the waters of Jordan.

C. C. Allen is building a neat cottage for the accommodation of his renters.

Rolly Jenkins will be ready in a few days to go to saving lumber again.

John H. Moore has treated himself to a new wagon.

Our Oak Level, Cleburne county, correspondent, thus writes:

Crops in these parts have been gathered and I think I am safe in saying that two-thirds of a crop has been realized all around. One hundred per cent. and more, perhaps, of sorghum has been made.

On account of the continued drought our water gins have done but little or nothing, consequently very little cotton has gone to market.

Quite an amount of sickness has prevailed in this neighborhood this fall—very little fatality, however.

Jack Steed's wife is dangerously ill, and being treated by Dr. White, of Amberson.

Rev. R. M. Howell has gone to Birmingham to join the North Alabama Conference.

W. P. Howell, one of the lay delegates for Talladega District, leaves for the seat of the Conference to-morrow.

Mr. Martin, from Tallapoosa, will locate his steam saw mill near Oak Level soon.

Dr. Boker, our, our resident physician, is attending another course of lectures in Atlanta.

A great deal of wheat is being sown this fall.

We are delighted with the improvement of the dear old REPUBLICAN.

Give us some more of Bill Arrp's letters. They are "good reading."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Correspondence of the Republican.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9, 1883.

The announcement is made that the United States Steamer Trenton leaves this morning for Newport having on board a jocular party consisting of Secretary Lincoln, Secretary Chandler, Postmaster General Gresham, Commander Walker, and others. As it is about the middle of November it is to be hoped that this is the last junket expedition of the season, and that the pleasures of winter life in Washington will be sufficient to keep the President and his Cabinet in some sort of official connection with the government for the rest of the year. It is astonishing, by the way, to what proportions the shameless practice of absenteeism has reached under the present administration. The President was away the better part of three months; the Secretary of State visits Washington so seldom that he is practically a stranger here; Attorney General Brewster has not spent three days in Washington since last May; Secretary Chandler has passed the summer cruising up and down the coast; perhaps he has been looking for our navy, to take it in out of the wet, but he has certainly paid little attention to the Navy Department. Secretary Lincoln accompanied the President out West, and has made weekly trips away during the remainder of the season. And now Postmaster Gen. Gresham though scarcely warm in his office is away to Newport for a dash at fashionable folly.

I do not know but the Ship of State founders on about as well without these inefficient officers as with them. That they prostitute their offices and waste the money the people pay for their services seems bad enough, but the worst feature of it all is the way is done. Here is a government vessel, for instance, maintained for a certain purpose, without authority or sanction these officials transfer it to other uses; run it at the public expense for their own pleasure.

Private cars or railway trains are placed at their disposal by obsequious companies who receive their reward through advantageous legislation or some sort of subsidy, for instance, such as Assistant P. M. General Elmer allowed to the Pennsylvania Co. for a supposed increase in the weight of mails carried by them, donating about $850,000 a year to them without even being solicited to do so. This will pay many private cars and passes, and is an example of how it is done.

The breaking up of the coalition in Virginia is the most substantial victory the democrats have gained this fall. The result of the elections in other States of comparatively little importance. The State of Ohio has been gained by the democrats as a permanency; New York is sure for the democrats in the Presidential campaign no matter how local questions may vary the majorities in off years, but the division which has existed in Virginia, and given the republicans two Senators, through a political movement which divided the democrats against themselves, was a great loss and menace to the autonomy of the party. To have recovered from it and to sweep away the power of Mahone is to defeat forever the attempts of a republican administration to buy over a part of the democratic church south.

It should be more generally known that Washington harbors a multitude of claim agents who live by victimizing ex-soldiers and their heirs.

The order of the Commissioner of Pensions disbaring some of these agents from practice is only a partial remedy. It was the intention of the authorities to prosecute some of the Agents, but the Pension office is not able under the restrictions of the law; to give any help in this direction, so I suppose the cases will be abandoned for want of sufficient proof against the swindlers. The only thing seems to be to warn the public against them through the press. All of the officials unite in recommendations to Congress to make the laws more strict, but it is a very difficult matter to provide against the folly of fools. The government however should punish these men. They have the evidence against them in their hands, and should go to the trouble and expense of convicting them. If a few were sent to the penitentiary it would end the confidence games played in the name of the government.

The rail road depots at Washington these days remind one of the rush of travel to a summer resort in the first days of hot weather. Crowds of people are arriving by every train.

Hot Water for Consumptives.

From Chambers' Journal.

"My friend finally abandoned medicine, of all kinds, and continued a nourishing diet only. About three weeks ago her attention was directed to a newspaper paragraph recommending hot water as a remedy for consumption. Feeling that little harm could ensue from its use, she determined to test it. At the moment of retiring, a large tumbler of hot water, in which the juice of a lemon had been mixed to free it from nausea was taken. In a few moments a glow of warmth would pervade the lungs, chest, etc., quickly followed by the most refreshing sleep, which would be unbroken by any cough, and the patient would awake in the morning rested and strengthened. A few days ago she was seized with a fit of coughing, during which was coughed up into her mouth a small stone about the size of a pea—formed of the sulphate of lime. I believe, and usually considered a symptom of the healing of a cavity in the lung. Whether this marked improvement was due to the use of hot water, I cannot venture to say; but its beneficial influence in securing sweet sleep and exemption from coughing at night was so marked that I would like some of your readers to test it with their consumptive friends, and give through your Notes, the results of their experience.

Alabama and Kentucky.

Montgomery Advertiser.

A correspondent of the Ozark Star, who visited Louisville Exposition recently writes an interesting letter in which he notes the products of Kentucky, draws a comparison with Alabama. After referring to the green pastures, hay-ribs, stacks, corn-shocks, oats, wheat, potatoes, cattle, mules, horses, hogs, sheep, geese, poultry, &c., he says:

The further we went, the more beautiful all these became, until we reached a great city, rolling in wealth, built up and sustained in the main by a country which does not raise a pound of cotton. What lesson did this teach? Did I jump at the conclusion, because I saw a great country which makes no cotton, that we in Alabama should pursue a like course? No, indeed. But I did reach this conclusion: that if those people could grow rich by raising hay, cattle, hogs, horses, mules, and the like, we could at least contribute somewhat to our comfort by pursuing in part the same course. If we only desired to have as good a country in Alabama as Kentucky, we could afford to discard cotton altogether; but as it is possible in my opinion to have it very much better one, it would be unwise in us to leave out of consideration any of the elements which go to make up our superior advantages and our greatness. As I told a Kentucky farmer, we can come a great deal nearer raising all we need in Alabama than they can in Kentucky. He readily agreed to this, as every thinking man must.

This correspondent strikes the key-note of Alabama's future agricultural prosperity. Alabama farmers have practically discarded all, or most of the elements of success, by devoting their productive lands to cotton. He clearly shows that Johnson and Bermuda grasses and Japan clover grow luxuriantly in Alabama, and will make pastures little less valuable than the clover and blue-grass of Kentucky. We should grow grass, instead of making it our duty to kill it. Then could we have the fat cattle, butter, horses, mules, sheep, hogs, beef, mutton, &c., that are seen everywhere in profusion in Kentucky.

A few acres on every farm devoted to grass, and a portion set apart for grazing, would enable us to make the remainder better, ensure rich pasturage for most of the year, and add everything needed to live comfortably and independently at home.

THE CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE.

S. H. Barrett & Co's one of the Best on the Road.

The Circus and Menagerie was here on Saturday, as per advertisement, and the verdict of this community is that it is one of the few which has and does the things it advertises. The attendance was large, both at the day and evening performances. The street pageant was very fine. In addition to the fine wagons and bands, as well as the fine horses, there were herds of elephants and camels in the procession, a sight new as well as novel.

In the first tent as the visitor went in was the menagerie, which contained a good collection of rare animals, birds, &c. Passing into the performing tent we found it to be an immense affair, having a very great seating capacity. It was comfortably full, but was so large that every body had a seat, and no one was compelled to stand.

There are certainly some as fine actors in this circus as ever appeared in the saw-dust arena. Robert Stickney and Charles Ewers cannot be excelled as horsemen, while Emma Lake and Jennie Ewers stand unrivalled among lady performers on horseback.

The athletic and acrobatic feats were as good as we ever saw, and the troupe of performers is a very large one. We saw men turn double somersaults over two elephants and five camels standing abreast, a feat which we should have deemed impossible if we had not witnessed it. The triple bar performance by the Reno Brothers was a most excellent one also.

Several magnificently trained performing horses from another attraction which should be noticed. The fine performance of the acrobats, Quigley, Kincaid, Whitty and the Leotard Brothers deserves special mention. The man with the iron jaw, Frank Fitzwilliams, also performed prodigies in the way of lifting men and tables and barrels of water with his teeth.

The clowns are funny without being vulgar. The leader, Fred Aynar, whose acquaintance we made is a perfect gentleman when in his proper clothes. Davidson and Gaston are comical, but we do not know what they are like outside of their ring business.

The most perfect order and quiet prevailed. It is evident that the management understand their business, and have everything reduced to a system of order and good management. The men in charge are courteous gentlemen who make a good impression on those with whom they come in contact or with whom they do business.—Kentucky Independent.

Coming to Jacksonville Nov. 20.

THE LEE FAMILY.

Reminiscence of a Family in Which There Have Been One Hundred and Sixty-Five Grand Children.

Birmingham Age.

The Lee family has so long been identified with this county that many of them are well known to the old citizens of this and adjoining counties. The old gentleman, Mr. Needham Lee, immigrated to this county and settled in Cahaba valley about the year 1818 from the State of Tennessee. Here he made his home and reared a family of eleven sons and six daughters, all, except one of whom, in turn, reared numerous families, the average number of children to the family being thirteen. Needham Lee thus had one hundred and ninety-five grand children. The majority of these are still living, and themselves have large families. Of the eleven sons there are six living, whose average age is 65 years. The other five lived to a great age. Of the six daughters three are living, their average being 65 years.

The oldest son, W. C. Lee, is still living at the advanced age of eighty-eight years. His home is in Etowah county, Alabama. He is stout and able to do good work on the farm. He can plow all day, pick 100 pounds of cotton per day, and do almost any kind of work on the farm. Colonel Lee has been a consistent member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church for sixty-two years.

This remarkable family met Tuesday, 25th of October, at Helena, Shelby county. The meeting was a happy occasion. Congratulatory addresses were delivered by Rev. Mr. Ballou and Dr. W. B. Cross.

Few families have enjoyed so much of life as the Lee family.

SENATOR PUGH.

His Views on the Tariff Question.

Atlanta Bulletin.

Senator Pugh honored the Bulletin office with his presence for about an hour yesterday morning, and made himself very pleasant, interesting and instructive, as he favored us with a running conversation on various matters of public interest, expressing himself in that clear, forcible and impressive manner characteristic of him, and with a voice that is matchless in its depth and strength.

While speaking of the present tariff, he made the remarkable statement, that if the people of this country fully understood and comprehended its iniquity, in all the sense and meaning of the word, they would not stand it 48 hours without bloodshed. He says the present tariff comes of the greed of representatives of the people in Congress, and not from the people themselves or the manufacturers.

"Why," said Col. Pugh, "I could form a tariff to-morrow, stripped of all the outrages and iniquities of the present one, that would give the utmost satisfaction to manufacturers all over the country, afford the government an abundant revenue and reduce taxation fully 50 per cent. And yet such a tariff bill in Congress would meet with opposition from all sides, who have it in their heads that tariff for protection is indispensable, and they will listen to nothing to the contrary." Col. Pugh further said that it was repeatedly established before the Senate Commission, of which he was a member, and before which so much testimony has been taken during the last summer, that the New England manufacturers of sheetings, shirtings, muscadines and wollen goods made from yarns do not need nor do they ask for protection. They export, annually, vast amounts of these goods that come directly in competition with such goods manufactured abroad, clearly showing that protection, in this particular, is most unnecessary and unwarrantable oppression upon the American consumer. It raises the price of the goods to the amount of the tax, with no reason for it on earth. And this vicious, oppressive and unnecessary spirit pervades the whole tariff system of the government. These and other interesting matters touched upon by the Senator, made his call exceedingly pleasant and interesting. He is thoroughly alive to the interests of his people and section, and fully posted upon national affairs. He has had the opportunity within the last few months, of hearing many of the best informed, experienced and enlightened men of the age, give their opinions under oath, of a great industrial interest of this country and Europe, and of the relations existing between capital and labor, and of the causes that often lead to strikes, discontent, trouble and even bloodshed, and he says the report of the commission and the testimony taken before it, to be submitted to the next Congress, will make twelve or fifteen large volumes, and when the chaff is sifted from it, it will form a most valuable contribution of information to the archives of the country.

Senator James L. Pugh sat in the law office of Pugh & Merrill, on Randolph street yesterday forenoon and greeted many of his friends who called in to pay their respects. He talked at length of his summer work as a member of the Senate committee on Labor and Education. Referring to New England he said:

"Look at New England! There is Massachusetts with $240,000,000 in her savings banks. There is Rhode Island, little larger in area than Barbours county, with $48,700,000 in her savings banks. Massachusetts is mostly made up of rocks, and six months in the year outdoor labor is impossible on account of snow and ice. Yet see what she has done, see what all New England has done. Take for instance, Manchester, New Hampshire, a manufacturing town of 30,000, and one of the most flourishing of towns. There are only two men in the town who keep carriages and horses. Everybody works, and all labor is respectable. The great mill owners give parties and balls to which the factory girls are invited. These girls work for their living and are respected for it. Then the educational system of those States is good. There is where our people are greatly at fault. In many cases our educational system unites young men for the practical duties of life. Many of those New England towns are models in every respect, and there are no idlers in them. Hence the great prosperity of that section of our common country."

A gentleman whom we do not know, from his name, and who is not a subscriber to the REPUBLICAN, writes us a long letter from Texas, objecting strenuously to a late remark in this paper to the effect that we would not give forty acres near Cross Plains for a whole county in Texas.

God never made any part of Texas as good as this country, and no amount of newspaper puffing can change that fact. The man who leaves Calhoun county to go to Texas, does a very foolish thing.

From what we read, see and hear we gather the impression that the "Three Cities of Calhoun" will soon absorb the county. As it is, they already absorb all the gas.

The Oxford News prints the above and credits it to the REPUBLICAN. The News knows, as well as we do, that the REPUBLICAN has said no such thing. It was perhaps printed among Neighborhood Notes, from some correspondent, but the News knows that a paper cannot be held as giving editorial endorsement to all the expressions of correspondents.

DEATH OF A NOBLE YOUNG MAN.

Joseph Kyle, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Kyle, of Gadsden, died at Marion recently, where he was attending college.

He was about 19 years of age and gave great promise of usefulness, being both of fine mind and irreproachable morals. The Gadsden papers of last week contain lengthy eulogies of him.

Here and There—News from all Parts.

The high school at Montevallo has been supplied with new improved desks.

A considerable quantity of sugar cane was frozen in Pike county during the recent cold snap.

Mr. J. M. Ward, of Randolph county, had his gin house, together with six bales of cotton, burned last week.

The type and press for the new paper to be published in Shelby county, at Columbiana, has been received and put in place.

The oldest man in Pike county is said to be Thomas Grimes, of Spring Hill. He is 106 years old, according to the Troy Messenger.

Some thieves broke into a freight car standing on a siding at Calera last week, and stole a fine cask of liquor and several other articles.

J. H. Stephens, of Chambers county, had the misfortune, Thursday night, to have his gin-house and four bales of cotton destroyed by fire.

The Central Iron Works, at Helena, Shelby county, have had two nail machines added to their shops. The machines are kept running all the time.

As an evidence that Calera is booming, the Selby Sentinel notices the fact that seventy-two persons sat down to supper at one of the hotels of the town one evening last week.

The citizens of Wedowee and vicinity, we are credibly informed, propose to donate 10,000 acres of wood lands to the owners of the East Alabama railway, if they will extend the road through Randolph county.

Books of subscription have been opened at Opelika for stock to be taken in the Opelika & Gulf Railway Company. The road proposed will be narrow gauge, and will extend from Opelika to Geneva.

Stove Creek Baptist Church, in Clark county, was destroyed by fire a few days since. The house was a new one, the old one having been burned in September, 1882. Supposed to have been the work of an incendiary.

An unfortunate encounter occurred Saturday between Mr. Wm. H. Price and Mr. James Peder, near Muscle Shoals Canal, in Lauderdale county. Several shots were exchanged with double-barreled shot-guns. Mr. Price was severely wounded—five buckshot taking effect upon his person.

Clint Houston, an employee on the A. G. S. R. R. in attempting to jump from the train at Tuscaloosa Thursday of last week was killed.

A negro woman in Autauga county quarreled with a colored boy a few days ago over a roasted potato and, seizing a gun, shot and killed him.

The Talldega Mountain Home was for prohibition. The night after the election the office door was hung with crepe by some very manly and courageous person. The paper thus neatly reported:

Through a mistake the door of the Home office was hung with crepe last night. The crepe was evidently intended for the residence of the late Lewis Comer who, while drunk, was drowned in six inches of water in an open street gutter.

Ex-Governor Patton lectured at Eufaula last Saturday night. The Governor is interested in seeing Alabama well represented at the approaching session of the National Cotton Planters' Association in Vicksburg. Selma would be glad to see Gov. Patton and hear him lecture.—Times.

Gov. O'Neal has issued a proclamation, recommending that Thursday, November 29th, be observed by the people of Alabama as a day of thanksgiving and prayer. It is the same day proclaimed by the President of the United States.

Mr. Thomas Joseph, a resident of Montgomery since 1836, died in that city Sunday morning last. A Tariff Reform Club is to be organized in Montgomery.

A railroad is being surveyed from Montgomery to Prattville. It will be continued from thence to Florence.

Rev. E. T. Winkler, D. D., died at Marion last Saturday. He was a distinguished Baptist preacher.

Auditor Carmichael has reported thirty-eight tax collectors for failures to make monthly reports as now required by law.

The last meeting of the Presbyterian Synod was held in Union Springs beginning last Friday or Saturday. The next annual meeting of the Synod will be in Tuscaloosa.

The Greene and Wilcox county

Fairs were highly successful, as was also the Barbour county Fair. The North Alabama Conference of the M. E. Church, South, met in Birmingham the 15th inst.

The town of New Market, in Madison county, was recently almost totally destroyed by fire.

The horse-swappers of Talladega, and surrounding country were in convention there Friday and Saturday. The Home says more or less chaffering, lying and spiritualizing was indulged in, but the accustomed fighting was dispensed with.

James and Thomas Neily went to the house of Hiram Cooley, in Marshall county, a few days ago, and called him out to settle a dispute. One of the parties struck him on the head and he now lies senseless and is not expected to live.

In the same county on the 24th ult., Joe Dowdy and a companion, both drunk, went to the house of Wm. Barnes and demanded admittance, which was refused. They then broke open the door and shot young John Barnes dead. They loitered in the neighborhood all next day and then went, it is supposed to Trion Factory.

Gen. Wade Hampton passed through Montgomery last Friday on his way to the Cotton Planter's Convention at Vicksburg.

George Patterson while felling timber in Crenshaw county a few days ago, was killed by a falling tree that lodged in its descent.

There has not been sufficient rain in the Black Belt to enable farmers to plow in oats.

We are reliably informed that a lady living near Jamison, Ala., on the N. & S. railroad, was recently buried, but afterward she was taken up and came to life. Her son arrived at home a few hours after she had been buried, and wishing to see her once more he proceeded to have her exhumed, with the above result. She is at present hale and hearty. This statement is corroborated by a respected gentleman who is at present here on a visit.—Gadsden News.

A negro named Bill Boatright set fire, with a match, to the lint room of a gin-house in Colbert county one day last week, and was so badly burned before he could get out that he died next day.

We had occasion to visit Jacksonville last week, and we were delighted with our sister city. It is beautifully situated in a valley hedged in with grand mountains making a view in every direction one of peculiar grandeur. The town recently suffered severely by fire, but it was a blessing in disguise, for on the ruins substantial brick stores are being erected to take the place of the wooden structures burned. The entire place has an air of business activity, and it is the home of as clever people as we desire to meet. If it were not covetous we would give almost anything to have in Anniston the magnificent spring that flows from the centre of the town.—Anniston Hot Blast.

BUILDING NOTES.

Maj. T. W. Francis is now having the estimates made for 12 or 15 cottages. If satisfactory, he will build them at once, for rent.

W. W. Nesbit has the contract for covering with tin the brick store recently erected by Martin & Wilkerson, and he is doing it well, as he is amply capable of. There is no finer workman in tin in the State than he.

Two weeks ago we announced that Mr. R. L. Arnold contemplated the erection of two cottages to rent. One of them is now almost completed and the lumber is on the ground for the other.

The pretty cottage of Dr. Montgomery approaches completion under the hands of Mr. Towns, the contractor. Mr. Towns is a fine workman and moreover a decidedly clever gentleman. We hope he may secure other work here. If he could dispose of his property in Rome at a satisfactory price he says he would settle here, as he is satisfied that this and other towns in the county will give contractors as much as they can do for a long while to come. Mr. Towns has satisfactorily done the wood work on Martin & Wilkerson's building also.

The weather has never been so favorable to builders as this fall. They have had scarcely a day of interruption for two months or more.

Mr. J. D. McCormick has bought the brick house of J. D. Arnold, near the spring, and will add a two story ell and two verandahs and make of it a handsome residence.

Mr. John M. Caldwell says he will build a two-story brick house on the lot bought by him next to the Rowan corner as soon as the brick can be made next Spring.

Mr. C. G. Morgan is building a cottage for rent. It is understood that it will be occupied by Rev. J. F. Smith.

Maj. Stone is having "Brookside," lately purchased by him, thoroughly repaired, preparatory to moving in. This is one of the prettiest residences of the many pretty ones in our town.

Mr. W. P. Crook is having his house on Depot street thoroughly overhauled and put in good condition for occupancy. It is a very desirable and pretty place, but had been suffered to fall somewhat into decay.

Messrs. Rowan, Dean & Co., the purchasers of the half interest in the house belonging to the R. D. Williams estate and Major Willis, have written Mr. Willis, offering to "give or take." If he sells to them, this building also, which has been suffered to fall somewhat into decay, will be thoroughly overhauled and repaired and made ready for the occupancy of some family. It is a most desirable place in a very fine neighborhood and can be made a very pretty residence indeed. We are glad to see these old houses repaired and beautified as to see new ones going up. It will very much add to the beauty of our town when all these are fixed up well.

Can't somebody take the old "Sunny South" building in hand, roll it back, throw a verandah in front, add an ell to the rear and make a neat place of residence of it? As it stands on Main street, it is an eye sore. If this can't be done, on account of the condition of titles, it should be condemned by the Council as a nuisance. It is said that its condition renders it very liable to take fire. With a strong wind from the east and that building on fire, the large livery stable of Martin & Wilkerson would inevitably go and with it the entire west side of the public square. As the Underwriters have withdrawn insurance from that side, the Town Council owe it to property holders to see that no fire traps are tolerated so near as to be a menace to them.

A new street will be opened by the property owners from Depot street leading north, between the lots of W. P. Crook and P. J. Hines and continuing past the residence of Judge Woods, thence east to north Main street. This will be a wide and very handsome street and open up much property very desirable for residence. We hope that property owners will put building lots along this beautiful street at reasonable figures so that it may be built up at once. We have the assurance of some of them that this will be done.

Maj. P. Rowan bid $485 on the 22 feet front lot next to his corner lot on which he is now building a fine brick store 35x100 feet. He has eight feet front lying alongside it. This would have given him thirty feet clear between walls now up, and he says, if he had secured it, he would have erected a two story brick storehouse on it at once thirty feet front and one hundred feet back.

The assured value of business lots here has induced Major T. W. Francis to offer at public sale, to the highest bidder, three splendid lots owned by him on the block known as Woodward's corner. This desirable property will be offered the same day as the land belonging to the estate of E. L. Woodward, under decree of Chancery Court, by Mr. H. L. Stevenson, as agent. The Woodward corner is regarded by many as the most desirable lot on the Public Square and the other two are as relatively valuable. See advertisement in another column.

Whenever first-class mechanics begin to seek a town for place of residence, it is a sure sign of its prosperity. This is the case now with Jacksonville.

The Jacksonville REPUBLICAN, that staunch old democratic paper of ye olden time, comes to us printed on new type. We congratulate it on the improvement and especially its enterprise and ability to do its own printing at home. We admire its pluck and wish every paper in the State could do likewise.—Lauderdale News.

An Old Tennessee Welcome.

Mr. Ebron: Again has Alexandria Valley taken on the festive garb of gaily and outdone herself in a Grand Sociable Soiree at the residence of Col. W. Phil Cooper, on the night of the 9th inst.

It was an enjoyable and pleasing eve, and of the one hundred guests assembled, each and every one felt that he or she was an especial favorite, as their reception partook so much of the old historic, ante-bellum cordiality. On nearing the Colonel's residence we saw innumerable variegated lights twinkling in agreeable confusion. This excited our curiosity and we touched up "Charlie" and was soon perambulating the grounds where-in was hung divers Chinese lanterns, giving a weird charm to the surrounding shrubbery.

Very soon Capt. W. H. Cooper, in his own peculiar style, with a genial smile radiating his facial anatomy, bade us walk right in; this we attempted but found ourselves in a cordial hand-grasp of the Colonel, whose actions spoke in tones louder than words—welcome.

Entering the gentleman's room I found it crowded with young men, tidying-up their craniums preparatory to a killing entree among the ladies. Narrowly watching their maneuvers, and slyly straightening my own vest, I blew a blast on my silk handkerchief, stuck my thumbs in the armet of my own vanity and stepped to the parlor door with my very latest bow. That bow knocked all the starch out of my egotism, and I quietly withdrew whilst the host's daughter, Miss Alice, with cheery words and gleeful greetings ushered in a whole bevy of young ladies. This covered my confusion and all was well. To sum up the entertainment in one word, it was a grand success and will be remembered with sweet recollections by all who participated.

VIRGINIA, WELCOME!

Secumath News.— And now Virginia's form divine Comes bright and radiant into line— And every solid Southern State With joy can greet her sister great. She claims the freedom, ours her own;— She smother Tyranny's Throne? You've sinned her honor, stained her name; Go, hide your face in endless shame!

Her fate remember now she'll cleanse, From mountain crags to Eastern fens, She'll drop her mourning, dry her tears, And faithful be through endless years.

Obituary.

Little Irene Smith, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Smith, died at Jacksonville Ala., on Friday morning, and robbed a happy home and fond hearts of her sweet presence. The clay-casket which was so much the object of parental care and solicitude and the tenderest affections of friends and relatives, yielded to the destroying touch of disease, and has been laid away in the narrow prison house of the grave; but the jeweled life it held, a life so gently graced by meekness, amiability, obedience, and many other lovely characteristics, has left its earthly tenement and taken up its abode in that beautiful Eden above, where it tranquilly, sweetly rests, free forever from the pains and griefs of earth, and exempt from the sorrows and disappointments of time. And while a natural grief which we can but indulge, fills the bereaved breasts and at times seems almost to break down their walls of flesh, still, when we are reminded that death's cold path leads the pure and good up to the glory of God's Zion, we are caused to exclaim,

Without the love they meet, and thro' the world, When then, would wish or dare, believing this Against his messenger to shut the door!

O, Petersburg man, (Call if you can) Can you ever atone, By Billy Och home!

SHERIFF SAZE

By virtue of one alias fi. fa., issued from the Circuit Court of Calhoun county, and to me directed, I will sell to the highest bidder for cash, before the court house door in the town of Jacksonville, within the legal hours of sale on Monday the 3rd day of December, 1883.

The following described property, to wit: All the undivided half interest in the lot and mill, known as the Wood and Clark mill, situated in the town of Jacksonville, county of Calhoun, State of Alabama, and bounded on the North by land of G. B. Donnell, on the East by land of J. D. Hammond, (formerly the land of E. L. Woodward) and on the West by the land of Mrs. A. Abernathy, the same lying and being in the northwest quarter of northwest quarter of section 14, township 14, range 8, and containing six acres or less. Levied upon as the property of Alex. J. Clark, and in favor of H. L. Stevenson, administrator of the Estate of E. L. Woodward, deceased. J. B. FARMER, Shff. Oct 27, 1883-6t.

DESIRABLE FARM FOR SALE.

The undersigned will sell his farm in the rich Choctaw valley. The farm embraces 320 acres well improved. Or he will sell 160 acres off said tract. Rich vein of iron ore runs across it. It is well watered by six good never failing springs and wells. Land very productive. Fine for stock farm, 2 1/2 miles from Davisville depot on the Ga. Pacific Railroad. One half cash; balance on time. Address W. V. HANNA, Davisville, Ala. oct29-4t.

Administrator's Sale of Real Estate.

By virtue of an order of sale granted by the Probate Court of Calhoun county, State of Alabama, the undersigned, administrator of the estate of Francis J. Crook deceased, will sell at public outcry, to the highest bidder, on Saturday the 17th day of November 1883, on the premises, the real estate belonging to the estate of the said Francis J. Crook deceased, to wit: The N. E. 1/4 of Section 2, T. 15, R. 7; also 20 acres, more or less, being the East part of the N. W. 1/4 section 2, T. 15, R. 7, containing in all 180 2/3 acres, more or less. Said lands are situated near Alexandria, and in the famous valley of that name, which is a sufficient guaranty of their high agricultural value. These lands are within four or five miles of the E. T. Va. & Ga. Railroad, and within a mile of the old local route of the East Ala. & Cincinnati R.R. which is now being built and will in all probability soon be completed through said valley. Good markets for everything that can be raised on a farm at Jacksonville, Oxford and Anniston. All who desire a splendid farm in a splendid location, in a rich valley, and among high-toned people, should examine at once, and be on hand on the day of sale in person or by agent. Terms favorable: one third cash, and balance in two months with two good and sufficient securities, with interest from date.

Also, at the same time and place I will offer for sale the rent for this year consisting of corn, wheat, oats, cotton seed, &c. Terms cash.
